h. V. 25. Is temperate] What is here meant by ἐγκρατεύεται πάντα will be best collected by recounting the manner of the Athletæ in preparing themselves for the games; first Negatively, that it was not by λεπτὴ δίαιτα temperate or thin diet, but directly the contrary, many times ἀναγωφαγία cramming, forcing themselves to eat, that by that means they might become παχεῖς and πολύσαρκοι, fleshly and corpulent. So saith * Lucian of Damosias the Athleta, whom Charon durst not take into his boat, τοσαύτας σάρκας περιβεβλημένον, having such a weight of flesh about him. To this agrees the phrase among Physicians ἀθλητικὴ ἕξις, and athletice and pancratice valere, for a full habit of body. So Julian of Constantius, that he did not think agreeable to an Emperor ἃ τοῖς παλαίουσι καλεπληρότων σῶν λαμπρῶν ἐνεξίαν, that famous full habit of the combatants, or palæstritæ, and therefore that he used ὄψῳ ὑ πολλῷ, οὐδὲ πάνυ ὑ πολλῷ, οὔτε κατὰ ποιότητα πάντως διειμένης, neither much meat, nor prescribed either for quantity or quality, ἀλλ' ὁπότυχόσης but any that came next to hand. By which it appears, that the farther he was from the diet of the Athletæ, the more temperate he was esteemed, but yet withall that the diet of the Athletæ was a prescribed, set diet, both for quality and quantity, prescribing so much, and of those kinds which were fittest for the turn, to give them a full habit of body, and requiring them to force it upon themselves. And Andronicus Rhodius gives the reason of this, Ἡ δὲ ἰσχὺς γίνεται ἐκ τῆς πολλῆς ὄψεως λαμβάνειν, strength is acquired by receiving much nourishment. It will not then be proper to render ἐγκράτεια here by temperance, especially when Suidas labours a whole page together to prove that it differs ἀπὸ σωφροσύνης from temperance: But one of these three notions will be agreeable enough to it, and will by the way set down the manner of preparing them to their games. 1. It may be rendred continence; so the word signifies in the matter of Felix Act. 24. 25. and I conceive, Gal. 5. 22. and 2 Pet. 1. 6. where the addition of it to γνῶσις knowledge, seems to referre to the Gnosticks of that time, which pretended to great knowledge of their Christian liberty, and by that fell into all uncleanesse and incontinence. So Tit. 1. 8. it signifies, being annexed to ὅσιος clean or pure, and differing from σώφρων temperate, which went before. And then the meaning of this phrase here will be, that whosoever fits himself for these agones, either wholly abstains from women, or for the time containeth, according to that of Horace, De Art. Poet.

Qui cupit optatam cursu contingere metam, Abstinuit Venere, &c. And so saith Eustathius on Homer Ἰλ. ω'. Ἀθληταὶ ἃ τῇ ἀθλῆν πάντα χρεὼν ἦν ἀφίστατο πλησιάζειν γυναιξὶ, The combatants, all the time of their combating, were not permitted to come neer women. So Ælian of the Tarentinus Luctator, ἀθλήσεως χρόνον διατελέσαι Ἀφροδίτης ἀμοιρῆσαι, he knew nothing of venery all the time of his combating. So Clem. Alexand. speaking of the Athletæ, saith they did δι' ἄσκησιν σωματικὴν ἐγκρατεύεσθαι καὶ ἀφροδισίων ἀπέχειν, contain in respect of their bodily exercise, and abstain from venery. And so in Ignatius's Epistle to the Philippians, εἴτις ἁγνεύει καὶ ἐγκρατεύεται, if any be pure and continent, &c. And after this example it was, that the ancient Christians that contained strictly, and lived a virgine chast life, were call'd ἀσκηταὶ exercisers, and thence Hesychius renders ἐγκράτεια continence, by ἄσκησις exercise. A second possible notion of ἐγκρατεύεται may be to signifie a constancy of mind in abstaining from all things that are hurtfull; so doth Suidas render it ἡ ἀπὸ κακῶν ἀποχὴ, abstaining from evil, and in Hesychius, ἐγκρατῆσαι is καρτερῆσαι, and so saith S. Chrysostome of Jobs great constancy in avoiding the occasions or beginnings of sinne, that he did πάντα σίδηρον καὶ ἀδάμαντα τὴν ἀψυχῆς ἐγκρατείᾳ παρελθεῖν, goe beyond iron or adamant in constancy of mind: and agreeable to this saith the Italian note here, S' astiene da tutte le cose che possino esserli in qual si voglia modo d' impedimento, He abstains from all things that can in any manner be hindrance to him. So* Antiochus Hom. 6. Ἐγκράτειαν δὲ φαμὲν οὐ τὴν βρωμάτων μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πᾶσαν ἀπέχειαν, τοῦτέστι τὴν ἀπὸ πάντων ἀπαγορευομένων, We mean abstinence 1035. C.

not onely from meats, but that which is comprehensive, that is, abstinence from all things that are forbidden; and so it may be applied to the matter in hand of abstaining from the use of Christian liberty, when that abstaining may tend to the edifying of the brethren, or be profitable to his ministery. Lastly it may signifie his having all things in his power, πάντα ἐν κράτει ἔχων (see Note on c. 7. b.) and then the meaning of the place will be, that the combatant keeps a mastery over himself, suffers not himself to be brought under the power of any thing, but is superior to all carnal desires, first conquers himself, then attempts victory over others also; first subjugates one desire, denieth himself the use of one liberty, then of another, and so πάντα ἐγκρατεύεται gets all into his power.

i. φθαρτὸς στέφανος

Ib. Corruptible Crowne] The ground of this phrase φθαρτὸς στέφανος a corruptible fading crown hath been mentioned, Note on Rom. 9. l. For in all those famous games of Greece, that were so honourable in respect of their institution, their authors, and the celebrity and concourse of people to them, there was yet no reward proposed or obtainable by any of them, but the leaves of some plant, or boughs of some tree, which therefore Lucian calls τὸ φυλλινὸν στέφανον, a leafy crown, and in the person of Anacharsis sufficiently derides, περὶ γυμνασ. p. 727. to which is opposed not onely the στέφανος ἄφθαρτος here, but more clearly the ἀμάραντος 1 Pet. 1. 4. the not-fading crown, the not-withering inheritance; to which perhaps may be applied also that of Heb. 12. 11. where having made mention τῶν γεγυμνασμένων of them that are exercised, he saith there is laid up for them καρπὸς εἰρηνικὸς a peaceable fruit, which, saith Peter Faber, denotes the crown made of the Olive tree, the embleme and token of peace.

Ἀμάραντος

k. οὐκ ἀδήλως

V. 26. As uncerteinly] The phrase οὐκ ἀδήλως referres to the form or manner of the stadia or courses among the Grecians, wherein every racer had his course chalk'd out to him, both the place where he set out, the goale whither he went, and the way that he pass'd, so that unlesse a man winked he could not but see perfectly, and know (for ἀδηλία and ἄγνοια uncertainty and ignorance are all one in Hesychius) which way he must goe, and whither aspire. To this may be farther added the δηλότης certainty of the victory, and the assurance that he shall have the crown, if he doe regularly perform the race and overcome. So in Lucian saith περὶ γυμνασ. Anacharsis, εἶτ' ὄδη τῷ ἀδήλῳ καὶ ἀμφιβόλῳ τὴν νίκην ποσεῖσι πονεῖσι, If they labour so, when the victory is uncertain and doubtfull, &c.

l. Πυκτεύω

Ib. Fight] Here is the allusion changed from that of Running, to the other of Cuffing (for that is the particular notation of πυκτεύω and πυγμὴ) or rather to that of παγκράτιον, compounded of Cuffing and Wrestling, and so of which πυγμὴ was a part, for so saith S. Chrysostome here, καὶ γὰρ δεῖ καὶ παγκράτιον, &c. the Apostle speaks of two exercises, racing and that called pancratium, (see Note d. and o.)

m. Αἴρω δέρω

Ib. Beat the aire] Ἀέρα δέρειν or δαίειν, beating, or striking, the aire belongs to that of Cuffing, a præludium or preparative to which was σκιομαχία fighting with, or beating, the aire, which Virgil describes by

——— Alternáque jactat
Brachia protendens, & verberat ictibus auras.

He thrusts out his armes one after another, and beats the aire with his blowes; and * Lucian, Ἢν τινα ἀδηλητῶν ἴδῃς ἀσκέμβιον πρὸ τῶ ἀγῶνος, λακτίζοντα εἰς τὸν ἀέρα, καὶ πυξ κενὸν πληγὴν τινα καταφέροντα, If you see a combatant exercising before the combate, kicking into the aire, and with his fists giving it an empty blow. This was onely a brandishing before the fighting, of which saith Budæus on the Pandects p. 74. that there is nothing more ordinary then that they that excell in skill and dexterity at this, (so that they can before they meet with their adversary, shew their readinesse to take all advantages of striking and wounding the enemy) yet when they come to fight in earnest, and proceed à prolusione ad cruentum discrimen, from the prolusion to the bloody combat, conciderint statim animo, nec artis suæ præceptorum meminerint, miscarry and fall presently in spirit, and forget all the precepts of their art. Where the opposition between this beating of the aire, and bloodinesse of the combate, coming to sharps, as we call it, may give us the understanding of that phrase, Heb. 12. 4. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sinne, all that they had yet suffered being but a περιπυγμὴ or σκιομαχία as it were, they were not yet come to the real blowes, had but been in some skirmishes as yet. Another notion there may be of this phrase, to signifie the missing of the adversary, and hitting the aire onely. So saith Eustath. on Ἰλιαδ. ε'. οἱ πυγμάχοι πολλάκις ἐκ εὐστοχοῦντες μάτην κινοῦσι τὰς χεῖρας, they that contend by cuffing doe many times misse, and move their hands (that is, strike) to no purpose. And thus will it here agree with the former phrase οὐκ ἀδήλως· for as those that cuffe in the darke, though they strike never such καλὰς πληγὰς saith Aristotle, luckie blowes, yet many times misse their aime, wound nothing but the aire; so here, should the Apostle not be perfectly skill'd in the ἀγὼν or combate he was about, he might often lose his blowes, but being perfectly instructed in his race, and what will bring him first to the goale, and being entred into the lists with his adversary, and set knowingly about his businesse, as it follows, ὑπωπιάζω· καὶ δουλαγωγῶ, he plaies the pancratiasta notably.

n. ὑπωπιάζειν Τυπτω

V. 27. Keep under] What is the notion of ὑπωπιάζειν hath been formerly touch'd on, Luk. 18. 5. and though there it signifie by a secundary borrowed signification to reproach, or put to shame, yet here 'tis certainly in a primary notion, to strike under the eye, or in the face, as the πύκται were wont to doe. This being here joyned to τὸ σῶμά μου, and applied to the matter in hand, of denying himself the use of his Christian liberty, must be rendred (according to the notion of עצמי which is Hebrew for σῶμά μου my body, before mentioned, Note on Rom. 6. a. and is no more then ἐμαυτὸν my selfe) I doe give my self blew eyes, as in Cuffing the combatant doth the adversary, pugnis ductis cæstibúsque impactis lividum reddere, I use great severity upon my self.

o. Δουλαγωγῶ

Io. Bring it into subjection] Δουλαγωγεῖν to bring under, belongs to Wrestlers, who strive to throw the fellow-combatant, to get him under them, that so he may not be able to resist or strike. And this being adjoyned to the former is the character of παγκράτιον, according to the plain words of Aristotle, Rhetor. l. 1. c. 5. Διωάμφω δὲ βλάβην, &c. παλαιστικὸς, ὁ ἢ ὅσα τῇ πληγῇ, πυκτικὸς, ὁ ἢ ἀμφοτέρως τύπτειν, παγκρατιαστὴς λέγεται, He that can oppresse and get down his adversary, is called good at wrestling; he that can strike him down with the fist, an able cuffer; but he that is for both these is the pancratiasta. And so the plain sense of the place applied to the matter in hand will be this, That the Apostle is so farre from making use of all his Christian liberty, that, saith he, I subdue and bring my self down, I bind my self to abstain from many things, which I might very lawfully enjoy, to labour with my hands, and suffer many hardships, which I need not; and all this to acquire the crown, which belongs not to the idle person, or to him that doth no more then he is bound to, but to him that enters the lists, and overcomes there, and in order to that

Abstinuit, &c. Thus is fasting expressed by the Arabians, that 'tis sui domatio & depressio, & subjugatio concupiscentiæ, (see Greg. Abul Farai De Arabum moribus p. 29.) the taming and depressing of himself, and subjugating of concupiscence. And so Philo Judæus speaking

ſpeaking of immoderate faſting (lib. Pejorem inſidiari meliori) ſaith, they doe λιμῷ καὶ δίψει καὶ νηστείαις ψυχὴν καὶ σῶμα ἐκπαλαίζειν, by faſting and ill uſages ſubdue their body and mind, as wreſtlers doe their adverſaries; and accordingly this of faſting, &c. is ordinarily ſtyled ἄσκησις and γυμνασία, exerciſe, relating to theſe agones.

p. κηρύσσω

Ib. When I have preached] Κῆρυξ in the Olympick or Iſthmian games is the præco or Herald, (the word by its origination ſeeming to come from the Hebr. קרא clamavit & proclamavit, to crie and proclaim, and from thence κράζω and κηρύσσω by an eaſie change) whoſe office it was from a ſcaffold or eminent place to proclaim the combate that was to be entred, to call the Agoniſtæ, to name the prizes, to admoniſh the Athletæ, to animate them, to ſet them the lawes of the agones, to ſubject all to the examination of the judges, and as they ſhall determine, to pronounce the conqueror. So in Iſidor. Peluſ. Epiſt. l. 3. ὁ κῆρυξ τῶν ἔξωθεν ἀγώνων τοὺς νικῶντας ἀναγορεύει, ἀγῶνα τοῖς ἄλλοις διαλύσας, he propoſes the combate, and proclaims the conqueror and conquered. Such are the Apoſtles under Chriſt, at once κήρυκες and στεφανῖται, heralds and crowners, ſaith Iſidore, pronouncing, proclaiming, citing, admoniſhing, binding, looſing, pronouncing ſome conquerors, and ἀποκηρύττοντες rejecting others are unworthy.

Ib. A Caſtaway] What ἀδόκιμος ſignifies, hath been ſaid in Note on Rom. 1. h. to miſcarry, and loſe the reward that he is contending for. Thus in good Authors ἀδόκιμον χωρὸς and ἀποκηρυχθῶναι are all one, and are oppoſed to στεφανῦσθαι being crowned or rewarded. And ſo that will be the importance of this cloſe of the Apoſtle, that he denies himſelf many things which he might enjoy, as combatants are wont to doe, puts himſelf to many hardſhips alſo, that (whilſt he is an Apoſtle to others, directing them to that courſe that will bring them to their crown, to wit that of ſelf-denial and the croſs, by which Chriſt our captain attained it before us) he may not himſelf miſcarry, or be found unworthy to receive it.

CHAP. X.

a but I would not have you ignorant: Θέλω ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν † that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all paſſed through the ſea

1.* Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye ſhould be ignorant, † how that all our fathers were [a] under the cloud, and all paſſed through the ſea,]

1. Now, my brethren, for thoſe of you that count your ſelves ſo acceptable to God, a. ſuch eminent, and, as you think, ſpiritual perſons, that have attained to an high pitch of excellence and perfection, and ſo call your ſelves Gnoſticks, ſee ch. 3. 1. I deſire that you ſhould remember that the antient Iſraelites had many high dignations from God, many miraculous works afforded toward them, and yet were not all very acceptable in Gods eyes; and ſo it may well be with you alſo: As for example, not onely Caleb and Joſhua, that came to Canaan, but even all the reſt of the Jewes (all which periſhed in the wilderneſſe beſide them two) had the favour of the cloud to overſhadow them, (as you Gnoſticks ſay you have, whatſoever you doe) and ſo alſo paſſed through the Red ſea, and were miraculouſly preſerved by God (and yet after periſhed in the wilderneſſe.)

2. And were all baptized unto Moſes in the cloud, and in the ſea,]

2. And that cloud and that paſſage through the Red ſea, which were uſed as means to confirm the miniſtery of Moſes, to aſſure them that he was ſent to them by God, and ſo were a kind of baptizing them into the belief of the doctrine of Moſes, and were a type of our baptiſme, were allowed to them all.

3. And did all eat the ſame ſpiritual meat,]

3. So the Manna alſo that came down from heaven, and in that was a type of Chriſt, (and which was indued by God with a ſpeciall excellency, ſuch various reliſhes, to agree with every ones taſt, noting the various gifts of the Spirit among us Chriſtians) was rained down among them all, and gathered by all, and ſo all, as it were, partakers of ſpirituality, fed from heaven miraculouſly.

4. And did all drink the ſame ſpiritual drink: (for they drank of [b] that ſpiritual rock that followed them, and that rock was Chriſt.)]

4. And they all (thoſe that periſh'd, as well as others) drank the water which came out of Horeb, which flowed miraculouſly, & copiouſly, & as the Jewes now affirm, followed them for their uſe a great while, & that rock ſignified Chriſt; ſo that in effect all the wicked which periſhed, as well as others, had myſtically taſted of Chriſt, and ſo were partakers of this ſpiritualneſſe as well as others. b.

5. But with * many of them God was not well pleaſed; for they were † overthrown in the wilderneſſe.]

5. And though they had ſo many degrees of miracles afforded them by God, ſo many degrees of ſpiritualneſſe, yet were they not finally in the favour of God, but were deſtroyed, and their carcaſſes ſcattered in the wilderneſſe, all of them, except onely two, after all this.

* theſe were types of us

6. Now * theſe things were our examples, to the intent we ſhould not luſt after evil things, as they alſo luſted.]

6. And theſe paſſages of ſtory are very obſervable and exemplary to us, that you that count your ſelves ſpiritual, and pretend to ſuch high perfections and privileges, ſhould keep your ſelves pure from baſe ſenſual luſtings, leſt you periſh after their examples.

7. Neither be ye idolaters, as were ſome of them, as it is written, The people ſate down to eat and drink, and roſe up † [c] to play.]

7. And that you ſhould not fall into the ſnares of idolaters, ſome of you going ſtill to the idol-ſacrifices, as ye were wont to doe before your converſion to the faith, (ſee ch. 8. 7.) others, as the Gnoſticks, being preſent at thoſe feaſts out of a confidence, that they knowing the idol to be nothing, are not polluted by going thither (ch. 8. 10.) and imitating the idol-worſhippers in their filthy unnatural beſtial ſinnes (for ſo the Gnoſticks did) and ſo follow the example of thoſe Iſraelites of whom 'tis ſaid, that from their idolatrous feaſts they fell into filthy beſtial ſinnes, the rites of thoſe heathen feſtivities. c.

8. Neither let us commit fornication, as ſome of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thouſand.]

8. Neither let us Chriſtians fall into thoſe ſins of fornication and other villany, as the Iſraelites did at Shittim, Num. 25. 1. after their idol-feaſts v. 2, 3. and were deſtroyed 23000 of them. A judgment that might deſerve to be conſidered by the Gnoſticks of this age in the Church of Corinth.

9. Neither let us tempt Chriſt, as ſome of them alſo tempted, and were deſtroyed of ſerpents.]

9. Nor let us loath and be weary of the Goſpel, as the Iſraelites did Manna, Num. 21. 5. and for it were deſtroyed by ſerpents, v. 6. and yet ſo doe many of you by the Gnoſticks infuſions among you, which are quite weary of that heavenly Chriſtian temper of purity, and chaſtity, and ſufferings, which Chriſt commended to his diſciples Mat. 5. you muſt have ſecurity from perſecutions, and withall the fleſh-pots of Ægypt, the carnal heathen ſins, which were allowed in their worſhips: And for theſe two cauſes it is that you goe to their idol-feaſts, to avoid perſecution, and to gratifie your luſts.

10. Neither murmure ye, as ſome of them alſo murmured, and were deſtroyed of the [d] deſtroyer.]

10. Nor be you guilty of that ſinne of murmuring at d.

Gods diſpenſations under the Goſpel, the nature of thoſe precepts which there he hath given us, as if the heaven promiſed were a good heaven, but the way thither, the duties to be performed, rough and unpaſſable (unleſſe you may have your carnal joyes afforded you.) For this were juſt after the manner of the Iſraelites, who brought up an evil report upon the land of Canaan, Num. 13. 32. and from thence fell a murmuring c. 14. 2. and were ſwept away by the deſtroying Angel, that is, the plague, v. 36. and c. 16. 41.

11. All theſe ſinnes and judgements on thoſe Iſraelites, who were vouchſafed ſuch wonderfull mercies by God, which were his people under his immediate conduct, had ſo much of his Spirit among them, and yet ſinn'd ſo foully, and were deſtroyed ſo miſerably, are all emblemes of our eſtate, if we doe not beware of their ſins, and they are ſet down in the old Teſtament, as warnings for us Chriſtians.

11. Now all theſe things happened unto them for enſamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the * world are come.] * ages

12. And therefore let him which is the moſt ſpiritual among you, that ſeems to himſelf to ſtand the firmeſt, take care that he fall not into theſe carnal ſins, which bring ſuch ruine along with them.

12. Wherefore let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.]

13. And though ſome motives there are now among you that may tempt you to joyne with the heathen in their idolatries, to wit, the perſecution of the heathens, among which you live, yet ought not this to work much upon you, to drive you out of your religion: For firſt, theſe are but ordinary, and to be look'd for, (ſee note on Rom. 6. b.) and beſides, God that hath promiſed not to ſuffer his ſervants to be afflicted, that is, tempted (ſee note on Gal. 4. a.) above their ſtrength, will be ſure to make good his promiſe, and will give you a way of eſcaping their terrors, if you continue faithfull and conſtant, that you ſhall be able to bear whatſoever befalls you.

13. There hath no temptation taken you, but † ſuch as is common to man: but God is faithfull, who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above that you are able; but will with the temptation alſo make a * way to eſcape, that ye may be able to bear it.] † humane * paſſage out, eſcape

14. To conclude therefore, let no temptation bring you to yield to theſe ſins that are in their idol-feaſts, (ſee note on ch. 5. 1.) nor at all to be brought to ſacrifice with them.

14. Wherefore my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry.]

15. I need not ſpeak more plainly to you, what I mean by idolatry, you are wiſe enough to know: ſee note c.

15. I ſpeak as to wiſe men: judge ye what I ſay.]

c. 16. The Chriſtian feaſt of bread and wine in the Lord's ſupper, is the exhibiting to us (ſee note on Mat. 26. 26.) the making us partakers of the body and blood of Chriſt (ſee note on Act. 2. c.) and is by us all acknowledged to be ſo; and therefore ſure the joyning in an idol-feaſt is a participating of the idol-God.

16. The c cup of bleſſing which we bleſſe, is it not the † communion of the blood of Chriſt? The bread which we break, is it not the * communion of the body of Chriſt?] † communication * communication

17. And all we that do partake of that one feaſt, are by that ſuppoſed to be one body, of the ſame kind one with another; and ſo in like manner if ye joyn with heathens, and partake of their idol-feaſts with them, ye are to be ſuppoſed of the ſame lump and mould with thoſe heathens.

17. For we being many are one † bread, and one body; for we are all partakers * of that one † bread.] † loaf idol of the one † loaf in the Syr.

18. In the Jewiſh ſacrifices 'tis a known thing, that not onely they that ſacrifice (the prieſts) but all they alſo that eat of any part of the ſacrifice (the people) are ſaid to perform ſervice to God, to eat, as it were, and drink with God at the altar, and to partake of all the benefits that come from God upon the ſacrificers.

18. Behold Iſrael after the fleſh: are not they which eat * of the ſacrifices, partakers of the altar?] * the ſacrifices ראי

19. I need not then affirm (that which the objection c. 8. 4. denyed, viz.) that an idol is any thing, or that that which is offered to a falſe God is in it ſelf at all different from any ordinary meat, from the contrary of which the Gnoſticks concluded, that there is no unlawfulneſſe to joyn in eating at an idol-feaſt.

19. What ſay I then? that the idol is any thing? or that which is offered in ſacrifice to idols is any thing?]

20. No, I need not come to examin that nicety, 'tis ſufficient to ſay in plain words, that thoſe ſacrifices of the heathens are ſacrifices to devils, and that whoſoever eats of the feaſts joyned to thoſe ſacrifices, doth communicate and joyn, and doe ſervice to devils, and I would not have Chriſtians guilty of that.

20. † But I ſay, the things which the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye ſhould * have fellowſhip with devils.] † No, but that and ſo * be partakers, κοινωνους γινεσθαι

21. The Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt, wherein we communicate with, and partake of the benefits of the death of Chriſt, will not well agree with communicating of, and joyning with devills, ſee Rev. 13. note a.

21. Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lords table, and the table of devils.

22. Doe we joyn devils in competition or rivality with God? doe we think that we ſhall dare to give our ſelves up to all idolatry and heathen ſin, and yet that God will not puniſh us? when in the ſecond commandement he hath expreſs'd his jealouſie againſt thoſe that take in any other rivall into their worſhip, and threatned to viſit and puniſh for it.

22. Doe we provoke the Lord to jealouſie? are we ſtronger then he?]

23. Many things there are, (ſee c. 13. note i.) which I might lawfully doe, but that they are hurtfull and diſadvantageous to others, tend not to their edification, but to the ſcandalizing of them, either bringing them to, or confirming them in ſome ſinne.

23. All things are lawfull for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawfull for me, but all things edifie not.]

24. And 'tis not fit that any ſhould be ſo intent on what is lawfull for him in reſpect of himſelf, or what is for his own advantage, as to neglect the benefit and advantage and edification of others.

24. Let no man ſeek his own, but every one † anothers wealth.] † that which is anothers τὸ τοῦ ἑτέρου

25, 26. And whereas you object that ſome portions of the heathen ſacrifices are ſold in the markets among other meat, and that therefore, if it be not lawfull to eat what is offered to idols, ye muſt not eat what ye buy in the ſhambles, becauſe that may be ſuch, and then this is a great retrenchment of your Chriſtian liberty, by which ye may lawfully enjoy any of God's creatures; I anſwer, that in that caſe I may lawfully eat whatſoever is there ſold, and not think my ſelf bound in conſcience to enquire and examine, whether what I meet with there were a portion of an heathen ſacrifice or no: For if no man be preſent to ſee and know that that which I eat is ſuch a portion, or if I know it not my ſelf, then ſure I am guilty of nothing my ſelf, nor can any other come to any hurt by this means.

25. Whatſoever is ſold in the ſhambles, that eat, * asking no queſtion for conſcience ſake.
26. For the earth is the Lords, and the fulneſſe thereof.] * making no iniquity μηδὲν ἀνακρίνοντες

27. Nay farther, if it be at an heathens own table, where 'tis more probable that ſuch

27. † If any of them that believe not bid you to a feaſt, and ye be diſpoſed to goe, whatſoever is ſet before you, eat, asking no queſtion for conſcience ſake.] † But if ſo portions of their sacrifices are to be met with, then 'twas in the shambles, yet there also ye may eat freely of all, and never think your selves bound in conscience to enquire whether there be any of those portions of their sacrifices there.

28. But if any man say unto you, This is offered † in sacrifice unto idols, eat not for his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake.] ‡ The earth is the Lord's, and the fulnesse thereof.]

28. But in case any man take notice that that which is before you was a portion of an idol sacrifice, and punctually tell you of it, then you are not to eat of that, lest you confirm that man in (or betray him to) the sinne of idolatry by your example not understood by him aright, and so offend against a conscience. ‡.

29. Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the others: for why is my liberty judged of another man's * conscience?]

* or, conscience, if I with thanksgiving partake. for the Kings MS. reads συνειδήσεως, εἰ ἐγὼ χάριτι μετέχω, κ.τ.λ.

29. When I say a conscience, I mean not thine own but that other man's conscience; That is, that thou art in this case to abstain for the sake of that other man's conscience, lest he be betrai'd to sinne by that meanes, v. 28. and not for thy own; for there is no reason in the world that that other man's conscience should make that simply unlawfull to me, which I receive as a gift of God, and acknowledge it from him, that is, render it altogether unlawfull, abstracting from the scandall annex'd, which were otherwise (by the liberty which Christ hath given) perfectly lawfull to me.

30. For if I by grace am a partaker, why am I evill spoken of for that for which I give thanks?]

30. And certainly, abstract it from that case of scandall, and there will be no reason to find fault with, or accuse me for eating of that before which I say grace, blesse God for it, and eat it meerly as a blessing of his, without any respect unto any idol-god whatsoever.

31. Whether therefore ye eat or drinke, or whatsoever ye doe, doe all to the glory of God.]

31. The onely thing then considerable in this matter is the scandall, which tends to the dishonour of God, and betraying men to, or confirming them in sinne, and that must be provided against, and care be taken, that in every bit I eat, or action I doe, I may not dishonour God, or doe hurt to my brother.

32. Give none offence neither to the Jewes, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God.]

32. Let nothing you doe be apt to betray any man to sin, whether it be Jew or heathen on one side, or Christian on the other.

33. Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking my own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.]

33. Even as in my ministery, I conform my self to all men, so as may be most for their advantage, not for my own, (see note on Rom. 14. c.) that by some means or other I may bring them to embrace the Gospel, ch. 9. 20, &c.

Annotations on Chap. X.

1. Vide Nissenum

V. 1. Under the cloud] The Jewes have a known saying, (see Note on Lu. 13. c.) that he that enters into Gods Covenant, is gathered under the wings of the majestatick presence. See Maimonides Tit. Isuri bia. cap. 13. Whensoever, saith he, a Gentile will enter into covenant ולהסתופף תחת כנפי השכינה, and be gathered under the wings of Gods presence, or glory, or majesty, &c. The foundation of this speech is to be taken from that plain truth, that God obliges himself to take care of, and protect all those that undertake obedience to him; but the peculiarity of the expression referres to the manner of Gods exhibiting himself in the holy of holies, viz. by the Cherubims wings overshadowing the covering of the Arke, to represent to us, that as the bird covers and defends the yong ones with her wings spread over them (to which our Saviour referres Mat. 23. 37.) so doth God, that is every where present, peculiarly exhibit himself to those that keep his covenant, and think upon his commandements to doe them. And what was thus represented in the Tabernacle and the Temple, was before more really exhibited in the departure of Israel out of Ægypt; For there we find mention of the cloud and the fire, Exod. 13. 21. in, or by which, (the cloud by day, and the fire by night) God went before, or conducted, them. Where first it must be remembred, that this going before doth not necessarily denote any distance of space from them, so as a guide goes before the rider, when he is onely to teach, or direct him the way, and he followes after, but (as was more agreeable to their condition at that time, who were to be shielded and protected, as well as led, and that protection noted by Gods going before them, the same God going behind them too, The Lord shall goe before thee, and the holy one of Israel shall be thy reward) an encompassing them on every side. So in

* in Pirki c. 44. f. 50. * Rabbi Eleezer עמוד הענן סובבו׳ את מחנה ישראל כעיר מוקפת חומה׃ the pillar of cloud encompass'd the camps of Israel as a wall invirons a city; and therefore when it is said Exod. 14. 19. that the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them, I suppose it must be interpreted by v. 20. that the inner part of the cloud that was next the Israelites, being a lightsome part, and the external superficies of it not so, (now, when the Ægyptians pursued the Israelites) the cloud was so disposed, as to be behind, as well as before them, shining round about them, and yet so to be (in respect of the luminous part of it) confined to them, as to give light onely to the Israelites, but none to the Ægyptians that followed them. And secondly, that the word pillar applied to it is not to be looked on as a solid body, standing, and fastned on the ground, and so still passing before them, but as pillars were antiently built hollow, as a kind of house, or dwelling-place, (and accordingly Simeon the Anchorete is call'd στυλίτης, because he dwelt alwaies in a pillar) a concave body over their heads, and so coming down to the ground, like wings incloling and encompassing them on every side; and accordingly 'tis here said that they were ὑπὸ τὴν νεφέλην under the cloud, (and so the cloud over them, not placed or fix'd before them) which is all one with what is expres's'd in other places by the clouds overshadowing them that it comes upon, hovering over them, as a dove before it lights on any thing; to which the Psalmist referres, when he saith, under the shadow of thy wings I will rejoice, and thou shalt hide me under thy wings, &c. 3dly, That this pillar of cloud, and of fire, were all one, viz. a bright, shining cloud, such as is described Mat. 17. 5. φωτὶνὴ νεφέλη ἐπισκιάζουσα a lightsome cloud overshadowing. For that the same word in Hebrew signifies both light and fire, hath been formerly observed (see Lu. 22. 56.) and that a fiery or lightsome cloud, though in the day time, when the Sun shines, it shineth not, doth yet shine in the night, and give light, as fire, 'tis evident. And this may yet be farther demonstrated by a passage of Pindarus in his description of Ætna,

Α' ἀμέργασι μὲν πεδίχουσι βόον καπνῷ
Αἰθων', ἀλλ' ὀν ὀφθαῖσι πίτνας
Φοίνισσα κυλινδομένα φλὸξ ἐς βαθεῖαν
Φέρει πόντου πλάκα σὺν πατάγῳ.

Which is, in his poetick expression, this plain historical truth, that it was ordinarily seen in Ætna, that it sent out smoke in the day time, and flames of fire in the night, 10.

night: and though that Poeme which Virgil left imperfect, hath confounded the times, and not taken notice (in his imitation of Pindar) of the diſtinctions of ſeaſons, noted by him in the words ἀμέρσισι and ὀρφναῖσι, yet hath he alſo mentioned both the ſmoke & the flames, the firſt in the ſtyle of a black cloud,

——atram prorumpit ad æthera nubem
Turbine fumantem piceo——

the latter by great Globes of fire going up to heaven,

Attollítque globos flammarum, & ſidera lambit.

Juſt as here a darke ſmoky cloud in the day time, when the Sun outſhone it, and made the light of it uſeleſs and indiſcernible; and a fiery flaming ſhining cloud in the night, when they needed ſuch a conduct. And that I ſuppoſe is the reaſon why here is mention onely of the cloud, not of the fire, though in Moſes there is mention of both. All this being thus premiſed, it appears firſt, how fitly it is here ſaid by the Apoſtle, that our fathers, that is, thoſe Iſraelites that then went out of Ægypt, were under the cloud, and paſs'd through the ſea, theſe two being varied phraſes of the ſame importance. For it muſt firſt be remembred that the Iſraelites paſs'd not ſo through the Red-ſea, as to goe over it, entring on one ſide, and going out at the other, but came out again on the ſame ſide that they went in, as appears Num. 33. 6. (where before their paſſing through the ſea, they pitched in Etham, in the edge of the wilderneſſe) compared with v. 8. where after their paſſing through the ſea they goe three daies journey in the wilderneſſe of Etham. And therefore ſecondly, this paſſing through the ſea muſt be their entring into the channel, ſo as the ſea firſt gave way to them, and then returned up to the ſhore again, drie ground being left to them in the midſt of the channel, and the ſea incompaſſing on every ſide of them, before them, behind them, on the right hand, and the left, and ſo as the cloud environ'd them, in like manner the ſea environ'd them alſo, and as they were protected and ſecured by the one, ſo they were by the other. And therefore 2dly, from hence it alſo appears, why it is here ſaid of them, that they were baptized in the cloud, and in the ſea, and why by both baptized into Moſes. For Baptiſme being among the Jewes (as well as Chriſtians) the ceremony of initiation of all that entered into the Covenant, by the ſame reaſon that ſuch are ſaid to be received under the wings of the divine preſence, they may alſo be ſaid to be baptized in, or with, the cloud, and ſea, that covering them with the cloud, and inviroing them with the ſea, being on God's part the receiving them under his protection to bring them ſafe to Canaan, and ſo to perform to them his part of the Covenant, and on their part, an obligation to be for ever obedient to God, under the conduct of Moſes; the aſſuming of which, is being baptized into Moſes. And this may ſerve for the literal explication of the verſe, as it belongs to the fathers. Now for the application of it to the matter in hand, to which it is accommodated by the Apoſtle, it ſeemeth to lie thus. The Gnoſticks were great pretenders to liberty, by reaſon of their being ſpirituall and perfect; and among the branches of their hereſie, Saint Irenæus inſiſting at large on Marcus's followers, obſerves of them, among other things, their pretence that they were φύσει πνευματικοὶ, naturally ſpirituall, by which meanes, ſaid they, no ſinne was able to defile them, any more then gold was defiled by being in a ſinke, or the ſun-beams by ſhining on a dunghill; then that they had a ſhield, or cloud, or covering, which whatſoever they did made them ἀοράτους τῇ κρίτῃ inviſible to the Judge, and that this belong'd to all that had their ἀπολύτρωσις, redemption, as they ſtyled their Baptiſm. That theſe Scholars of Marcus were after the Apoſtles time, there is no doubt, but yet being branches of the Valentinians, it is to be thought that they did, as the ſame Irenæus ſaith of them, take the old doctrines of the Gnoſticks, and εἰς ἴδιον χαρακτῆρα μεταρμόζειν accommodate them to their own manner of ſpeaking; and ſo we may, from what we finde in theſe latter, diſcern the deceits of thoſe former hereticks, that unclean ſink of the Gnoſticks, that pretended to that perfection of knowledge, called themſelves the ſpirituall, and Simon their leader pretending that he was that God the Father that appeared in Mount Sinai, they were thoſe Iſraelites, ſhielded by him with the cloud, carryed ſafe through the Red-ſea, and had a ſpeciall kinde of Baptiſm, or ἀπολύτρωσις, which they, by their γνῶσις, that is, myſtical interpretations of Moſes writing, made proportionable and parallel to the ſeverall things here named of the Iſraelites, v. 2, 3, 4. And this ſeems to occaſion the Apoſtles diſcourſe in this place, where following their language of themſelves, and ſuppoſing, but not granting them parallel to thoſe Iſraelites that were ſo miraculouſly led and fed, he ſhewes by their example, that if they goe on in their ſins, they muſt expect that uſage that the Iſraelites then had, viz. to dye in the wilderneſſe, and not come to Canaan.

V. 4. That ſpirituall rock that followed them] The Jewes have now a relation, whether by way of ſtory, or of parable, that the water that came out of the rock in Horeb, Exod. 17. 6. or the ſtreams that flowed, or overflowed, Pſal. 78. 20. did follow the Iſraelites through their journeying in the wilderneſſe: and that it did ſo may appear probable, becauſe in that dry wilderneſſe we hear no more of their wanting water, till Cadeſh, which was ſome 36. years after this, when they had taken a contrary way in their journeying, by which means (as alſo by God's making this new tryall of them, and to that purpoſe ordering the change of their journey) that water might now ceaſe to follow them, which before, as long as the miraculous flowing laſted, might naturally, without any new miracle, follow them all their voyage. This ſaying of theirs S. Paul makes uſe of in a myſticall ſenſe, making Chriſt indeed to be the rock in a ſpirituall ſenſe, and that Chriſt, following (coming really, ſo long after, into the world) but even then (ſo long agoe) ſpiritually, and in power preſent among them.

V. 7. To play] That the word παίζειν here is to be taken in an unclean ſenſe, may appear probable by the uſe of the word mocking among the Jewes. This will be diſcerned by the Hieruſalem Targum on Gen. 21. 9. on that of Iſmael's mocking; In ſtead of theſe words in the Hebrew, Sarah ſaw the ſonne of Hagar mocking, they read by way of paraphraſe, Et vidit Sara filium Ægyptiæ facientem opera mala, quæ fieri non oportuit, illudentem, & cultum peregrinum exercentem, And Sarah ſaw the ſon of the Ægyptian doing evill works which ought not to be done, mocking, and exerciſing ſtrange worſhip. Where the opera mala quæ fieri non oportuit, the evil works that ought not to be done, are the ἄθεσμα 2 Pet. 2. 7. and ἀθέμιτα 1 Pet. 4. 3. that is, thoſe unnaturall filthy ſins which were ſo ordinary among the heathens, uſed as part of their Gentile-worſhip, and thoſe, it ſeemes, noted by the phraſe of illudere or mocking, which there and here, and in other places (according to the civility of the ſacred ſtyle) is made uſe of, rather then others which ſignifie more groſly thoſe acts of unnaturall filthineſſe. So Rabbi Solomon mentions an interpretation, that Iſmael had committed uncleanneſſe, and that that is the meaning of the Hebrew צחק to mock, Gen. 39. 17. And Lyra on that of Gen. 21. ſaith that the Hebrew word is equivocall, and ſignifies ludentem, idololatrantem, occidentem, & coeuntem, vel laſcivientem, mocking, committing Idolatry, killing, commiting uncleanneſſe and wantonneſſe. And then there will be little doubt but the words of the ſame Targum on Exod. 32. 6. (the place from which

δια τῆς Θαλάσσης

Βαπτιζεσθαι εν νεφέλη &c.

b. Ακολουθοῦσα πέτρα

c. Παίζειν

which the words in this place are taken) & surrexerunt sibi ludentes cultu peregrino, and they arose mocking themselves after the strange, or heathen, worship, may belong to that also. To which purpose 'tis farther observable that ἐμπαίζειν (which may well be resolved Synonymous to παίζειν, but cannot so well be mistaken for playing as the other may, but distinctly signifies illudere to mock) is the rendring of צחק (which is the word in Exodus whence these words are cited) Gen. 39. 14, and 17. in that story of Potiphar's wife and Joseph, and certainly signifies uncleanesse there. Thus Tobit 3. 18. where Anna to shew her self free from all uncleanesse, ἀπὸ πάσης ἁμαρτίας ἀνδρὸς from all sin of, or with man, v. 17. addes in Saint Jeromes translation, nunquam cum ludentibus miscui me, I never associated my self with them that mock'd; where no doubt Uncleannesses are meant, and 'tis probable that the Greek, which he translates ludentibus was παιζόντων, though our Greek copies wholly leave out that part of the period. And if the comparing of the story, Act. 7. 41. where 'tis said in this matter ἐφέροντο they rejoyced in the works of their hands, be apt to incline to the other interpretation, as supposing that παίζειν to play is all one with εὐφραίνεσθ to rejoyce, and consequently that both denote their dancing before the idol, it will be easily answered, that εὐφραίνεσθ rejoycing there signifies most properly the rejoycing at a feast, Lu. 12. 19. and 15. 23, 24, 29, 32. and 16. 19. and so following the offering of sacrifice to their Idols, shall note the sacrificall feast, and be all one with eating and drinking here, but not with παίζειν, whether playing, or mocking, that attends it; and so still παίζειν may fitly thus be interpreted, especially when in this place it followes immediately after ὀπισυμπαὶ κακῶν lusters after evill thing (in the notion that κακῶς ζῶ to live ill is used by Phavorinus in the word ἀσελγῶ wanton, that is, for this very sin, and so κακία ilnesse Rom. 1. 29.) and is attended with μηδὲ πορνεύωμεν neither let us commit fornication, &c. referring to that other act of the like sin, Num. 25. 2, 3. and thence, I suppose, it is, that to his exhortation of flying from Idolatry ver. 14. he subjoyns v. 15. I speak to wise men, judge ye what I say, not willing to speak more plainly, or to adde more words on that subject. (see Note on Eph. 5. f.)

V. 10. Destroyer] That which is here called ἐξολοθρευτὴς destroyer is in the Hierusalem Targum Exod. 4. 26. called perdens, and there explained by Angelus mortis, a messenger of the Lords ver. 24. that came to kill him. This is otherwhere called the destroying Angel; for what is here said, they were destroyed by the destroyer, is in the story from whence 'tis taken, Num 14. 37. they died by the plague before the Lord. So the Angels that came to Lot's house are sent to destroy the city, Gen. 19. 13. In all which and many more places where plagues are said to be inflicted of God by Angels, it doth not appear that the Angels used as instruments of those plagues, are the fall'n Angels or devils, but those heavenly that wait on God to execute his wrath, as well as conveigh mercies. Thus God's coming with his Angels is an expression of destructions, and yet those are μυριάδες ἁγίαι holy myriads, Jude 14. or multitudes of heavenly Angels (see Note on Jude d.)

V. 16. Cup of blessing] The Jewes used to conclude the feast wherein the Paschal lamb was eaten with a cup of wine. This they, called כוס הלל ποτήριον ὑμνήσεως the cup of praising, because they sang an hymne at that time, see Mat. 26. 30. and εὐλογίας of blessing; and from thence the receiving the wine in the Sacrament being by Christ instituted after his paschal supper, is here called by that title. Of the word εὐλογεῖν to blesse, see Note on Mat. 14. c.

V. 28. The earth is the——] If these words be to be read in this place, the meaning of them will be, that in a matter of this nature of eating, they have little temptation to sin against conscience, when they consider the great store of other food, even all the plenty of the world, which they may lawfully enjoy, and let the idol-sacrifices alone. But the Kings MS. which leaves them out, seems to be in the right (and 'tis easie to imagine how the transcribers might here insert them on occasion of διὰ συνείδησιν here, the same words after which v. 25. these words had followed) and then the 29th ver. will immediately adhere to the end of v. 28. because of conscience; Conscience, I say, &c. which connexion will be otherwise disturbed.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphrase.

1. BE ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.] 1. And doe ye in like manner, as oft as there is occasion for the good of others, deny your selves the use of your Christian liberty.

2. Now I praise you, brethren, that you remember me in all things, and keep the * ordinances as I delivered them to you.] 2. Now for you that have written this letter to me, and asked my advice in all these particulars, I cannot but commend you, that ye have been so mindfull of my doctrine, that ye have adhered so close to it, that ye have not been seducible by any false teachers in any of these particulars, but have appealed to me, for my opinion of them.

3. But I would have you know that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Christ is God.] 3. To proceed then to your next quære, in order to matters of decency in the Church, it is fit for you to consider the subordination of persons in the Church, viz. that as Christ in respect of his office of mediator is under God, but above all men, so the man being under Christ is above all women, and consequently that their garb in the Church must be proportionable to this.

4. Every man praying or prophecying, having his head covered, † dishonoureth his head.] 4. Every man that doth any office in the Church, that either praies, or expounds the word of God, or sings Psalms, &c. (see note on Luk. 1. m.) if he doe it with his head and face covered, this is indecent, against the liberty and dignity of his sex, it being a signe of shame and infamy in a man to have his head and face covered.

5. But every woman that prayeth or propheseth with her head uncovered, * dishonoureth her head: for it is even all one as if she were shaven.] 5. But every woman that doth any office in the Church, that is imployed as a member of a congregation, joyning with the Minister, whether Pastor, Prophet, in discharging of any Christian duty, such as is prayer, or expounding, or singing Psalmes, &c. (see note on Luk. 1. n.) and hath her head or face uncovered, this is contrary to decency in her, against the modesty and meeknesse of her sex, as much as it is for her to cut her haire, and weare it as men doe.

6. For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.] 6. The use that is made of the not cutting a woman's haire, of letting it be worn at the length, is that it may be a kind of veile or covering to her, ver. 15. which is an argument that as 'tis uncomely or unfashionable for her to have her haire cut after the manner of men, so it is uncomely to have her head uncovered after the manner of men, the diſtinction of ſexes being to be maintained in the one as well as in the other.

b. 7. For the man indeed is to be uncovered, that being a ſigne of power and majeſty, and man (being the image of God, and a beam and irradiation, as it were, of God) is an image of his power and majeſty, and therefore ought ſo to appear; but the woman ſhe is but the beam of the man, having no power but from him, and ſo her ſubjection to the husband being her duty, ſhe therefore is to be covered, which is a ſigne of that ſubjection.

7. For the man indeed ought not to cover his head, for as much as he is the image and [b] glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.]

8. As you know in the forming of man and woman, the woman was made of the rib of the man, and ſo is to be reſolved inferior to him.

8. For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.]

9. And the creation of the woman was, that ſhe might be the helper, miniſterial and uſefull to the man, not ſo the man to the woman; which is another proof of her being inferiour to him, and that a reaſon ſtill, why ſhe ſhould wear a covering on her head, eſpecially in the time of divine ſervice, where her behaviour ought to be moſt decent, and agreeable to her condition.

9. Neither was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man.]

c. d. e. 10. And eſpecially when the Angels are generally believed to be preſent in the places of God's publick worſhip, this piece of decency in the woman, her being covered, ought moſt ſtrictly to be obſerved, as we will be moſt carefull of doing no indecent thing in the preſence of ſuch pure divine ſpirits.

10. For this cauſe ought the woman to have † [c] power [d] on her head, [e] becauſe of the Angels.] † a covering

11. But this inferiority of the wife to the husband muſt not ſo be urged, that the man being independent from her, ſhould be thought to have no reſpect unto her, (which may be ſeaſonable to tell the Gnoſticks, who were great deſpiſers of marriage) any more then the woman ſhould be from the man.

11. Nevertheleſſe, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man in the Lord.]

12. For as the woman was formed out of Adam's rib, ſo all the ſons of Adam were born and conceived and propagated by women, and man and woman united by God, from whom all things are.

12. For as the woman * is of the man, even ſo is the man alſo by the woman; but all things are of God.] * was out of ix

13. But for that of women's behaviour in the place of publick ſervice, judge you by what is decent among you, is this decent for her to have her head uncovered in time of divine ſervice?

13. Judge in your ſelves, is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?]

f. 14. Doth not the univerſal cuſtome of all nations make this diſtinction between ſexes, that men wear their haire cut, and that is decent in them?

14. Doth not even [f] nature it ſelf teach you, that if a man † have long haire it is a ſhame unto him?] † weare his haire at length, 'tis reproach, κομᾷ ἀτιμία ἐστί

15. And women do not, but weare it at length, and that is decent in them: and to what purpoſe is this, but that their haire may be a kind of vaile or covering to them?

15. But if a woman * have long haire, it is a glory to her: for her haire is given her for a covering.] * weare her haire at length, note f.

16. And if after all this, any man will farther contend in this matter, all that I ſhall adde is, the conſtant cuſtome of all the Apoſtolicall Churches, that women in the Churches ſhould conſtantly be veiled, and that may be of ſufficient authority with you.

16. But if any man ſeem to be contentious, we have no ſuch cuſtome, neither the Churches of God.]

17. Now one thing there is wherein you are much to be blamed, that your aſſemblies are not ſo Chriſtian as they ought.

17. Now † in this that I declare unto you, I praiſe you not, that you come together not for the better, but for the worſe.] † This I warn you of, and commend you not, for the King's MS. reads παραγ-γέλλω ὑμῖν οὐκ ἐπαινῶν

18. For firſt I am told, and I have ſome reaſon to believe it, that there are diviſions and factions among you, which expreſſe themſelves in your aſſemblies.

18. For firſt of all, when ye come together in the Church, I heare that there be diviſions among you, and I partly believe it.] * diviſions σχίσματα † the ſincere ὄντως

19. And indeed there is ſome good uſe to be made of diviſions among Chriſtians, that ſo the honeſt and orthodox may be more taken notice of.

19. For there muſt be alſo * hereſies among you, that † they which are approved may be made manifeſt among you.] * it is not, or 'tis not poſſible, οὐκ ἐστ

20. That which I am to blame in you is, that your publick common meetings, which ſhould be as at the table of the Lord, to eat a Church-meal, a common Chriſtian feaſt, are indeed much otherwiſe, none of that communicativeneſſe and charity among you, as is required in ſuch, ſee Note on Act. 1. f.

20. When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's ſupper.]

21. For at your feaſts of charity accompanying the Lord's ſupper, which were intended for the relief of the poor, and wherein all the gueſts are to be equal, no man to take place, or eat before another, no man to pretend any right to what he brought, but every man to contribute to the common table, and to eat in common with all others, this cuſtome is utterly broken among you; he that brings a great deale, falls to that, as if it were in his own houſe, at his own meal, and ſo feeds to the full, whereas another, which was not able to bring ſo much, is faine to goe hungry home; and ſo your meetings are more to feed your ſelves, then to practiſe a piece of Chriſtian charity, to which thoſe ſacramental aſſemblies were inſtituted.

21. For in eating every one † taketh before other his own ſupper; and one is hungry, and another is drunken.] † takes his own ſupper, for the Ks MS. reads προσλαμβάνει

22. This certainly is to doe as you were wont at home, and you may as well ſtay there and doe thus; this is quite contrary to the inſtitution of Church-meetings, and the not onely ſending away hungry, but even reproaching and putting to ſhame thoſe that are in want, and are not able to bring any great offering along with them. This ſure is a great fault among you.

22. What, have ye not houſes to eat and to drink in? or deſpiſe ye the Church of God? and * ſhame them that have not? what ſhall I ſay to you? ſhall I praiſe † you in this? I praiſe you not.] * put them to ſhame that have nothing καταισχύνετε τοὺς μὴ ἔχοντας † you? In this I praiſe you not. ὑμᾶς; ἐν τούτῳ οὐκ ἐπαινῶ

23, 24. For from Chriſt it was that I received (though I were not preſent there) what I delivered in my preaching among you, that Chriſt, when he inſtituted his laſt ſupper, took, and bleſſed the bread, and then eat it not all himſelf, nor preferred any one before another by a more liberal portion, but gave it in an equall diſtribution to every one at the table, and that as an expreſſion and token of his life for all of them, without preferring one before another, and then appointed all diſciples to imitate this action of his, to meet and eat as at a common table, not one to engroſſe all or deprive others, and ſo to commemorate the death of Chriſt, and the unconfined mercy of that, by this ſignificative typicall charity of theirs.

23. For I have received of the Lord that which I alſo delivered unto you, that the Lord Jeſus, the ſame night in which he was betrayed, took bread,

24. And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat, this is my body which is broken for you; this doe in remembrance of me.]

25. After

25. After the same manner also he took the cup when he had supped, saying, This cup is the New * Testament in my blood; this doe ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.]

25. And when supper was ended, he took also the grace-cup (see note on c. 10. e.) and delivered it about, telling them, that this action of his was an emblem of that covenant of grace and bounty, which he would seale in his blood to all, without respect of persons, and commanding them to imitate and commemorate this impartiall charity of his, whensoever they met together at the holy table.

* Covenant διαθήκη

26. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, * ye doe shew the Lord's death till he come.]

26. And doe ye, saith he, in all your sacred festivals thus shew forth to God and man, this gracious act of my bounty in giving my life for my people, and continue this ceremony till I come again at the end of the world.

* declare ye καταγγέλλετε

27. †Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.]

27. So that to offend in this kinde against this institution of this feast, by doing contrary to the universal charity designed therein, is to sin against the body and blood of Christ, to take off from the universality of Christ's goodnesse and mercy in that death of his.

† So that ὥστε

28. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.]

28. It is therefore fit that every man examine himself throughly, whether he be rightly grounded in the faith of Christ, of which this Sacrament is an emblem, and accordingly when upon examination he hath also approved himself (see note on Rom. 2. f.) when he is fitly prepared, let him come to that table, and partake of it in a Christian manner.

29. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not ‖ discerning the Lord's body.]

29. And he that doth come without that preparation, and so understands not the truth of Christ's universall mercy in his death, signified by this institution of the Lord's supper, or consequently receives it not in an holy manner, incurres damnation, in stead of receiving benefit by such eating and drinking of it. g.

30. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and * many sleep.]

30. And the want of this due preparation to, and performance of this duty, the factions and divisions that are among you, have brought many punishments upon some of you, afflictions, (see Gal. 4. a.) diseases and death it self, as was threatned upon those who at the feast of the Passeover put not all leaven out of their houses, Exod. 12. 19.

31. For if we would † judge our selves we should not be judged.]

31. Which had never fallen upon you, if you had not by such faults needed admonition and discipline, God never punishing them that doe not stand in some need of being awaked thus, and stirr'd up by his punishments.

32. But when we are judged we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.]

32. And when we are punished, 'tis for our good, that being reformed by stripes, we may be freed from those punishments which fall on the unreformed to all eternity.

33. Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.]

33. To conclude then, when ye meet at one of these Christian festivals, have that care and charity to all others as well as your selves, that all eat together by equality, as having a common right to a feast of charity, that so ye may celebrate it as ye ought to doe.

* As for the other things I will when I come give appointment for them, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ, ὅταν ἔλθω διατάξομαι

34. And if any man hunger, let him eat at home, that ye come not together to condemnation. * And the rest will I set in order when I come.]

34. And he that cannot do thus, let him stay at home, and eat there, for he may there dispose of himself as he please, which here he must not doe: and his making no difference betwixt a meale at home, and this Christian festival in the assembly, is a great sin in him, and may expect punishment accordingly. For the other particulars mention'd by you, I will deferre the ordering of them, till I come my self unto you.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. V. 4. Dishonoureth his head] It was a part of the punishment of malefactors among severall nations, to have a covering put over their faces; and therefore in the Roman form of giving sentence this was part, Caput obnubito, Cover his head, and that belong'd to the whole head, the face also. So among the Persians in the story of Hester, c. 7. 8. the word went out of the Kings mouth, and they covered Hamans face. And this seems to be the literall notation of κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχων, having over the head, which is here used, so having upon the head, as comes down upon the face also, as that differs from ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς ἔχων, having the veile upon the head onely. This therefore, which was the fashion of condemned persons, is justly said καταισχύνειν τὸν κεφαλὸν αὐτῦ, to reproach, or shame his head.

Καταισχύνει τὸν κεφαλὸν

b. V. 7. Glory] The Hebrew כבוד signifies both glory and beam (the beams of the Sunne being so glorious, that all glory is described by them) and is rendred both by δόξα and ἀπαύγασμα, and one of them may be here taken for the other, δόξα glory for ἀπαύγασμα beam or irradiation, such a beam which flowing from another, derived from another, implyes that from whence it flowes to be more honourable. Or else the word may signifie similitude, likenesse, in both places of this verse; for so it is used by the Septuagint, Num. 12. 8. δόξα κυρίου, the similitude of the Lord, and Psal. 17. 15. δόξα σου thy likenesse, where the Hebrew hath תמונה in both places. And so here it will agree with εἰκὼν, the man is the image and similitude of God, and the woman of the man.

V. 10. Power] What the word ἐξουσία signifies here will be best conjectur'd, not by hearkning to the criticall emendation of Jacobus Gothofredus, who would read ἐξυβίαν the Latine exuviam in stead of it, but by looking on the Hebrew word which signifies the woman's hood, or veile, and that is רדיד, whose theme רדד signifies dominion or power over any thing or person, according to which notion of the theme, the word ἐξουσία must needs be answerable to the Hebrew רדיד and consequently, though it signifie power primarily, is yet fitly set here to signifie a veile (and by the Vulgar translation in some copies rendred velamen) by the same proportion as רדיד, deduced from the root signifying power, is put for a woman's veile, Cant. 5. 7. and Isa. 3. 23. and so Gen. 24. 65. and 38. 14. and explain'd by the Targum by צעיף a veile, peplus, theristrum, such as Rebecca and Tamar used. And this more fitly in respect of the discourse, or rationall importance of this place, which v. 8. proves that the woman should weare a covering in token of her husband's power over her. So when Eustathius a Bishop of Sebastia in Constantine's time, among other things τὰς γυναῖκας κείρεσθαι παρεσκεύαζεν, caused women to be polled, against him the Councell of Gangra made a * Canon in these words, Εἴ τις γυναικῶν διὰ νομιζομένην ἄσκησιν ἀποκείροιτο τὰς κόμας, ἃς ἔθηκεν ὁ Θεὸς εἰς ὑποταγὴν τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ὑποταγῆς, ὡς ἀναλύσα τεῖγμα τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ἀνάθημα ἔσω, if any woman for some exercise of pretended pity shall poll her haire, which God gave for a remembrance of subjection, let her be excommunicate, as one that dissolves the ordinance of obedience, or subordination, of the woman to the man. So Photius Epist. 210. The women ought to be subject to the man, καὶ τῆς ὑποταγῆς σύμβολα τὸ διὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς κάλυμμα φέρειν, and bear the signe of her subjection, a covering on her head, which he there sets as the meaning of this place. As for that on which this whole interpretation is founded, the custome of using one Greek word for another, when the Hebrew signifies both, it hath been formerly observed, Note on Mar. 14. f. and need not now seem strange, or be repeated again.

d. Κεφαλὴ

Ib. On her head] The woman's head signifies her head and face both, which were customarily covered with a veile, and 'twas counted immodest to be without it, according to that saying of Rabbi Abraham in the Talmud, tract. Sota, that the bare uncovering of the head is immodest for the daughters of Israel. See Schickard De jure Regio p. 134. Thus among other writers also. Plutarch in Problem. Rom Συνηθίσθησαν τὰς μὲν γυναῖκας ἐγκαλύμμασι, τοὺς δὲ ἀνδρεῖον ἀκαλύπτοις εἶναι τὸ δημόσιον περιπατεῖν, It is the custom (and consequently decent) for women to come into the publick covered, and for men uncovered. And Clemens Alex. Pædag. l. 2. c. 10. Ἐγκαλύφθαι δὲ τὴν κεφαλὴν, καὶ τὸ πρόσωπον ὑποχαίτῃ περιθέμενον, ἐγὼ ὅσιον εἶναι διηγητέον ἀνθρώπων τὸ κάλλος τοῦ σώματος, 'Twas appointed that the heads and faces of women should be covered and shaded, and that the beauty of the body should not be a snare to catch men. So saith Dicæarchus of the Thebanes, ἱματίων ὑπὸ τῆς κεφαλῆς κάλυμμα τοιοῦτό ἐστιν, ὥστε πρόσωπον ὅλον καὶ πᾶν τὸ πρόσωπον καλυπτῆφθαι, εἰ μὴ ὀφθαλμοὶ διαφαίνοιντο μόνον, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ μέρη τοῦ προσώπου πάντα καλύπτεται τοῖς ἱματίοις, Their heads and faces were all covered as with a mask, and nothing but their eyes to be seen. And so of the city of Tarsus (Saint Paul's countrey) saith Dio Chrysostom, that the women came so attired into publick, ὡς μηδὲν αὐτῶν μέρος ἰδεῖν πᾶσι, μήτε τοῦ προσώπου, μήτε λοιποῦ σώματος, that no part, either of their face, or the rest of their body, might be seen. And for those that have not used, or retained that custome of wearing veiles or coverings, yet the universal custome of women among all people, is to wear their haire at length, and that is usefull to cover their faces, and necks, and shoulders, and that is the reason of the mentioning their long haire, that nature teaches them, v. 15. and that it is as fit for her to be shaven as uncovered, v. 6.

p. 58.

Or. 1. Tarf.

e. Διὰ τοὺς ἀγγέλους

Ib. Because of the Angels] The presence of God in any one place more then in another is not easily conceivable by any. And therefore that any place should be called his house, or place of residence, his temple wherein he dwels, 2 Cor. 6. 19. must needs be in some other respect, and what that is, is sufficiently explicated by Jacob, who upon the vision of Angels at Luz awakes, and says, that the place was venerable, and that God was in it, and that it was the house of God; which concludes that the appearance or presence of Angels is that from which God is said to be peculiarly present any where, and which fits that place to be God's house; and thus Eccles. 5. 5. when we read, from the Hebrew, before the Angel, the Septuagint interpret it ἐνώπιον τοῦ προσώπου τοῦ Θεοῦ before the face of God, making the Angel and God's presence all one. Thus Psal. 68. the Myriads of Angels are said to be God's Chariots, places to receive God, as he is said to sit on the Cherubims, and to flye on the wings of the wind, or Angelicall spirits, Psal. 18. Agreeable to this was it, that God was said to be in the Arke between the Cherubims, and that the Arke was therefore called the glory, the Schechinah or inhabitation of God, and many things of this nature in the Old Testament (see Note on Mat. 3. k.) And proportionably, both under the Old and New Testament, the Angels have been thought to be present in the places of God's publick service. Thus Phil. περὶ ἀγάπ. p. 541. speaking of the hymnes of Moses, saith they were composed διὰ παντὸς ἁρμονίας καὶ συμφωνίας εἴδους ᾧ κατακύουσιν ἄνθρωποί τε καὶ ἄγγελοι λειτουργοὶ, with all kinde of harmony and symphony, that men and angels, which attend, doe hear, making the Angels, as well as men, auditors of the hymnes in the Temple, and, as it followes, ἔφοροι διασάμενοι μή τι τῆς ᾠδῆς ἐκλείπῃ, overseers to look that all be done as it ought. So Tertullian De Orat. Angelo adhuc orationis adstante, the Angel of prayer standing by. So Chrysostome speaking of the disorderlinesse of some in the Church, οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι μετ' ἀγγέλων ἕστηκας; saith he, knowest thou not that thou standest with the Angels? μετ' ἐκείνων ᾄδεις, μετ' ἐκείνων ὑμνεῖς, καὶ ἕστηκας γελᾶν; thou singest with them, praisest God with them (referring questionlesse to the antient form in the Liturgy, with Angels and Archangels, &c. we laud and magnifie. &c.) and standest thou laughing? Agreeable to which is that of the Psalmist in the Septuagint translation, Psal. 138. 1. ἐναντίον ἀγγέλων ψαλῶ σοι, In the presence of the Angels I will sing unto thee; which that it belongs to the Temple, appears by that which followes v. 2. προσκυνήσω πρὸς ναὸν ἅγιόν σου, I will worship toward thy holy temple, that is, the Sanctuary, they standing in atrio, in the court, not in ναῷ in the Sanctuary, when they worshipp'd. So in S. Basil's Liturgy we have this form, Δέσποτα κύριε ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν ὁ καταστήσας ἐν οὐρανοῖς τὰ τάγματα καὶ στρατιὰς ἀγγέλων, &c. εἰς λειτουργίαν τῆς σῆς δόξης, ποίησον σὺν τῇ εἰσόδῳ ἡμῶν εἴσοδον ἁγίων ἀγγέλων γίνεσθαι συλλειτουργοῦντων ἡμῖν, καὶ συνδοξολογούντων τὴν σὴν ἀγαθότητα, O Lord our God that constitutest the orders and hosts of Angels in heaven for the ministery of thy glory, make thy holy Angels enter with us, that we may officiate and praise thy goodnesse together. Thus saith * Procopius of God, that he doth by the Angels οἰκείαν ποιεῖν ἐπιφάνειαν ἐν ναῷ, exhibit himself, or appear peculiarly in the Temple. And so in the very heathen Plutarch (περὶ ἐκλελ. χρησ.) speaking of the δαίμονες, which differ little in their notion from that of Angels among Christians, he saith of them, that they are ἐπίσκοποι θείων ἱερῶν, καὶ μυστηρίων ὀργιασταὶ, overseers of their divine offices, and priests of their mysteries; and Iamblichus to the same purpose, that every Temple hath its keepers. Which being supposed and taken for granted, the account will be clear, why the woman must be covered because of the Angels, that is, that she ought to doe that which was most decent, in that place where the Angels were present to behold them, and that yet more particularly, when she hath those Angels (which use to be present in such places) for her example also, who by covering their faces use to testifie their subjection toward God; for so we read of the Seraphim, Isa. 6. 2. with two wings they covered their face. To which Photius addes Epist. 210. that the Angels are ἐπόπται καὶ μάρτυρες τῆς ὅλης ἀνδρὸς φύσεως αὐτῆς καὶ γενέσεως, lookers on, and witnesses of the womans production out of the man.

* on 1 Kings 1. 8.

f. Φύσις

V. 14. Nature] What is meant by φύσις here, which is said to teach that men are to cut, women not to cut their haire, may be guess'd, first by the practice and vow of the Nazarites, of never cutting their haire, which yet was allowed and commended by God in some men, which it would not have been, if the practice had been against the law of Nature, or if that were the notion of φύσις here; secondly, by the words precedent v. 13. πρέπον ἐστὶ, &c. is it decent? which though it belong to the womans praying uncovered, yet when being uncovered and cutting her haire are made unfit upon the same principle, v. 6. the τὸ πρέπον or decency will be an interpretation of the φύσις nature, as

v. 6.

v. 6. ἀσχεμ῀ν uncomely is applied to both the being shaven, and uncovered; thirdly, by the notion of φύσις in other Authors for custome, so ὕδη ὀϊκτιπτι φύσει customes are acquired natures in Galen, and in Aristotle Rhet. l. 1. c. 11. καὶ γὰρ τὸ εἰθισμένον ὥσπερ πεφυκὸς ἤδη γίνεται. ὅμοιον γὰρ τὸ ἔθει τῇ φύσει, ἐγγὺς γὰρ τὸ πολλάκις τῷ ἀεὶ ὄντι· δέδι δὲ ἢ μὴ φύσις τὸ ἀεὶ, τὸ γ' ἔθει τὸ πολλάκις, Custome and nature are neer and like one another, and that which is frequently done is next that which is alwaies done. And therefore when in Lucian, in the person of Demosthenes, we have συγγίνωσκέ μοι μὴ πεφυκὼς κακῶς γίνεσθαι, pardon me, that am not born to be ill, or naturally ill, Phil. Melanchthon renders it ignoscas mihi, qui non consuevi inconstans esse, pardon me that am not wont to be so, that being an ordinary notion of πεφυκέναι among Authors; and so 'tis ordinary for that to be called the law of Nature which was but the law of Nations, ὥσπερ ἔθος ἐν, ἢ ἔθνη χρῶνταί τινα, which one nation, or some nations use in Harmenopulus, ἐξαβ. l. 1. tit 1. And so in the Digests (de stat. Hom. l. lex naturæ,) that which was but the law of many nations, ut qui nascitur sine legitimo matrimonio matrem sequatur (which, though it held among the Grecians and Romans, did not among other nations) is called lex Naturæ, the law of Nature; as on the other side, Dio Chrys. ἀεὶ ἔθος, of custome, comprehends the law of Nature under that style. Fourthly, by the use of the word φύσις in the New Testament, as Ephes. 2. 3. τέκνα φύσει ὀργῆς, children of wrath by nature, applied to the national universal custome of idolatry among the Gentiles, as appears v. 2. in which you (Ephesian Gentiles) sometimes walk'd, and ver 3. among whom we all (we Romans, from whom he wrote) ἀνεστράφημέν ποτε, sometime conversed, ὡς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ as the rest also of the heathen would. Just as the same Idolaters Wisd. 13. 1. are called φύσει μάταιοι, vain, that is idolatrous, by that general custome among them. To this matter the testimony of Suidas is most clear on the word φύσις, where having enlarged on the signification of it in Philosophy, he adds, ὅταν δὲ ὁ Ἀπόστολος λέγῃ, καὶ ἦμεν τέκνα φύσει ὀργῆς, ὡς καὶ λοιποὶ, ἐκ τοῦτο τὸ σημαινόμενον τῆς φύσεως λέγει, ἐπεὶ τὸ ποιήσαντος ἂν ἦν τὸ ἔγκλημα, ἀλλὰ τῶν ἐμμόνων καὶ κακίστων διαθέσιν καὶ κεγνιὰν καὶ πονηρὰν συνήθειαν, but when the Apostle hath those words, which were by nature, &c. he takes not the word, Nature, in this notion, but for an evil, durable disposition, or chronical custome. So when the Apostle saith of the Gentiles, that παρὰ φύσιν beside nature they were graffed into a good olive tree being but a wild olive themselves, Rom. 11. 24. he sure means by Nature the custome of the Jewes, which by analogie with Levit. 19. 19. was extended to a prohibition of grafting one fruit-tree into another kind, or else he referres to the constant custome and rules of gardening, never to graffe an ill fruit upon a good stock. And so sure 'tis in this place, either the universal custome of all nations, or the fashion of the place, or of the generality of people, for men and women to distinguish their sexes by cutting or not cutting of the haire.

Παρὰ φύσιν

V. 29. Discerning] The Hebrew קדש signifies two things, to sanctifie, and to discriminate, and is accordingly sometimes rendred by ἁγιάζειν, and once by διακρίνειν Jos. 20. 7. From hence it seems to be that διακρίνων here, being the literal rendring of one notion of the Hebrew קדש, is taken for the other of hallowing or sanctifying the Lord's body, that is, eating the Lord's supper (in a different manner from that of eating our ordinary meale, or ἴδιον δεῖπνον our own supper, viz.) as the institution of Christ, to represent his death for the world, and the diffusive mercy of that, by our Christian liberality, and furnishing a common table, where the poor aswell as rich may feast, and not the rich eat all to themselves; which is the profaning of that feast of the body of Christ.

CHAP. XII.

Paraphrase.

* the spiritual mysteries

1. NOW concerning *[a] spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.]

1. Now to that other part of your letter, concerning those that are moved and acted by the Spirit, whether good or ill, (see c. 14. 37. and note on Lu. 9. d.) and foretell &c. by that means, I desire to admonish and direct you, brethren, and to give you some characters to discriminate one from the other, when they come into your assemblies, as sometimes some with evil spirits did (Euseb. Hist. l. 4. 16.) and as Simon the Magician is said to have contended with S. Peter.

2. Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.]

2. When ye were heathens, ye know the oracles pretended to foretell things to come, and by your desire to know such things, ye were seduced to idols; which were so farre from being able to prefage, that they were not able to speak, and the answers that were given you there, were neither given you by the idols, nor their priests, but by the devil in them.

* the Lord Jesus κύριον Ἰησοῦν

3. Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jesus † accursed: and that no man can say, * that Jesus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghost.]

3. The way therefore to discriminate them is this, that no man who pretends spiritual gifts in the Church, who is led or speaks by the Spirit of God, will ever speak evil of Jesus; and no such man again hath any of those extraordinary powers of miracles, &c. and doth them in the name of Christ, but he is acted by the holy Spirit, the doctrine and commands of Christ being so contrary to, and destructive of the evil spirits, and their designes among men, that the devil will never assist men with his power to set up that.

4. But of the gifts that come from the Spirit of God there are differences, and though all men doe not the same things, yet in them all the Spirit is the same: and therefore they that have not these extraordinary gifts in so high a degree as others, should not be sadned for that, as long as they have sufficient to demonstrate that they have the Spirit.

5. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.]

5. And there are diversities of offices and ministeries, but all performed to the one true God.

† them all in all men πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν

6. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh † all in all.]

6. And there are diversities of afflations or inspirations, but the God that worketh all these in all men is the same.

* for that which is profitable πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον

7. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man * to profit withall.]

7. But the exercise of these spiritual gifts, whereby the Spirit manifests it self to be in any man, is designed still for some benefit or advantage of the Church; and therefore those powers that tend to no use or advantage in the Church, are to be suspected not to come from the Spirit of God.

8. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdome, to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit,]

8. The gift that one man hath from the Spirit is the special ability of speaking parables, and veiling wise conceptions: Another hath the understanding and interpreting the mysteries of Scripture, (see note on ch. 1. c. and note on 2 Pet. 1. c.)

10. To another † the working of miracles, to another prophecie, to another diſcerning of ſpirits, to another diverſe kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues.] Another the faculty of interpreting ſcripture. Another of knowing men's hearts, whether they be ſincere or no, (in order to Eccleſiaſtical diſcipline in cenſures and diſeaſes.) Another to ſpeak ſome languages which he was never taught (ſee note g.) which ſerved both as a miraculous act to confirm the Goſpel, and as a help to reveal it to men of all countries. 11. But all theſe worketh that one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit, dividing to every man ſeverally as he will.

12. ſo in like manner is Chriſt and his Church many members in one body, ſee Gal. 3. note d.

12. For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body being many are one body: [ſo alſo is Chriſt.]

13. For in baptiſme being made partakers of the ſame Spirit we are entred into one body to be fellow-members with all Chriſtians, of what quality or ſort ſoever we are: And the cup of charity or thankſgiving, appointed by Chriſt in his laſt ſupper to be uſed in his Church, is a token and band of the ſame unity among Chriſtians, and ſignifies the animating of all by the ſame Spirit.

13. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jewes or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.]

14, 15, 16, 17. For as the body is made up of ſeverall members for ſeverall uſes, ſo is the Church of Chriſt, each of them profitable for ſome end; and therefore though one be inferiour to ſome others, yet hath that no reaſon to envy them.

14. For the body is not one member, but many.

16. And if the eare ſhall ſay, Becauſe I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17. If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the ſmelling?]

18. It hath therefore ſeemed beſt to God to give ſeverall men ſeverall offices in the Church, which they are to be content with, not repining that they are not more honourably employed.

18. But now hath God ſet the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleaſed him.]

19. For if every member were equall to all others, there could not be a ſubordination, and aſſignation to ſeverall offices, as in a body there muſt be.

19. And if they were all one member, where were the body?]

Doctors or teachers of Churches already conſtituted, and ſo all one with Biſhops, differing from prophets onely in this, that they taught out of the inſtructions which they had themſelves received, without any ſpecial revelation. Then as endowments of theſe and parts of their function, were theſe five things, 1. Powers of inflicting diſeaſes and death it ſelf upon the diſobedient. 2. Gifts of healing them that received the faith. 3. The care of the poor. 4. The power of governing the Churches where they were planted. And, laſtly, ſome ſorts of languages neceſſary to their preaching to the Gentiles (though not the gift of all tongues, which came down on the Apoſtles.)

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Πνευματικῶν

V. 1. Spiritual gifts] That Πνευματικῶν may here be used in the Masculine, not Neuter Gender, is most evident; and if it be so, then it must signifie spiritual persons, not things. So the word is certainly used ch. 14. 37. If any seem to be a Prophet or spiritual, such as have any divine afflation. Thus in Palladius, Lausiac. Hist. c. 43. * Ἔγνων ἀκριβῶς πνευματικὸν αὐτὸν ὄντα, καὶ προγινώσκειν πάντα, I knew exactly that he was a spiritual person, and foreknew all things.

* p. 963. D.

b. Ἀπόστολοι

V. 28. Apostles] The word Ἀπόστολοι Apostles is known to signifie here, not messengers of a common nature, but commissioners from Christ, sent with the same power which he had from his father, Joh. 20. 21. to plant and govern the Church, and to that end, to part the world between them into so many μερίδες, and κλῆροι, and ἴδιοι τόποι, portions, and lots, and proper places, and provinces, Act. 1. 25. over which they were set. And so though, when Christ was here on earth, these were Disciples and followers of his, yet after his departure, and the descent of the Holy Ghost, they are instated in the supreme authority in the Church. See Note on Joh. 20. b.

c. Προφήτας

Ib. Prophets] Next after the Apostles are Prophets placed in the Church, both here, and Ephes. 3. 5. and 4. 11. Their office was to preach more fully the Gospel of Christ to those who had formerly received it, and to that end they were inspired by God with that special gift of interpreting the prophecies, &c. of the Old Testament, thereby to confirm the Jewes in the faith, and beside many other spiritual gifts, they had that of foretelling things to come, as appears by Agabus, and those that went down from Jerusalem to Antioch, Act. 11. 27. These differed from Apostles on one side, were inferior to them, οὐκ εἶχον τὴν Ἀποστολὴν, had not that higher commission, saith Theophylact, and being joyned with Doctors Act. 13. 1. did yet in this differ from them, say the Scholiasts, that the Prophets did speak all from the Spirit, πάντα ἀπὸ πνεύματος φθεγγόμενοι, οἱ δὲ διδάσκαλοι οἰκοθεν, but the doctors from themselves. Such were Judas and Silas Act. 15. (see note e.) who being Bishops of Judæa were farther furnish'd with this gift of prophecie, and προφῆται ὄντες being prophets v. 32. διὰ λόγου πολλοῦ παρεκάλεσαν τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς καὶ ἐπεστήριξαν, exhorted and confirmed the brethren, or Christians, as other the like did lay on hands on Paul and Barnabas by revelation from the Holy Ghost, Act. 13. 3. their revelation being an evidence of their gift of prophecy, their laying on of hands an exercise of their Episcopal power. And such were the two witnesses Rev. 11. 3. who are there said to prophesie in sackcloth, that is, after the manner of Prophets in the Old Testament, to preach the will of God, and foretell things to come, who that they were the Bishops of Jerusalem, see Note on that place.

d. διδάσκαλοι

Ib. Teachers] Διδάσκαλοι Doctors are here set down in the third place, differing, as hath been said, from Prophets onely in this, that they spake οἰκοθεν from themselves, and had not the gift of foretelling things to come. But for the office of teaching and confirming those which had already received the Gospel, and for the governing of the Churches as Bishops, in that they agreed with them; and accordingly Act. 13. 1. the same persons are there call'd Prophets and Teachers. And therefore 'tis to be observed, that Ephes. 4. 11. Teachers are set as all one with ποιμένες Pastors (the Bishops title, saith * Chrysostome, and so say the Scholiasts, τοὺς τὰς ἐκκλησίας ἐγκεχειρισμένους, &c. those that govern the Churches, the Bishops, he calls Pastors, such was Timothy, Titus, and the like) So in Bede Eccl. hist. l. 2. c. 2. Episcopos sive Doctores, Bishops or Doctors. So * S. Chrysostome, Epist. β'. speaking of the incestuous Corinthian, πολλοί φασιν ὅτι καὶ διδασκάλου τάξιν ἐπέσχε, many say he had the place of a Doctor, streight addes, τὰ πρωτεῖα ἔχειν τῆς ἐκκλησίας, he had the presidency of the Church: τοῦ δὲ ποιμένας καὶ διδασκάλους some pastors and teachers, not distinguishing them, as Apostles, and Prophets, and Evangelists, with a τοῦ δὲ some to each, but only connecting them with the καὶ, ἐξηγητικὸν, the particle and, by way of explication, and so noting them to be two names for one thing, and accordingly ποιμένες Pastors is not mentioned here. The particular notation of the word διδάσκαλοι must be first taken from the difference observable betwixt κηρύσσειν and εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, preaching, on one side, and διδάσκειν, teaching, on the other, so as the word and doctrine differ, 1 Tim. 5. 17. the first belonging to the planting, the second to the watering, that is, instruction and exhortation and confirmation superadded to the preaching or planting the faith any where. This office of instructing and confirming certainly belonged primarily to the Bishop in every Church, Act. 13. 1. and was not competible to any but him, or whom the Bishop appointed to it, (as the Apostles sent the Evangelists to preach for them, where they could not come themselves) by neglect of which wholesome practice, all heresies and seeds of new doctrines have gotten into the Church. Thus in Justine Martyr Apol. 2. when the Anagnostes or Reader hath read the portion of Scripture out of the Apostles or Prophets, he holds his peace, and the προεστὼς Prafect or Bishop τὴν νουθεσίαν ποιεῖται makes the exhortation, after the manner that we see practised by Paul, Act. 13. 15, 16. And agreeable to that it is that the Bishop should be styled Διδάσκαλος Teacher. So Chrysostome, and Theophylact on 1 Tim. 4. 14. Τὸ δὲ διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὄν, &c. the dignity of Teacher or Priest being great, &c. by both noting the ἱερωσύνη or Priesthood, to which ὁ Τιμόθεος ἤρθη, Timothy was there chosen, that is, his Episcopal power. (Of this see more Note on Jam. 3. a.)

* on Ephes. 4. 11.

* To. 7. p. 57. l. 4.

Ib. Miracles] Having set down the three prime sorts of dignities in the Church, Apostles, Prophets, Teachers, with the distinctive termes of πρῶτον, δεύτερον, τρίτον, first, secondly, thirdly, the Apostle addes now in another style, ἔπειτα δυνάμεις, εἶτα χαρίσματα ἰαμάτων, after powers, then gifts of healings. Of which two it must first be observed, that they doe not denote severall persons distinct from the former, (for 'tis evident the Apostles had both, the powers, and the gifts) but onely several χαρίσματα, or extraordinary gifts, with which the Apostles and Prophets and Teachers were all endowed. And consequently these cannot be imagined to constitute new orders in the Church, nor those that follow in this place, helps, &c. Secondly, for the meaning of δυνάμεις powers, it is most probable that by it is denoted the same thing that by the ἐνεργήματα

ματα δυνάμεων v. 10. operations of powers (which are there also joyned with gifts of healing) and those may denote those operations or exercises of powers which we find exemplified in S. Peter on Ananias and Sapphira, in Paul on Barjesus, (either inflicting immediate death, or diseases upon them, or pronouncing that they should come, and accordingly it followed) and in those first times, in the Governours of the Church, by their censures delivering men up to Satan, εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the destruction of the flesh, to inflict diseases on them. And this may very probably be the meaning of δυνάμεις powers here also; and so 'tis acknowledged by Theophylact. And these seem to be the τέρατα prodigies wrought by the Apostles, Act. 2. 43. upon which 'tis said that fear was on every soule, in like manner as it was said upon the death of Ananias ch. 5. 10. in respect of these powers of the Apostles.

f. Ib. Helps] That ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι signifies to succour relieve any in distresse, hath been said, Note on Lu. 10. b. and there is no doubt but ἀντιλήψεις here is to be taken in that sense, relieving and providing for the poor out of the stock of the Church; and this here set down as a special part (as the κυβερνήσεις is another) of the office of those men which were set down in the beginning of the verse, the powers and the gifts of healing referring to the virtues and assistances by which they were back'd in the discharge of their office, and so, in an inferior degree, the γένη γλωσσῶν, sorts of tongues, in the close of the verse, skill in some languages, which was usefull to their preaching to the nations; but these two, helps and governments, denoting two special parts of their office, under which all was indeed contained, which had not been before intimated in their names. For as to the former of these, the relieving of the poor, that alwaies belonged to the Apostles and Bishops; and though the Deacons were employed in one inferiour part of it, the serving tables, Act. 6. the distributing of the several portions daily to the poor widowes, &c. as διάκονοι under the οἰκονόμος, servants under the steward, yet the supreme trust and charge was reserved to the Apostles and Bishops of the Church. So Act. 20. 35. S. Paul appoints the Bishops, ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι τῶν ἀσθενούντων, to relieve, or succour, those that were weak, or sick, which by the Context, (the mention of Christs words, It is better to give than to receive) is applyed to acts of charity, supply of corporal wants. And so in the 41. Can. of the Apostles, Δεῖ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον, &c. A Bishop must have the care of the monies, so that by his power all be dispensed to the poor by the Presbyters and Deacons, and we command that he have in his power the goods of the Church. So Justin Martyr Apol. 2. Συλλεγόμενον παρὰ τῶν εὐπορούντων ἀπολιδῷ, καὶ αὐτὸς ὑπερεῖ ὀρφανοῖς τε καὶ χήραις, that which is gathered is deposited with the Prefect, or Bishop, and he helps, relieves the orphans and widowes, καὶ ἁπλῶς πᾶσιν ὁ χρείαν ἔσχι, κηδεμὼν γίνεται, and becomes the curator, or guardian, to all absolutely that are in want. So Ignatius in his Epistle to Polycarp the Bishop of Smyrna, μὴ τὸ κύριον σου χηρῶν φροντιστὴς ἔσο, After the Lord thou shalt be the curator of the widowes. And accordingly Polycarp himself speaking of the Elders or Bishops, among the parts of their office reckons ἐπισκεπτόμενοι πάντας ἀσθενεῖς they visit and take care of all that are sick, μὴ ἀμελοῦντες χήρας ἢ ὀρφανοῦ ἢ πένητος, not neglecting the widow, or orphane, or the poor, and therefore, saith he, must be farre from the love of money, as S. Paul appoints in the qualification of the Bishop. And therefore as the bounty of the first believers, Act. 2. was brought to the Apostles feet, and they by that means were made the dispensers of it; so the contribution that Paul and Barnabas brought in time of famine to the poor brethren in Judaea was by them delivered into the hands of the Elders or Bishops of the Churches of Judaea, Act. 11. 30. as to the stewards which had the supreme power on earth of ordering this family of Christ. And so Epaphroditus that was sent with the liberality of the Church to Paul, Phil. 4. 18. and is therefore called λειτουργὸς τῆς χρείας μου, he that ministred to his wants, Phil. 2. 25. is by Theodoret and others affirmed to be the Bishop of the Philippians at that time. By all which the account and reason appears why the ancients doe explain ἀντιλήψεις by προστασίας, helps here, by praefectures, this office of providing for and looking to the poor being a special part of the Bishops power, which he had over the goods of the Church in the forecited Canon Apostolical.

Λειτουργὸς τῆς χρείας μου

Ib. Governments] The word κυβερνήσεις is all one with the Latine gubernationes, and so denotes the power and office of ruling and governing particular Churches already planted by the Apostles, and by them committed to the care of the Bishops, set down here under the style of διδάσκαλοι teachers, who, as they farther instructed the congregations which had received the faith, so did they rule and order and administer them, (κυβερνᾷ, διοικεῖ, saith Hesychius.) Hence I suppose it is, that as ποιμὴν pastor, and ποιμαίνειν to discharge the office of a pastor, denotes this power of ruling, and is the description of an ἡγούμενος a ruler, Mat. 26. ὅστις ποιμανεῖ τὸν λαὸν, who shall rule the people, and is applied first to Christ, Mat. 26. 31. Joh. 10. 11, 14. Heb. 13. 20. 1 Pet. 5. 4. (and joyn'd with Bishop 1 Pet. 2. 25.) then to S. Peter, Joh. 21. 16. then to the Bishops of Asia, Act. 20. 28. then to the Bishops of the Jewes in their several dispersions, 1 Pet. 5. 1. so 'tis joyned with διδάσκαλος teacher Ephes. 4. 11. and not as a several office from that (as Apostles, Prophets, and Evangelists had been) but as two parts of the same persons office, τοὺς ποιμένας καὶ διδασκάλους some Pastors and Teachers, noting these governours of the several Churches to have been the teachers also: And so here the διδάσκαλοι being named in the former part of the verse, κυβερνήσεις is added in the latter, to denote the ruling powers that belong'd to those teachers: διδάσκαλοι with the addition of ἀντιλήψεις and κυβερνήσεις here, being all one in effect with the Pastor & Teacher in one person, Eph. 4.

g. Κυβερνήσεις

Ib. Diversities of tongues] What γλῶσσα here signifies, will be best discerned by * Eustathius, who expresseth it by ξενωμένην διάλεκτον, a strange language, and by † Clemens, who calls them ἀδιδάκτους τὰς βαρβάρων φωνὰς, the voices of barbarians which have not been learn'd. And though this equally belongs to all strange languages, yet it must be observed that γένη γλωσσῶν kinds, or sorts, of tongues in this place, and v. 10. signifies with some restraint, not all the languages of the world, as was in the effusion of the Spirit on the Apostles Act. 2. but some sorts of languages which they had never learn'd, in order to their preaching to those people which used those languages. For it must be observ'd, that though the power of miracles, indefinitely all miracles, even to the raising the dead, removing mountains, &c. were bestowed on the Apostles by Christ, and so in like manner power of speaking all languages of the world; yet these in this full latitude were not thought fit to be bestowed on other persons after them, but with some limitations, to one this, to another that, which was usefull toward the building up of the Church, now that the foundation was already laid by Christ and the Apostles. Hence is it that some are peculiarly endowed with gifts of healing, not having those other powers, called δυνάμεις or ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων here and ver. 9. nor the πίστις faith, v. 9. that which extended to all miracles, even to removing of mountains, ch. 13. 2. And so in like manner, some had some certain languages (as a χάρισμα or gift) by inspiration; yet not all, because that was not in order to their businesse. And as the power of speaking with all tongues is called indefinitely λαλεῖν ἑτέραις γλώσσαις Act. 2. 4. speaking with other

h. Γλῶσσα
* In Iliad. 1.
† Strom. 1.

Διαλέκτοις ἑτέραις γλώσσαις

other tongues, and here ch. 13. 1. γλώσσαις ἀνθρώπων λαλῶν καὶ ἀγγέλων, speaking with the tongues of men and of Angels, that is, all kind of languages imaginable (proportionable to the πᾶσα πίστις all faith v. 2.) so this more limited gift is expressed by γένη γλωσσῶν, sorts, or kinds, of languages, and γλώσσῃ λαλεῖν, ch. 14. 2. speaking with a tongue, that is, some one tongue or more; for of him it is said ver. 13. Let him pray that he may interpret, which it seems he is not yet able to doe, and so not to speak with all tongues. For if he could, then understanding himself well enough (as he is supposed to doe v. 4, 14.) it must needs follow, that he would also be able to interpret himself, and not need another qualified to that purpose v. 27. In like manner as here v. 30. tongues and interpreting belong not both to the same persons, nay c. 14 28. when two or three speak in unknown tongues, 'tis supposed possible that neither of them may be able to interpret or declare intelligibly to the people what hath been said, in which case the Apostle bids them that speak strange languages, hold their peace in the Church, that is, in the presence of believers, for to them the strange language is wholly useless. Thus though S. Paul thank God that he doth γλώσσαις λαλεῖν μᾶλλον πάντων ὑμῶν, c. 14. 18. speak with tongues more then all, in the Church of Corinth; yet his very saying so is an intimation that he had not the gift of all tongues, as being not one of those Twelve on whom that gift descended, Act. 2. yet furnish'd abundantly for his office with the languages of all those to whom he was to preach.

Paraphrase.

1. THough I speak with the tongues of men and of Angels, and have not charity, I am become *as [a] sounding brasse, or a tinckling cymbal.]

*a resounding brasse, or a loud-sounding cymbal

1. If I have never so perfect a degree of the gift of languages, and doe not withall study and endevour the good and edifying of the Church, I am no better then a trumpet or cymbal that sounds a triumph, for vanity or boasting, but not at all for profit or benefit of the Church. a.

2. And though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have no charity, I am nothing.]

2. And though I can expound scripture, and know all the most mysterious and subtile parts of it, as the Gnostick hereticks pretend to have (see note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) and if I have the highest degree of that faith by which miracles are wrought, so as to be able to remove mountains, and doe not employ my gifts to the good of others, I am not to be compared with those that have that most excellent gift, c. 12. 13. and make use of it accordingly, to the benefit of (and preserving unity in) the Church.

If I have the liberality to give away all my goods, and even the care and solicitude to distribute them to those that stand in need of them, and do not this out of any principle of charity and compassion, to contribute to the good of others, but either to please men, or acquire glory; and so in like manner, if I proceed to part with my very life, adventuring the most cruel death, even to be burnt alive, and have no charity, or sincerity of love to others, live and dy without that most Christian necessary virtue, I am in comparison never the better for it.

8. And for this charity, the love of God and our brethren, as it hath many branches of excellent virtue in it, so hath it privileges above all others graces or gifts of the Spirit, particularly this, that it shall be usefull to us, and be exercised by us in another world, it shall never be outdated, but last even in heaven, when our imperfect gifts of prophecy, languages, explication of mysteries, shall be swallowed up in that abysse of perfections.

9. For we know in part, and prophesie in part.

11. As it fares in the change of ages in a man, our words, our affections, our inclinations, and our reasonings are quite changed; in the compasse of a few years, we neither say, nor desire, nor understand any thing, as some years before we did: so much more is it betwixt this and another life.

*we see yet βλέπομεν ἄρτι †I yet know, ἄρτι γινώσκω

12. For * now we see through a glasse darkly, but then face to face: † now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known.]

12. 13. So that it is evident, that as faith, hope, and charity, are farre to be preferred before all other gifts of the Spirit, which are given men for the benefit of others v. 2. ſo of thoſe three graces or divine virtues charity is the moſt excellent, whether conſidered in it ſelf, or in the duration of it. In it ſelf it is the moſt neceſſary grace here, v. 1. &c. and all the other whether graces or virtues are but means for the working of this, our Faith teacheth it, and our Hope excites it, and Charity is the end of the Commandement, and Faith muſt be perfected by it, and without it all the gifts mentioned v. 1, 2. are nothing worth, and are given men for the working of that in others: and ſo likewiſe in reſpect of the duration, the gifts were ſoon to vaniſh (and are now vaniſhed long ſince, the gift of miracles, of languages, &c.) and Faith and Hope will vaniſh with this life; for Faith is of things not ſeen, and therefore ceaſeth when viſion cometh, and ſo Hope if it be ſeen, is not Hope, but Charity ſhall never be outdated, but laſt and flouriſh when we come to heaven, and be then a ſpeciall ingredient in our happineſſe, which indeed conſiſts in loving God, and having common deſires with him, and loving all whom he loves, (not the damned, who are veſſels of his wrath) and that eternally.

13. And now abideth faith, hope, charity, theſe three; but the greateſt of theſe is charity.]

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Κύμβαλον

V. 1. Sounding braſſe] That κύμβαλον cymbal here is an inſtrument of loud muſick may appear, not onely by the Epithets which are given it Pſal. 150.5. the loud cymbals, and the high-ſounding cymbals, but alſo by the reſt of the conſort there mention'd, the ſound of the trumpet in the firſt, and (after the pſaltery and harp, timbrel and pipe, ſtringed inſtruments and organs) this of the Cymbal in the laſt and higheſt place, and that no doubt a πνευματικὸν a wind inſtrument of braſs, as appears by Heſychius, who renders χαλκίσματα inſtruments with braſen mouths, by χάλκεα κύμβαλα braſen cymbals. So improbable is it that this ſhould be that tinckling inſtrument of ſo ſlight and low a ſound, that now we call by that name. This more appears by the Epither here added to it, ἠλαλάζον, which certainly ſignifies a loud noiſe or crie, a ſhout either of mariners and the like, when they ſet all uniformly to ſome work of difficulty, to hoyſe the main ſayle, to which they all muſt joyne, and ſummon one another to it by that ſhout, or elſe of Conquerors in a field, Ἀλαλάζει δηνικίως ἠχεῖ, the word notes ſhouting for victory, ſaith Heſychius, and Ἀλαλαγμὸς, δηνικῷ ὕμνῳ, ἢ ἐυφημῷ βοῇ, 'tis a ſong of victory, or ſhout of acclamation. And that ſignifies this inſtrument to be ſuch as was then uſed (as the trumpet, meant, I ſuppoſe, by the χαλκὸς ἠχῶν reſounding braſs, is now) for thoſe ſolemn military Ovations and triumphs; and in that reſpect it ſeems moſt applicable to the gift of tongues in the Church, as that is oppoſed to Charity. Charity is all for the edification, the benefiting and profiting of others; but the gift of tongue, being onely uſefull, as a miracle, to convince unbelievers, and to ſpeak intelligibly to them which are of another nation, and not at all uſefull to believers of their own nation that underſtood not a ſtrange tongue, may, in reſpect of them, fitly be compared to a Cymbal, or trumpet, ſounding a triumph for oſtentation, but not for edification, as is inſiſted on at large in the fourteenth Chapter.

b. Μακροθυμεῖν

V. 4. Suffereth long] The notion of μακροθυμεῖν for ſlowneſs to wrath, or revenge, in oppoſition to quick reſentment of injuries, is ſufficiently known, Rom. 9.22. and ſo it is to be taken here, as a firſt and principal act of Charity, on which χρηστεύεται, is kind, or good, or gentle, or gracious, fitly attends. This differs from the ἀ Παροξύνεται, is not exaſperated, or highly provoked to anger, v. 5. eſpecially in two things. 1. Παροξυσμὸς notes the height or pitch to which it advanceth, as the paroxyſme is the ſharp fit of the feaver; and ſo that part of the character of Charity is, that where that is planted, it moderateth anger, and ſuffers it not to boyle to that height, but this of μακροθυμία is the deferring and putting it off; the charitable man is ſo farre from raſh anger, or ſuddain revenges, that he can bear and forbear long. 2. Παροξυσμὸς is reſtrained to the paſſionate, ſharper part of anger, which is called ὀργὴ, as the former to the rational and heavier part of it, θυμὸς, which relates to revenge, or inflicting of puniſhment. This is otherwhere expreſſed by βραδὺς εἰς ὀργὴν ſlow to wrath, Jam. 1. 19. by ἀνεξικακῶ 2 Tim. 2. 24. bearing with evil, not apt or forward to puniſh thoſe that doe amiſſe; to which is annexed ἐν πραΰτητι παιδεύων, in meekneſs inſtructing oppoſers. Contrary to this are the ἀνήμεροι fierce 2 Tim. 3. 3.

Παροξύνεται

Ib. Is kind] Χρηστότης ſignifies εὐσπλαγχνίαν, ἢ πρὸς τὸν πέλας σωδιάθεσιν, τὰ αὐτῷ ὡς οἰκεῖα διοπτευμένην, ſaith Phavorinus, tenderneſs of compaſſion, kindneſs toward the neighbour, making all things that belong to him as if they were his own; and ſo it ſeems to ſignifie here, that it is the property of Charity, where it is planted, to infuſe a benignity into their nature, making them conſider others as they doe themſelves, and ſo extend the ſame liberality and kindneſs to them that ſtand in need of it, that in the like caſe they would wiſh to themſelves; a God-like quality, attributed to God himſelf, ὅτι Κύριος χρηστὸς, the Lord is gracious, 1 Pet. 2. 3. c. Χρηστότης

Ib. Vaunteth not] What the word περπερεύεται ſignifies, or of what origination it is, whether Greek or Latine, is ſomewhat difficult. Among the antient Greeks it is not met with, but among the moſt antient Latines it is; Perperi in Accius, and perperitudo, and perperàm facere very ordinarily. Which makes it reaſonable to reſolve it a Latine, not a Greek word originally. Then for the meaning of it, in the Latine it ſignifies generally to doe amiſſe, perperàm oppoſed to rectè, but in the Greek, the Gloſſaries, and the antient Fathers doe differ, and yet prettily well agree. Περπερεύεται, καυχᾶται, ſaith Heſychius, is elated, ſets himſelf out at the greateſt advantage; and Πέρπερος μετὰ ἀλαζονείας ἐπαιρόμενος, lifted up, and fooliſh, (and therefore when in Phavorinus we read Περιπερία, ἡ κολακεία, it ſhould doubtleſſe be read ἡ βλακεία fooliſhneſſe, and ſo preſently to the ſame word he hath ἢ ἡ βλακεία.) And Phavorinus hath pointed to this place, ἀ περπερεύεται, ὁ Ἀπόστολός φησι, τυτέστιν, ἀ περπατεῖ, (for which S. Chryſoſtome reads, ἀ περπατεύεται, and what that is will be beſt judged from Antiochus, * λογ. ὁ'. μὴ ὑπεραιρόμενον μήποτε περπατεύμενον, not lifted up above meaſure, not exalted with an opinion of himſelf, as appears by the oppoſites there, ταπινόφρων lowly-minded, κατηγμένον τῇ καρδίᾳ, depreſs'd in heart, λογιζόμενον ἑαυτὸν ἀχρεῖον δοῦλον εἶναι, accounting himſelf to be an unprofitable ſervant) when the Apoſtle ſaith, ἀ περπερεύεται, the meaning is, that he runs not headlong, præcipitous, as giddy proud fools are wont to doe. Περπατὴς, ſaith Heſychius, περπίπτων περὶ τὸ λογισμῶ, that falls upon any action before conſideration, or deliberation, raſh, unadviſed: ſo * Antiochus λογ. ιε'. ſpeaking of longanimity and lenity of mind, ſaith, that he that hath it, is (among other things) ἀπέρπερος, not guilty of that præcipitous raſhneſs that wrathful men are ſubject to (and therefore when Heſychius hath Περπερᾷ, πρόσκοπτει, it will be reaſonable to correct, and read it, περπατεῖ.) * Clemens Alexandrinus renders περπερεία καλλωπισμὸς, adorning and dreſſing ones ſelf gayly; and † S. Baſil, Τί ὅτι περπερεύεις; πᾶν ὃ μὴ διὰ χρείαν, ἀλλὰ διὰ καλλωπισμὸν παραλαμβάνεται What doth it ſignifie? All that is put on not for uſe, but ornament. So in * Cicero ad Attic. Ego autem ipſe, ipse, Dii boni, quomodo ἐπεπερπερευόμην novo auditori Pompeio? that is, πῶς ἐκαλλωπιζόμην, how did I set my self out, play the Orator, decking or adorning my speech with borrowed beauty? where, it seemes, it notes an ostentation of eloquence, as of any thing else. From these severals put together the result may seem to be this, that περπερεύεσθαι signifies that ambitious ostentation, setting himself out, which proceeds from a foolish, giddy pride and elation of mind; and puts a man forward upon all headlong, precipitous actions in pursuit of his own glory or to satisfie his own intemperate humour. Thus in Accius, ductabilitas nimia, and perperitudo, are put together, an easinesse to be led, and an hasty rash precipitous behaviour. And then the excellence of Charity (as in other things) appears in this, that, where it is truly planted, it keeps a man from this foolish, giddy elation of mind, which breaks out precipitously into all ambitious, ostentatious actions, and renders him ridiculous by an undue unconsiderate pursuit of his own glory, or praise; whereas the true Christian love of others, so contrary to self-love, the source of all this, is busied in the advancement of the reall concernments of others, and sets considerately about that, and runs not headlong after such improper waies of getting in any aerial empty good unto themselves.

c. ἀσχημονεῖ

V. 5. Behave it selfe unseemly] What ἀσχημονεῖ here signifies, is a matter of some question. That which seems most commodious to some circumstances of the place is, that it is one effect of the grace and duty of Charity to our Brethren, that he that hath it, doth never use others unseemly in words or gestures, but especially not reproachfully. Thus will it fitly be joyned to οὐ φυσιοῦται is not puffed up, contumelious behaviour being a natural concomitant of pride and arrogance. And accordingly as Hesychius renders Ἀσχημονεῖ (for so it should be read, not as the copie corruptly hath it, Ἀσχῶς) ἀκοσμεῖ doth uncomely in general, so he explains Ἀσχήμων θάνατος an uncomely death, by ὀνειδιστικὸς reproachfull, contumelious, to which it will be consequent, that the Verb may also signifie to deal reproachfully and to doe so is very contrary to Charity, of which therefore it is here denied. The notion which Erasmus hath of it for being ashamed of nothing, doing any the meanest offices, though it might be agreeable to the Context, as an act of high Charity, doth not yet any way agree with the nature of the word. And the other notions of doing no dishonest thing, &c. affix'd by others, will not agree with the Context, which belongs all to duties of charity to other men, whereas this is terminated in our selves. Onely it may be worthy of consideration, whether (this chapter of the markes and effects of charity being founded in the discourse of gifts in the Church, c. 12. and both compared with and set before them, here, v. 1, 2, 8. and also set opposite to the factions and divisions incident to the irregular use of them, and so particularly pursued c. 14.) this, and many other parts of the character of charity, be not so to be interpreted, as may most immediately refer to that matter. Thus the three immediate precedents here, οὐ ζηλοῖ, οὐ περπερεύεται, οὐ φυσιοῦται, envieth not, vaunteth not, is not puff'd up, seem peculiarly to mark out the malice and pride and ostentation of the Gnosticks, and then, proportionably, so may οὐκ ἀσχημονεῖ behaves not it self disorderly; that is, where true Christian charity is, (opposed to γνῶσις knowledge, c. 8. 1.) it hath this effect, it keeps men from irregular disorderly behaviour in the Church, such as are mentioned, c. 14. throughout, but especially v. 23, 35. and in respect of which it is prescribed in the end of the chapter, that all things be done (in the Church certainly) εὐσχημόνως orderly, which may very reasonably be thought to interpret the contrary here, οὐκ ἀσχημονεῖ, and therefore I have not omitted this interpretation in the paraphrase.

f. λογίζεται τὸ κακὸν

Ib. Thinketh no evill] What λογίζεται τὸ κακὸν signifies must be doubtfull, because both λογίζεσθαι and κακὸν are capable of two interpretations: λογίζεσθαι may signifie to think, as that signifies to design; Λογισάμενοι, διαλογιζόμενοι, ἐνθυμούμενοι; saith Hesychius; and κακὸν evil may be hurt or mischief: and then λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν will be to imagine mischief, designe in the mind, contrive hurt to any, and so thinking evil signifies Gen. 50. 20. and διαλογισμοὶ πονηροὶ, evil thoughts, are wicked machinations, (see Note on Mat. 15. e.) On the other side λογίζεσθαι is to reckon, to account, and τὸ κακὸν evil is also wickedness in any man, as well as mischief to him. And then λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν is to impute, or account, sinne to any man. Thus λογίζεσθαι ἁμαρτίαν Rom. 4. 8. is rendred truly, imputing of sinne, that is, accounting sinne to any, reckoning it, charging it on him. To this purpose S. Chrysostome, οὐδὲν πονηρὸν ὑποπτεύει καὶ τὰ φιλούμενα, he suspects no ill of him whom he loves, and μηδὲ ὑπόνοιαν πονηρὰν δέχεσθαι ἀνεχομένη, charity endures not to receive any ill suspicion of any. And this latter is more probably the meaning of the phrase here. For this may fitly be reckon'd among the excellent effects of Charity, that it keeps a man, in whom it is, from reckoning or imputing of evil to any man; whatsoever good another doth, it makes one impute that to him, commend him, reward him for that, as it was God's charity to Abraham (and to all sincere believers) that he did λογίζεσθαι δικαιοσύνην, impute righteousnesse unto him, though he performed not exact obedience, or such to which the reward was due. But τὸ κακὸν the evil, that which is amiss, (all one with ἁμαρτίαν the sin) οὐ λογίζεται, it will not suffer him to impute that any way to his disadvantage. This a man will be otherwise apt enough to doe, if Charity doe not restrain him; and a most commendable virtuous act it is, a special ingredient in raising that great elogie of Charity premised in the first verses of the Chapter, that it accounts, reckons, imputes the good, but not the evil, whereas the designing of mischief is it self so vile a thing, so contrary to the lawes of common humanity, that an heathen virtuous man, without the advantage of Christian charity, will not think fit to doe so: And meerly to restrain one from that diabolical, malicious humour, is not so commendable, or so excellent a thing. To this rendring of it agree the severall glosses in Hesychius, Λογισμοῖς, ψήσοις, and Λογιώμοσι, ἀπειλημμένοις, and Λογίζεται, φημίζεται: 'tis certainly a false print for ψηφίζει, for it follows Λογίζομαι, τῇ χειρὶ ψηφίζω· and Λογίζομαι, ἐνθυμοῦμαι, φημίζω, it should certainly be again ἐνθυμοῦμαι, ψηφίζω. All tending to this, that it signifies to reckon, (see Note on Rom. 3. b) as generally it doth in the New Testament. Another notion yet there is which is affix'd to this phrase, that λογίζεσθαι τὸ κακὸν is to suspect evil, but that is expres's'd by another phrase ἐνθυμεῖσθαι πονηρὰ Mat. 9. 4. and that Charity permits not a man to doe that, is in effect said, v. 8. in πάντα πιστεύει it believes all things, believes alwaies the best of every man; for that is all one with suspecteth not evil.

B. ἐνθυμεῖσθαι πονηρὰ

g. Ἀδικία Ἀλήθεια

V. 6. Rejoyceth not in iniquity —] For the explaining this verse, it must first be resolved what is meant by ἀδικία iniquity, and ἀλήθεια truth. Ἀδικία may signifie, (in opposition to the peculiar notion of truth,) deceit or falsenesse, as when it is said of Christ, ἔστιν ἀληθὴς ὅδε, this is true, and οὐκ ἔστιν ἀδικία ἐν αὐτῷ Joh. 7. 18. there is no unrighteousnesse in him, that is, no deceitfulnesse, (see Note on Lu. 16. a.) And then the meaning will be, that true Charity infuses such a value of truth, and dislike of deceit and cousenage, that it permits not any man to be pleased with any such act either in himself or others. But as ἀδικία is oft used in a wider sense for all wickednesse, and peculiarly for the villanies of the Gnosticks, Rom. 1. 18. so is ἀλήθεια taken for purity and sincerity of goodness 1 Cor. 5. 8.

and so 3. Joh. 3. and often in other places; and then as ὁ χαίρει, rejoiceth not, denotes the taking no pleasure, but on the contrary being very sad, extremely grieved (as Isa. 66. 4. that in which I delighted not is their abominations v. 3.) so the full meaning of the verse will be, that Charity will make a man truly mourn and grieve at any sin committed by other (so farre is it from the practice of the Gnosticks, which delight in debauching men to unchristian sins,) and most heartily rejoice to see men discharge their Christian duty, live in all manner of sincerity. And thus saith S. John 3 Joh. 4. that he hath no greater joy, then to hear that his children walk in the truth.

V. 7. Beareth] That στέγω signifies to cover, and is, within a very little, the Latine tego, and from thence στέγος tectum, is sufficiently known; and therefore by Hesychius 'tis first expressed by κρύπτει, ζωσέχει, to cover, to contain, and then by βαστάζει, ὑπομένει, to carry, to endure. And that this notion of covering belongs principally to concealing, in opposition to speaking out or reporting, may appear by Hesychius also, who in the word στέγανον explains it by τὸ διαμένον σέγειν τοὺς λόγους, καὶ μὴ ἐξαγγέλλειν, to cover words, and not report them, and Σεγανώτερον, σιωπηλότερον, referring to silence, or holding the peace. And this is the most probable notion of the word here, where speaking of Charity, that it rejoiceth not in iniquity (that is, is so farre from joying to see another offend, that it produceth great sorrow and compassion for it) but, on the other side, rejoiceth together in the truth, is very glad to see men doe as they should doe, live in all Christian sincerity, he addes πάντα στέγει, as a farther evidence of that temper, conceals all the ill of another, unless when 'tis greater charity to reveal it, (as Pro. 10. 12. it is said of love, that it covers all sins) and then goes on, πιστεύει πάντα, believeth all things, that is, all things that are said for the excuse or mitigation of a fault, (which is the quality of the supernal wisdome, Jam. 3. 17. that 'tis εὐπειθὴς easie to be perswaded of that which tends to mitigate the fault) and when nothing is said in defence, or excuse, yet ἐλπίζει πάντα hopeth the best that the matter is capable of: And then followes πάντα ὑπομένει endureth all things, whatsoever of injury comes to him by anothers fact, he is most ready to bear, and never meditate revenge. Which is the very thing that must be meant by this phrase πάντα στέγει, if it were rendred, beareth all things; as in Hesychius 'tis manifest that στέγω in that notion of bearing is ὑπομένω to endure. And that is one farther evidence that στέγω is here in the other notion; for else there would be no avoiding a tautologie. It is true that ch. 9. 12. it may bear another sense (for the word certainly signifies to endure, as well as to conceale) and yet that with somewhat of this notion in it; for the sense lies thus, we might use our liberty or authority, claim the privilege of labourers, that is, to be provided for by those for whom we labour, but we have not done so, but πάντα στέγομεν, make no such claims, but endure hardship, rather then hinder the propagating of the Gospel by insisting on this right. πάντα στέγει

i. Πάντα

Ib. All things] The word Πάντα all things though it be an universal, is not to be taken in the utmost extent, but according to the use of the like phrases in all languages, wherein the universal signe affix'd either to persons, or times, or places, or things, signifies onely a greater number, but not all without exception. So when Psal. 14. 4. it is said of the children of men, that they are all gone out of the way, all become abominable, it is manifest that it is not spoken of all men without exception; for v. 8. there is mention of Gods people, and v. 9. of the righteous. So for things Joh. 14. 26. the holy Ghost shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your memory; not absolutely all, but all that were usefull to their office. So 1 Cor. 10. 23. All things are lawfull to me, that is, many of those things which are unexpedient, or all indifferent things. So Phil. 4. 13. I can doe all things is determined there to the things there spoken of, to want, and to abound, &c. and so here the covering, and believing, and hoping, and enduring all things, is the concealing and burying in forgetfulnesse many considerable injuries and evils of other men, believing, and hoping, and enduring very many things, which they which have not this excellent divine grace of Charity will never doe.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. XIV.

1. Let the prime supreme care be to do good to others, and in order to that, of all spirituall gifts which you are to desire zealously, that of interpreting Scripture is the most usefull, see note on Lu. 1. n.

1. Follow after charity, and desire spirituall gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.] * pursue διώκετε

2. For he that by the gift of God speaketh any unknown languages, onely to shew what he can doe, must be supposed to speak to the understanding of none but of God, and then he speaks indeed by that gift or afflation, mysteries or hidden things, but no body receives benefit by him.

2. For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue, speaketh not unto men, but unto God; for no man understandeth him, † howbeit in the Spirit he speaketh mysteries.] † though he by the spirit, πνεύματι δὲ

3. But he that declareth to others what himself understands of holy things, speaks to men's profit and instruction, admonisheth and exhorteth them to all Christian practice, and comforteth them from the promises of Christ.

3. But he that propheſyeth speaketh unto men † to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.] † edification οἰκοδομὴν

4. He that speaks a strange language, can benefit no body but himself; but he that interprets Scripture, doth that which much tendeth to the confirming and benefiting the congregation, improving them in spirituall knowledge.

4. He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself, but he that propheſieth, edifieth the Church.]

5. I had much rather that ye had the gift of propheſying then of strange tongues, for expounding of Scriptures is infinitely more usefull to the Church then the gift of tongues, unless he that useth that gift doth after tell them in plain words what he meant, for unless he doe so, the Church can receive no advantage by him.

5. I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye propheſied; for greater is he that propheſieth then he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the Church may receive edifying.]

6. For strange tongues are not at all profitable for them that are already Christians; that which is profitable is either 1. expounding sacred figures, or 2. communicating ones knowledge in great mysteries (see note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) or 3. interpreting of difficulties of Scripture, or 4. morall catechisticall institution, teaching you what men ought to doe and believe.

6. Now brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by propheſying, or by doctrine?]

7. And

7. And even things without life giving ſound, whether pipe or harpe, except they give a diſtinction in the ſounds, how ſhall it be known what is piped or harped?]

7. This you may diſcern by an ordinary ſimilitude, for when ſounds are made by instruments, unleſſe thoſe ſounds are ſet to ſome tune, no man can tell what to make of it.

8. For if the trumpet give an uncertain ſound, who ſhall prepare himſelf to the battail?]

8. And particularly the trumpet, which is uſed to ſound alarmes, doth ſo by a particular diſtinct ſound; and if that be not ſounded, no man that hears a trumpet will think himſelf bound to make ready.

9 So likewiſe you, except ye utter by the tongue * words eaſie to be underſtood, how ſhall it be known what is ſpoken? for ye ſhall ſpeak into the aire.]

9. So if you, that have the gift of ſtrange languages, doe not by that means ſpeak that which the Auditors may underſtand (for to that end ſure were thoſe languages given, that you might ſpeak to every one in his own language, Act. 2. 6.) how ſhall any man be the better for your languages? your words ſhall be poured out into the aire unprofitably.

† languages ...and none of them is without ſome language, ουδεν αφωνον (but the Ks. MS. leaves out ουδεν) εστιν

10. There are, it may be, ſo many kindes of † voices in the world, and none of them are without ſignification.]

10. There are, for example, ſeventy languages, and every nation ſpeaks ſome or other, and underſtands that, but ordinarily no other.

11. Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I ſhall be unto him that ſpeaketh a Barbarian and he that ſpeaketh ſhall be a Barbarian unto me.]

11. And therefore if he that hath all theſe languages ſpeak to me in any but that which I underſtand, he ſpeaks to no more purpoſe to me, and I receive no more advantage from him, then if a couple of men of ſeverall countreys ſhould talk one to another, and neither underſtand a word of the other.

12. Even ſo ye, for aſmuch as ye are zealous of ſpirituall gifts, ſeek that ye may excell to the edifying of the Church.]

12. So ye alſo, ſeeing ye would fain have ſome of thoſe extraordinary gifts of the Spirit (ſee note on Lu. 9. e) ſeek thoſe gifts eſpecially by which the Church may receive edification and advantage, that ſo you may doe ſomewhat more then ordinary, and of that ſort is propheſying.

13. Wherefore let him that ſpeaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.]

13. And inſtead of amazing people with ſtrange languages which they underſtand not, let him pray to God for the gift of expounding ſtrange languages, that he may help others to underſtand them that ſpeak thus.

14. For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my ſpirit prayeth, but my underſtanding is unfruitfull.]

14. For if by that gift of tongues I pray in an unknown language, my gift, or the gift of tongues which is given me, prayes, but my underſtanding lies idle (ſee note on Lu. 9. c.) does no body elſe any good; I make uſe of my gift of tongues, which I my ſelf underſtand, but I make no uſe of that underſtanding of mine to make others doe ſo too.

15. What is it then? I will pray † with the ſpirit, and I will pray * with the underſtanding alſo; I will ſing † with the ſpirit, and I will ſing * with the underſtanding alſo.]

15. What then is it that is moſt deſirable? Why, that if in praying I make uſe of the gift of tongues, which is intelligible to my ſelf, I pray alſo by my underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not the gift of tongues is wont to pray, that ſo my underſtanding may be uſefull to others, and help them to underſtand alſo; and ſo likewiſe that I may make uſe of the gift of tongues in ſinging Pſalms, and ſing alſo by my underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not thoſe extraordinary gifts is wont to ſing, that is, ſo as ſhall be intelligible to others.

16. Elſe, when thou ſhalt bleſſe with the ſpirit, how ſhall he that occupyeth the room of the † unlearned ſay a Amen, at thy giving of thanks, ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt?]

16. For if thou adminiſter the Sacrament in an unknown tongue, how ſhall they underſtand thee not? a.

17. For thou verily giveſt thanks well; but the other is not edified.]

17. And in that caſe how well ſoever that be done which thou doſt, yet 'tis clear 'tis not for the advantage of others, or benefit of the Church.

18. I thank my God, [I ſpeak with tongues more then you all.]

18. I have the gift of tongues more then any of you hath it.

* by † I may inſtruct κατηχησω

19. Yet in the Church I had rather ſpeak five words * with my underſtanding, that † by my voice I might teach others alſo, then ten thouſand words in an unknown tongue.]

19. But for the benefit of others 'twere much better that I ſpake, though never ſo little, from my own underſtanding, ſo as he that hath not the gift of tongues is wont to ſpeak, ſo that others may underſtand, and be inſtructed by me, then never ſo much by the gift of tongues, when no man knows what I ſay.

* in your affections, ταις φρεσιν, † wickedneſſe τη κακια * affections be ye perfect, τελειοι γινεσθε † or, by the lips of others, or ſtrangers, for the Kings MS. reads χειλεσιν ετεροις

20. Brethren, be not children * in underſtanding: howbeit, in † malice be ye children, but in * underſtanding be men.]

20. Brethren, 'tis a piteous thing to be thus childiſhly affected (ſee note on Lu. 1. 5.) to brag or boaſt of uſeleſſe, gainleſſe things, ſuch as is ſpeaking what no man underſtands: In reſpect of ſin, be as like children, that is, as innocent as you will, but be more mature and manly in your affections.

21. It in the Law it is written, With men of other tongues and † other lips will I ſpeak unto this people: and yet for all that will they not hear me, ſaith the Lord.]

21. In the old Teſtament in the prophecy of Iſaiah c. 28. 11. 'tis mention'd as a miracle ſhewed to the people, that God would ſend prophets to them in languages which they underſtood not, and yet that this ſo great a miracle ſhould not work on them.

22. Wherefore tongues are for a ſign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but propheſying ſerveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.]

22. By which it appears that the uſe of the gift of tongues is principally as a miracle, and that for the converting of unbelievers; but interpreting of Scriptures, and teaching Chriſtian doctrines, is that that is moſt proper for believers.

23. If therefore the whole Church be come together into ſome place, and all ſpeak with tongues, and there come in thoſe that are * unlearned or unbelievers, will they not ſay that ye are mad?]

23. If therefore in a ſociety of Chriſtians and none elſe, all that ſpeak ſhall ſpeak ſtrange languages, what will an ordinary man, or an unbeliever think or ſay? would he not think them all mad, if he ſhould caſually come among them?

24. But if all propheſy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is † convinced of all, he is judged of all.]

24. But if that which they are about be the interpreting of Scripture, promulgating the doctrine of Chriſt, this may probably work upon them that hear, though they came in unbelievers.

25. And coming to a ſight of their ſins they will be forced to doe reverence, and confeſſe that God is in ſuch a congregation as that.

25. And thus are the ſecrets of his heart made manifeſt, and ſo falling down on his face he will worſhip God, * and report that God is in you of a truth.] * proclaiming that God is really among you απαγγελλων ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ὄντως ἐν ὑμῖν ἐστι

26. If then ye demand, how ye ſhall behave your ſelves in Church-meetings; I take care eſpecially that, whatever ye doe, whether by the afflation of the Spirit ye compoſe Pſalms (ſee note on Eph. 5. g.) for the praiſing of God, as was uſed eſpecially in the Euchariſt v. 15, 16. or whether ye make uſe of your gift of languages (note on c. 12. h.) or whether ye explain the figures of the old Teſtament (ſee note b.) or whether ye interpret what others have ſpoken in an unknown tongue, all be done ſo as may be moſt to the benefit and advantage of others.

26. How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a Pſalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation: let all things be done unto edifying.]

27. And whenſoever any uſe the gift of tongues, let not above two or three doe it at one time, and they one by one, and let one of them interpret all that the reſt have ſpoken.

27. If any man ſpeak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the moſt by three, and that † by courſe, and let one interpret.] † ἀνὰ μέρος

28. And if none preſent be able to doe that, let not him that hath the gift of languages ſpeak in the Church, the place of believers (but reſerve his tongues for the converting of ſtrangers) and in the mean time keep his languages to himſelf, to be uſed at his own home betwixt God and him in private.

28. But if there be no interpreter, let him keep ſilence in the Church, and let him ſpeak to himſelf and to God.]

29. And as for the gift of tongues, ſo next for propheſying, let that be done by thoſe who are endowed with that gift, two or three in a day, the reſt of thoſe who have the like gift of prophecy, paſſing judgement on that which is done by them.

29. Let the prophets ſpeak, two or three, and let the other judge.]

b. 30. And if, while one that hath that gift is reading or expounding any part of Scripture, another that ſitteth by and hath the like gift be able to give any expoſition of a ſacred figure or other emergent difficulty, let it be free for him to doe ſo, and in the mean while let the other, that was ſpeaking, give way to him,

30. If any thing be [b] revealed to another that ſitteth by, let the firſt hold his peace.]

31. For ye all that have the gift of prophecy may give your ſenſe of Scripture one after another, and if ye doe ſo, that will be the beſt way to inſtruct and exhort all others.

31. For ye may all propheſy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be † comforted.] † exhorted παρακαλεῖται

32. And it cannot be objected againſt this, that they that are thus inſpired, cannot thus ſtop themſelves; for the afflations or inſpirations of ſuch prophets as are here ſpoken of, may be ruled by the prophets, that is, by them that have them; the Chriſtian gifts of expounding, &c. being not like the afflations of evill ſpirits which put them into extaſies, God's gifts to the Church are (as even Prophecy it ſelf appeared to be in Jonah) ſuch, as it is in their power to reſtrain, and conſequently they may propheſy one after another, v. 31.

32. And the ſpirits of the prophets are ſubject to the prophets.]

33. For the Spirit of God is not a violent, extatical, impetuous, but a quiet, ſoft ſpirit, as appears by the effects in all well-tempered, conſtituted Churches.

33. For God is not the * author of confuſion, but of peace, as in all Churches of the ſaints.] * God of diſturbance ἀκαταστασίας ὁ Θεὸς

34. As for your women, let them be ſo farre from teaching, that they doe not ſo much as ſpeak, by way of asking queſtions, in the Church, but acquieſce in the judgments of their ſuperiours, particularly their husbands, as the law of God commands Gen. 3. 16.

34. Let your women keep ſilence in the Churches: for it is not permitted unto them to ſpeak, but † they are commanded to be under obedience, as alſo ſaith the Law.] † or, let them be ſubject to their husbands, for the Kings MS. reads ὑποτασσέσθωσαν αὐταῖς ἀνδράσιν

35. What therefore they deſire to be inſtructed in, they muſt ſeek it by their husbands, by whom it may be conveighed to them (if not from their own skill, yet from thoſe that are able to inſtruct, the officers of the Church) much more decently then by their ſpeaking or asking queſtions in the Church, the doing of which is uncomely in a woman, as arguing ſome pride in her, or weakneſſe in her husband.

35. And if they will learn any thing, let them ask * their husbands at home: for it is a ſhame for women to ſpeak in the Church.] * their own τοὺς ἰδίους

36. As for you that take upon you to order otherwiſe, are you the planters of the Goſpel? or did the Apoſtles, that planted, give none but you directions, that you muſt doe contrary to all other Churches, particularly to Jeruſalem, and ſuffer women to ſpeak in your Churches?

36. What? came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you † onely? † alone μόνους

37. If any man be a prophet, or have any other ſpiritual gift, or afflation, let him receive theſe directions as the commands of the Lord, or not pretend to be a true prophet. For the Apoſtles (and ſuch am I) being the men intruſted by Chriſt to conveigh the Goſpel to the world, and to preſerve order in the Church, are to be obeyed by the Prophets themſelves; and in matters of difference the reſolution is to be made by the Apoſtles, as the Governours of the Church, not by the prophets or the ſpiritual.

37. If any man think himſelf to be a Prophet, or ſpiritual, let him acknowledg that the things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.]

38. But if any man doubt of it, reſiſt the directions, let him continue to doe ſo, his will be the danger of it.

38. But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.]

39. To conclude therefore, propheſying, teaching, exhorting is the thing by which the Church is moſt profited, and for the gift of tongues, 'tis that that they which have may be allowed to uſe, if they doe it according as I have directed.

39. Wherefore, brethren, covet to propheſie, and forbid not to ſpeak with tongues.]

40. Let all things therefore be done according to the cuſtome of the Church, (which is the rule of decency) and according to the orders and directions which now, and at other times, have or ſhall be given you by me. And this is all I ſhall now adde on this ſubject.

40. Let all things be done decently, and * in order.] * according to appointment, κατὰ τάξιν

a. ἀμὴν

V. 16. Amen] The word Amen is an expreſſion ordinarily uſed by the people, by way of aſſent to the prayer made by another before them, being an Hebrew Adverb of affirming, and ſo rendred by Symmachus πιστωμένως faithfully. For, as Maimonides ſaith, 'twas a cuſtome of the Jewes in their daily prayers, that he that had not skill or ability to pray himſelf, ſhould ſay Amen, but he that had ability, ſhould pray himſelf. The former of theſe was he that is here called ἰδιώτης the private or vulgar perſon, νεώτερος 1 Pet. 5. 5. the younger, as * Lucian defines ἰδιώτης, Πολὺς ὄμιλος, οὓς ἰδιώτας καλεῖσιν οἱ σοφοί, the multitude or congregation, which the wiſe men call Idiots. This cuſtome is clearly deduced from Deut. 27. where all the people of Iſrael joyne in this; and ſo in the Pſalmiſt particularly on this occaſion of εὐλογία bleſſing of God, Bleſſed ἰδιώτης * περὶ πεν. p. 788.

Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting and world without end, and let all the people say, Amen. So Neh. 8. 7. All the people answered, Amen, λαὸς, the laity peculiarly, (as that differs from the Priests) who therefore in all reason are here meant by ἰδιῶται. The Talmudists have a threefold Amen: 1. Amen pupillum, † Ioc. N. T. c. 5. faith †Caninius, when one prayes, and another that understands not what he saith, gives answer to him, parallel to this of the idiote in this place; 2ly. Amen Surreptitium, a stollen Amen, when 'tis before the end of the prayer; and 3ly. Sectile, when he cuts it into two parts, A-men, as he that yawnes, or is a doing or minding something else. Now the use of this Amen ἐπὶ τῇ Ἐπὶ τῇ εὐχαριστίᾳ εὐχαριστίᾳ at thy giving thanks, seems here to referre to the custome of the ancient, and it seems Apostolical, Primitive Church, which was at the consecrating of the Lord's Supper, for to that the giving of thanks seems to belong, according to the use of the word εὐχαριστία or εὐλογία c. 10. 16. At the ending of which, saith Justine Martyr Apol. 2. there was a solemne ἐπιφωνημα, Ἀμὴν, acclamation of Amen by the people.

30. Revealed] That ἀποκάλυψις doth not alwaies
b. Ἀποκάλυψις signifie a vision, or passively, a receiving a revelation, by extasie, or dream from God, but onely a sense or notion, a meaning or interpretation of a piece of Scripture, that through some figure (or the like) hath much difficulty in it, may appear by ver. 6. where in opposition to the miraculous speaking of tongues, those four waies of expounding in the Church are set down, and the first of them ἀποκάλυψις, revelation, or expounding of sacred figures, &c. So v. 26. ἀποκάλυψιν ἔχει hath a revelation, as hath an interpretation, is of him that can expound any such figure, as the other is he that can interpret a strange language; and so here in this verse, that which is here hath a revelation must be expounded by the prophet's speaking ver. 29. For thus it lies, Let the prophets speak, two or three, that is, so many in a meeting: If another that sitteth by have any revelation, that is, if whilst one is a speaking, another be, or conceive himself able to expound the difficulty, then let the first, that is, the prophet then a speaking, hold his peace, give way to him; where, as the prophets speaking is all one with having a revelation, so the thing thus delivered being to be judged of by others, whether it be right or no, (let others judge, ver. 29.) is concluded not to be any special revelation from God, for if 'twere supposed such, it ought not to be subject to others judging of it. And then what is here said will clearly be explained by that which we read in Philo (lib. Omnem probum liberum esse) where speaking of the Doctors of the Jewes, when they are set in the Synagogues, ὁ μὲν, saith he, τὰς βίβλους ἀναγινώσκει, One reads the bible, some part of it, ἕτερος δὲ τῶν ἐμπειροτάτων ὅσα μὴ γνώριμα παρελθὼν ἀναγινώσκει, And another of the more skilful, or Doctors, passing through those that are not known, that is, the more difficult passages, expounds. This was called among the Jewes דרש preaching or expounding in their Synagogues. See Note on ch. 1. c.

CHAP. XV.

Paraphrase.

1. MOreover, brethren, I declare unto you the Gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye * stand,]
*have stood ἐστήκατε

1. As to that great heresie of some among you v. 12. that deny the resurrection, I shall now speake the very same which at my first preaching the Gospel among you I taught, and which ye then embraced, and for some time, till these Gnostick false teachers crept in among you, ye never made question of,

†you are escaped, or, Gods *after what manner I preach'd unto you if you keep in memorie εἰ κατέχετε, εἰ μνημονεύετε ὃν τρόπον εὐηγγελισάμην ὑμῖν, εἰ μὴ εἰκῇ ἐπιστεύσατε †unlesse, ἐκτὸς *among the principal things, ἐν πρώτοις

2. By which also † ye are saved, * if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unlesse ye have believed † in vain.]

2. By which also you were converted & fetch'd out from the midst of the Gentile world, after what manner, if your memory serve you, I delivered the story to you with all the circumstances and explication of difficulties, unlesse your believing and receiving the Gospel were light and rash and inconsiderate, or unlesse what you then received be now quite vanished.

3. For I delivered unto you * first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures,]

3. For one of the principall things which I told you, and which I my self had learned at my first believing the Gospel, was this, that as Christ died for our sins,

4. And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures.]

4. And his body was laid in the grave, so on the third day, according to the prophecies of the scripture, he rose from the grave,

5. And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve.]

5. And after his rising appeared to Peter, Lu. 24. 34. and then to the whole colledge of disciples, Lu. 24. 36. consisting formerly of twelve, and so soon after again, though now one of them was wanting.

6. After that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.]

6. After that he was seen in Galilee Mat. 28. 7. by neer five hundred believers or Christians at one time, of whom a great part are now still alive ready to testifie it, but some of them are dead.

†then ἔπειτα

7. †After that he was seen of [a] James, then of all the Apostles.]

7. Besides all these, he was, a. presently after his resurrection, seen by James the Bishop of Jerusalem, then by all the twelve Apostles, Joh. 20. 25.

8. And last of all he was seen of me also, as of * one [b] born out of due time.]

8. And after his ascension b. to heaven he spake from thence, and exhibited himself to be seen by me, who before had not seen him, being not a disciple of his then, but after his ascension converted by him, and received through his special favour into the number of his Apostles, though most unworthy of that dignity.

9. For I am the least of the Apostles, that am not meet to be called an Apostle, because I persecuted the Church of God.]

9. For I having first been a great persecutor of Christianity, though by Christ I was thus miraculously call'd to be an Apostle of his, am not yet worthy to be so esteemed, but being by Christ so constituted, am yet for that former life of mine, inferior to all the rest of the Apostles of Christ, who were never thus guilty.

10. But by the * grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was † bestowed upon me was not in vain: but I laboured more abundantly then they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.]

10. Though being by his special favour so constituted, I have since laboured to walk worthy of it, and have been more industrious and laborious then all the rest that had been his disciples here: yet what I have thus done is not to be imputed to me in any manner, but to the grace and goodnesse of God that went along with me, and enabled me to doe what I have done.

11. Therefore, whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.]

11. Well then, whether ye look upon me, or upon them to whom he appeared here on earth, and so were eye-witnesses of his resurrection, I am sure ye can have no grounds from either of doubting of this truth, for both they and I preached the same among you, and at our preaching you then received and believed it.

12. Now

12. Now upon this foundation thus laid, that you can have no reaſon to doubt it, it follows that the dead truly riſe, and then how comes it to paſſe that ſome of your Churchmen, that have received the faith by our preaching, begin now to deny all reſurrection?

12. Now if Chriſt be preached that he roſe from the dead, how ſay ſome among you that there is no reſurrection of the dead?]

13. Theſe are preſently confuted, ſuppoſing it granted that Chriſt is riſen from the dead:

13. But if there be no reſurrection of the dead, then is Chriſt not riſen:]

14. Which if it be not true, then is that falſe which both we preached and ye believed v. 11. and in all probability whatever elſe we have built upon it.

14. And if Chriſt be not riſen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is alſo vain.]

15. And ye muſt ſuppoſe of us who taught you Chriſtianity, that we taught you a meer forgery, for ſuch muſt the reſurrection of Chriſt be, if there be no reſurrection from the dead.

15. Yea, and we are are found falſe witneſſes of God, becauſe we teſtified of God that he raiſed up Chriſt, whom he raiſed not up, if ſo be that the dead riſe not.]

16. For thus one may argue backward, If there be no poſſibility for a man by the power of God to be raiſed from death, then is not Chriſt raiſed.

16. For if the dead riſe not, then * is not Chriſt raiſed.]

* neither hath Chriſt been raiſed, οὐδὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται

17. And if ſo, then all that we have preach'd to you, particularly remiſſion of ſins upon repentance, being bottom'd on the reſurrection of Chriſt, Act. 5. 31. is to be ſuppoſed falſe alſo.

17. And if Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your ſins.]

18. And they that have loſt their lives for Chriſt's ſake, have had nothing to pay them for thoſe loſſes, have periſhed eternally, and ſo loſt very much by their fortitude, which muſt argue madneſſe in them, if they believed not a reſurrection, (for then they had better have kept the life they had, till a natural death had called it from them) and muſt argue a groſſe error in thoſe firſt Chriſtians, Stephen and James, &c. if they believed that which had not truth in it.

18. Then they alſo which are fallen aſleep in Chriſt are periſhed.]

19. And indeed, if Chriſt were not riſen, if all our hope in Chriſt had been terminated with this life of his on earth (or if all the advantages which we reap by Chriſt, are thoſe which we enjoy here, who are worſe uſed then any other men, perſecuted continually for our profeſſion of Chriſt) it would then follow, that (as once the Apoſtles deemed themſelves upon his death, not knowing he was to riſe again, ſo) we Chriſtians ſhould be the moſt unhappy perſons, the moſt proper objects of compaſſion that are in the world.

19. If in this life onely we † have hope in Chriſt, we are of all men moſt miſerable.]

† have hoped ἐλπικότες ἐσμὲν

20. Which now, bleſſed be God, is much otherwiſe, for Chriſt being riſen, he, by riſing himſelf, raiſeth all others with him (as in the conſecrating of the firſt-fruits, the whole harveſt is alſo conſecrated) and then we that are miſerable here, ſhall be rewarded there, (and ſo his reſurrection is a certain proof, that other men ſhall have a reſurrection alſo, which is the ſumme of the arguing from v. 12. till this place.)

20. But now is Chriſt riſen from the dead, and become the firſt-fruits of them that ſlept.]

21. For as one man brought death, ſo another brought reſurrection into the world.

21. For * ſince by man came death, by man came alſo the reſurrection of the dead.]

* ſeeing ἐπειδὴ

22. For as upon Adams ſin, all that are partakers of his nature, are concluded under the ſentence of death pronounced againſt him; ſo all regenerate believers, all that are like, that belong to Chriſt, v. 23. ſhall be raiſed to immortal life.

22. For as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive.]

23. But this with ſome diſtance of time betwixt: Chriſt the firſt-fruits, ſome time before the reſt, then all regenerate Chriſtians at his laſt coming to judgment.

23. But every man in his own order; Chriſt the firſt-fruits, afterward they that are Chriſt's at his coming.]

24. Then I mean, when in the concluſion of this world, of this ſpiritual kingdome of Chriſt in the Church here below, he ſhall deliver up all his power exerciſed by himſelf and his commiſſioners, into the hand of God his Father, having firſt deſtroyed all earthly dominions, pronouncing ſentence on the great potentates, as well as the meaneſt men, or elſe having ſubdued all to his power, by converting ſome, and deſtroying all others.

24. Then cometh the end, when he † ſhall have delivered up the kingdome to God, * even the Father, when he ſhall † have put down all rule, and all authority and power.]

† ſhall deliver up παραδῷ

* and the Father τοῦ πατρὶ

† take away, or bring to nought, καταργήσῃ

25. For to this purpoſe was the promiſe made to Chriſt, Pſal. 110. that his ſpiritual kingdome on earth ſhould laſt ſo long, till God had brought all the world to be ſubject to him.

25. For he muſt reigne, * till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

* ſo long as till he put ἄχρις οὗ θῇ

26. And of the enemies to be ſubdued death is the laſt, which therefore muſt be ſubdued (and ſo men raiſed from death.)

26. The laſt enemy that † ſhall be deſtroyed, is death.]

27. The evidence being clear, for all enemies, all things, no one excepted, that God will ſubdue them all under Chriſt; alwaies ſuppoſing that God himſelf is excepted, of whom 'tis affirmed that he will put all things under Chriſt.

27. For he hath put all things under his feet: but when he ſaith, All things are put under him, it is manifeſt that * he is excepted which did put all things under him.]

* this is with an exception of him δῆλον ὅτι ἐκτὸς

28. And when all is ſo ſubdued to Chriſt, then ſhall Chriſt lay down that office which till then he exerciſeth, and in which he is conſpicuous in his Church (which till then he is to adminiſter) and then ſhall God the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt fill all the elect with glory and bliſſe eternally.

28. † And when all things ſhall be ſubdued unto him, then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.]

c. 29. Now for them among you ver. 12. which ſay there is no reſurrection of the dead, and conſequently that the dead ſhall not be raiſed at the coming of Chriſt (which was the point in hand v. 23. and from that verſe to this all betwixt being to be read as in a parentheſis, ſetting down the ſtate of all things at and after that reſurrection) I ſhall onely make this demand, Why then have they in their baptiſme made profeſſion of their belief of it (ſee v. 14, 17.) it being certain that the dead, or the reſurrection of the dead (expreſſed here for brevity under that word [the dead]) is one of the articles, and that a prime and ſpecial one, to the belief of which they were baptized, and to which baptiſme (being the putting in and taking out of the water) doth referre, as a ſignificant emblem, firſt of Chriſt's then of our reſurrection from the grave? And therefore to what end did theſe men in their baptiſme profeſſe their belief of this article, if they believe it not? To be a baptized Chriſtian, and not to believe the reſurrection, is a ſtrange ridiculous thing, an hypocriſie which they will never be able to anſwer to God or men, and that which actually deprives them of all benefits of baptiſme; and yet ſuch are they if they make doubt of this.

35. But some object, that if men die, how can they live again? or what kind of body shall they have, that which they had being rotten in the grave? (see note on Act. 15. c.)

36. Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickned, except it die.]

36. But this is a foolish objection, for even in corn that is sowed, the rotting of the corn is necessary to the enlivening of it, or springing of it up again.

37. And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain.]

37. And it is not the custome to sow that very thing which after comes up, the blade, and eare, and corn in it, but onely the corn without the rest, as the corn of wheat, or the like.

38. But God giveth it a body, as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.]

38. And when such a single corn is sown without any ear or chaffe about it, God causeth it to come in this or that form, a root and blades, and eares of wheat, and proportionably from other seeds according to the property of each.

39. All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.]

42. So also is the resurrection of the dead: it is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption.]

40, 41, 42. Two things are observable in the resurrection: 1. the improvement of all mens estate, who have their part in the resurrection of the just, above that which here they enjoy: 2. the severall degrees of glory that they then shall have one above another. For as heavenly bodies are more glorious then earthly, and one heavenly then another, so is it in the resurrection. And for the first of these, which is the chief matter of present consideration, the bodies that rise differ from those that died, the state of the resurrection differs from that of this life; that which was here was a corruptible body, that which rises, an incorruptible.

43. It is sown in dishonour, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weaknesse, it is raised in power.]

45. * And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit.]

45. One such as Adam is mentioned to have had, Gen. 2. 7. and such as we had from Adam, who communicated life to his posterity; the other we shall receive from Christ, that restores them from the grave when they have been dead.

46. Howbeit, that was not first which is spirituall, but that which is naturall, and afterward that which is spirituall.]

46. The immortal body was not first formed, but that which needed sustenance, so as without that it was to perish, and after that the immortal body is to be returned to us in stead of that mortal.

47. The first man † is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven.]

47. The stock of the animal life was Adam, so called as an earthy man, made out of the earth; the stock of the immortal, Christ the Lord, that came down from heaven.

48. As is the earthy, such are they that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.]

48. Such a body as Adam himself had, such have all we mortal men; and such a body as Christ now hath, such shall we, that live like him, according to his example and precept, have at the resurrection.

49. And as we have born the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.]

49. And as we have first been made like the mortal Adam, so shall we be made like the immortal Christ, when we come to heaven.

50. Now this I say, brethren, that [f] flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdome of God: neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.]

50. One thing only I shall adde, that 'tis not possible that these earthy, corruptible, weak, ignominious bodies of ours should come to heaven, unlesse they be first changed, purified, immortalized (see note on Mat. 16. 17. e.) f.

51. Behold

51. And therefore for thoſe that are found alive at the day of Doom, I ſhall tell you a ſecret not yet diſcovered to you, that though they doe not die at all, yet muſt they all be changed before they go to heaven, theſe bodies, thus qualified as now they are, cannot come thither, ver. 50.

51. Behold * I ſhew you a myſtery; we ſhall not all ſleep, but we ſhall all be changed,]

* I tell you a ſecret, μυςήριον ὑμῖν λέγω

52. And this change ſhall be wrought in them in a minute, at the point of time when all the world are ſummoned to judgment; for God ſhall make the Angels ſound a trumpet, or make a noiſe like that of the trumpet, call the whole world of men, that ever was or ſhall be, to judgment, and at that inſtant all that were formerly dead ſhall ariſe in immortal bodies, and thoſe that are then alive ſhall from their mortall be changed into ſuch.

52. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the laſt trump (for † the trumpet ſhall ſound, and the dead ſhall be raiſed incorruptible, and we ſhall be changed.)]

† he ſhall ſound the trumpet, σαλπίσει

53. For 'tis moſt certain and neceſſary v. 50. that our mortal bodies muſt be changed into immortal.

53. For this corruptible muſt put on incorruption, and this mortal muſt put on immortality.]

54. And when this is done, then ſhall that ſaying of Hoſ. c. 13. 14. be made good, that death ſhall be deſtroyed for ever, never to recover ſtrength again over any thing, nothing from thenceforth ſhall ever die.

54. So when this corruptible ſhall have put on incorruption, and this mortal ſhall have put on immortality, then ſhall be brought to paſſe the ſaying that is written, Death is ſwallowed up g in victory.]

55. In contemplation of which a Chriſtian may look on death as a hurtleſſe thing, the ſting or wounding power of which is taken away by Chriſt; and ſo on the ſtate of ſeparation of ſoul from body, that it is ſuch as ſhall not laſt for ever.

55. O death, h where is thy ſting? O * grave, where is thy victory?

* hades, ᾅδη

56. The only thing that makes death like a ſerpent, able to doe us any hurt (without which it differs nothing from a calm ſleep) is ſin, as that hich gives ſin any ſtrength to miſchief us is the Law, which prohibits it, and conſequently brings guilt upon us.

56. The ſting of death is ſin, and the ſtrength of ſin is the Law.]

57. But thanks be to God, who by what Chriſt hath done for us hath given us victory over ſin and death, and by the conqueſt of ſin, getting out of the power of that, hath made death but an entrance to immortality.

57. But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

58. Theſe are arguments ſufficient to teach any Chriſtian conſtancy and perſeverance in doing and ſuffering God's will, and to oblige him to the utmoſt induſtry and diligence in the ſervice of God, knowing that nothing that we thus undergoe ſhall fail of receiving a reward.

58. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye ſtedfaſt, unmoveable, alwaies abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as you know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.]

a. Ἰακώβου εἶφθη

V. 7. Seen of James] What is here ſaid of Chriſts appearance unto James, is not mentioned in the Goſpels, yet is it by S. Jerome mentioned from the tradition of the Church, and that preſently after his reſurrection, before thoſe other appearances which are here mentioned before it; which if it be true, it is neceſſary that ἔπειτα be not rendred afterward, but either as an Ordinal of dignity, not of time, or as a form of numbring up ſeveral times, without exact obſervation of the order of them, then, beſides, or in the next place, as the word is uſed in this Epiſtle c. 12. 28. ἔπειτα δυνάμεις, where nothing of order is conſidered. Now what James this was, is affirmed by S. Hierome alſo, that James, the brother of our Lord, whom he * calls the thirteenth Apoſtle, ſtyled James the Juſt, ſaith Euſebius l. 2. c. κγ'. and, ſaith he, reckoned by S. Paul among the ſpecial witneſſes of the reſurrection, James the known Biſhop of Jeruſalem, whom therefore ſome of the antients affirm to have been conſtituted Biſhop there by Chriſt himſelf at this appearance of his unto him; ſee Jerome in Catal. and on Gal. c. 1. *Epiph. Πέτρον, φησὶ, καὶ Ἰάκωβον, καὶ Ἰωάννην, μετὰ τὴν ἀνάληψιν τοῦ Σωτῆρος, οὐκ ἄν τις τοῦ κυρίου περιπεμπομένους, μὴ ὀφθαλμιάζειν δόξης, ἀλλὰ Ἰάκωβον τὸν Δίκαιον ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων ἐλέσθαι, He ſaith that Peter, and James, and John, after the aſſumption of Chriſt, as being the men that were moſt favoured by Chriſt, did not contend for the honour, but choſe James the Juſt to be Biſhop of Jeruſalem. So, before Clemens, Hegeſippus ὑπομν. ε'. in Euſeb. l. 2. c. κγ'. τὸν δὲ τρόπον διαδέχεται ἐκκλησίαν μετὰ (or, as others read, παρὰ) Ἀποστόλων ὁ ἀδελφὸς τοῦ κυρίου ὁ Ἰάκωβος, ὀνομασθεὶς ὑπὸ πάντων Δίκαιος, After this manner did the brother of the Lord, James, called by all men the Juſt, receive the Church (of Jeruſalem) from the Apoſtles. And that this was done the firſt year after the death of Chriſt, is the affirmation of Euſebius in Chronico p. 43. which makes it out of queſtion that this was the James that is mentioned Act. 12. 17. when Peter being delivered out of priſon commands word to be carried to James and the brethren, that is, the Biſhop and the believers there. And thence is it that he is called an Apoſtle, Gal. 1. 19. and Act. 15. 6, and 22. the Apoſtles came together, and It ſeemed good to the Apoſtles; ſo ſaith Theodoret, Τοὺς νῦν καλουμένους ἐπισκόπους Ἀποστόλους ὠνόμαζον, &c. Thoſe whom they now call Biſhops, they called Apoſtles, bringing this for a proof of his affirmation, ὥσπερ ἀπὸ τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων τοῖς ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ ἔγραψαν οἱ Ἀπόστολοι, ſo the Apoſtles wrote from Jeruſalem to thoſe in Antioch. And this is the reaſon that in this his Church of Jeruſalem, James is ſet before Peter and John, Gal. 2. 9. and is ſaid to give the right hand of fellowſhip to Paul and Barnabas, and accordingly Paul aſſoon as he comes to Jeruſalem, preſently goes in to James Act. 21. 18. And this is the James that wrote the Epiſtle, and is called James the Apoſtle in the Inſcription of the Epiſtle, though in the beginning of it he ſtyle himſelf a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt. See Note b. on the Inſcription of that Epiſtle.

b. Ἐκτρώματι

V. 8. Born out of due time] The full importance of this phraſe ἐκτρώματι may beſt be taken from a pro-proverbial form among the Romans, begun in Augustus's time. It is, from Suetonius, taken notice of by Baronius, An. Chr. 44. n. 74. but somewhat misrepresented. The words of Suetonius lye thus, in the life of Augustus, c. 35. Erant super mille (senatores) & quidam indignissimi, & post necem Cæsaris per gratiam & præmium allecti, quos Abortivos vulgus vocabat, There were at that time an enormous number of Senators, above a thousand, and some of them most unworthy of that dignity, having after the death of Cæsar by favour and bribery gotten to be elected. These the multitude proverbially styled Abortives. To this proverbial style of reproach S. Paul in great humility seems here to refer, making his own election into the Apostleship parallel to the choice and admission of those supernumerary unworthy persons into the Senate, viz. that he, like them, was none of the regular number of the Twelve, none of those first taken in, in Christs life time, no way worthy to be an Apostle, as having persecuted the Church of Christ, v. 19. and yet by Christs grace and special favour, called and admitted to this dignity (by the grace of God I am what I am, v. 10.) and in these so many respects, fit to be look'd on, in his own opinion of himself, as they were reproachfully by the people, viz. as an ἔκβωμα an untimely birth, which consequently hath not those full dimensions, which those children are born with who have staid in the wombe their full time; to which most aptly agrees that which followes, v. 9. as the reason of this expression, for I am the least of the Apostles, as the Abortive is the least of children. And this is still but proportionable to what he every where, when he speaks of himself, is forward to say, calling himself the greatest, or chief, of sinners, lesse than the least of all Saints, and attributing all to the superabundant mercy and grace of God, that he so unworthy was thus vouchsafed and dignified by Christ.

c. V. 29. For the dead] 'Tis to little purpose to set down the several interpretations of this place (see Justell. in Cod. Can. Eccl. Universæ p. 173.) This which hath been set down in the paraphrase is most natural, rendring ὑπὲρ for, answerable to the Hebrew עַל. This Nazi For the νεκροὶ the dead, is but the title in brief of that grand Article of the Creed, that of the resurrection of the dead, just as among the Hebrewes עַל עֲבוֹדָה זָרָה of, or for, strange worship, denotes that precept of the sons of Adam and Noah, which prohibiteth the worship of any strange gods, or עַל בִּרְכַּת הַשֵּׁם of, or for, the benediction of the name, is the precept of worshipping and serving the one true God: and so generally titles of Constitutions and of Articles are abbreviates, in a word or two. To this purpose 'tis the observation *Elench. c. 9. of the Learned * Jos. Scaliger, that not onely the Rabbins, but generally other Doctors, notissimas & vulgò tritissimas sententias dimidiatas solent citare, use to cite by abbreviature known and vulgar sentences, instancing in ἅδην, Mat. 15. 5. So it appears by Suidas, using the Proverb ἀπὸ καταδυομένης, from the sinking, which is but the abbreviature of Ἀπὸ καταδυομένης ὅτι ἂν λάβῃς, κέρδος, From a sinking ship whatsoever thou getteſt, must be counted gain. Of this interpre- Ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν tation of ὑπὲρ νεκρῶν we have the testimony of Harmenopulus De sect. ια'. who refuting the Marcionites addes, ἀγνοοῦντες ὡς διὰ τὸ ἐπὶ ὁμολογίᾳ τῶν νεκρῶν ἀναστάσεως —— τοῦτ' εἴρηται, not knowing that it is spoken of the confession of the resurrection of the dead.— Of this also see Chrysostome, Tom. 3. p. 514. Of whose understanding of it, because I see some possibility of doubting, I shall more largely consider the words; Μετὰ τὴν ἀπαγγελίαν τῶν μυστικῶν ῥημάτων ἐκείνων καὶ φοβερῶν, καὶ τὰς φρικώδεις κανόνας ἡμῖν ἐκ τῶν ἀρρήτων κατενεχθέντων δογμάτων, καὶ τοῦτο πρὸς τέλει προσίθεσαν, ὅταν μέλλωμεν βαπτίζειν, καλεύοντες λέγειν ὅτι πιστεύω εἰς νεκρῶν ἀνάστασιν, καὶ ὅτι τῇ πίστει ταύτῃ βαπτιζόμεθα, After recitation of the sacramental and dreadful word, and the venerable rules of the doctrines brought from heaven, this at the end we adde, when we are about to baptize, we command him to say, I believe in the resurrection of bodies, and we are baptized in, or on, this faith. Μετὰ δὲ τὸ ὁμολογῆσαι τοῦτο μὲ τοῖς ἄλλων, τότε κατιέμεθα εἰς τοὺς πηγοὺς τῶν ἱερῶν ναμάτων ἐκείνων, For after professing this with the other articles, we are put into the fountain of those sacred waters. Τοῦτο πάνυ ἀναμιμνήσκων ὁ Παῦλος ἔλεγεν, εἰ μὴ ὅτι ἀνάστασις, τί καὶ βαπτίζῃ ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, τουτέστι, τῶν σωμάτων; S. Paul therefore remembring them of this (viz. this custome of professing before baptisme, with other articles, this of the resurrection of the dead) said, Why also art thou baptized for the dead, that is, the dead bodies? καὶ διὰ τοῦτο βαπτίζῃ τοῦ νεκροῦ σώματος ἀνάστασιν πιστεύων, ὅτι οὐκέτι μένει νεκρὸν, καὶ σὺ μὲν διὰ τῶν ῥημάτων λέγεις νεκρῶν ἀνάστασιν, For on this thou art baptized, believing the resurrection of the dead body, that it abides no longer dead, and thou indeed by words believest the resurrection of the dead. Here 'tis evident that the phrase ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν βαπτίζεσθαι, being baptized for the dead, is otherwise expreis'd by him, by ἐπὶ τούτῳ βαπτίζεσθαι, being baptized in, or on this, and that farther expres'd by τοῦ νεκροῦ σώματος ἀνάστασιν πιστεύειν —— believing the resurrection of the dead body, and διὰ τῶν ῥημάτων λέγειν νεκρῶν ἀνάστασιν, by words reciting the resurrection of the dead. Nothing then can be more manifest, then that this was his understanding of S. Pauls words, that being baptized for the dead, was being baptized in the faith and profession, as of other articles of the Creed, so of this particularly, and in the last place, of the Resurrection of the body. To this indeed he farther addes, Ὁ δὲ ἱερεὺς, ὥσπερ ἐν τινὶ εἰκόνι, ἅπερ ὁπτάζῃ, καὶ διὰ τῶν ῥημάτων ὁμολογῇς, δείκνυσί σοι καὶ διὰ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῶν, Then the Priest, as in an image, or representation, demonstrates to thee, by what he doth, the things that thou hast believed, and professi'd by words, ὅταν χωρὶς σημείου πιστεύῃς, τότε σοὶ καὶ τὸ σημεῖον παρέχει, when thou believest without a signe, he allowes thee a signe —— viz. in putting in, and taking out of the water, which is σύμβολον τῆς εἰς ᾅδου καταβάσεως καὶ τῆς ἐκεῖθεν ἀνόδου, the signe of descending into the state of the dead, and ascending from thence. Where though the action of the Priest, putting in, and taking out of the water, be a significative proof of the same thing, that the baptized are baptized into the faith of the resurrection of the dead, yet was the interpretation of the Apostles words fully accomplished in that former, of being baptized into that article of the Resurrection, of which this action of the Priest was the lively sign. And accordingly Theophylact, who ordinarily copies out S. Chrysostomes interpretations, doth content himself with the first onely, Οἱ μέλλοντες βαπτίζεσθαι πάντες ἀπαγγέλλεσι τὸ σύμβολον τῆς πίστεως, ἐν ᾧ μὴ τῶν ἄλλων καὶ τοῦτο προκειται, πιστεύω εἰς ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν. They that are to be baptized do all profess the Symbol of the faith (that S. Chrysostome had called the venerable rules of the doctrines that were brought from heaven) in which after others this is set down, I believe in the resurrection of bodies: φησὶν ἕν, ὅτι οἱ πιστεύοντες ὅτι ὄντως ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν σωμάτων, καὶ βαπτισθέντες ἐπὶ τοιαύταις ἐλπίσι, τί ποιήσουσιν ἀπαιδόντες; The Apostle therefore saith, that they that believe there is a resurrection of the dead bodies (there's Chrysostomes explication of dead, by bodies) and have been baptized in, or on, these hopes (there's his ἐπὶ τούτῳ on this) if they be deceived (that is, if there be no resurrection) what shall they do? Τί δὲ ὅλως καὶ βαπτίζονται ἄνθρωποι ὑπὲρ ἀναστάσεως, τουτέστιν ἐπὶ προσδοκίᾳ ἀναστάσεως, εἰ νεκροὶ οὐκ ἐγείρονται; And indeed why are men at all baptized for the resurrection, that is, on the expectation of the resurrection (still ὑπὲρ and ἐπὶ προσδοκίᾳ, for, and on, the expectation of the resurrection, are all one) if the dead are not raised? Zonaras also on Can. 18. of the Coun- cil of Carthage, though with Chrysostome he take in the action of the Priest, in putting in and taking out of the water, (which is but the confirmation of this, and is not a new interpretation of S. Paul's words) yet he first insisteth on this, that they that are baptized are instructed in the power of the sacrament, and so taught to hope for (that sure comprehends to believe) μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων, among others (the articles wherein the Catechumeni are instructed) τὴν ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν, the resurrection also of the dead. And Balsamon on that Canon is just to the same purpose. To this there is but one thing necessary to be added, which will remove all difficulty from it, viz. that τινὲς ἐξ ὑμῶν v. 12. is the Nominative case to βαπτίζονται, those of the Corinthians, that now doubted of the Resurrection, had in their Baptisme among other things made profession of the belief of it. Which makes the Apostles argument unanswerable, because they had not yet renounced their Baptisme, though they denied the Resurrection. The truth of the fact, that some of the Church of Corinth did deny the Resurrection, is the expresse affirmation of the Apostle v. 12. And that that may not be thought strange, it may be remembred what Photius relates of some of the Philosophers, that this was the last article of the Christian faith which they received, as thinking it most contrary to those Philosophical principles imbibed by them; and, by name, of Synesius, that he was made a Bishop before he believed the truth of that article; for which they that had made him being questioned, made this Apologie for so doing, that they found so many excellent graces in him, that they could not but think them useful to the Church of God, and confidently hope that God would not let them all perish, but would in time give him this grace also, which accordingly came to passe.

d. Θηριομαχεῖν ἐν Ἐφέσῳ

V. 32. After the manner of men I have fought with beasts] That S. Paul here referres to that which befell him at Ephesus, Act. 19. may appear 1 by 2 Cor. 1. 8. where he mentions his great persecution in Asia (of which Ephesus was the Metropolis) and pressure so heavy, that, saith he, I despaired even of life, having the sentence of death passed on him, as farre as he could guesse of himself, and so making his deliverance a wonderfull unexpected act of Gods, a kind of raising him from the dead; 2dly, by the mention of fighting with beasts, which was a punishment that malefactors were condemned to in those daies. And of that particularly in Asia we have an instance in those first times in the Epistle of the Church of Smyrna there, about the martyrdome of Polycarpus, where they call the Asiarcha to let loose a lyon upon Polycarpe: and by his answer there (that he might not, because πεπληρώκει τὰ κυνηγέσια the agones were ended) three things will be observable; 1. that at that time in Asia (where that was done) their festivities or solemnities kept in honour of their Gods, had these fightings with beasts on the Theatres annex'd to them, as a chief ceremony of them (see Note on Act. 19. f.) 2dly, that malefactors were wont to be punished at such their festivities (as among the Jewes at the Passeover; see Act. 12. 4) not onely to make their punishments more exemplary, but as a piece of sacrifice to their Gods; 3dly, that the Asiarchæ, the governours of Asia, that is, the chief officers among them, as they had the ordering of the agones, (see Note on Act. 19. e.) so they had the punishing of malefactors committed to them. Now that S. Paul was condemned, at least by the multitude designed, to this punishment at that time, Act. 19. may thus appear, 1. by the expresse words of 2 Cor. 1. 9. we had the sentence of death in our selves, that is, passed on us, but, as it follows, God delivered him out of it: 2dly, by the phrase κατ' ἄνθρωπον here (in the same sense as κριθῶμεν κατ' ἀνθρώπους 1 Pet. 4. 5. and τὸ κατ' ἐμὲ as much as in me is, nothing on my part wanting Rom. 1. 15.) that is, ὅσον τὸ εἰς ἀνθρώπους, saith Theophylact, as much as related to, or concerned men, (parallel to that of ἐν ἑαυτοῖς in our selves, in that place to the Corinthians) that is, men so designed me, though God took me out of their hands, ἐξήρπασε τοῦ κινδύνου snatched me out of the dangers (parallel to Gods raising him from the dead there, and delivering him from so great a death v. 10.) 3dly, by the story in the Acts c. 19. where v. 29. the city being in an uproar, they all with one consent run to the Theatre, the place where these bloody tragedies were acted, and haled Gaius and Aristarchus, two of Pauls companions, thither. And if Paul had come into sight, they would have done so to him also, but the Christians there would not permit him to come amongst them, ver. 30. And, v. 31. the Asiarchæ having some kindnesse to Paul (a great work of Gods providence that they should) sent and gave him warning that he should keep close, and μὴ δοῦναι ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὸ θέατρον not give himself to the theatre, that is, not run the hazard, by coming out, to be carried thither, knowing the full purpose of the people to set him to the θηριομαχία combating with wilde beasts, if he did. Which farther appears by the Registers words (in his speech whereby he pacified the people) ver. 37. Ye have brought these men, being neither robbers of your Temple, nor blasphemers of your Goddesse; that is, ye have dealt with them as if they were some notorious malefactors, to be thus publickly punished on the Theatre, whereas they have done nothing worthy of such proceedings. This is a clear interpretation of these words, and gives a fair account of the κατ' ἄνθρωπον, so as to signifie as farre as man's purpose concerning us (who had condemn'd us to this death, though God delivered us) of which learned men have given so many, and so wide conjectures.

e. χρηστὰ ἤθη

V. 33. Good manners] What χρηστὰ ἤθη here signifies may perhaps be best understood by Hesychius in the word Εὐήθης, which he there explaines by βλαξ, χρησθήθης, ἀνόητος: by which it appears that the phrase refers not to goodnesse of manners, as that signifies actions, and as Hesychius renders Ἤθια, σωφρονικοὶ τρόποι, (for which the ordinary print reads τόποι) and Κακοηθείαι, κακοτροπίαι, but to simplicity and deceivableness of mind, and accordingly it is most properly rendred good dispositions, or good natures, of which it is ordinarily observable, that they are subject to be seduced, and missled into error or false doctrine, as here the denying of the Resurrection. And accordingly it is introduced, and inforced with a μὴ πλανᾶσθε, be not deceived, noting what corruption was here to be taken heed of, that of error. The rendring the phrase good manners, refers it peculiarly to the sense of being debauch'd and corrupt in their lives, which is not commodiously applicable to this place, which treats onely of intellectual error, and therefore this other sense is with more reason to be here fastned on, That conversation and discourse (so ὁμιλία signifies) with Hereticks, or Philosophers, that disputed against the possibility of the bodyes returning to life, after it was once perfectly dead, might probably seduce and deceive εὐήθεις, χρησθήθεις, easie, well-natured auditors, who are not so circumspect as they should be: And thus hath Theophylact interpreted χρηστὰ ἤθη, τὰ εὐεξαπάτητα, the good dispositions denote those that are easily deceived, or cheated.

f. σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα

V. 50. Flesh and blood] That flesh and blood signifies that state of growing, feeding, corruptible bodies, such as these we carry about us, there is little doubt. How, or with what propriety it comes to doe so, may receive some light from that of Homer Ιλιαδ. ε'. There of the Gods he saith

——ἐ σῖτον ἔδοντ', ἐ πῖνον' ἀίθοπα οἶνον, Τὔνεκ' ἀναίμονές εἰσι, καὶ ἀθάνατοι καλέονται.

They eat no meat, nor drink no wine, therefore they have no blood, and are called immortal. Thus in the Gospel

Gospel 'tis said of the saints in heaven, which are clearly answerable to the sobereſt notion of their gods, that they neither eat nor drink, and from thence (agreeably to that which Homer concludes from thence) they are here said not to be fleſh and blood, nor, as it followes, corruptible, denoting the difference betwixt the natural body we have here, and the ſpiritual hereafter.

g. εἰς νῖκος — V. 54. In victorie] The Hebrew phraſe לנצח, which is ordinarily rendred εἰς νῖκος Lam. 5. 20. 2 Sam. 2. 26. Job 36. 7. Jer. 3. 5. Amos 1. 11. doth in all of them ſignifie forever, and is rendred εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα Iſa. 13. 20. and εἰς τέλος to the end Pſal. 13, 2. and ſo 'tis in this place, Death ſhall be forever (or, perfectly, or finally) devoured.

V. 55. Where is thy ſting] These words are taken out of Hoſea, c. 13. 14. where yet we read I will be thy plague. And ſome have conjectured, that in ſtead of the Hebrew אהי I will be, the Greek read איה where? But R. Tanchum and Eón Jannahius, ſaith Mr. P. affirme that the Hebrew אהי is all one with איה, and ſo ſignifies where, in that very chapter of Hoſeah, v. 10. אהי מלכך, where is thy king? and ſo then the Septuagints rendring will be literal, and the Apoſtles words lightly varied from it.

CHAP. XVI.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOw concerning the collection for the ſaints, as I have given order to the Churches of Galatia, even ſo doe ye.]

1. Now concerning the contribution for the ſupply of the wants of the poor Chriſtians in Judæa, exhauſted partly by their former Chriſtian liberality, Act. 2. 45. making ſale of their goods, and communicating their ſtock to the Chriſtians, and partly being ſpoiled of their goods by the perſecuting Jewes, 1. Theſ. 2. 14. the ſame order that I gave to the Churches of Galatia, I now give to you.

* treaſuring up whatſoever he gains, συναγείρων ἐν ἑαυτῷ

2. Upon the firſt day of the week let every one of you lay by him * in ſtore, as God hath proſpered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.]

2. On the day of the Chriſtian aſſembly it is not reaſonable for any to come to the Lord empty (ſee Exod. 23. 15. Deut. 16. 16.) and therefore at ſuch a time, upon ſuch a ſpecial occaſion as this, let every one lay aſide whatſoever by God's bleſſing comes in to him by way of increaſe, ſo that there may be a full collection made, without any more gatherings when I come among you.

3. And when I come, whomſoever you ſhall approve †by your letters, them will I ſend to bring your liberality to Jeruſalem.]

3. And then ye ſhall have the choice of the meſſengers who ſhall carry it, that ye may be confident of the due diſpoſing of it, according to your intentions; and whom ye chooſe, I will in my letters recommend them, and ſend them to Jeruſalem.

4. And if it be * meet that I goe alſo, they ſhall goe with me.]

4. And if the collection be ſuch an one as may make it fit for me to be the bearer of it, I will go my ſelf, and they along with me.

* worthy for me alſo to goe, ἄξιον καὶ ἐμοὶ πορευθῆναι

5. Now I will come unto you, when † I ſhall paſſe through Macedonia: for I doe paſſe through Macedonia.]

5. And my coming to you I deſigne as ſoon as I have ſpent ſome time in the ſeverall parts of Macedonia: for I ſhortly intend to remove from hence, and in my way to Jeruſalem, to paſſe through that region.

† I ſhall have paſt, διέλθω

6. And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may bring me on my journey * whitherſoever I goe.]

6. And perhaps when I come, I will ſtay the whole winter with you, which being done I will goe farther, and I ſuppoſe ſome of you will goe ſome part of my way with me.

* whither I go, ἐὰν πορεύωμαι

7. For I will not ſee you now by the way, but I truſt to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit.]

7. For I mean not now to come to you, becauſe if I did, I ſhould not be able to ſtay, or to doe any more then take you in paſſing, but my purpoſe is by God's leave to ſpend ſome time with you, when I next come:

8. But I will tarry at Epheſus untill Pentecoſt.]

8. At the preſent purpoſing to ſtay at Epheſus till it be fit for me to ſet forward toward Jeruſalem, where I mean to be at Pentecoſt.

9. For a great doore and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adverſaries.]

9. And I have great reaſon to doe ſo; for as I have a great deal of hope that I may be able to doe much good, to propagate the Goſpell in thoſe parts, ſo there are many that oppoſe the truth, which makes it more neceſſary for me to ſtay there ſome time, for the quelling of them.

* ſecurely ἀφόβως

10. Now if Timotheus come, ſee that he may be with you * without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I alſo doe.]

10. When Timothy comes to you with this Epiſtle, be careſull that the ſchiſmaticks among you give him no diſturbance, and doe ye look upon him as ye would upon me.

11. Let no man therefore deſpiſe him, but [a] conduct him forth in peace, that he may come unto me; for I look for him with the brethren.]

11. Take heed to all he ſaith, let him have an authority among you, and when he returns bring him on his way, and provide him with neceſſaries when ye take your leave of him, that he may return to me, for I and the brethren expect him.

12. As touching our brother Apollos, I greatly † deſired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his will was not at all to come unto you at this time, but he will come, when he ſhall have convenient time.

13. Watch ye, ſtand faſt in the faith, quit you like men, be ſtrong.]

13. Be careſull and vigilant, that ye be not ſeduced, continue conſtant in the truth, and whatſoever temptations ye have to ſollicit you, ſhew your ſelves courageous and well armed againſt all aſſaults.

14. Let all your things be done with charity.]

14. Away with all diviſions and ſchiſmes from among you.

16. That you honour and reverence them and ſuch as they, and all that joyn with them in the propagation of the Goſpel and faith of Chriſt.

17. I am glad of the coming of Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus; for that which was lacking on your part, they have ſupplied.]

17. I was very glad at the coming of Stephanas, &c.

(probably the ſons of Chloe,) who have told me of the ſchiſmes among you ch. 1. 11. and of all other matters of importance, and ſo ſupplied your place, done that which you ought to have done. See Mar. 12. b.

b. 18. For they came very much deſired, and very welcome to me, and will ſo, I preſume, to you at their return; ſuch men as they deſerve all reverence from you.

20. All the brethren greet you: [greet ye one another with an holy kiſſe.]

21. The ſalutation of me Paul with mine own hand.

d. 22. If any man love not Chriſt ſo well as to confeſſe him, but renounceth him in time of temptation, as the Gnoſticks affirm it lawfull to doe, let him fall under the heavieſt cenſures of the Church.

22. If any man love not the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, let him be [d] Anathema Maranatha.]

23. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you.

24. My love be with you all in Chriſt Jeſus. Amen.

The firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi by Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, and Timotheus.

Annotations on Chap. XVI.

a. Πεμψαι — V. 11. Conduct] Πεμπειν is to accompany, to bring on the way, v. 6. and to ſet forth, and, if need be, to provide for the neceſſaries of his journey. So Tit. 3. 13. where 'tis explained by ἵνα μηδὲν ἀυτοῖς λείπῃ that they want nothing. So Act. 15. 3. where they that were ſent by the Church of Antioch, in all reaſon are to be believed to have had the charge of their journey defrayed by them. As for the phraſe ἐν εἰρήνῃ in peace here added, it ſeems to refer to that notion of peace (as in, Peace be with you, &c.) which is a form of ſalutation, eſpecially at diſmiſſing the aſſembly (ſee Note on Rom. 16. c.) or at any other parting, or taking of leave, which was among the Chriſtians uſed by way of benediction, and then ἐν εἰρήνῃ in, or, with peace, will be no more then, when ye take leave, or part with them. Ἐν Εἰρήνῃ

b. Ἀνέπαυσαν πνεῦμα — V. 18. Refreſhed my ſpirit] This phraſe ἀνέπαυσε πνεῦμα quieted the ſpirit, is taken out of the Greek tranſlation Zach. 6. 8. in ſtead of which the Chaldee have עבידו יתרעתי they have done my deſire, that is, ſaith Maimonides, they were acceptable and welcome to me. See Joh. Coch. Tit. Talmud. p. 300.

c. Ἐκκλησία — V. 19. Church that is in their houſe] The word ἐκκλησία the Church doth not only ſignifie the place of aſſembling together, but the perſons of thoſe that uſe to doe ſo, that is, all the Chriſtians in any place. So in the beginning of this Epiſtle having named the Church which is in Corinth, he proceeds ἡγιασμένοις, κλητοῖς ἁγίοις, &c. the ſanctified, the ſaints, that is, all the Chriſtians in that place, which are meant by the word Church preceding. And ſo here the Church is all the members of the Church of Chriſt, the Chriſtians; and then οἶκος houſe ſignifying in like manner not the walls of the houſe, but the family, the perſons in it, (as when 'tis ſaid of Cornelius that he was a proſelyte σὺν παντὶ τῷ οἴκῳ ἀυτοῦ, with all his houſe, that is, he and all the perſons in his family,) it is evident what is meant by the Church in their houſe, that is, all the believers of their family. The ſame are called ἡ κατ' οἶκον ἀυτῶν ἐκκλησία Rom. 16. 4. the Church, or Chriſtians, belonging to their family: the prepoſitions ἐν and κατ being promiſcuouſly uſed in theſe writings. To this * Theophylact farther addes, that by this phraſe is intimated the great piety of the Maſters of theſe families, that had made all their houſe Chriſtians, (ὅτως ἤσαν εὐδόκιμοι, ὥστε ἡ ὅλον ἀυτῶν πάντα ποιῆσαι πιστὸς, τότως γὰρ ἐκκλησίαν ὠνόμασεν) and again their great hoſpitality to ſtrangers. For where, ſaith he, ſuch virtues are, ἐκκλησία ὁ οἶκος ἐκεῖνος, that houſe is a Church. Οἶκος — ἡ κατ' οἶκον ἐκκλησία — * on Rom. 16. 15.

d. V. 22. Anathema Maranatha] Of ἀνάθεμα, as it was the ſecond degree of Cenſures taken from the Jewes, and accommodated to the uſe of the Chriſtian Church, ſomewhat hath been ſaid, Note on c. 5. c. Now the addition of Maranatha μαρὰν ἀθὰ to it, ſignifies the third and higheſt degree of Excommunication, ſuperadded to that ſecond. For though ſome queſtion have been of late made of it by learned men, yet there is little reaſon to doubt, but there were among the Jewes thoſe three degrees of Excommunication, נדוי, חרם, and שמאתא: the firſt a remotion from familiar converſe, ad quatuor paſſus, for four paces; the ſecond more ſolemne, with execrations out of Moſes law added to it; the third leaving the offender to divine vengeance. This laſt is denoted, without doubt, by the origination of the word שמאתא whatſoever that be. For three derivations it is capable of, two mentioned in Moed Katon, in theſe words, What is Schammatha? Rab anſwered שם מיתה there is death, and Samuel ſaid שממא תהא there ſhall be deſolation. The third is from אתא שם Dominus venit, the Lord comes. That this third ſhould not be it, there is onely this pretenſe, that then there would be no reaſon for the dageſh or doubling of the m in ſchammatha. But conſidering that that is no great change, and that in either of the other two greater are admitted, in the firſt the ה in the end of מיתה turned into א, and much greater in the ſecond, the word μαρὰν ἀθὰ here will give us great reaſon to forſake the two former, and pitch upon that third derivation, it being clear that the word אתא comes is the ſame in both, and for the שם and מרן it is as clear, that they are directly the ſame. The word שם is name, but in ordinary ſpeech among the Jewes ſignifies the name of God, or God himſelf. And ſo doth Maran in the Eaſtern tongues ſignifie Dominus Lord, whence in Etruria the Kings were called Marani, ſaith Servius on Æneid. 12. and the Syrians are now called Maronitæ, becauſe they call Chriſt מראני our Lord. Agreeable to which it is that in Epiphanius God is by the Gazari called Marnas, and by the Cretians their virgins are ſtyled Μάρναι, that is, Κυρίαι Ladies. And thus both theſe words Schammatha and Maranatha will be directly all one with the denunciation of Enoch, Jude 14. ἦλθε Κύριος the Lord cometh, and that there explained by ποιῆσαι κρίσιν doing judgement againſt wicked men, that will not be reformed. According to this it is, that among the Spaniards, who have ſo much of the remainders of the Jewes among them, this form hath been uſed, ſit Anathema maranatha, & excommunicatus, or מחרמא מן רחא אל רב let him be excommunicated from the hope of the Lord. A paſſage there is in Stephanus Byzant. m. πόλ. which in all probability belongs to this word. Κεραυνωθείς τις ποιμὴν ἔλεγε Ῥαμανθας, τυτέστιν, ἀφ' ὕψους ὁ Θεός; A ſhepheard being thunderſtruck, ſaith he, cried out, Ramanthas, that is, God from above. Where though, out of Philo the Grammarian, he derive it from Raman, ſignifying height, Μαράνα ἀθά height, and Athus, God, yet there is little doubt to be made but the word is a corruption in the vulgar, and so in the shepheards use of it for Maranatha here. The onely thing remaining of difficulty is, how, supposing this a form of Excommunication, it can here be applicable to the not loving of Christ, which, being a sin of the heart, seems not to be capable of any judges cognizance, nor consequently of their censure. But it must be observed that the love of Christ signifies that perfect love that casts out fear, and contains in it the confession of Christ, adhering and cleaving to him (as to love a master, Mat. 6. 24. is, to hold to him, in that verse) the not loving of Christ, is the denying of him in time of trouble, and signifies here him that was tainted with the error of the Gnosticks, and so would not confesse Christ in time of persecution (see Note on Rev. 2. b.) and then there is nothing more reasonable then that the Apostle, having written this whole Epistle against the schismes and vicious practices and heresies infused into the Church of Corinth by these men, should conclude with a denunciation of the highest degree of Excommunication against all those who shall thus renounce Christ, and fall off to these damnable heresies, denying the Lord that bought them, 2 Pet. 2. 1.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

THE occasion and time of writing this Second Epistle are the onely things which will here be necessary to be premised, and both of these may probably be discovered. At the end of his three years stay in Asia, when he was now hastening toward Jerusalem, 1 Cor. 16. 8. that is An. Ch. 54. he had before his departure from Ephesus (see Note a. on the title of 1 Cor.) written his first Epistle to them, for the checking of many enormities among them, which Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus had brought him word of. And when the successe of that Epistle of his was soon declared unto him by Titus, how that the Censures inflicted on the offenders had reduced many, and that there was a very discernible reformation wrought amongst them by these means, he makes all hast (assoon as he had received this account) to send this second, milder Epistle unto them, to qualifie the seeming severities of the former, and to take off the Censures again from those that had thus seasonably been reform'd by them, c. 2. 7. and 10. This shewes that it was written within a short time after the former. And the same also appears by the solemn mention of the danger which he had pass'd at Ephesus, (which he had but intimated in the former Epistle c. 15. 32. but now enlargeth on it, at the beginning of this Epistle c. 1. 8. and c. 4. 7, &c.) viz. that caused by Demetrius and the silver-smiths, Act. 19. 24. in which he had like to have been brought to the Theatre, to combat with wild beasts, and escaped narrowly with life: which deliverance of his was, it seems, now fresh in his memory, and fit to be recounted by him again and again, and to be thankfully acknowledged by all that had any interest in him. a. ἀναίρων δὲ τὰ Κορινθίων.

As for the point of time wherein it was written, it may be thus probably collected. In this Epistle c. 2. 12. he mentions his being at Troas to preach the Gospel, and his good successe in converting many, which is the meaning of the doore being opened him in the Lord; from thence he saith he hastened to Macedonia, on purpose to meet Titus, and understand from him the successe of his former Epistle to these Corinthians, and there it seems he found him, and presently dispatch'd this second Epistle to them, which is accordingly in the Subscription of it dated from Philippi in Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas. That this was done in that journey set down Act. 20. in the beginning, there is no question, but in what verse of that chapter this his being at Troas, (mention'd here c. 2. 12.) is described, that is the only difficulty. That it is not to be referred to that mention of Troas Act. 20. 6. appears by this, that there they came from Philippi (that is, from Macedonia) to Troas, but at the point of time mention'd in this Epistle, 'tis evident they went from Troas to Macedonia. Again in that verse of the Acts they stayed at Troas but seven daies, and in those daies the disciples came together to break bread, on the Lords day, and Paul διελέγετο αὐτοῖς discourſed to them till midnight: All which supposeth them of Troas to have formerly received the Gospel, whereas at his being in Troas, which is mention'd in this Epistle, he seems to have first revealed the Gospel unto them, the doore which was then opened unto him being the first reception of the Gospel in that place. It is therefore most reasonable to suppose this his being at Troas to be contained Act. 20. 1. in his passing from Ephesus, the Metropolis of Asia, into Macedonia. That Troas was not so much out of the way betwixt these two, but that by it he might passe from one to the other, appears in the following verses; for in the return from Macedonia v. 3. into Asia v. 4. they are all found at Troas v. 5, and 6. and from thence it is as clear, that Troas might be taken in his way v. 1. as he went from Ephesus to Macedonia. But the brevity of S. Lukes narrations keeps this from being mention'd there, which yet may be supplied by this of S. Pauls own pen, c. 2. 12. And from thence it will be concluded that either at his being in Macedonia v. 1. (at which time he met with Titus there, 2 Cor. 2. 12.) or possibly at his return through Macedonia from Greece v. 2, 3. this Epistle was written by him, to follow the former, as soon as he discerned the successe of it, and to comfort them whom that had cast down. And that it was in the second point of time, that of his return from Greece through Macedonia, may appear by c. 1. 16. where mentioning two resolutions, which he had had to visit them, the former in his passage into Macedonia, the second at this his return from it, both of these must needs be pass'd before the writing hereof. In this Epistle he also excuseth his not coming to them, and addeth many other things occasionally; especially he is carefull to vindicate his Apostleship from some calumnies, that malicious seducers, crept into that Church, had cast upon him. And this is all that was usefull to be said before-hand on this Epistle.

†the God and Father ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατὴρ

3. Blessed be † God, even the father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the father of mercies, and the God of all comforts,]

3. I have all reason to blesse and magnifie the name of God, which purposely sent our Lord Jesus Christ into the world, and by that, and his many other gracious acts of his particular providence, hath shewed himself to be a most mercifull and gracious Father unto us;

4. Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we our selves are comforted of God.]

4. Who in all the preasures that have befallen me, hath eminently relieved and succoured me, and by those experiences hath enabled me to refresh and cheer up all those that are in any affliction.

5. * For as the sufferings of Christ † abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.]

5. By this one consideration, of which I have had so frequent evidences, that according to the proportion of our suffering for Christ, Christ doth constantly afford us comforts and reliefs, the greater our afflictions are, the greater also our refreshments from Christ.

6. And whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation, which is * effectuall in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.]

* wrought by ἐνεργουμένης

6. And so what afflictions soever befall us, there is no reason you should be startled or discouraged in your Christian course by that means: for sure 'tis for your advantage that we are so. Our afflictions are matter of comfort to you, viz. that you can fall under no persecutions your selves, but what ye see us endure before you, and those meerly for our doing you good, preaching the Gospel to you, endeavouring to bring you to repentance and to blisse, which is not ordinarily to be come to, but by suffering after my example. And then the refreshments and extraordinary reliefs that Christ afforded me in all my sufferings, those sure will be matter of comfort to you also, as a pledge of assurance that Christ will afford you the like refreshments here, and reward hereafter.

7. And our hope † of you is stedfast, knowing that as you are partakers of the sufferings, so * shall ye be also of the consolation.]

7. And of this I make no doubt, but that as you have your parts in the afflictions, so ye shall also of the reliefs and advantages by suffering.

8. For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life.]

8. All this I say by way of preface to this advertisement which I desire to give you of the sharp persecutions that I lately met with at Ephesus, the chief metropolis of Asia, Act. 19. see note on 1 Cor. 15. d. where I had like to have been brought out to the theatre to be devoured by the wild beasts, and indeed had no humane means to avert, nor consequently to escape it.

9. But † we had the sentence of death in our selves, that we should not trust in our selves, but in God which raiseth the dead;]

9. And this advantage I had of it, that the more I believed I should be put to death, the more I might be engaged by my deliverance, never to depend on any worldly trust, but only on God, who can rescue from the greatest extremity, even from the grave and death it self.

*also yet ἔτι

10. Who deliver'd us from so great a death, and doth deliver; in whom we trust that he will * yet deliver us:]

10. Even that God who hath actually delivered me out of that imminent danger, and so still continues to deliver me, and I verily believe will yet longer continue preservations to me.

†the favour conferr'd on us for the sakes of many, may by many be thankfully acknowledged, ἵνα ἐκ πολλῶν προσώπων τὸ εἰς ἡμᾶς χάρισμα διὰ πολλῶν εὐχαριστηθῇ

11. You also helping together by prayer for us, that † for the gift bestowed upon us [a] by the means of many persons, thanks may be given by many on our behalf.]

11. To which purpose I suppose 'twill much conduce, that you will earnestly pray for me: for as the prayers of many are an effectual motive to God to doe what they pray for, when by that means the favour being granted to many at once, those many shall be all engaged to thank God, and magnifie his name; so the benefit afforded me in favour to many others, viz. to the believers who pray for me, and may receive profit by my life, may by those many be received with thanksgiving to God in my behalf.

12. For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdome, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to you-wards.]

12. For of this I can say with joy and comfort, that my conscience gives me a cheerfull testimony in all my actions, that I have had no ends or designes of my own, but in a pious simplicity and sincerity of heart, not as worldly wisdome would direct, but according to the Gospel-rules (see note on Heb. 13. d.) we have behaved our selves toward all men, but toward you beyond all others.

13. For we write none other things unto you, then what you read, * or acknowledge, and I † trust you shall acknowledge even to the end.]

13. For my writings to you are perfectly agreeable to the doctrine preach'd by me, and by you received, when I was among you: what in my Epistles you read, you cannot but acknowledge to be that which ye have been taught, and I hope you will never be drawn away from that acknowledgment.

†I hope that ye will *our ἡμῶν

14. As also you have acknowledged us in part, that we are your rejoicing, even as ye also are ours, in the day of * the Lord Jesus.]

14. This I say, because though since these divisions came in among you, I have been rejected and vilified by some, yet some others of you have acknowledged your selves to take joy and comfort in me, as I professe to doe in you, and am confident I shall doe, when Christ comes to reward his faithfull servants.

15. And in this confidence I was minded to come unto you before, that you might have a second † benefit,]

15. And with this affection of kindnesse to you, and persuasion of your kindnesse to me, I did designe to come to you, that thereby you might be confirmed in that faith, and grow in that knowledge which was first preach'd to you.

16. This I firſt meant to doe in my way to Macedonia, and being hindred from doing it then (and going another way, viz. by Troas, c. 2. 12.) I have had a ſecond reſolution of viſiting you, at my going from Macedonia into Greece, Act. 20. 16. 2. that ſo I might have been conducted by ſome of you toward Judæa, whither I am a going with contributions to the poor Chriſtians there.

* again from Macedonia to come to you πάλιν ἐκ Μακεδονίας ἐλθεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς

17. And though I did not come, yet have my calumniators nothing to lay to my charge for this, as if I did make reſolutions lightly, raſhly and inconſtantly, as men uſe ordinarily to doe.

17. When I therefore was † thus minded, did I uſe lightneſſe? or the things that I purpoſe, doe I purpoſe according to the fleſh, that with me there ſhould be b yea, yea and nay, nay?]

18 But as God is true, our word toward you was not yea and nay.]

19. As little as there was in our preaching of Chriſt Jeſus the Son of God among you, which is alſo calumniated by ſome, as if it were light, uncertain, liable to inconſtancy, but that moſt unjuſtly, for what was preached by us there among you, was confirmed by Chriſt himſelf, that is, by miracles wrought by his power among you.

23. As for that of my not performing my firſt reſolution of coming to you in my way to Macedonia v. 17. and according to my promiſe 1 Cor. 16. 5. I ſhall tell you the clear reaſon of it, (beſides or over and above that of the ſpirits diſpoſing me otherwiſe, contrary to my reſolution intimated v. 17. ſee Theophylact) I had heard of ſuch enormities among you, that if I had then come, I muſt have been forced to uſe a great deal of ſeverity among you, in caſe my former Epiſtle were not obeyed, of which I had not particular knowledge till I met with Titus, c. 2. 13. which was at my coming to Macedonia. And that was then the only reaſon of my forbearing, that I might not be forced to exerciſe that Apoſtolical ſharpneſſe againſt you. (As for the other, the reaſon of the change of his reſolution is plain, Act. 20. 3.)

23. × Moreover I call God for a record upon my ſoul, that to ſpare you I came not as yet unto Corinth.]

That ſeverity of diſcipline I mean, that muſt not be look'd on as an act of dominion, of deſigning any advantage to our ſelves by you (ſee Mat. 20. 25. and note on 1 Pet. 5. a.) but that which Chriſt hath commanded and preſcribed us, by that means to reform and amend, to work faith, and hope, and rejoicing, and all good things in you. For by faith, that is, the doctrine of Chriſt, it is that you were firſt brought in to the ſervice of the true God, and wherein you continue ever ſince, and we deſire you ſhould doe ſo ſtill, not relying on any doctrine of ours as it differs from that.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Πρόσωπον

V 11 By the meanes of many perſons] The Greek πρόσωπον is ordinarily parallel and proportionable to the Hebrew פָּנִים facies, which coming from פָּנָה reſpexit, ſignifies oftentimes reſpectus, and ſo מִפְּנֵי de facie, ſignifies for, or in reſpect of; and agreeable thereto, ἐκ πρόσωπον πολλῶν, of, or from, many faces, here ſignifies in reſpect of many, in relation to many, for the ſakes of many, or in any of thoſe formes of ſpeech by which מִפְּנֵי would be rendred.

b. Nai ναὶ ναί

V. 17. Yea yea, and nay nay] The meaning of yea, and nay, or of yea yea, and nay nay, is diſtinctly this, when we doe not agree, or are inconſtant to our ſelves, now yea, and anon nay, in our words or actions. Whence is that old word naucus for a light or frivolous perſon, from ναὶ ὄχι, as 'tis deduced by Feſtus. The difference of this from the ἤτω ὑμῶν τὸ ναὶ ναί, καὶ τὸ οὒ, Jam. 5. 12. is cleared by the conſtruction, Let your yea be yea, and your nay be nay, that is, let your words and actions accord; ſo that the ſecond yea and the ſecond nay is not joyned with the firſt, as here, but as the prædicate affirmed of it, whereas here the two yeas being all one (and ſo indeed expreſs'd by a ſingle yea v. 18.) are the Subject of the ſpeech, and the two nayes, being all one again, the prædicate. To this agrees that proverb of the Jews, The juſt mans yea is yea, and his nay, nay. A third expreſſion there is, that of Mat. 5. which is in ſound very near this, and yet diſtant from it, Let your communication be yea yea, and nay nay, that is let there be no other language but this or the like, uſed by you, in oppoſition to the more licentious forms of oaths there mentioned.

CHAP. II.

1. And now that in ſtead of coming I write again, I was reſolved to deferre it ſo long, till I ſhould hear of ſome reformation among you, that ſo this might not be, as formerly my letters were, to puniſh, to afflict, to cenſure you, ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. c.

1. BUT I determined this with my ſelf, that I would not come again to you in heavineſſe.]

2. For when you are check'd or cenſured by me, this is ſo farre from being pleaſant to me, that it is indeed at the ſame time matter of ſuch grief, that I cannot be comforted by any thing,

2. For if I make you ſorry, who is it then that maketh me glad, but he that is made ſorry by me?]

but

but by the same you, by seeing that the Censures have wrought some good on you, caused the reformation of that in you, for which I had meant them to you.

*this very thing did I write, ἔγραψα τοῦτο αὐτὸ

3. And * I wrote this same unto you, lest when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice, having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.]

3. And this severity of proceeding v. 1. which now I speak of, I did rather choose to send you in a letter, 1 Cor. 5. then to deferre it till my coming, in hope to find your faults amended, to have all the sorrowfull matter, that of censure, past before that time, that so I might have nothing to doe then, but to absolve and receive penitents, and so to rejoice among you, (not to inflict censures upon you) and that I was confident would also be most acceptable to you all.

4. For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many teares, not that ye should be † grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.]

4. For that which I wrote with some sharpnesse and was matter of grief to you, was so much more to me at the very writing of it, was a most heavy pressure upon my heart, and fetch'd abundance of tears from me; by which you may know that what I did was not out of any pleasure that I take to censure or afflict you, but as an effect of the greatest love to you all, which could be imagin'd.

*but in part, that I may not lay weight upon him, all you †before the many

5. But if any have caused grief, [a] he hath not grieved me, * but in part; that I may not overcharge you all.

6. Sufficient to such a man is this [b] punishment, which was † inflicted of many.]

5, 6. But for the incestuous person, the author of all this sadnes and severity (sadnes not to me alone, but in some measure, that I say no worse, to all you) it is now sufficient which he hath suffered by the delivering him up to Satan, 1 Cor. 5. and the sad consequence thereof.

a. b.

7. So that contrariwise, ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.]

7. And it is now more then time that he be absolv'd by the Church, and forgiven the offence committed against it, and by absolution be cheer'd up again, lest the continuance of such sharp punishments should not have a benigne, but noxious influence upon him.

8. Wherefore I * beseech you, that you would confirm your love towards him.]

8. And therefore my present counsel is, that by prayers for his release you expresse your reconciliation to him, and so absolve him from the Censures.

†have I written, ἔγραψα

9. For to this end also † did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.]

9. And this I now write, that I may see whether you are as ready upon my appointment to restore penitents, as to inflict punishments upon offenders, which is another branch of your Christian charity.

10. To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I ‖ forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it, in the person of Christ.]

10. Whom you are willing to have restor'd from excommunication (as being satisfied with his penance and expression of repentance) I appoint or give leave to doe it: (For if I have absolv'd any man, I have done it by the authority I have from Christ, but yet in respect unto you, or with consideration of what may be best for you, that is, for your whole Church.)

*that we be not overreach'd by Satan ἵνα μὴ πλεονεκτηθῶμεν ὑπὸ τοῦ Σατανᾶ

11. * Lest Satan should get an advantage of us, for we are not ignorant of his devises.]

11. That the too long continuance of the punishments upon the penitent offender may not be made use of by Satan to the hurt and ruine of the Church, either by swallowing him up by desperation, v. 7. or by heightning your zeal against sin into an unreconcileablenesse with the sinner, v. 9. for Satan hath many hidden secret arts to mischief souls, which we think not of.

14. Now thanks be unto God, which alwaies causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of * his knowledge by us in every place.]

14. And having met with him, he hath given me the good newes of the happy successe of my Epistle among you, and that obligeth me to blesse that God, who hath hitherto prospered us exceedingly (see Mark 14. f.) in the propagating of the Gospel, and by us hath made piety and Christianity famous, and well reputed of in every place.

15. For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, † in them that are saved, and in them that perish.]

15. For by our preaching the Gospel, we perform a very acceptable service to God, and bring in glory to his name, offer up a sweet smelling sacrifice unto him, among all sort of people, both among the penitent believers, which receive the faith, and live according to it, and the impenitent unbelievers, that receive it not.

*or, from death to death; for the King's MS. reads ἐκ θανάτου, as after ἐκ ζωῆς

16. To the one we are the savour *of death unto death, and to the other the savour of life unto life: and who is sufficient for these things?]

16. For though this sweet perfume to the obstinate impenitent hath been the most perfect poison (as high perfumes sometimes are) they have grown the worse for the Gospels coming among them; yet to all that have forsaken their old courses of sin, and obeyed this call to a new life, it hath been the most comfortable vitall savour that ever came to them. This is a weighty imployment, and unlesse God did particularly enable us, we could never be fit for it.

17. For we are not as many, which † [c] corrupt the word of God; but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God, speak we in Christ.]

17. This we are sure of, that we have not designed any secular advantage to our selves in preaching the Gospel, as the Gnostick heretical teachers are observed to do, 1 Tim. 6. 5. but have sincerely revealed to you what we have been taught by Christ, without any other aime, God knows, than that we may perform faithfull service to him. c.

2. Ἐκ γάρ μου πολλοὶ

V. 5. He hath not grieved me] The sense affix'd to these words in this paraphrase (very distant from that which the words, as they are ordinarily read and rendred, sound) is taken distinctly from the Scholion of Theophylact, who resolving it the Apostles meaning, in both these verses, to have his charity to the incestuous person expres'd, and to give order for his Absolution, thinks this way of rendering it most proper, that joyning

ing them with himself in the dislike and sorrow, and consequently infliction of censures for the sin, he might ingage them joyntly with himself in the absolving the transgressor; and this, saith he, most wisely disposed by him, that they who had so lately been commanded by the Apostle to avoid him, as a detestable person, should not now upon his giving orders for his absolution be scandalized at him, ὡς παλιμβόλῳ as inconstant and mutable. This, saith he, is the reason that he takes them in, as partakers with him of the sorrow and censures, that he might have them his willing partners in the absolution and joy of that. And so this, saith he, is the sense of the words, οὐχ ἐμὲ —— For he hath not, saith S. Paul, grieved me alone, but all you in part, that is, a little, or in some degree, that I may not say, he hath altogether grieved you, lest I should lay overmuch weight upon him; or in plain words, the truth is, he hath grieved you in like manner as me, but yet that I may not overburthen him that was guilty of that incest, or aggravate the matter against him, all that I say is, that in part, or in some measure, ye were grieved by him. This is a very commodious sense, and necessarily requires some small change of the punctation (though the printed text in Theophylact have not observed it) partly by including in a parenthesis the latter part of this 5. verse, from οὐκ ἐμὲ —— to the end of it, partly by putting a comma after ἐπιβαρῶ, that so πάντας ὑμᾶς may connect with ἀπὸ μέρους, thus, 5. But if any have caused grief he hath not grieved me, but in part (that I may not aggravate, or lay weight, on him) you all. 6. Sufficient to such a man —— And this is a plain sense, and agrees very well with all that followes of their joynt and chearfull proceeding to the Absolution of the incestuous.

b. Ἐπιτιμία ἡ ὑπὸ τῶν πλείονων

V. 6. Punishment which was inflicted of many] What is here meant by ἐπιμία ἡ ὑπὸ τ πλόνων, the punishment which was inflicted under the many, will appear by 1 Cor. 5. 4. where concerning the incestuous person, and such as he, order is distinctly given, that he shall be delivered up to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, or bringing corporall inflictions upon him, which is certainly the ἐπιτιμία punishment here mentioned, and that ζωαχθέντων ὑμῶν you being gathered together, that is, in the presence of the whole congregation, to adde the greater solemnity to it: And that is all one with the ὑπὸ πλειόνων here, under, or in, the presence of the many. Mean while as there the sentence was S. Pauls, κέκρικα v. 3. I have judged as present, and v. 4. when ye are gathered together and my spirit, with the power of the Lord Jesus Christ (bestow'd on the Apostle, and rulers of the Church) so here it must be supposed to be, though the solemnity was transacted with the company, and in the presence of the whole congregation.

c. V. 17. Corrupt] That λόγ☞ θ☞ the word of God signifies the Gospel here, as it was by S. Paul made known unto men, the Christian Religion preached by him, there can be no doubt. All the difficulty is, what is meant by καπηλεύον. not that there can be any question of the native proper signification of that word, for it certainly signifies doing as κάπηλοι do, and those are little pedling merchants, that buy and sell to get gain; but because it is possible it may referre to some practices which such Merchants are vulgarly guilty of, mixing, and dashing their commodities, and so deceiving others, that they may inrich themselves. But though the word may possibly by a figure signifie this, yet the genuine proper notion, being very agreeable to the Context, is in all reason to be preferred. We are not, saith S. Paul, ὡς οἱ πολλοὶ, as the many. This sure referres to the false teachers of his time, and those, we know, were the Gnosticks, who as they are said to serve their belly, to love the world, and to love pleasures, and so generally to designe themselves advantages by their profession, and of all things hated the Cross, renounced Christianity when it was persecuted, and brought any dangers or losses upon them; so they are particularly marked out 1 Tim. 6. 5. (that chapter where the Gnosticks are named, v. 20. and their character particularly set down) to be such as deem godlyness gain, think the Christian profession brings men secular advantages of liberty, &c. and so cannot be so single-hearted, so wholly bent to approve themselves to God, as S. Paul here professeth to be. To this interpretation of the place I am inclined by two passages in the Epistles of Ignatius, which though they are omitted in the Laurentian Copy, are yet constantly to be found in others, and if they were put in by any interpolator, they may yet be of good use to us in this matter, there being no reason to suspect the hand that inserted them of any ill designe, nor yet of ignorance either of the Gnostick heresie, or of the use of the word. The former place is in the Epistle ad Magnesianos, where speaking of the Gnostick Judaizers, enemies of the cross, whose God is their belly, minding earthly things, lovers of pleasures, and not lovers of God, having a forme of godliness, but denying the power thereof, he addes, οἱ χειρέμποροι, ἢ λόγον καπηλεύοντες, καὶ ἢ Ἰησοῦν πωλοῦντες Merchants of Christ, huckstering the word, selling Jesus, going on to other parts of the character of the Gnosticks, corrupters of women, coveting what belongs to others, χρηματολήπτας greedy lovers of money. The second place is agreeable in Ep. ad Trall. There are, saith he, some vain speakers and impostors, οὐ Χριστιανοὶ ἀλλὰ χρειέμποροι, ἀπάτῃ φερόμενοι τὸ ὄνομα τῦ Χριστῦ, καὶ καπηλεύοντες τὸν λόγον τῦ εὐαγγελίυ —— not Christians, but Merchants of Christ, carrying the name of Christ for deceit, huckstering the word of the Gospel: and who these are, he specifies in the process of that Epistle; Simon the first-born of Satan, Menander, Basilides, the unclean Nicolaitans, οὓς ψευδωνύμους, those that are falsely named, that is, the Gnosticks, &c.

6. Who alſo hath * made us able miniſters of the new † Teſtament, not of the *letter, but of the ſpirit: for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.] 6. And that ſufficiency of his he hath expreſs'd in the powers and methods, with which he hath furniſh'd, and to which directed us the preachers and diſpenſers of the new Covenant (ſee note on the title of theſe books) that is, not of the law (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) written and brought down in Tables by Moſes, but of the Goſpel, called by this title of the Spirit, firſt, becauſe it comes near to the ſoul, and requires purity there; ſecondly, becauſe the holy Ghoſt came down both on Chriſt and on the Diſciples to confirm this new way; thirdly, becauſe Grace is a gift of the Spirit, and now is joyned to the Goſpel, but was not to the Law; which adminiſtration of the Spirit, and annexation of it to the word under the Goſpel, gives men means to attain eternal life, when the law is the occaſion, and by accident the cauſe of death to them, in denouncing judgment againſt ſinners, and yet not giving ſtrength to obey.

7. But if the miniſtration of death † written and ingraven in ſtones was * glorious, ſo that the children of Iſrael could not ſtedfaſtly behold the face of Moſes, for the glory of his countenance, † which glory was to be done away:] 7. And if the delivery of the Law which brought nothing but death with it, when it was written in tables of ſtone (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.) was with the appearance of Angels, and a bright ſhining which caſt ſuch a ſplendor on Moſes's face, that it would dazle any mans eyes to look on it, and yet now that glory, and that law ſo glorioufly delivered, is done away:

8. How ſhall not the miniſtration of the Spirit be rather * glorious?] 8. How much rather ſhall the preaching of the Goſpel be matter of reverence to all? (ſee Mat. 5. g.)

*in glory

9. For if the † miniſtration of condemnation * be glory, much more doth the miniſtration of righteouſneſſe exceed in glory.] 9. For if the delivery of the Law, which could help men to condemnation, but could not abſolve any man, were in ſo much glory, God by his Angels appearing ſo dreadfull in the mount; then much more the Goſpel, which brings with it juſtification and pardon of ſin, is to be counted exceeding glorious, to be look'd on and received by us with all reverence.

10. For even that which was glorious † had no glory in this reſpect, by reaſon of the glory that excelleth.] 10. For the Law though otherwiſe glorious, yet being compared with the Goſpel, hath no glory at all in it (as the moon compared with the ſun is ſo utterly outſhined by it, that it appears not in the preſence thereof.)

*by glory δια δοξης
†in glory εν δοξη

11. For if that which is done away was * glorious, much more that which remaineth is † glorious.] 11. For if that which was it ſelf to be aboliſh'd, being but the cover that contain'd the true jewel under it, were yet deliver'd dreadfully and by a glorious appearance, then much more ſhall that which endureth for ever, that jewel it ſelf, the Goſpel or ſubſtance, contain'd under thoſe coverings or ſhadows, and ſo which is never like to be aboliſhed, and hath a durable fruit belonging to it (Grace, which the other had not) deſerve to be eſteemed glorious.

12. Seeing then that we have ſuch hope, we uſe great plaineſſe of ſpeech;] 12. Upon theſe grounds I ſay (mentioned from ver. 5. to this verſe) I cannot but ſpeak boldly and confidently to you in vindication of my Apoſtleſhip, ver. 4.

13. And not as Moſes, * which put a vaile over † his face, * that the children of Iſrael † could not ſtedfaſtly look to the * [b] end of that which is aboliſhed.] 13. Having no need to imitate Moſes who vailed his face, which was a type of the dark, not clear propoſing of the Goſpel (which is the end or principall part of the Law, and the jewel contain'd under that covering) to them of old. b.

14. But their minds were blinded: for untill this day remaineth the ſame vaile untaken away, in the reading of the Old Teſtament: which vaile is done away in Chriſt.] 14. And accordingly ſo it continues remarkable to this preſent, the Jewes ſee not Chriſt in the reading of the old Teſtament, and ſo the cover ſtill remains upon Moſes face, as it were, but by the Chriſtian clear doctrine, or by faith, is removed.)

15. But even unto this day, when Moſes is read, the vaile is upon their heart.] 15. And ſo though they have heard it over and over many times, yet ſtill they doe not underſtand the true ſenſe of the Law.

16. Nevertheleſſe, when it ſhall turn to the Lord, the vaile ſhall be taken away.] 16. But when Iſrael v. 13. or their heart v. 15. ſhall accept of the Goſpel of Chriſt, then they ſhall ſee and underſtand plainly, what now is ſo obſcure to them.

17. Now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.] 17. Now Chriſt is beſides his humane nature, indued with a divine Spirit, and the Goſpel of Chriſt is called the Spirit v. 6. and where the Spirit of Chriſt, or the Goſpel is, there is freedome, and conſequently the vaile (a token of ſubjection alſo 1 Cor. 11. 10.) is taken away.

18. And we all with open face beholding as in a glaſſe the glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.] 18. And ſo all we that believe in Chriſt, have that vail done away, and doe clearly, though not yet ſo perfectly, behold Chriſt, and by beholding him are changed to be like him; the doctrine of the Goſpel received into our hearts changeth us into other men, to ſuch a viſion of Chriſt here, in imitating his purity, &c. as ſhall be attended with eternal glory hereafter, the ſame Spirit of Chriſt which worketh the one in us, being certain to produce the other alſo.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Συστατικαι επιστολαι

V. 1. Epiſtles of commendations] Συστατικαὶ ἐπιστολαὶ, and γράμματα in this place are an intimation of an antient cuſtome in the Apoſtolical primitive Church, which ordinarily gave their teſtimonies to all Chriſtians, that travailed from one place to another, and recommended them to an hoſpitable reception. The original of this cuſtome ſeems to have been taken from the heathens, who had their teſſeras hoſpitalitatis, which which from one friend to another, help'd them that brought them to kind entertainment, and Tertullian continues the phrase contesseratio hospitalitatis. Many mentions of this custome we find amongst antient writers. In Synesius τῇ φιλίᾳ τῇ ζῇ τὸν Θαυμάσιον ζωίσημι, I commend Thaumasius to your friendship, &c. And in Phaverinus, Σωίσημι τῇ φιλίᾳ καὶ τῇ ἀγαθότητι τῇ ζῇ τὸν Λαυρέντιον, ἐν πολλῷ μοι μαθητὴν ὄντα, I commend to your friendship and kindnesse Laurentius, who of a long time hath been my scholar. And again ζωίσησί τις τινὰ πρὸ μαρτύρων αὐτῷ χρησὰ, one commends a man to another, when he gives a good testimony of him. This was done among Christians, by testifying the piety and orthodoxalnesse of any, and the agreement with them from whom they come in the same faith. And therefore when Fortunius a Bishop of the Donatists affirmed and boasted that their Church was the Catholick Church, S. Austin Ep. 163. ad Elusium, convinceth him by asking him, whether a Donatist could by his Literæ formatæ, or communicatoriæ, gain a man entertainment or reception in any Church that he would name to him, being confident he could not doe it. Thus saith Nazianzen of Julian, * σπιτιν. α. that he imitated many of the Christian rites, τὴ εἰς τὸν δεομένους φιλανθρωπίαν, all humanity, charity to them that wanted, τήν τε ἄλλην καὶ τὴν ὅσην τοῖς ὁσπιτιμάσιν ζωιδήμασιν, οἷς ἡμεῖς ἐξ ἔθνους εἰς ἔθνος τὸν χρήζοντας παραπέμπομεν, that way of it especially which consisted in sending letters and tokens, with which (saith Nazianzen) we use to furnish them that are in want from one nation to another. The same, saith Zozomen, l. 5. c. 5. and Nicephorus Callistus, l. 10. c. 21. almost in the same words, Οὐχ ἥκιστα ζηλῶσαι λέγεται τὰ συνθήματα τῶν ὁσπιτοπιῶν γραμμάτων, οἷς ἔθος ἀναβαδὸν τοὺς ξένους ὁποιδήποτε διϊόντας καὶ παρ' οἷς ἀνάφικεν πάντως καταγεῖν καὶ θεραπείας ἀξιοῦν, σάλις γνωρίμους καὶ φιλοπόνους διὰ τὸ συμβόλων μαρτυρίαν, He especially imitated the tokens (or tesseræ) of the Bishops letters, by which they are wont mutually to commend those that travell any whither, and by that testimony obtain for them all friendly entertainment, as for their most familiar acquaintance. The same we may find in Lucian, in his Peregrinus. By which also will appear the antient notion of the κοινωνικὰ γράμματα, not to signifie (as Baronius ad an. 314. and out of him Binius, t. 1. concil. p. 271. and Ferrarius De antiq. Eccles. Epist. genere, l. 1. p. 45. would have them) Epistles by which men were testified to be in communion with the Church of Rome, (which they never did, but when they were written by the Bishop of that Church, and neither then any more then those that were written by the Bishop of any other particular Church signified that mans agreement in faith and communion with that particular Church) but only Letters commendatory from one place or Church to another, to recommend a person that should travell thither, and so obtain for him an hospitable reception, lodging, diet, and all things else that are contained in Zozomen under the word θεραπία provision, or necessaries, that they wanted; and this according to the notion of κοινωνέω formerly mention'd (see Note on Act. 2. c.) for liberality and beneficence; though there is no question but among other degrees of charitable reception, that of admitting them to their Churches and Sacraments was included also, proportionably to the forms of their testimonies, which, saith Mat. Blastares, were wont to mention the uprightnesse of the persons faith, unreprovableneſse of his life, and his degree in the Church, if he had any. See Justell. in cod. Can. Eccl. Un. p. 132.

V. 13. End of that which is aboliſhed] If the reading be τέλος, then must Christ (which is the end of the law) that is the Christian precepts and promises typified by the Mosaical rites and shadows, be meant by it; but if the reading be πρόσωπον, then will the ἀνταπόδοσις, or second part of the resemblance, be more perfectly answerable to the former, thus Moses put a vaile over his own face, to signifie that the Israelites would not see the face (that is, discern clearly the most eminent and principal part) of the Law, which is now aboliſhed, that is, of the Ceremonial law. For certainly the principall part of that was the inward purity and piety signified and adumbrated by those ceremonies, and now taught by Christ more distinctly and plainly, and so that covering taken away, ver. 14. only the Jewes will not see it, but as yet their understandings are blinded, in the beginning of the verse. b. CHAP. IV.

1. Being therefore intrusted by God with so honourable a charge, the preaching of this divine and glorious Gospel of Christ, c. 3. 4, and 18. we have been diligent in attendance on our work;

1. THerefore seeing we have this ministery, as we have received mercy, we * faint not;] * grow not sluggish, or cowardly, οὐκ ἐκκακοῦμεν

2. And have been farre from using any of those vile arts, which shame might make us disguise and conceal, but dealt simply and plainly, mixing nothing of our own with the word of Christ, but contenting our selves with so much of the approbation of men, as the making known the truth of God unto men sincerely and uprightly will help us to.

2. But have renounced the hidden things of † dishonesty, not walking in craftinesse, nor handling the word of God deceitfully, but by manifestation of the truth, commending our selves to every mans conscience in the sight of God.] † shame αἰσχύνης

3. Which we have done so plainly, that if the Gospel of Christ preached by us be yet obscure, it is so only among obdurate obstinate unbelievers, v. 4. see c. 2. 15.

3. But if our Gospel be hid, it is hid * to them that are lost.] * in οἷς

4. Such as have their eyes so blinded by Satan, or their own worldly advantages, that the Gospel of Christ most powerfully and plainly revealed by him, and shining forth in our preaching, since his departure from the earth, (and this most certainly the revelation of the immutable will of God, whom Christ represents to us, not as an ordinary picture doth the body, but as a reall substantial image of him) is not permitted to have any impression or influence on their hearts, they will not see, be it never so illustriously visible.

4. † In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, * lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.] † among in so that the illumination of the Gospel of the glory of Christ hath not shin'd to them, ἵνα μὴ αὐγάσαι αὐτοῖς ὁ φωτισμὸς τοῦ εὐαγγελίου τῆς δόξης τοῦ Χριστοῦ

5. Certainly nothing but this can obstruct mens minds against the Gospel, as it is delivered by us, being preach'd so, as not to designe any thing of honour to our selves, but only unto Christ, and for our selves, only to offer men our service, to doe them all the humblest offices of Christian charity imaginable.

5. For we preach not our selves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and our selves your servants for Jesus sake.]

6. For it is not any worldly consideration that hath put us upon this imployment, but

a. 6. For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkneſse, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ.]

that

that God that by his word created the light, when there was nothing but darkneſſe in the world, hath in a like wonderfull manner impa ted this light to us, in ſending down his own Son to ſhine in our hearts, to reveal his will unto us, and this on purpoſe that we might reveal it to others, inſtruct them in the knowledge of thoſe glorious myſteries, (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) ſo illuſtrious in themſelves and advantageous to us, which God hath revealed to us by Chriſt.

7. But we have this treaſure in [b] earthen † veſſels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.] 7. But we that are intruſted with this great treaſure of the Goſpel, are not ſo fine and pretious our ſelves, we carry bodies about us ſubject to all manner of oppoſition, and preſſures, and afflictions, and this on purpoſe deſigned by God alſo, that all the good ſucceſſe we have in our Apoſtleſhip may be imputed to Chriſt, and not to us, as it would be, if we came with any ſecular power or grandeur to plant the Goſpel. b.

8. We are * [c] troubled on every ſide, yet †not diſtreſſed; we are perplexed, but not in deſpair;

9. * Perſecuted, but not forſaken; caſt down, but not deſtroyed:] 8, 9. The way which God rather ſaw fit to chuſe, was to permit us to wreſtle with all difficulties, and then to ſuſtain us by his own inviſible aſſiſtance, not by any ſecular humane means, and carry us through all, and give good ſucceſſe to our preaching by theſe very means:

10. Alwaies bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jeſus, that the life alſo of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our body.] 10. Carrying about us the croſſe and ſufferings of Chriſt, daily ſuffering after him, that ſo the ſaving effects of his reſurrection, in turning men from their evil waies (converting Infidels by our preaching) might through our ſuffering in this imployment be more conſpicuous.

11. For we which live are alway delivered unto death for Jeſus ſake, that the life alſo of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our mortal fleſh.] 11. For we Apoſtles, that are looked on by ſome with envy, are continually ready to be put to death for the Goſpel, that the vital power of Chriſt in raiſing up ſinners to a new life may through the dangers by us undergone in preaching the Goſpel, be ſhewed forth among our auditors, that receive the faith from us.

† that the death is wrought in us, but the life in you, ὁ μὲν θάνατος ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεῖται, ἡ δὲ ζωὴ ἐν ὑμῖν

12. So † then death worketh in us, but life in you.] 12. And ſo truly we are not any extraordinary gainers by our employment, as to the eye of the world; the death of Chriſt v. 10. is wrought, perfected in us, we fill up his ſufferings, Col. 1. 24. by ſuffering after him, but the reſurrection and vitall efficacy of Chriſt, v. 10, and 11. is ſhewed forth, and as it were perfected, in you, by our preaching and begetting faith, and confirming it in you by our afflictions, and by the example of our conſtancy, and of Gods deliverance afforded us, ch. 12. 9.

13. We having the ſame ſpirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed and therefore have I ſpoken, we alſo believe and therefore ſpeak.] 13. And having the ſame ſpirit of faith which is ſpoken of in that writing of Davids, Pſal. 116. 10. where he ſaith, I believed, and therefore I ſpake, I was ſore afflicted, &c. we doe accordingly by afflictions, and patience and conſtancy therein, confeſſe God, and expreſſe our faith in him.

14. Knowing that he which raiſed up the Lord Jeſus, ſhall raiſe up us alſo by Jeſus, and ſhall preſent us with you.] 14. Believing ſtedfaſtly that he that raiſed Chriſt out of the loweſt condition, even from death it ſelf, will make our afflictions a means of raiſing us, and preſenting us glorious in his ſight, together with you, if you doe ſo too.

15. For all things are for your ſakes, that the * abundant grace might through the thankſgiving of many † redound to the glory of God.] 15. For 'tis for your good that we preach and ſuffer all this, that your faith may be more confirmed, and that ſo the mercy of God extending to more perſons, may, by their bleſſing God for it, abound, and tend more to the glory of God, ch. 1. 11.

16. For which cauſe we * faint not, but though our outward man periſh, yet the inward man is renewed day by day.] 16. Whereupon it is that we doe not give over upon theſe diſcouragements, but are by theſe outward preſſures more incited inwardly, and animated to the performance of our duties.

† moſt ſuperlative, καθ' ὑπερβολὴν εἰς ὑπερβολήν

17. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a † farre more exceeding and eternall [d] weight of glory:] 17. For our tranſitory light ſuffering is ſo accepted by God, that it is alſo ſure to be rewarded by him with a moſt exceeding, eternal, weighty crown of bliſſe or glory. d.

*temporary πρόσκαιρα

18. While we look not at the things which are not ſeen; for the things which are ſeen are * temporall, but the things which are not ſeen are eternall.] 18. Which makes it moſt reaſonable for us to go courageouſly through all difficulties, as deſpiſing and not thinking of this world, and whatever loſſes or ſufferings of that, but of that reward which our faith preſents unto us, which is as farre beyond any thing that we can part with here, as eternity ſurpaſſes time.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Πρόσωπον Ἰησοῦ

V. 6. Face of Jeſus] This phraſe πρόσωπον Ἰησοῦ the face of Jeſus, and this whole verſe, referres to the ſtory of Moſes, deſiring to ſee the glory of God, Exod. 33. For there God in his own glorious nature could not be ſeen v. 20. the luſtre was ſo great; but with that ſight that was afforded him, though but of an Angel ſuſtaining the perſon of God, Moſes's face was enlightned, and ſhone, and became glorious, (to which the Apoſtle had before referred, c. 3. 7.) And ſo here the glory of God, that is, the revelation of his moſt divine counſels for the ſaving of men under the Goſpel, is by God communicated to Chriſt, and by that means he, as he is the Son of man, and executes this Prophetick office upon earth, is much more ſhining and glorious then Moſes's face was; and then we to whom the Goſpel is now preached, look upon this face of his, though the Iſraelites could not on Moſes, and are illuminated thereby, receive the knowledge of theſe counſels of God, whenſoever we look on him.

b. Σκεῦος ὀστράκινον

V. 7. Earthen veſſels] Σκεῦος ſignifies any of the utenſils about an houſe Mat. 12. 29. Mar. 11. 6. (ſee Note on Mat. 21. b.) a diſh, a cup, &c. Of theſe ſome are teſtacea, made of ſhells of fiſhes, and they are here ὀστράκινα, as 2 Tim. 2. 20. (the only other place where the word is uſed in the New Teſtament) and this agrees very well with the matter in hand, it being ordinary to lay up thoſe things we value in ſhells, or boxes, or cabinets made of ſuch; and thoſe, in reſpect of the brittleneſſe, and of the nature of them, (as the ſhels are the outſides of fiſhes) very fit to reſemble our bodies, wherein our ſouls doe inhabit. And accordingly the Platoniſts making two bodies of a man, one that which carries the ſoul in it, ὄχημα ψυχῆς, the chariot of the ſoul, the other that which we touch, and ſee the groſſer carnal part, call that ſecond ὀστρακόδερμα, that which is the ſame to us which the ſhell is to the fiſh, which hath another finer body within it. The word Ὀστρακον teſta ſignifies not only a ſhell (from whence thoſe kinds of fiſhes are called ὀστρακόδερμα, the ſhell to them ſupplying the place of skin, and ſome others ἁπαλόστρακα ſoft-ſhelled, as κράβοι in * Nemeſius) but alſo πηλὸν ὀπτηθέντα baked earth, and veſſel of the potter, that hath pass'd the fire, and is taken out of the kiln, and so Theophylact interprets it here, and so it frequently signifies in authors. The difference of such σκεύη ὀστράκινα earthen ware, from σκεύη κεραμέως the potters vessels, or πήλινα vessels of clay, before they are burnt, whilest they remain in the potters hand in moulding, is set down exactly by * S. Chrysostome in his κατηχ. πρὸ πολ. καὶ μελ. φωτίζ. that the former if they be broken, ἃ λάβοι διόρθωσιν, are not capable of recovery, διὰ τὸ ἐν τῷ πυρὶ ἐγγινομένῳ αὐτοῖς ἄπαξ ἀντιτυπίαν, because of the hardness onee gotten by the fire, whereas the other, that are but of clay unbaked, and unhardened, if they be spoiled once, ῥᾳδίως πρὸς τὸ δόξαν ὑπαγόμενα χῆμα, they may easily by the skill of the potter be returned to some second form. Whence, saith he, it is that Jer. 19 1. when the prophet was to describe an irreparable destruction, he is bid to figure it by σκεῦος ὀστράκινον, such a vessell, or bottle of earth, broken to pieces, v. 10. But when he would put them in some hope of restauration, then God shewes σκεῦος πήλινον ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ κεραμέως γενόμενον, διαπίπτον. an earthen vessel fallen, when it is in the hands of the artificer, c. 18. 2, 3. which he takes up, and moulds anew, the matter being yet capable of it. And this sense and notion of ὀστράκινον also the place will bear, and therefore I have now set them both down, and left the Reader to chuse which he shall think most probable.

* Πε. φυσ. ἀνθρ.

* Tom. 6. p. 855. l. 10.

c. V. 8. Troubled on every side——] These two verses in every word referre to the antient heathen customes in the agones, of which somewhat hath been said, Note on 1 Cor. 9. 24. S. Chrysostome explains them so in common (ἀλγοῦμεν καὶ ἀπορούμεθα, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἄπορα, ὥστε ἐκπεσεῖν τῶν προκειμένων, οἷς γυμνασίαν, οὐκ οἷς ἥτταν, We are cold, &c. as Horace of the racer, sudavit & alsit, he sweats and friezes,) but he applies them not severally to the particular exercises. This, I suppose, may fitly be done, by accommodating three of the paires to the customes of Wrestling; one to that of Running in the race, θλίβεσθαι belongs clearly to πάλη, wrestling, so saith Aristotle Rhet. l. 1. c. 5. (see the anonymous Scholiast on that place) ὁ μὲ δυνάμενος θλίβειν καὶ καλέχειν, παλαιστὴς, He that can gripe his adversary, and take him up, is good at wrestling, there being two dexterities in that exercise, comprimere antagonistam, & substernere, to gripe, and throw down, which Hesychius also calls ὠθεῖν, and κεραΐζειν· the first of these is here mentioned, and exprest'd by θλίβεσθαι pressure, to which is here opposed, as in a higher degree, στενοχωρεῖσθαι, ad angustias redigi, to be brought to distresse, as when we can neither get out of his hands, nor make any resistance against him, so Isa. 28. 20. στενοχωρούμενοι ὑπὸ δυνάμεως μάχης, being brought to such extremities we can fight no longer. So again ἀπορεῖσθαι perplexity, is fit for the wrestler, who being shrewdly put to it, knows not what to doe; so saith Theophylact, though we fall εἰς ἀμηχανίας to such a condition that we know not what to doe; so in Hesychius, Ἀπορῆσαι, ἀμηχανῆσαι· they that are not able to doe, or attempt, any thing, yet are not ἐξαπορούμενοι, miscarry not finally, ὀρθοὶ ἑστῶτες, stand after all upright, οὐκ ὑπομένοντες, καὶ ἡττώμενοι, despair not, nor are they overcome, but find an happy issue out of all, νικῶντες, conquerors at last, saith Theophylact. Then for διωκόμενοι pursued, that is peculiar to δρόμος racing, as hath been formerly said (Note on 1 Cor. 9. 25.) when one being formost in the race, others pursue, and get up close after him, being ready to outstrip, or get before him, but doe not so: and that is the meaning of οὐκ ἐγκαταλειπόμενοι, not outstrip'd, or cast behind, the word ἐγκαταλείπειν signifying to be out-gone, relinqui literally, in Horace's notion,

——mihi turpe relinqui est.

So in Plutarch, τοὺς ὑπολειφθέντας οὐ στεφανοῦσι, they doe not crown them that are lag, or left behind, and 1 Cor. 9. all run, but one receives the prize. So Eustathius on Homer, Il. Ψ'. Τὸν γὰρ ἀτλῶς ἡττηθέντα λέγουσι φάμεν, He that is overcome we say is left; and in Hesychius, Λείπλο, ἥλα ἀπετυγχάνετο, corruptly for Λείπετο (that is, ἐλείπετο) ἄθλα ἀπετυγχάνετο to be left, is to misse the reward: and therefore Jam. 1. 4. those that are perfect and consummate, crowned, or fit to receive the crown, are said to be οὐ μηδενὶ λειπόμενοι, left behind in nothing, victorious still. 'Tis true indeed that the vulgar notion of forsaken is applicable to the word among good authors. As in Aristotle, Rhet. l. 1. c. 10. τοὺς συγκινδυνεύοντας ἐγκαταλιμπάνουσι διὰ τὸν φόβον, cowards for fear forsake, desert, those that are in the same danger with them. But the contexture, and consort of so many other agonistical words, and the examples of this use of it joyned thereto, do rather incline it to the former. Then for καταβαλλόμενοι, that belongs again to πάλη, wrestling, where he that throws the other first is conquerour; whereupon Hesychius, Καταβαλεῖ, νικήσει, βίψει, to cast down, is to overcome, to throw. The same is exprest'd by ὑποσκελίζειν, περονίζειν, supplanting, tripping up the heels, whence is that scholion of Theophylact, καταβαλλόμενοι ὑφ' ἃ ἀντιπαλαίουσιν, thrown by them that wrestle with us; and then the οὐκ ὀλλύμενοι, not destroyed, may either signifie literally so not killed, that is, lying upon the ground, but not like carcasses there, or else rising up again after the fall, and not, as the Elephant, irrecoverably down. All which belongs to the afflictions that befell the Apostles, their hardship in these ἀγῶνες and combats of theirs.

Ἐκπεσεῖν Ἀπορεῖσθαι Θλίβεσθαι Στενοχωρεῖσθαι Ἀπορεῖσθαι Καταβαλλόμενοι Ἀπόλλυσθαι

d. V. 17. Weight of glorie] The Hebrew כבד signifies primarily two things, weight, and plenty, and from thence two things more, either glory or riches. From hence it comes, that βαρὺ is in the Greek of the Old Testament taken for multitude, or greatnesse, that is applied to a train, or host, 1 Kin. 10. 2. and 2 Kin. 6. 14. and 18. 17. and 2 Chron. 9. 1. δύναμις βαρεῖα, a great numerous troop of attendants, or army, and 1 Mac. 1. 17. ὄχλῳ βαρὺ a very great multitude, and 3 Mac. συμπόσιον βαρὺ, a great magnificent feast. Accordingly βάρος δόξης here, will be, riches, plenty, and abundance of glory, the word βάρος being the rather here used in opposition to the lightnesse of the afflictions precedent, but not to denote the heavinesse, but abundance, or riches of this, as Gen. 13. 2. Abraham is said to be כבד heavy, that is, plentifull, in cattell &c. the LXXII. read πλούσιος rich, and so c. 1. כבוד signifies riches. Βάρος δόξης

Paraphrase.

CHAP. V.

1. For of this we are confident, that if our bodies wherein we dwell as in a moveable tent, or tabernacle, be destroyed by the present pressures that lie upon us, if our dangers should end in death it self, this were a matter of no terror to us, having so much a better abiding place provided for us by God, so much an happier condition then any this world is capable of, and out of reach of all sublunary dangers, sure to be continued to us for ever.

1. FOR we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternall in the heavens.]

* to put on over it ἐπεν-δύσασθαι

2. For in this we groan earneſtly, deſiring to be * clothed upon with our houſe, which is from heaven.]

2. For while we are in this inferiour ſtate of bodies, we are for ever unſatisfied, and impatient, deſiring to have thoſe ſpiritual bodies, 1 Cor. 15. 44. that purer ſtate of bliſſe and immortality, as an upper garment to adorn and hide the blemiſhes and imperfections, and keep off the cold and preſſures that this body of ours is ſubject to.

† we be found clothed, not naked, εἰ καὶ ἐνδυσάμενοι, & γυμνοὶ οὐκ εὑρεθησόμεθα

3. If ſo be † that being clothed we ſhall not be found naked.]

3. This I ſay upon ſuppoſition that we ſhould never die, that we were in the number of thoſe mentioned 1 Cor. 15. 53. and 1 Theſſ. 4. 15. 17. that are found alive at the laſt trump, at the day of doom, as ſome ſhall certainly be, and yet even thoſe very heartily glad to be changed, to have theſe natural bodies ſpiritualized.

4. For we that are in this tabernacle doe groan, being burdened, not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that * mortality might be ſwallowed up of life.]

4. For while we are in theſe bodies of clay, we are ſubject to weights and preſſures, and thoſe give us a great impatience and wearineſſe, and this hath a very obſervable meaning in it; for 'tis certain we doe not deſire to put off theſe bodies, to part with them finally, how weary ſoever we are: This therefore is the ſignification of it, that there is another ſort of bodies, and another ſort of life, infinitely more deſirable then theſe which we now enjoy, an eternal, immutable life of theſe our bodies, in ſtead of that mortall (ſubject to afflictions, and death it ſelf) which we now live, and that we are naturally a deſiring, a panting, a groaning after.

* fram'd κατεργασάμενος

† this very thing αὐτὸ τοῦτο

5. Now he that hath * wrought us for † the ſelf-ſame thing, is God, who alſo hath given unto us the earneſt of the Spirit.]

5. And the ſame God that hath created and framed us after this manner, with bodies ſubject to ſuch preſſures, that we perpetually deſire to change them for impaſſible, hath by Chriſt promiſed us, that he will make this proviſion for us, raiſe us to immortal lives; and as a pledge and pawn to aſſure us that he will perform this promiſe, he hath by the preaching of the Goſpel, ſent to cleanſe and purifie us here in ſome meaſure, which is a kind of ſpiritualizing of our bodies, and a pawn and earneſt of our future immortality, to which that Spirit ſhall raiſe us which raiſed Chriſt from the dead.

6. Therefore we are alwaies confident, knowing that whilſt we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord.]

6. By theſe conſiderations therefore being enabled to look cheerfully on death, as that which only brings us home to God, from which theſe earthy bodies keep us ſtrangers,

7. (For we walk by faith, not by ſight.)]

7. (And which gives us that really to be enjoyed, which we have here in this life only by faith)

* travail out ἐκδημοῦντες in † at home ἐνδημοῦντες

8. We are confident, I ſay, and willing rather to * be abſent from the body, and to be † preſent with the Lord.]

8. We make choice rather, and are infinitely better pleaſed, to leave this body behind us here, to goe out, to die, that by this means w may come to our home, our bliſſe in heaven; and ſo the fear or expectation of death is farre from being painfull to us.

* we are ambitious φιλοτιμούμεθα † we be at home or abroad ἐνδημοῦντες εἶναι ἢ ἐκδημοῦντες

9. Wherefore * we labour that, whether † preſent or abſent, we may be acceptable of him.]

9. All our ambition and deſigne being but this, that whether we continue in this earthy body of ours, or go out of it, whether living or dying, we may be acceptable to God.

* be made manifeſt φανερωθῆναι † things by the body, or the proper things of the body,

10. For we muſt all * appear before the Judgment ſeat of Chriſt, that every one may [a] receive the † things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or evil.]

10. For there will certainly come a day, when every perſon that ever lived ſhall be judged by God, ſet as it were in an eminent conſpicuous place, as men that are impleaded are wont to be, and every action of his life taken into conſideration, that accordingly every man may be puniſh'd, or rewarded, body and ſoul together, according to his actions, of what ſort ſoever they be, whether good or bad, which in his life-time he hath committed in his body and ſoul together. a.

11. Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we [b] perſwade men; but we are manifeſt unto God, and, I truſt alſo, are made manifeſt in your conſciences.]

11. Conſidering therefore the dreadfulneſſe of this appearance of God, as on one ſide we labour to perſwade men to embrace the truth, and live as thoſe that are thus to be judged, ſo we deſire to approve our ſelves to God, as our Judge alſo, who, I am confident, doth approve of our ſincerity herein, and I hope you are as well ſatisfied alſo of our uprightneſſe toward you. b.

12. For we commend not our ſelves again unto you, but give you occaſion to glory on our behalf, that you may have ſomewhat to anſwer them which glory in appearance, and not in heart.]

12. What I ſay, is not as if I wanted again commending to you, but that I may arm you againſt thoſe falſe Apoſtles that come among you, and glory much of outward things, but know in their conſciences that they have little cauſe to doe ſo, againſt whom you may fortifie your ſelves, and make anſwer to them by glorying of my patience, and perſeverance, and performances in the Goſpel, and to this end only it is, that I ſay this unto you.

* tranſported (ſee note on Mar. the 3, c.)

13. For whether we be * beſides our ſelves, it is to God: or whether we be ſober, it is for your cauſe.]

13. And what we doe herein, is meant for good, my ſpeaking thus largely of my ſelf is for the glory of God, whoſe grace it is that enables me to doe any thing, and any more moderate language or actions are deſigned by me to your advantage alſo: Or both together, whether one or other, they are meant to the glory of God, and your good.

14. For the love of Chriſt conſtraineth us, † becauſe we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:

15. And * that he died for all, that they which live, ſhould not henceforth live unto themſelves, but unto him which died for them, and roſe again.]

14, 15. For our love to Chriſt, founded on his to us, hath us in its power, to make us doe whatſoever it will have us, making this argument from this certain acknowledged truth of Chriſts having died for all men, that then certainly all men are ſinners, laps'd in a loſt eſtate, and ſo hopeleſſe, unleſſe they uſe ſome means to get out of that eſtate; which that he might help us to doe, was the deſigne of Chriſts dying for all, that we might (having received by his death grace to live a new life) live no longer after our own luſts and deſires, but in obedience to his commands that died and roſe again to that end, (to bleſſe us in turning every man, &c. Act. 3. 26.)

† acknown γινώσκομεν * we know him ſo no longer οὐκ ἔτι γινώσκομεν

16. Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the fleſh: yea though we † have known Chriſt after the fleſh, yet now * henceforth know we him no more.]

16. Wherefore now we eſteem or value no man according to the outer advantages of this world, wiſdome, riches, learning, &c. which are wont to ſet men out in the eyes of the world; and although it were true that we had familiarly convers'd with Chriſt here, as ſome among you ſay they have, (they that ſay I am of Chriſt 1 Cor. 1. 12.) and preferre themſelves before others for that, and expect their doctrine ſhould be received before the doctrine of others, yet now we know that he is gone from this earth, and no man can now pretend to know Chriſts will (otherwiſe then as it was revealed at his being here) above, or any more then another, upon this bare ſcore, becauſe he once convers'd familiarly with Chriſt here: All that now we have to doe with Chriſt, is to look on him, not under any ſuch notion, as a Chriſt talking familiarly with us on earth, but as an heavenly King, offering and deſigning us a ſpiritual kingdome upon our obedience and fidelity, not any temporal advantage, or matter of boaſting, upon our acquaintance with him here.

17. If any man profeſſe to have any peculiar claim to Chriſt, this muſt be the way of judging of the ſincerity of his pretenſions, if he think himſelf obliged to live a new life. The ſtate of the Goſpel is a change of every thing from what it was before, more grace, promiſe of pardon on repentance, and ſincerity for the future, more explicite promiſes of heaven, and precepts of greater perfection: and what is all this, but an obligation, in all reaſon, to a new and a Chriſtian life?

17. Therefore if any man be in Chriſt, he is a new creature: old things are paſt away, behold all things are become new.]

18. Now all theſe things depend on God, as the author of them, who hath uſed this means of making up that breach between him and us, and hath given us power and commiſſion to give men reconciliation, peace, or pardon, or abſolution, upon renewing of their lives.

18. * And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, and hath given to us the † miniſtery of reconciliation.]

* But all theſe things τὰ δὲ πάντα
† adminiſtration διακονίαν

19. And the tenure of our commiſſion runs thus, That God hath uſed Chriſt as a means to make peace between him and the greater and worſer part of the world, the Gentiles at this time, as well as the Jews, (not by pardoning of their ſins, while they remain in them, but by admitting them to repentance, by not ſhutting up waies of mercy, and moreover calling them, uſing admirable methods of mercy in revealing himſelf to them) and hath put in our hands the word of reconciliation, the preaching of this Goſpel, and making known the means of grace, and adviſing and perſwading all men to make uſe of it.

19. To wit, that God was in Chriſt, reconciling the world unto himſelf, not imputing their treſpaſſes unto them, and hath * committed to us the word of reconciliation.]

* placed or depoſited in us, θέμενος ἐν ἡμῖν

c. 20. This therefore is the nature of our preſent imployment, to be (as our title of Apoſtles imports) proxies and negotiators for Chriſt, we ſupplying the place of Chriſt on earth, and ſo treating with men, after the manner that Chriſt did when he was here, calling ſinners to repentance, and that with all the affectionate importunity imaginable, as ſent from God on purpoſe to entreat men to it: and accordingly now we doe, in Chriſts ſtead, we beſeech you to reform your lives, and make your ſelves capable of the return of Gods favour to you, (ſee note on Mat. 5. m.)

20. Now then we c are Ambaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by us; we pray you in Chriſts ſtead, be ye reconciled to God.]

d. 21. For Chriſt, an innocent, pure, ſinleſſe perſon, hath God ſent to be a ſacrifice for our ſins, that we might imitate his purity, and thereby be, through the benefits of his death, accepted and juſtified by God.

21. For he hath made him to be d ſin for us, who knew no ſin, that we might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him.]

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Κομίζεσθαι τὰ διὰ σώματος

V. 10. Receive the things done in his body] Κομίζεσθαι ſignifies to receive, by way of reward, a crown, or prize, to carry it away, as ἁρπάζειν and λαμβάνειν to ſnatch, and take off the crown ſtanding over the goale. Then τὰ διὰ σώματος the things by the body, muſt be relative, and anſwerable to πρὸς ἃ ἔπραξεν that follows, τὰ without mentioning what, only πρὸς ἃ ἔπραξεν, to what he hath done, noting this agreement and proportion betwixt that which he receives, and what he hath done, which is the clear ſenſe of thoſe other places, wherein God is ſaid to render to every man according to his works. Some MSS. and printed copies, the Complutenſe Edition, read in ſtead of τὰ διὰ τοῦ σώματος, with the change of one letter, τὰ ἴδια τοῦ σώματος, the proper, or peculiar, things of his body, and that will be very agreeable alſo, Every man ſhall receive that which is proper to him; either as the body is the ſhop of action, wherein, and whereby, as by the inſtrument, every thing is done, or as τὸ σῶμα ſignifies himſelf, by an Hebraiſme formerly mention'd, according to, or by way of, retribution to what he hath done, &c.

b. Πείθομεν ἀνθρώπους

V. 11. Perſwade men] What πείθειν to perſwade, and peculiarly πείθειν ἀνθρώπους to perſwade men, ſignifies in theſe books, will be ſet down at large, Note on Gal. 1. 6. (ſee alſo Note on 1 Joh. 3. e.) viz. to pacifie, to propitiate, to gain in upon men, and obtain their approbation either of the cauſe they plead, or of themſelves, whom they deſire to approve to them. And though it be a very obvious and commodious ſenſe of theſe words, knowing the terrors of the Lord we perſwade men, that the conſideration of the judgment to come is a very proper, forcible ſuaſorie to amendment of life, &c. yet the circumſtances of the Context rather incline it to the other notion of πείθειν, knowing the judgment to come to be ſo exact that it deſcends to every action that is done, whether good or bad, we Apoſtles, who have a weighty task of duty lying on us to win ſouls to Chriſt, are obliged to purſue this work, to gain in upon men as much as we can, to approve our ſelves to them in all things, that they may not be ſcandalized by any thing done by us, but chearfully led on with a good opinion of our preaching and our perſons, this being very uſefull toward the Apoſtolical deſigne of working good upon men. Agreeably to which it followes in this ſame verſe, we are made manifeſt to God, and I hope alſo to be manifeſted in, or to, your conſciences: where to be manifeſted to their, or in their, conſciences, is all one with this notion of perſwading them, that is, approving himſelf to them. And to this matter that which followes, v. 12. pertains alſo, and therefore Theophylact interprets, πείθομεν ἀνθρώπους, we perſwade men, by πάντα περίποιοῦμεν ὅπως μὴ σκανδαλίζωμεν τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, we do all things that we may not ſcandalize men; and again by σκάνδαλα θεραπεύομεν, we cure, or provide againſt, ſcandals, ſuch as may hinder men in their proficiency in the Goſpel.

c. Πρεσβεύομεν

V. 20. Are Ambaſſadors] The Hebrew שלוחים Apoſtles, ſignifies Legates, Nuntios alſo, ſo as in the antient formulæ, Miſſi ſignifies Embaſſadours; ſee Marculphi form. and Bignonius's notes on lib. 1. c. 40. And ſo here πρεσβεύομεν is the Apoſtolical office, and that from God to men, offering pardon on his part, and requiring on their part reformation for the future. So as in Philoſtratus de vita Apoll. l. 4. c. 5. 'tis ſaid that he was ſent of an embaſſy from Hercules to the Theſſali, ὁ ᾗ γῆς ἐπρεσβείας ἰὼν, μὴ ἀπολέσθαι αὐτοὺς, &c. the ſumme of the embaſſie, ſaith he, was, that they would not be deſtroyed, but that having omitted ſacrifice, they ſhould now perform them again.

d. Ἁμαρτία

V. 21. Sin for us] What is meant here by the word ἁμαρτία ſin will beſt appear by the notion of it in the Old Teſtament ſometimes, and by the oppoſition to δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe here. In the Old Teſtament 'tis taken for a ſacrifice for ſin, Lev. 4. 3, 29. and 5. 6. and Pſal. 40. 7. and ſo piaculum in Latine is both a ſin and a ſacrifice of expiation, or the perſon that is ſo ſanctified. And there is nothing more ordinary in the Septuagint, then for ἁμαρτία to ſignifie a ſacrifice for ſinne, and ſo in the Chaldee paraphraſe alſo, Exod. 29. 14. where the Hebrew reads ſin, they read, a ſacrifice for ſin: for indeed the Hebrew חטא ſignifies primarily two things, ſin and legal uncleanneſſe, and ſecondarily two things more, a ſacrifice of propitiation for ſin, and of purification for uncleanneſſe; and conſequently being rendred ſometimes, ἁμαρτία, both in the notion notion of sin, and also of uncleanneſſe, Lev. 12. 6. Num. 6. 2. ſometimes ἱλασμὸς and ἐξιλασμὸς propitiation, Ezek. 44. 27. 45. 19. and ſometimes ἁγισμα purifying, Num. 19. 19. ἁγισμὸς purification, Num. 8. 7. from hence comes, that this one Greek word ἁμαρτία, as if it were of the ſame latitude with the Hebrew חטא, is made uſe of to ſignifie all theſe ſeverals. For that of ſin I need not inſtance: for that of legal uncleanneſſe, ſee Num. 6. 2. ἥμαρτε περὶ ἑ ψυχῆς, he was unclean by the touch of a dead body. For that of ſacrifice of expiation, among many others, ſee Lev. 4. 25. the blood of the ἁμαρτία, ſin, that is, ſin-offering: And in the laſt for purification, either of a leaper, or a woman after child-birth, or after the touching of a dead body, the word generally uſed is περὶ ἁμαρτίας, for ſin: ſo in the New Teſtament Rom. 8. 3. περὶ ἁμαρτίας, for ſin, is the ſacrifice of propitiation; and ſo Heb. 10. 6. and 13. 11. and ſo here ἁμαρτία ſin, without περὶ, moſt diſtinctly. Then for the oppoſition wherein ἁμαρτία ſin is here ſet to δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, Chriſt made ἁμαρτία ſin, that we might be made δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, that is an argument, that as our being δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe ſignifies our being ſanctified firſt, and then accepted by God, juſtified; ſo his being ἁμαρτία ſignifies his being condemned, that is, conſecrated as a ſacrifice is wont to be devoted for the ſins of the people.

2. Σωτηρία

V. 2. Salvation] What σωτηρία ſignifies, hath been often ſaid, (ſee Rom. 13. c.) Gods reſcuing his faithfull perſevering ſervants out of their diſtreſſes; thus it clearly ſignifies here, proportionably to what it had done in the prophecie here cited, Iſa. 49. 8. In an acceptable time have I heard thee, that is, in a time that God choſe, and ſaw fit for the turn, in the day of ſalvation have I help'd thee, and I will preſerve thee, and give thee for a Covenant to this people (a kind of rainbow to the drown'd world, a ſign of a covenant that God will drown them no more in ſuch afflictions) to eſtabliſh, or raiſe up the earth, to cauſe to inherit the deſolate heritages. And therefore when he ſaith, now is the accepted time, the ſeaſon that God hath pitch'd on, now is the day of ſalvation, the meaning will be, that now the time is approaching, that the true pure Chriſtian profeſſion, thus long perſecured by the Jews and Gnoſticks ſo ſharply, (by which means it comes to paſſe, that many daily fall off to ſave themſelves) ſhall ſuddainly have reſpite by the deſtruction of the enemies every where. And ſo this is a ſeaſonable conſideration, to back the exhortation ver. 1. which the Apoſtle in all his Epiſtles did at that time ſo earneſtly preſſe, that they that had received the Goſpel, and gone on ſo long, ſhould not at laſt, by falling off, loſe all in the laſt act, (ſee Heb. 10. 36, 37, 38,) that is, receive it in vain, loſe all the benefit that attended it. To which purpoſe the Apoſtle proceeds v. 3. &c. to mention himſelf and his fellow-labourers, as examples to them of thoſe things which were moſt directly contrary to the Gnoſticks: firſt, Inoffenſive living; ſecondly Conſtancy and perſeverance under perſecutions: Firſt, blameleſneſſe of converſation v. 3. (For this falling off of the Chriſtians to the Gnoſticks was the greateſt offence and ſcandal imaginable to Chriſtianity, having ſo much impurity, &c. among them) then v. 4, 5. patience and conſtancy in all kind of preſſures upon which again he ſubjoins, v. 6. ἀγνότης, pureneſſe, and γνῶσις, knowledge, μακροθυμία, long-ſuffering, patience, and perſeverance, in oppoſition to the compliances and apoſtaſies of the Gnoſticks; pureneſſe, in oppoſition to their luſts and uncleanneſſe, knowledge, in oppoſition to their pretended knowledge of the ſecret meanings of Scripture, (juſt as 2 Pet. 1. 5. we find virtue, (or courage) knowledg, ἐγκράτεια continence, and patience put together) and at length πνεῦμα ἅγιον the holy Spirit, in oppoſition to their pretences of being the ſpiritual 1 Cor. 12. 1. And after many verſes ſpent on that ſubject, he looks on thoſe apoſtate hereticks as ἄπιστοι unfaithfull deſertors v. 14. and conjures them μὴ ἑτεροζυγεῖν not to encline to them, being an heatheniſh diabolicall ſort of people, v. 15. with whom being intangled, they muſt abſolutely forſake, and come out of them as from Sodom v. 17. which is again noted by the filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, foul luſts and factions, &c. c. 7. 1.

Αγνότης Γνῶσις

b. Ἑτεροζυγεῖν

V. 14. Unequally yoked] The word ἑτεροζυγεῖν the Vulgar renders jugum ducere, which ſeems to have given occaſion to Budæus, and H. Stephanus out of him, to affirm that ἑτεροζυγεῖν here in this Apoſtle is uſed for ὁμοζυγεῖν to be in the yoak with another. But this is a miſtake without any grounds, ſave only the equivocalneſs of the word ζυγὸς, which ſignifies a yoak to draw in, as well as a ballance to weigh in. The word ἑτεροζυγεῖν is doubtleſſe to be rendred here as in Greek authors it ſignifies, among whom a pair of ſcales or ballance, whoſe beam inclines or propends toward one part, is called ζυγὸς ἑτερόζυγος, (in oppoſition to ἰσόζυγος, equally inclined both waies, or whoſe beam ſtands even) trutina alteri-jugis, ἑτερορρόπης, non ἰσορρόπης, a ſcale that weighs down one way, ſtands not in the equilibration. So in Phocylides, Σταθμὸν μὴ κρέμειν ἑτερόζυγον, ἀλλ' ἴσον ἕλκειν,

Let the ballance ſtand even, not inclined more to one ſide. And ſo the ſenſe of the place will be, Be not more propenſe and inclined toward the propoſals of theſe Apoſtatizing Gnoſticks, that hereſie to which your preſent leaders would ſeduce you, then you are to us the Apoſtles of Chriſt, who love you ſo paſſionately: Which is the argument almoſt of the whole Chapter. Thus in Clements Epiſtle to the ſame Corinthians, we find a phraſe directly parallel to this, ἑτεροκλινεῖς ἀπ' ἡμῶν, inclining the other way from us, that is, diſaffected to us.

ved by Christ, as children into his family, but those promises conditional promises, made upon condition that you forsake all impurity, &c. c. 6. 17, 18. my earnest exhortation to you is, that you purifie your selves from the sins (of all kinds) that are now crept in among you, particularly from the pollutions of the flesh that your idol-feasts are apt to betray you to, and of the spirit, as pride, faction, schisme, &c. preferring false teachers before us, which planted Christ among you; practising to the end all manner of piety with all diligence (see note on Phil. 2. c.)

2. Receive us; we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, we have †defrauded no man.]

2. The false teachers that you receive so willingly, injure you, defile you, and either defraud or perhaps seduce you into abominable sins. See Ephes. 4. 22. and 2 Pet. 1. b. But we have been far from doing any of these, and therefore are fitter to be embraced by you, c. 6. 14. See Rom. note i.

3. I speak not this to condemne you, for I have said before, that you are in our hearts to dye and live with you.]

3. I speak not this to bring any evill report upon you, for I love you most passionately, as I said before.

4. Great is my *boldnesse of speech toward you, great is my glorying of you, I am filled with comfort, I †am exceeding joyfull in all our tribulation.]

4. My freedom (see note on Jo. 7. a.) in mentioning your faults is great indeed, but withall I am as free in boasting of your obedience; and though I have had much grief and fear v. 5. through the sins that were among you, yet the joy which I take in your repentance is extreamly more abundant then the sorrow was.

5. For *when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were †troubled on every side, without were fightings, within were fears.]

5. For the truth is, all our journey long from Ephesus to Macedonia, Act. 20. 1. we had a sad time of it; for as we met with many oppositions from others, so the many fears we had concerning you were very troublesome to us.

6. Nevertheless, God that comforteth *those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of Titus.]

6. But through the mercy of God, who relieves those that are in greatest want of relief, Titus's coming freed us from all.

7. And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted †in you, *when he told us your earnest desire, your †mourning, your *fervent mind towards me, so that I rejoyced the more.]

7. And it was not the bare presence of Titus that was such solace to me, but the news that he brought me, and with which he himself was so much comforted, to wit, the news of your panting after me, lamenting most sadly the sins that I had in my former Epistle laid to your charge, and your earnestnesse for me against those that traduced me.

8. †For though I made you sorry with a Letter, I doe not repent, though I did repent; for I perceive that *the same Epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but [a] for a season.]

8. So that now though those directions of mine in my first Epistle brought the censures of the Church upon some of you, (for so I find they did, though but for a time, with place for speedy remission, upon reformation) I have no reason to be sorry for what I did, though the truth is, I was a while sorry for it, and wish'd I had not been so severe.

9. Now, I rejoice, not that ye were †made sorry, but that ye *sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.]

9. But now that I hear what successe it hath found among you, what reformation hath been wrought by it, I professe my self to rejoyce, not that you had the censures inflicted on you, but that those censures produced that effectuall reformation and change, for you were dealt with according to the custome of Evangelicall Discipline; And so 'tis clear enough that you have not been damnified by me in this matter, but much advantaged thereby.

10. For †godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation *not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death.]

10. For that Discipline which Christ hath now ordained in his Church (see 1 Cor. 5. note c.) is very proper to work such change of mind as shall advance to a constant persevering, durable forsaking all known sinnes, (see note on Rom. 10. a.) whereas the punishments which are usuall in the world ordinarily end in the taking away of mens lives, or somewhat analogicall to them in a lower degree.

11. For behold, this self same thing †that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, *what carefulnes it wrought in you, yea, †what clearing of your selves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement desire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge: in all things you have approved your selves to be clear in this matter.]

11. And an evidence thereof I have in you, whose having the censures of the Church inflicted on some of you, hath wrought a vehement care to make all right again, a clearing of the guiltlesse, a displeasure and disdain against the guilty, fear of my displeasure, desire to give me satisfaction, earnestnesse to reform, yea, to deny your selves lawfull liberties by way of penance for the former inordinacies. And so you have done all that is possible toward the acquitting your selves in this businesse.

12. Wherefore though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that had suffered wrong, but that our *care for you in the sight of God might appear unto you.]

12. When therefore I wrote so sharply to you, the interpretation which you are to make of it is this, that it was not out of any disposition of severity against them that had committed those crimes, the fornicators and incestuous person, 1 Cor. 5. 1. the man that sued his brother c. 6. 1. nor out of any partiality of kindnesse to them that had been sufferers by those crimes, him that was defrauded, 1 Cor. 6. 8. or disturbed with law-suits before the heathen judicatures v. 1. but onely to expresse my care of you, that by my writing to you in that manner you might discern how diligent I am to doe you any good.

13. *Therefore we were comforted in your comfort; yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we, for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all.]

13. And by this means I have received much matter of joy, hearing what good effects the censures had wrought upon you; and this joy was very much increased, to see how Titus was joyed, and inwardly inlivened by you.

14. For if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I †am not ashamed; but as we spake all things to you in truth, even so our boasting which I made before Titus is found a truth.]

14. For what ever good I told him of you, what ever I have boasted of your kindnesse to me, you have made it all good; and as I never said any false thing to you, so whatsoever I said to Titus about you, he hath by experience found to be perfectly true also.

15. And his inward affection is more abundant toward you, *whilst he remembred the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling you received him.]

15. And he hath huge kindnesse toward you, considering what readinesse of obedience you express'd to my directions, and what chearfull reception you gave him that was thus sent from me unto you (see note on Phil. 2. c.)

16. I rejoice therefore that †I have confidence in you in all things.]

16. This therefore is matter of all joy to me, that I can thus confidently promise my self of your obedience, &c. and never fear to find my self deceived in my confidence.

a. πρὸς καιρ.

V. 8. For a ſeaſon] The word ὥρα ſignifies a ſeaſon, and any part of time indefinitely, but yet both in Greek and Latine is oft uſed for a ſmall, or ſhort, ſpace; ſo Philem. 15. πρὸς ὥραν, for a ſhort ſpace, and 1 Theſſ. 2. 17. πρὸς καιρὸν ὥρας for the ſpace of an houre, that is, for a ſhort ſpace. And ſo here εἰ καὶ πρὸς ὥραν, though but for an hour, that is, for a ſhort ſpace; which being joyned with ἐλύπησεν ὑμᾶς, hath grieved you, in the notion of that phraſe for inflicting the cenſures (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 5. c.) it denotes the infliction of ſome penance, a ſentence of abſtention for a while, for a ſhort ſpace, (for the bringing forth fruits of repentance) after which it is to be remitted again. This the Nicene fathers expreſſe by this ſtyle, ἐφ' ὃν ὁ χρόνος ὥρισται καὶ καιρὸς τέτακται, for whoſe cenſures the time is determined, and ſeaſon ſet; Zonaras by καιροὶ ὡρισμένοι τῇ μετανοίᾳ τῶν πταιόντων, the times ſet for the penance of the lapſed. And this is anſwerable to the Nidui among the Jewes, a remotion for thirty daies. Another ſort of cenſures there was, ſine præfinito tempore, without determining of the time, irrevocabile anathema, in Alcimus, perennis excommunicatio, a laſting, irrevocable excommunication, Concil. Turon. 2. c. 20. and Concil. Pariſ. 3. can. 5. but this not abſolutely ſo, but uſque ad reformationem, for ever if they reform not. Hereby it appears that 'twas not only the inceſtuous perſon 1 Cor. 5. 1. which is here referred to, for he was delivered up to Satan for the deſtruction of the fleſh, and that is parallel to the perennis excommunicatio, the durable excommunication, or that which was to continue untill reformation; but others, it ſeems, which had been found fault with in that Epiſtle, (as he that went to law c. 6. and the like) fell under the cenſures, though only πρὸς ὥραν, for a definite time, that they might bring forth fruits of repentance: and accordingly they did v. 11.

CHAP. VIII.

1. Now I thought good to mention to you the liberall collection for the poor which hath been made (ſee Act. 2. 47. and 4. 34. note on 1 Pet. 3. d.) at Philippi and Theſſalonica, and other Churches in Macedonia,

1. MOreover brethren, we * doe you to wit of the grace of God beſtowed on the Churches of Macedonia,]

* make known unto you the grace of God which hath been beſtowed in the—Γνωρίζομεν τὴν χάριν τὴν δεδομένην ἐν Θε. τὴν δεδομένην ἐν ταῖς

2. That being under an heavy affliction themſelves, they were very chearfull in their liberality, being themſelves in the depth of poverty, they expreſs'd a very great bounty to others.

2. How that in a great triall of affliction, the abundance of their joy, and their deep poverty, abounded unto the riches of their liberality.]

3. For having no obligation upon them to doe ſo, as being poor v. 2. and not being ſollicited by me, they did voluntarily contribute what they were able, nay I may truly ſay more then they could well ſpare,

3. For to their power (I bear record) yea, and beyond their power, they were willing of themſelves,]

4. Inſtead of being intreated by me, earneſtly beſeeching me to receive their charity and collection (ſee note on Act. 2. e.) and convey it from them for the relief of the poor Chriſtians in Judæa.

4. Praying us with much intreaty, that we would receive the † gift, and take upon us the fellowſhip of miniſtring to the ſaints.]

† charity & contribution, or liberality of adminiſtration toward the ſaints. χάριν καὶ κοινωνίαν τῆς διακονίας τὴν εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους

5. And not only this, but as they had firſt given themſelves up to the ſervice of God, ſo they offered me their ſervice alſo, (God ſo moving them) that is, not only their bounty, but their pains, not onely to ſend or give their goods, but to goe themſelves, ſome of their company, to Corinth,

5. * And this they did, not as we hoped, but firſt gave their own ſelves to the Lord, and unto us, by the will of God.]

* And not as we hoped, οὐ καθὼς ἠλπίσαμεν

6. On a meſſage from me, to deſire Titus, who had before done ſomewhat among you concerning this contribution to the poor Chriſtians in Judæa, that he would now perfect it among you.

6. † Inſomuch that we deſired Titus, that as he had begun, ſo he would alſo finiſh * in you the ſame grace alſo.]

† That we might intreat, εἰς τὸ παρακαλέσαι ἡμᾶς

* among you this charity alſo εἰς ὑμᾶς καὶ τὴν χάριν ταύτην

7. And that as ye have been richly furniſhed with faith in believing your ſelves, all that hath been revealed to you, with ability of inſtructing others, with knowledge of myſteries (ſee note on 1 Cor. 1. b. c.) with all care and induſtry to doe what ever you could to bring forth fruits of faith, and with extreme kindneſſe towards me, ſo ye would exceed in this liberality and contribution toward the poor Chriſtians alſo.

7. || Therefore (as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and * utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us) † ſee that ye abound in this grace alſo.]

|| But, or And that. ἀλλ.

8. This I ſay not by way of precept, or command, laying any obligation upon you, ſee v. 10. but only by mentioning how forward others have been, the Macedonians by name, when they were themſelves in diſtreſſe, v. 2. to tell you that this will be a tryall of your charity, how ſincere it is, by comparing it with others, who were not ſo rich as you, and therefore if yours be as hearty as theirs, 'twill probably expreſſe it ſelf on ſuch an opportunity as this.

8. * I ſpeak not by commandement, but by occaſion of the forwardneſſe of others, and to prove the ſincerity of your love.]

* I ſpeak not by way of injunction, but by the forwardneſs of others making triall of the ſincerity of your love

9. For to ſuch performances as theſe ye can want no motives, when ye conſider the example of Chriſt in his dealings toward us, his liberality and bounty, in exhauſting himſelf for us, ſubmitting himſelf to ſo mean a condition, and even to death it ſelf, that thereby ye, and all that will make uſe of his bounty, may be ſpiritually enriched.

9. For ye know the † grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that * though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.

10. And herein though for the degree of your liberality no precept doth oblige you, Chriſts command of relieving the poor leaving to you the liberty to determine the proportion, yet I ſhall give you my opinion, that as you have formerly expreſs'd ſome forwardneſſe, not onely to doe ſomewhat for that preſent, but to reſolve to doe more, if you had been, or when you ſhould be able, ſo 'twill not now be for your credit, or the reputation of your bounty, to fall ſhort of that purpoſe.

2. Θέλειν

V. 10. To be forward] What θέλειν to will signifies in this place will appear by the ποιῆσαι to doe precedent: For when to will goes before doing, as Phil. 2. 13. it doth, then it must be conceived to denote the resolving of that which is after done ; but when it is subsequent to doing, as here, then it cannot belong to that, but to some farther action still future, either of the same kind with that formerly done, or of any other which is specified. That here it referres to some farther degree of liberality to be superadded to what they had already done, appears by the ensuing exhortation to consummate the work, v. 11. and by the mention of the προθυμία τοῦ θέλειν, the forwardnesse to will, that is, to resolve to doe more, as they should be able. In which respect it is that c. 9. 2. Paul saith he hath boasted of them, that they had (ἀπὸ πέρυσι, as here, from a year ἀπὸ πέρυσι agoe) made a preparation for this new supply, for so παρεσκεύασται hath been prepared signifies, as passives are Παρασκεύασε often used for Reciprocalls. As for the τοῦτο ὑμῖν συμφέρει Διαφέρ this is profitable for you in the former part of this verse, though it may fitly be applied to severall waies of profit, that their liberality would probably bring in unto them, yet it seems by what follows ch. 9. 3, 4. to referre peculiarly to the reputation of their liberality that Paul had so proclaimed, which would render it a reproachfull thing to them, if they should not make it good, according to their purpose and his boasting of them.

* Now concerning the contribution περὶ μὲν γὰρ τῆς διακονίας

2. For of your forwardnesse therein I am so farre from doubting, that I have made boast of it to others, that the Christians of all Achaia (of which Corinth was the chief city) have for a twelve-month made a preparation to send a new supply, beyond that which they then did (see ch. 8.10. and note a.) and the emulation to your example, or the opinion of your forwardnesse hath stirred up, hath wrought much in Macedonia, made them very liberall.

2. For I know the forwardnesse of your mind, for which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, that Achaia † was ready a year agoe: and * your zeale hath provoked very many.]

† hath been prepared] from a year agoe, παρεσκεύασται ἀπὸ πέρυσι

* the emulation which came from you ἐξ ὑμῶν ζῆλος

3. And that what I have thus boasted of your preparation, may be found true, and that you may be indeed prepared before-hand, and not surprized at my coming, I have sent these bearers to you to give you warning,

3. † Yet I have sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf, that, as I said, ye may be ready,]

† But, or Now,

4. Lest if the Macedonians, to whom I have boasted of your forwardnesse v. 2. come along with me to you, and find that you have not your supplies ready, it be matter of great shame to me, as it must be also to you (see c. 8. 10. note a.) that I have had the confidence (see note on Heb. 11. a.) and vanity to boast thus of you without cause.

4. Lest happily if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, you) should be * ashamed in this same confident boasting.]

* put to shame in this confidence of boasting, καταισχυνθῶμεν ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ τῆς καυχήσεως

5. This is the reason for which these come now to you by my direction, that they may prepare and get together, and so complete and perfect that collection of yours which I have talk'd of, that it may be ready as an act of beneficence and liberality in you, before I come, and not as a collection gratingly extorted from you at my coming.

5. Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would goe before unto you, and make up before-hand your bounty, † whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousnesse.]

† before declared προκατηγγελμένην

6. And for your encouragement, this ye must know, that the more liberality ye shew herein, the greater the advantages will be to you from God, that rewardeth such charities, and that in proportion to the severall degrees of it.

6. But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully]

7. Whatsoever then ye have determined to give, let it be given chearfully, not with any trouble to part with it, not as if it were extorted from you, for if it be not done chearfully, 'twill never be accepted, much lesse rewarded by God.

7. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a chearfull giver.]

8. And to this end I shall adde one argument more, which will satisfie your only fear (that such liberality may bring your selves to straits or want) by telling you that God is the fountain of all plenty, and only dispenser of it, and is therefore able (and having oft promised it, is sure to make it good) to make you the richer, not the poorer, by your liberality, to make every almes you give, like the oyle in the cruise, to multiply (see v. 10.) as you poure it out, and so to give you continually a sufficient portion of wealth, that you still be able out of your abundance to supply others, and have enough for every object of charity that can be offered to you.

8. And God is able to [a] make * grace abound towards you, that ye alwaies having all sufficiency in all things, may † abound to every good work:]

* charity χάριν

† have plenty for περισσεύητε εἰς

9. (According to that which the Psalmist saith Psal. 112. where there are signall promises of wealth and riches in the house of a good man or righteous (that is, of the liberal almes-giver) v. 3, and 9. and of blessing or abundance to his posterity, v. 2. and of exaltation and honour unto him, v. 9. so that all wicked and covetous men shall look on him with envy and gnashing of teeth v. 10. which Psalme being made up not only of affirmations what God is able to doe, but of promises what he will certainly perform, and being here by the Apostle applied to this matter of encouraging men to liberal almes-giving, is in effect the assuring of the truth of that Old Testament-promise [of plenty to the Almes-giver] to belong also unto, and stand firm under the New Testament, and so consequently, that all manner of temporal felicities are the portion of this righteous man now still under the Gospel, which consequently is the summe of the Apostles prayer ver. 10.)

9. (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad, he hath given to the poor, his righteousnesse remaineth for ever.)]

10. Now that God that furnisheth the liberal man (which giveth away that which he hath) with so much more, provide all necessaries for you, and make you the richer for your liberality, and encrease unto you those fruits which are naturally the issue of liberality, a greater plenty for the future: (see note a.)

10. Now he that ministreth seed to the sower, both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousnesse,]

11. Having enough to be very liberal at all times, which is a most desirable condition, and that which brings in thanksgiving and glory to God.

11. Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulnesse, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.]

12. This charitable and serviceable ministring to, and supplying of other mens wants, being not only a means to relieve those Christians that are in necessity (see note on Mar. 12. b.) and so a charity to our brethren, but also an invitation and obligation of many mens gratitude unto God, and so an occasion, if not a speciall act, of piety also,

12. For the * administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God,]

* distribution of this oblation, (see note on Lu. 1. h)

13. Whilst men that see and observe this charity and distribution of yours to the distressed Christians in Judæa, blesse and magnifie the name of God, first, that ye are so ready to believe and obey the Gospel of Christ, to confesse Christ by doing what he commands, and secondly, that by your liberality these poor saints, and all others in their sympathy with them, doe receive so much benefit from you;

13. While by the experiment of this ministration, they glorifie God for † your professed subjection unto the Gospel of Christ, and for your * liberall distribution unto them, and unto all men,]

† the subjection of your confession ὑποταγῇ τῆς ὁμολογίας

2. Figuratione χαρᾶ

V. 8. Make all grace abound] There is no way of rendring Θεὸς δυνατὸς πᾶσαν χάριν but by putting περισσεῦσαι in an Active ſenſe to make abound, and that hath been formerly noted to be ordinary in the New Teſtament, (ſee Note on Mar 14. f.) The Greek wanting the Hebrew conjugation Hiphil, which denotes making to doe a thing, and having no way to ſupply it, but by uſing the Active voice in that ſenſe, ſo as περισσεύειν ſhall not only ſignifie Neutrally to abound, but alſo to make any man or thing to abound: Of which kind there be innumerable examples. And ſo the making their charity to abound toward them here, that is, Gods bleſſing their liberality, ſo that it ſhall enrich, in ſtead of impoveriſhing them, will be all one with the encreaſing the fruits of their righteouſneſſe v. 10. their righteouſneſſe there ſignifying their charity, (as hath been oft ſhewn) and the plenty conſequent to their exerciſes of that virtue, being proportionable to the fruit that comes by ſowing (the hundred-fold encreaſe which Chriſt promiſes even in this life to thoſe that forſake or part with, any thing for his ſake) and accordingly 'tis there joyn'd with multiplying their ſeed, where their acts of charity are figuratively call'd their ſeed, and the bleſſings conſequent thereto the fruits of it.

Paraphraſe.

a the ſame Paul ἐγὼ Παῦλος † exhort παρακαλῶ when I am in preſon among you, am lowly ταπεινὸς μὲν ἐν ὑμῖν in you † am confident θαρρῶ εἰς

1. NOw I * Paul my ſelf † beſeech you by the meekneſſe and [a] gentleneſſe of Chriſt, who * in preſence am baſe among you, but being abſent, † am bold toward you:] 1. Now I, that Paul that am ſo calumniated by ſome among you, and ſaid by way of reproach to be mild and contemptible, when I am perſonally preſent with you, but, when I am abſent, ſevere and confident toward you, I exhort you by the meekneſſe and gentleneſſe of Chriſt, which was ſo remarkable in him, and which I ſhall not be aſhamed to imitate, be I never ſo vilified for it: And as I exhort you, ſo

2. But I beſeech you that I may not be bold when I am preſent, with that confidence wherewith I think to be bold againſt ſome, which think of us as if we walked according to the fleſh.] 2. I beſeech God (or you) that at my coming, I may not have occaſion to exerciſe that ſeverity which I think my ſelf obliged to exerciſe againſt ſome who accuſe me for a weak behaviour in my Apoſtleſhip, as either fearing or flattering of men, too mild, on one of thoſe grounds.

3. For though we walk in the fleſh, we doe not warre after the fleſh.] 3. For though I am an infirm perſon, obnoxious my ſelf to many afflictions and diſtreſſes, for which you are apt to deſpiſe me, yet doe I not exerciſe my Apoſtleſhip in a weak manner, or by weak weapons.

5. Caſting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Chriſt,] 5. But I uſe the cenſures of the Church to bring down all the diſputings and reaſonings of mens underſtandings againſt the Chriſtian doctrine, all notions and conceits of vain hereticall men, to the acknowledgment and practice of the truth.

And truly thus I am reſolved, when you have made good your obedience, reduced your ſelves to good order, and demonſtrated that, to puniſh thoſe that remain refractary with ſeverity enough. For when the whole Church lies in diſobedience, thoſe acts of ſeverity are not ſo fit to be uſed; but when the reformation of the greater part is ſo conſpicuous, that it may be prudent to proceed againſt the refractary, then I ſhall not fail in my duty, but inflict theſe cenſures as ſhall be fit.

If any man out of confidence that he is a ſpeciall favourite of Chriſts, think fit to deſpiſe me, let him conſider, and by all thoſe arguments, by which he will be able to conclude that he is the Diſciple or Apoſtle of Chriſt, he will be able to conclude it of me alſo.

8. For though I ſhould boaſt ſomewhat more of our authority (which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your deſtruction) I ſhould not be aſhamed:] 8. 12. For we dare not * [c] make our ſelves of the number, or compare our ſelves with ſome that commend themſelves: for they meaſuring themſelves by themſelves, and comparing themſelves among themſelves, are not wiſe.] 12. For I ſhall not think fit to aſſume any thing to my ſelf, plead any worth of mine, or ſeek praiſe by making compariſons with thoſe that take ſo much upon them, ver. 7. but only I think fit to mind them that they they, by judging of their gifts and virtues by their own fancies, and so flattering themselves, fall into great and pitifull folly by that means.

d. 13. Neither will we take upon us to have authority over those who are not within our province, but only goe as farre as God hath given us commission to goe, as farre as God hath determined our province, which is certainly as farre as to you.

13. † But we will not boast of things without our d measure, but according to the measure of the * rule † which God hath distributed unto us, a measure to reach even unto you.]

e. 14. For by extending my self to you, I doe not over extend, or goe beyond my line, as they which meddle with other mens labours, where they were never before; for indeed I have in my travels been among you, I have advanced as farre as to you in the preaching of the Gospel, and that before any other was with you, I planted the faith among you.

14. * For we stretch not our selves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you, for we † are e come as farre as to you also, in preaching the Gospel of Christ;]

15. I doe not pretend any title to those whom others have brought up in the Gospel, but yet entertain my self with an hope, that as your Church encreaseth in the faith, so my province will become the larger in length or extent, I shall have more proselytes to Christ by your merchandizing and traffick with other countreys,

15. Not boasting of things without our measure, that is, of other mens labours, but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be inlarged by you * according to our rule abundantly,]

f. 16. And so preach the Gospel farre beyond Achaia, without invading any other mans possession or province, without entring upon those parts where the Gospel had been formerly preach'd by others.

16. To preach the Gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in f another mans line † of things made ready to our hand.]

17. For it is a most ridiculous thing for any man to rejoice or glory in any thing, but in having done that which is acceptable to God, in discharge of his duty.

17. But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.]

18. For 'tis not our own good opinion of our selves, which qualifies us for reward or acceptation, but the sincerity of our actions before God, which may render us acceptable in his sight.

18. For, not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.]

Annotations on Chap. X.

a. Επιεικεια

V. 1. Gentlenesse] Επιεικεια is the ordinary word of the philosopher, taken from him by the Lawyers to signifie mitigation of exact or strict justice, when that is not so agreeable to rules of charity, and so it notes in generall the fit, proper temper, which is to be observed in all things. Επιεικὲς, saith Hesychius, καδηκον, πρεπον, σεμνοπρεπον, ικανὸν, that which is fit, decent, due, &c. And according to the diversity of matter about which it is conversant, so it hath severall notions in the New Testament. In this place being spoken of Christ, and joyn'd with that meeknesse which was so imitable in him, Mat. 11. 29. it signifies gentlenesse, or clemency, as that is opposed to severity in punishing, which is here exprest'd by θαῤῥῆσαι, and πλημῦσαι, and πεποίθησις, daring, boldnesse, and confidence. But Phil. 4. 5. τὸ ἐπιεικὲς seems to belong to another sort of gentlenesse, that of the lambe, which before or under the shearer is dumb, and opens not the mouth, viz. a chearfull endurance of all the persecutions that were upon the Christians at that time. To this the Context there inclines, which ushered it in with a repeated exhortation to rejoice in the Lord alwaies, in adversity as well as prosperity (and so 1 Thess. 5. 16.) which being contrary to the joy of the world, most fitly denotes that χαρὰ καὶ ἀγαλλίασις Mat. 5. 12. (rejoicing and being exceeding glad, rejoicing and leaping for joy, and thinking it all joy, Jam. 1. 2.) which is upon their being persecuted for Christ, and so likewise enforced with a reason agreeable to this matter, for the Lord is at hand, the time of your redemption from your pressures draws neer, Heb. 10. 37 And accordingly 'tis attended, (as Christs instructions to the Apostles are in this case, Mat. 10. 19.) with μὴ μεριμνᾶτε, a prohibition of all sollicitous thoughts, referring the whole matter to prayer, and supplication to God ver. 6. This word is again used Jam. 3. 17. the wisdome from above is ἐπιεικὴς gentle, which following peaceable, and being attended with other words of that nature, must be rendred in order to that, so as to signifie a receding from his own strict right, in order to peace. as ἐυπειθὴς that follows immediately, notes an easinesse to be perswaded of that which belongs to the excuse of another, or mitigating of his fault, as 'tis said of charity, that it believes all things 1 Cor. 13. 7. and accordingly these qualities of the wisdome from above are shut up ver. 18. under the title of peace to them that love or make peace. So 1 Tim. 3. 3. and Tit. 3. 2. ἐπιεικῆς are joyn'd with ἄμαχοι in both places, and so note the contrary to μάχαι, all kind of contentions, and are attended in the latter place with shewing all meeknesse to all men.

Ευπειθὴς

b. Οπλα τῆς στρατειας

V. 4 Weapons of our warfare] That the ὅπλα τῆς στρατείας ἡμῶν, weapons of our warfare, which are here said not to be weak, but mighty to God, signifie the censures of the Church, may thus appear probable, first, by the Context, where the Apostle speaks of proceeding against offenders, which he calls θαῤῥῆσαι εἰς ὑμᾶς, being bold toward them, v. 1, 2. and ἐκδικῆσαι παρακολὼ to avenge disobedience, v. 6. and this according to the ἐξουσία or authority, which the Lord had given for edification (building them up farther in the faith and all Christian virtue) and not for destruction; and then he adds a caution to remove a calumny or prejudice that some had against him, that his Letters were severe, and so he, when absent; but farre from all severity when he came among them, καὶ πρόσωπον ταπεινὸς ἐν ὑμῖν, vile, or tame, or unconsiderable, when he was among them: that is, that in his absence he threatned censures, but when he came, would not inflict them, which he calls ἐκφοβεῖν δι' ἐπιστολῶν, terrifying by Letters, ver. 9. and ἐπιστολαὶ βαρεῖαι and ἰσχυραὶ, weighty and powerfull letters, ver. 10. that is, severe, and terrifying, which yet he threatens shall be equall'd by his actions, when he comes among them ver. 11. And so all along, the businesse is of the censures of the Church, and so in all reason in this verse also. Secondly, this will appear by the words themselves: for as στρατεία ἡμῶν signifies confess'dly the Apostles ministery (see Note on 1 Tim. 1. f.) according to the importance of the Hebrew צבא, which is sometimes rendred στρατεία warfare, sometimes λειτουργία ministery; so ὅπλα τῆς στρατείας, weapons of warfare, are the means to discharge their duty in the ministery. Of which nature though there be more, Prayer, Preaching, Catechizing, administration of Sacraments, Confirmation, &c. yet the antecedents and consequents here, belonging to

to the businesse of censures, must needs incline it to that notion peculiarly. Then that these are not Carnall, signifies that they are not weak, for so σὰρξ flesh frequently signifies, as here v. 3. though we walk in the flesh, that is, are weak, as men, and have no power over you, yet as Officers of Christ we are not, our ministry is with power, and therefore follows ἀλλὰ δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ, but mighty, or powerfull, through or to God, or perhaps exceeding powerfull, and that εἰς καθαίρεσιν τῶν ὀχυρωμάτων to the pulling down of strong holds, that is, either the pulling down all fortresses that maintain or secure a man in sin, or more critically, as καθαίρεσις signifies excommunication it self, v. 8. and c. 13. 10. and generally in the Canons of the Councels; and then ὀχυρώματα strong holds will signifie all impenitent, obdurate, impregnable sinners, called v. 15. every high thing that exalts it self against the knowledge of God, that is, against piety and Christianity. And so the plain meaning of the verse will be, that the Apostles censures were exceeding powerfull, and that power exercised in excommunicating, and delivering up to Satan, ἵνα παιδευθῶσι, that they may be disciplined, 1 Tim. 1. 20. and thereby subduing contumacious offenders. According to that of the writer of the Answers ad Orthodoxos, Ὅτε διὰ τὴν μακροθυμίαν τῶν ὑβριζομένων ἡ γίνεται διόρθωσις, τότε ἡ ἀποτομία τῆς μακροθυμίας τοῖς διορθώτοις ἔστι χρησιμωτέρα, when by clemency offenders are not reformed, then excision to the incorrigible is more usefull then clemency. Agreeable to which is that of Pletho in his scholia on Zoroaster, Αἱ ποιναὶ, ἤτοι αἱ κολαστικαὶ δαίμονες· ἀγκλῆσαι τῶν ἀνθρώπων εἰσὶ, ἤτοι ζωτικὴν τὴν ἀπάγειν τῆς κακίας αὐτοὺς, τῇ ἀρετῇ ἐγκαθεῖσαι, The revengefull furies, or devils, or punishments doe gripe men to bring them off from sin, and set them on vertue.

c. Ἐγκεῖναι

V. 12. Make our selves of the number] What ἐγκεῖναι signifies properly is set down by Budæus, ἐνταῦθα, ἐγκαταλέγειν, to chuse, or admit any into any order, as in Aristides τοὺς ἐπήλυδας θεοὺς μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων ἐκείνων, they admitted the forrain Gods with the others; and in Demosthenes, εἰς γερουσίαν ἐγκρίνεσθαι to be chosen, or admitted, into the Senate. Thus ἐγκρίνειν and ἀποκρίνειν are used, as in Plato de leg. 12. ἀποκρίνοντας νεότητι, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλως ἐγκεκριμένους rejecting some, and chusing others. Hence Hesychius, Ἔγκριθὲν, ἐκλελεγμένον, ἐξειλεγμένος, the participle signifies select, or chosen, and so here ἐγκρῖναι ἑαυτὸν to give suffrage to himself, to take upon him to be some eminent person.

V. 13. Our measure] Of the agones among the Grecians, particularly among the Corinthians, and of δρόμος racing, one of them, we have formerly spoken (Notes on 1 Cor. 9. c. d. e.) and so again distinctly of κανὼν (Note g) the white line, which bounded or marked out the path, or race. To this the Apostle here referres, making his Apostleship or preaching of the Gospel to be his spirituall exercise, or running as it were in a race, his ἐν τῷ δρόμῳ, and then the province or diocese to which he is by God design'd, and sent to preach, is his μέτρον τοῦ κανόνος ἐμέτρησεν αὐτῷ ὁ Θεὸς, the compasse, or stage of ground, which by that white line in the race, as 'twere, God hath mark'd out to him, to run in, and contend, and obtain his prize. Beyond or out of which line he that runs, or pretends to have to doe, he doth καυχήσεται εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα, boast without his measure, and ὑπερεκτείνεται overextend himself, v. 14.

d. Μέτρον τοῦ κανόνος

Καυχήσεται εἰς τὰ ἄμετρα

V. 14. Come as farre] That the word φθάνειν is Agonistycall also, see Note on Rom. 9. l. and so constantly it signifies coming foremost to the goale, or being foremost in the running toward it; and so it signifies here, preaching the Gospel among the Corinthians, before any body else had been there, for as it is said, 1 Cor. 3. 6. Paul planted, that is, first brought the Gospel among them.

e. Φθάνειν

V. 16. Another mans line] The ἀλλότριος κανὼν is that province which some body else hath undertaken; the κανὼν, as before, denoting the line by which his race was terminated, and the ἀλλότριος referring to the custome in the stadia forementioned, that each of the racers had his path, where he was to run, chalk'd out to him, and if one did step over into the others path, he did ὑπερεκτείνεσθαι, extend himself (or run) over his line. In reference to this the Apostle here saith, that he had some hope that he might μεγαλυνθῆς εἰς περισσείαν, enlarge his course in length, as it were, by running farther then the goale that was first set him, that is, goe farther in preaching the Gospel, and yet not goe over his line, that is, not run over into the others mans path or race, but κατὰ κανόνα ἡμῶν, keep within his own white, or line, which divided his province from other mens on the other side of him.

For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit which ye have not received, or another Gospel which ye have not accepted, ye might † well bear with him.] shake the whole foundation of your religion, promise you more extraordinary, miraculous, spirituall gifts, then those which from us you have received, and in summe preach another Gospel to you, then you may give me leave (it being more then time) to magnifie my self, and expostulate with you whether they come to you (or any one of them) with such authority as I come, or whether there be any appearance or shew of reason why you should preferre them before me.

my language hath nothing extraordinary in it, yet ſure nothing can be objected againſt my skill, my explaining the myſteries of the Goſpel (ſee note on 1 Cor. 1. c.) but in our preaching and behaviour toward you, we are acknowledged by all men not to come ſhort of any other Apoſtle in any piece of knowledge or revelation uſefull for you.

7. Sure it ought not to be eſteemed a fault in me (and yet I have been guilty of no other that might make me vile in your eyes) that I have ſo much tendred your advantages, and ſo little mine own, that all my preaching among you hath put you to no kind of charge.

7. Have I committed an offence in abaſing my ſelf that you might be exalted, becauſe I have preached to you the Goſpel of God freely?]

8, 9. Nay I have been beholden to other Churches, receiving proviſion from them, that I might preach freely to you: And when I fell ſhort at my being with you, and had not wherewithall to ſupply my wants, yet I made not my wants known, I troubled none of you to make it up, but as ſometimes I laboured with my hands, & earned my living, 1 Cor. 4.12. and 9.6. ſo at other times I received ſupply from the Philippians, Phil. 4. 15, 16. as they came from Macedonia, and ſo have neither yet put you to any charge, nor mean I ever to doe ſo.

8. I robbed other Churches, taking wages of them, to doe you ſervice.

9. And when I was preſent with you, and wanted, b I || was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me, the brethren which came from Macedonia ſupplied: and in all things I have kept my ſelf from being burdenſome to you, and ſo will keep my ſelf.]

11. Wherefore? becauſe I love you not? God knoweth.]

12. But the only cauſe of my reſolution, which I will keep ſtedfaſtly, is this, that they that would fain find ſome fault with me, and magnifie themſelves before me, may not find any ground of doing ſo, but rather find me before them, and have ſomewhat to imitate in me, in that very particular wherein they think they exceed me.

14. And no marvell, for Satan himſelf is transformed into an Angel of light.]

15. And therefore 'tis not any thing ſtrange, if ſeducing hereticks imployed by him do imitate the actions of the Apoſtles of Chriſt; but according to the hypocriſie of their actions ſo ſhall their ends be.

15. Therefore it is no great thing, if his miniſters alſo be transformed as the miniſters of righteouſneſſe, whoſe end ſhall be according to their works.]

16. There will be no great reaſon that this my glorying ſhould make you count me imprudent: or if it doe, 'tis no great matter, I will venture that rather then ſuffer ſycophants to ſeduce and corrupt you.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Ἡρμοσάμην γὰρ ἀνδρί

V. 2. Espoused you to one husband] The Vulgar seems to have read these words ἡρμοσάμην ὑμᾶς ἑνὶ ἀνδρὶ, with a comma after them, and accordingly render them despondi vos uni viro, I have espoused you to one husband, according to that of * Julius Pollux, ὁ δὲ πνυθόμενος ἐγγυᾶ, ἁρμόζει, ὅταν τινὸς τῶν πολλῶν ἁρμοσθῇ ἡ μνηστὴ ἐκδιδοῦ, making ἐγγυᾶν espouse all one with ἁρμόζειν. So in Cinnamus l. 4. p. 228. τούτῳ ἁρμόζεται, he married her. But the more probable punctation is by reading it without any comma, till after παρασῆσαι, and then the notion of the word ἁρμόζειν must be taken from that use of the word which is agreeable to the office of the ἁρμοσταὶ, or ἁρμόσυνοι, among the Lacedæmonians. Among the magistrates of that city those were two prime names, and between them some slight difference. The ἁρμοσταὶ were a kind of provincial Rulers (placed by * Nic. Cragius among the μέγισται ἀρχαὶ the prime magistrates of that city) sent to govern the provinces, or confederate cities, and preserve them in their fidelity, and were, saith † Ulpian, so called διὰ τὸ ἁρμόζειν τὰ ἤθη τῶν πολιτῶν τοῖς τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, because they conformed the manners of the citizens to those of the Lacedæmonians, for so ἁρμόζειν signifies to adapt, or conform. So saith Phavorinus out of Eratosthenes, ἁρμοσταὶ, οἱ ὑπὸ Λακεδαιμονίων εἰς τὰς ὑπηκόους πόλεις ἀρχοντες ἐκπεμπόμενοι, the governours that are sent by the Lacedæmonians to the cities under them. These are by Hesychius call'd ἁρμοστῆρες, by * Plutarch σωφρονισταὶ, in the same sense that the Athenians Ἐπίσκοποι and Φύλακες, Overseers and Guardians. From whence it is that † Theophrastus observes that the Lacedæmonians sending magistrates to the provinces, style them much more commodiously ἁρμοστὰς, then the Athenians doe Ἐπισκόπους and Φύλακας. From whence also it is that in the Christian Church the antient author that goes under the name of Dionysius Areopagita, calls Bishops ἁρμοστάς. But then the Ἁρμόσυνοι (which seem more peculiarly to belong to the use of the word in this place) were a peculiar sort of governours, which had to doe with the education of women, especially for the forming of their lives and manners, and breeding of them, (as among the Athenians γυναικονόμοι,) from the Verb ἁρμόζεσθαι, because they were set over them to fit and order their manners, and make them regular and harmonicall, a kind of Censors of manners among them. So saith Hesychius and Phavorinus in the same words, Ἁρμόσυνον ἀρχή τις ἐν Λακεδαίμονι ὀπὶ τῆς εὐκοσμίας τῶν γυναικῶν, twas an office in Lacedæmon to bring up and breed women. And this is the notion of ἡρμοσάμην here, I am your ἁρμόσυνος (see Tit. 2. 2.) set over your congregation, as he over a single virgin, to breed and fit you, that I may present you to Christ a pure virgin, &c.

V. 9. I was chargeable] κατενάρκησα, saith S. Jerome * ad Algasiam, is a Cilician word; the full meaning of it here will be judged by that which Ælian saith of the fish called νάρκη, the torpedo, Ὀιχθὺς ἡ νάρκη, ὅτι ἂν περιάψηται, τὸ ἐξ ἀπῆ ὄνομα ἔδωκέ τε, καὶ νάρκᾶν ἐποίησεν, the torpedo fish whatsoever it toucheth, it gives it its own name, makes it to be benumm'd. Now they which ask any thing of another, are proverbially said to do that which the torpedo doth, to give a chilness, or numness. Molestum verbum est & onerosum, Rogo, saith Seneca, asking, or begging, is very troublesome and burthensome; and therefore καταναρκᾶν, which literally signifies to chill or benumme (& so in Theocritus Idyll. 7.

νάρκασιν ἀνιηρῇσι δεδοίκη)

doth in respect of this consequent signifie to ask, or intreat; and so here ὃ κατενάρκησα ἀδενὸς, I begged, or asked, of no man, I importuned no man.

b. Κατενάρκησα * Qu. 1. c.

V. 24. Fourty stripes save one] Of this punishment of S. Pauls these four things are to be observed: 1. that S. Paul, as a Roman, was not to be whipp'd Ex Lege Portia, and therefore Act. 22. 24. when the Tribune had commanded him to be beaten thus, understanding he was a Roman, he dismis's'd him, and was afraid, saith S. Luke, because he had bound him; 2dly, that he was yet subject, as a Jew, to the lawes of the Jewes, which were yet in force, and so was subjected to this Jewish punishment, as a Jew; 3dly, that he was dealt with as a robustious offender, in suffering so oft the utmost extremity of the Jewish law, when they that were weak, or which upon any other score had any mitigation, were not used so severely; according to that of Maimonides Hil. Sanhedrim c. 17. They inflict, saith he, no more then fourty stripes, though he be as strong as Samson, but if he be weak, they abate of that number; 4thly, that that summe of thirty nine was the solemne proportion in the Jewish punishments, when they were most severely inflicted. So in Josephus, of one that had accused his wife fallsly of the losse of her virginity before marriage, ἐκτινέτω πληγὰς τεσσαράκοντα μιᾶς λιπούσας λαμβάνων, let him extend himself and receive 39 stripes. For when the number which might not be exceeded was by the Law defined to be fourty, Deut. 25. 3. and when the custome was taken up of executing this punishment with a rod of three branches, and so of giving three strokes at one blow (or, as it is in Maccoth c. 3. §. 12. with one twisted cord, unto which two more were fastened) every stroke consequently going for three, (as Maimonides affirms in Sanhedr. c. 17. §. 2.) it was consequently impossible to inflict more stripes then thirty nine, unlesse they exceeded to two and forty, and so that of thirty nine was the last among those that were lawfull. See Talmud Babyl. in Maccoth cap. 3. As for the beating with rods which followes,

c. Τεσσαρεσκαιδεκάτῳ παρὰ μίαν

ver. 25. that differs from this of the ſcourging, the ῥάβδοι rods being wands or cudgels, a bundle of which was carried before the Roman Conſul, and he that carried them call'd ῥαβδοῦχος, which makes it probable that this was a Roman ſort of puniſhment, and ſo here differenced from the ſcourging with twiſted cords, which was ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων inflicted by the Jewes (ſee Note on Lu. 23. b.) howſoever ſo much diſtinguiſh'd from the other, as rods and ſcourges differ.

d. βυθὸς V. 25. In the deep] To what paſſage of S. Pauls ſtory this of his being a day and a night ἐν τῷ βυθῷ in the deep doth belong, cannot be ſhewed out of Scripture. 'Tis not altogether improbable what Beda l. quæſt. qu. 3. tit. 8. ſaith out of Theodorus Tarſenſis, that in Cyzicum (which is in the Propontis, a famous city) there is a priſon, which for the depth of it under ground is called βυθὸς, or the bottome of the ſea, a moſt noyſome filthy priſon, as in Athens there was one called βάραθρον hell, at Syracuſe Λατομία the minerall, and many the like in other places; ſee Suidas in the word Βάραθρον. Into this as a moſt infamous priſon S. Paul might well be caſt, paſſing from Troas to that city, though S. Luke, who reports not things particularly, ſave when he himſelf was preſent, make no mention of it. And indeed whatſoever elſe may be meant by the word βυθὸς, S. Luke ſeems not to have made mention of this paſſage, there being no reaſon to apply that of Act. 27. to it, the Epiſtle being written before that time, in the compaſſe of the Macedonian progreſſe, Act. 20. 1. and if it might be conceived to be written after it, that would more reaſonably be defined to be one of his three ſhipwracks foregoing here. Theophylact ſpeaks of ſome that interpreted it of a well, called βυθὸς, profundity, becauſe of the great depth of it, wherein after his danger at Lyſtra he hid himſelf.

e. Aretas V. 32. Aretas] The Gaſſanii reigned in Syria ſome ſay 400, others 600 years; many of them were called Harethi, or Aretæ, which is the name of the King here. See Mr Pocockes notes on Gregorius Abul Faraiius his ſtory of the Arabians p. 77, 78.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XII.

1. But I ſhall give over theſe things, for if I ſhould goe on in it, I ſhould then come to mention the viſions and revelations which I have had from God.

1. * IT is not expedient for me doubtleſſe, to glory; † I will come to viſions and revelations of the Lord.]

* But it is † for I ſhall come

a. 2. I know one that was tranſported in a viſion by the Spirit of Chriſt; that is, I my ſelf about fourteen years paſt was in an extaſie, Act. 22. 18. ſuch an one that I am not able to ſay whether I were bodily removed, and carried to the third heaven, the place of Gods glorious reſidence, or whether only in a viſion ſuch repreſentations were made to me remaining upon the earth.

2. * I knew [a] a man in Chriſt above fourteen years agoe, (whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth: ſuch a one) †caught up to the third heaven.]

* I know † ſnatcht as farr as

3. I ſay, I know not which of theſe it was, God only knows.

3. And I knew ſuch a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell, God knoweth)]

4. But whether bodily, or in viſion, me thought I was in the higheſt heaven ver. 2. here called paradiſe in reſpect of the joyes that dwell there, and had ſuch revelations made to me by an Angel from God, as were wonderfull to conſider, but which I was forbidden to declare to others.

4. How that he was caught up into paradiſe, and heard unſpeakable words, which is not lawfull for a man to utter.]

5. And though I have this abundant matter of glorying, yet ſhall I not make uſe of it any farther, or more plainly, but boaſt only of my ſufferings for Chriſt.

5. Of ſuch a one will I glory, yet of my ſelf I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.]

6. For if I would ſpeak of this, I juſtly might, for it is moſt certainly true: but I will ſay no more of this ſubject, for I deſire not to put men into any other opinion of me, then what they have from thoſe more viſible evidences, my ordinary conſtant actions, or words.

6. For though I would deſire to glory, I ſhall not be a fool; for I will ſay the truth: but now I forbear, leſt any man ſhould think of me above * that which he ſeeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.]

* what he ſees me, or hears any thing from me, ὁ βλέπει με ἢ ἀκούει τι ἐξ ἐμοῦ

b. 7. And indeed after I had theſe high tranſcendent revelations, that I might not be elevated with them, a ſharp affliction was ſent me in mercy by God, but inflicted on me by Satan and ſome inſtruments of his, who dealt very roughly with me, beat me, impriſoned me, ſcourged me (ſee Chryſoſt. Epiſt. 15. to. 7. p. 101. lin. 40.) and this was by God deſigned to keep me humble.

7. And leſt I ſhould be exalted above meaſure through the † abundance of revelations, there was given to me [b] a thorn * in the fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan to buffet me, leſt I ſhould be exalted above meaſure.]

† height * to-σκολοψ

8. And I earneſtly prayed to God to be delivered from it.

8. For this thing I beſought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.]

9. And the onely anſwer I received was this, It is enough for thee that what I doe is for thy good; afflictions are the means to doe the Chriſtian moſt good, the greater the preſſures are, the more viſible is the perfection of the divine aſſiſtance, or, the more thy perſecutions are, the more is the Goſpel propagated by thee (Theophylact:) nay afflictions therefore are the things I rejoice in (ſee Heb. 3. a.) more then any thing, even then revelations themſelves, as the means by which the power of Chriſt and his preſence may appear more viſibly upon me (ſee note on Rom. 9. b.) then by any other means it could, even in as glorious a manner as that wherein God exhibited himſelf in the Ark.

9. And he ſaid unto me, My † grace is ſufficient for thee; for my ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſſe. Moſt gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Chriſt may * reſt upon me.]

† favour * inhabit

10. This therefore of diſeaſes, and afflictions, and reproaches, and perſecutions for Chriſt, is a thing with which I am perfectly pleaſed, I have nothing of exception againſt them; for in time of afflictions the ſtrength of Chriſt is more eminently viſible in me, the heavier the preſſures are, the greater ſupports I have from him; or, the more I ſuffer for, the more Proſelytes I gain to, it (Theophylact.)

10. Therefore I take pleaſure in infirmities, in reproaches, in neceſſities, in perſecutions, in diſtreſſes for Chriſts ſake: for when I am weak, then am I ſtrong.]

11. You ſee how vain I am in boaſting; yet your calumnies have made it neceſſary for me to doe ſo: For ſure I have done and ſuffered as much as any the moſt valued Apoſtle, though indeed I have no reaſon to have any opinion of my ſelf for all this.

11. I am become a fool in glorying, ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefeſt Apoſtles, though I be nothing.]

12. Truly

12. Truly the signes of an Apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signes, and wonders, and mighty deeds.]

12. If patience of whatsoever sufferings for the Gospels sake, if working of miracles of all kinds be able to testifie a man to be sent and authorized by Christ, (as beyond all other things that is most proper to doe it) then sure it doth appear that I am an Apostle, in despite of my calumniators.

13. For what is it * wherein ye were inferior to other Churches, except it be that I my self † was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.]

* wherein you have received diminution more then the rest of the Churches ὅ ἐστιν ἧττον ἔχετε ὑπὲρ τὰς λοιπὰς.

† did not importune you, see 6. 11. 9.

13. For there is no Church that hath had more pains taken among them, more gifts bestowed for the building them up, more of any thing that is needfull, then ye have had from me: the onely thing wherein ye differ from others is, that all hath been done without any charge of yours, without my asking or receiving any thing from you: and if this be a wrong, you will easily, I suppose, forgive it me.

14. Behold the third time I am ready to come to you, and I will not be burdensome to you, for I seek not yours, but you; for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.]

14. I have now made a third resolution (see c. 1. 16.) to come shortly among you, and I will doe it without putting you to any charge, for I covet not your possessions, but your salvation, and as a parent I desire to doe all manner of good to you, and to receive none from you.

15. And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you, though the more abundantly I love you the lesse I be loved.]

15. And I will offer up my self most chearfully for the good of your souls, exhaust all the small goods I have, and venture even my life for you, and never be discouraged, though as my love and the effects thereof encrease toward you, so yours lessen toward me.

16. But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless being crafty, I caught you with guile.]

16. But it is by some among you suggested against me, that although I never received any pay from you for the preaching the Gospell, yet I have cunningly and under-hand gotten a great deal from you.

17. Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?]

18. † I desired Titus, and with him I sent * a brother; did Titus make † a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?]

18. I perswaded Titus to come to you (see c. 9. 5.) and sent Luke along with him; did Titus or the other make any kind of gain of you? did he defraud you of ought? did not he behave himself just after the same manner as I had done before?

19. * Again, think you that we † excuse our selves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: but we doe all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.]

19. Do not think, as formerly ye have done, that what I thus say is spoken largely, as to take off the objections which you have against me, by some fair specious colours and excuses. No, in the sight of God I speak the very perfect truth, and would not say it for my own sake, were it not, in probability, to tend to your good, to take you off (by my giving this account of my self) from the factious courses, which through admiration of others mens persons ye are engaged in.

20. For I fear, lest when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not; lest there be debates, * envyings, wraths, strifes, back-bitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults;]

* emulations ζῆλοι

20. For I would fain prevent what I see too probable, that when I come to you, we shall neither of us be much pleased at the meeting; not I with you, seeing you seduced and corrupted, nor you with me, when I shall be forced to inflict censures upon you; I mean, lest these sparks of faction and division, that are among you, break out into flames;

21. And lest when I come again my God will humble me among you, and that I shall bewaile many that have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanesse, and fornication, and lasciviousnesse which they have committed.]

21. And I be forced to exercise severity among you, to inflict censures on many of those who had formerly offended, and been warn'd, (if not punish'd) by my former Epistle, and have not yet reformed and forsaken those base unnaturall sins to which the heathen idol-feasts had betray'd them. See note on 1 Cor. 5. c. and 2 Cor. 2. b. and c. 13. 2.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. Ἄνθρωπος ἐν Χριστῷ.

V. 2. A man in Christ] What ἄνθρωπος ἐν Χριστῷ, a man in Christ, here signifies may possibly be guess'd by other phrases of the same making; such is that of Saint Luke, Act. 12. 11. where 'tis said of Peter, γενόμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ, being in himself, that is, having been formerly in a trance, and now return'd out of it; and that is call'd being in himself: such that Revel. 1. 10. ἐγενόμην ἐν πνεύματι, I was in the spirit that is, I was in a trance or ecstasie, and there received a vision, or revelation from God: such Mar. 1. 23. ἄνθρωπος ἐν πνεύματι ἀκαθάρτῳ, and the same again c. 5. 2. A man in an unclean spirit, that is, one agitated with a diabolical spirit, rapt and carried to doe things which of himself he would never doe. And accordingly here a man in Christ, may be one that by the spirit of Christ was thus transported, received Revelations from Christ, and therefore v. 1. there is mention of visions and revelations, of which this is here an instance, and so v. 7. And all the circumstances of the Context incline to this interpretation. And this is the importance of the ἔκστασις ecstasie (see note on Mark 3. c.) being out of himself, transported either by a good or evill spirit; when by a good, it signifies a prophetick vision, when by a bad, a kind of madnesse, as in the Dæmoniacks, (though the word is no where in the New Testament used of them) and both contrary to the being ἐν ἑαυτῷ in himself, moved onely by that humane principle of reason, &c. which he hath within him, neither φερόμενος, nor δαιμονιοφερόμενος, carried by God, nor the devill.

b. Σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκί

V. 7. A thorn in the flesh] What this σκόλοψ τῇ σαρκὶ thorn to the flesh here signifies will be best guess'd from Ezech. 28. 24. where the pricking brier and grieving thorn is set to signifie a sore affliction, to wound and torment; from the despisers, as it there follows, or persecuters of Israel. And so it will here signifie no more but a sad and sharp affliction, inflicted on Saint Paul (saith Irenæus l. 4. the last ch. and Theodoret and Theophylact on the place) by some followers of Simon Magus, that is, the Gnosticks.

CHAP. XIII. Paraphrase.

1. a This is the third time I am coming to you; in the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.]

1. I am now this third time about to come among you, (see c. 12. 14.) and this is my solemn second admonition by Epistle, which if it be not obeyed, will certainly bring censures upon you at my coming.

a. 2

2. I gave you a ſolemn warning in my former Epiſtle, which was of the ſame force as if I had been perſonally with you, and behold now I doe ſo again; and though I am ſtill abſent, yet this Epiſtle is to ſupply the place of my perſonall preſence, and therefore I doe now ſolemnly write, and denounce, both to thoſe that had then ſinn'd, and have not wrought any full reformation, and to all others that have ſince been drawn into ſuch irregular courſes, that with all ſuch I will proceed ſeverely at my coming among you.

2. I told you before, and * foretell you as if I were preſent the ſecond time, and being abſent now I write to them which heretofore have ſinned, and to all other, that if I come again, I will not ſpare:]

* foretell you the ſecond time, as if I were preſent προείρηκα καὶ προλέγω τῷ παρεῖναι με δεύτερον

3. And this I ſhall doe the rather, becauſe you are ſo high, as to call my commiſſion for Apoſtleſhip into queſtion, and to require me to prove that what I ſpeak or doe is from Chriſt; when by that which hath been done already, by miracles and other evidences, it is moſt manifeſt, that Chriſt hath expreſs'd himſelf to ſpeak to you by me, and ſo to own the doctrine I teach, and the authority I pretend to among you.

3. Since ye ſeek a proof of Chriſt ſpeaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty † in you.]

† among in

4. For as Chriſt appeared to be a weak and frail man in being crucified, but was evidenced to be omnipotent God by his reſurrection; ſo I alſo may appear weak and a meer ordinary man, fit to be deſpiſed and contemned by you, (as you look upon me in my ſelf, and in reſpect of the afflictions which have been, and are upon me) but yet I ſhall ſhew that I am an Apoſtle of Chriſt, armed with commiſſion and power from God, which I have already both by preaching and miracles, and ſhall farther by cenſures upon the contumacious, evidence unto and among you.

4 For though he was crucified through weakneſſe, yet he liveth by the power of God: for we alſo are weak * in him, but we ſhall live with him by the power of God tow rd you.]

* or with him, for the Kings Ma. 16 adds ſyr

5. Make triall by what you pleaſe, whether I am not an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and have planted Chriſt among you, taught you the true faith. Have there not been ſuch evidences of my Apoſtleſhip c. 12. 12. ſuch aſſurances of Chriſts giving me authority of his preſence among you in my miniſtery, that you your ſelves cannot chuſe but acknowledge it? yes certainly there are, if you are not the moſt ſenſleſſe wretched perſons in the world, the moſt unfit for God to approve, or wink at.

b. 5. Examine your ſelves whether ye be in the faith, prove your own ſelves: † know ye not your own ſelves, how that [b] Jeſus Chriſt is * in you, † except ye be reprobates?]

† Doe ye not diſcern your ſelves? Οὐ ἐπιγινώσκετε ἑαυτούς * among in † truly if in ſome meaſure ye doe not, ye are reprobates, εἰ μὴ τι ἄρα ἀδόκιμοί ἐς

6. But whatever you are your ſelves, or whatever ye think of me, you ſhall find, I doubt not, that I am not diſapproved by Chriſt, but abundantly owned by him.

6. But I truſt that ye ſhall know that we are not reprobates.]

7. Now I pray God to preſerve you from every evil way, from all corruption or ſeduction, not that I may have occaſion to approve my Apoſtolical power among you, by puniſhing offenders, but that you may live like Chriſtians, whatſoever opinion you have of me.

7. Now I pray to God that ye doe no evil, not that we ſhould appear approved, but that ye ſhould doe that which is honeſt, though we be as reprobates.]

8. For though we have no ability to doe any thing, in caſe we ſhould ſet our ſelves againſt Chriſt and his Goſpel, yet in defence of it we are able to doe ſomewhat by his aſſiſtance and bleſſing; or, we have no power or authority to puniſh thoſe who do not offend, or if we do, God cooperates not with us in that act, (Theophylact.)

8. For we can doe nothing againſt the truth, but for the truth.]

9. And in this ſenſe the weaker we are, that is, the even your || perfection.]

|| knitting together; ſee note c.

leſs ſevere, the leſs proofs we give of our Apoſtolical power, the better we are pleaſed, and the ſtronger, that is, the more innocent and blameleſs, ye keep your ſelves; having no delight in inflicting cenſures on offenders, but much rejoiced to ſee your innocence: and there is nothing that we more deſire, then that you be made up into ſuch a form or frame which ſhall be acceptable in Gods ſight, or that ye live together in communion, undivided, ſee note c. no one of you being broken off by excommunication,

9. For we are glad when we are weak, and ye are ſtrong; and this alſo we wiſh,

10. And that is the reaſon of my giving you theſe wholſome warnings before I come, that when I come I may not proceed to exciſion (according to the authority given me by Chriſt) but deal with you according to that milder way of inſtruction, not of excommunication, which is to take place among contumacious offenders, ſuch as I deſire not to find you at my coming.

10. Therefore I write theſe things being abſent, leſt being preſent I ſhould uſe ſharpneſſe, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to deſtruction.]

c. 11. And now I take my leave of you, beſeeching God's bleſſing upon you, and I pray, be ye carefull to keep together in the united profeſſion of the ſame faith, and if there fall out any thing croſſe among you, ſupport it cheerfully, be all mutually kind and peaceable without any diviſions or ſchiſmes among you: And that is the way to have that God, who ſo much values, and ſo ſtrictly commands love and peace among all, to be for ever among you by his grace.

11. Finally, brethren, farewell: * c be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace ſhall be with you.]

* be knit together

12. Greet one another from me with all kindneſſe, ſee Rom. 16. c.

12. Greet one another with an holy kiſſe.]

13. All the Chriſtians here ſend you greeting.

13. All the ſaints ſalute you.]

The ſecond Epiſtle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Luke.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. V. 1. This is the third time] In the method preſcribed by Chriſt to prepare for the cenſures of the Church, Mat. 18. 15. there is a threefold admonition; the firſt by one man alone, the injured perſon (if it be a matter of that nature) going and reproving him: And if that doe not ſucceed, then take with thee ἔτι farther (or over and above) one or two, that in the mouth of one or two witneſſes every word may be eſtabliſhed, that is, that the thing which thou layeſt to his charge, be ſo confirmed (according to that of Joh. 8. 17. The teſtimony of two men is true, that is, (ἀληθὴς, true in the ſenſe of πιστὸς) fit to be credited, of ſufficient authority in law to be heeded, and proceeded upon) that by the teſtimony of theſe, as of witneſſes, he may be convinced, and no longer able to deny the fact, as Heb. 6. 16. an oath is ſaid to be εἰς βεβαίωσιν, for eſtabliſhing, or confirmation, as being ἀντιλογίας πέρας, an end of contradicting, that is, of affirming and denying.

ἐν στόματι δύο ἢ τριῶν

Βεβαίωσιν Ἀντιλογίας πέρας

The

The thing so establish'd (βεβαιωθὲν or σαθὲν) by oath, cannot longer be denied, or the parties deniall will not stand him in any stead. Or secondly, that the offendor may by authority of these be induced (as the judge is on the accused person, Deut. 19. 15. Heb. 10. 28.) to give sentence on himself, and so think fit to reform what he is admonish'd of. Now that this place distinctly referres to this part of discipline, this second admonition, appears most probable by his reciting of the very words in the institution, In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established; and proportionable to that, προείρηκα καὶ προλέγω, I foretold and foretell, which notes the first and second admonition. And though there precede a τρίτον ἔρχομαι, I come to you this third time, yet that referres evidently to this his third resolution personally to appear among them, c. 12. v. 14. having resolved it twice already, and before that time comes, this second Epistle is to supply the place of a second admonition, as his first had been a first. And so the words will be rendred thus, Προείρηκα καὶ προλέγω δεύτερον, I have foretold, or admonished, you once in my first Epistle, and doe now so again the secoad time, and both those ὡς παρὼν, as present; these Epistolarie warnings being to have the same force with them, as if he were present among them. And if this method, answerable to the first and second admonition instituted by Christ, doe not prevail with you, then that which remains is, that he proceed to censures, and that he is resolved to doe, οὐ φείσομαι, I will not spare. Where the Apostolical power which he had over them, maketh it improper for him to proceed to any third admonition, that of telling it to the Church, in S. Matthew. So Bishop Titus is appointed to deal with an heretick, After the first and second admonition reject him, Tit. 3. 10. without any third degree intervening, immediately to proceed to censures.

b. V. 5. Jesus Christ is in you] That Christs being among them signifies the presence and power of the Gospel among the Corinthians, or in their Church through S. Pauls Apostleship, may appear, not only by the Context, which wholly looks that way, but by that place Exod. 17. 7. to which these words seem to referre; where the tempting contumacious Israelites, after all the signes and miracles shewed among them, doe still remain infidel, and ask in these very words εἰ Θεὸς ὁ κύριος ἐν ἡμῖν is the Lord among us, or no? So that the meaning of the Apostles question here is, Many miracles of Christ and his Spirit have been wrought among you by me, so that if you doe not yet believe that I am an Apostle of Christ, and so that Christ is among you, you are sure of the number of those Israelites, who after so many miracles, still required more signes, or of the Pharisees, who did the same, Mar. 8. 11. which being put in form of a question, Discern you not that Christ Jesus is among you? the answer is in the next words, εἰ μή τι ἄρα ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε, which cannot be more distinctly and literally rendred then thus, Εἰ μή τι (referring to the ὅτι γινώσκετε precedent) if ye doe not, that is, if ye doe not discern it, in some degree, ἄρα ἀδόκιμοί ἐστε, doubtlesse ye are reprobates, senslesse, obdurate persons, most impious, and uncapable of faith, or any thing that is good. What the notion of ἀδόκιμοι is, hath been formerly mentioned. See Note on Rom. 1. g.

c. V. 11. Be perfect] The proper original notion of the word καταρτίζειν is to compact or knit together, either members in a body, or parts in a building. Thus it is applied to a building, Exod. 15. 17. κατοικητήριον ὃ κατηρτίσω the place which thou hast made for thee to dwell in; and to walls, Ezra 4. 13, 16. to a body, Psal. 40. 6. σῶμα κατηρτίσω μοι a body thou hast framed, or compacted, for me. From hence it doth more largely signifie to prepare, or make ready, in the same kind as builders doe fit one part to another, and make it ready for use; and so again to corroborate and strengthen, as that which is well compacted and knit together is made strong by that means; and lastly to perfect, as the building of an house is the perfecting of it, especially in the passive voice, because that which is compacted and built is perfected and completed by that means. Answerable to these severall notions is the Glossarie of Hesychius, Καταρτίσαι (not, as it is corruptly read, καταρτύσαι) κατασκευάσαι, πλεκῶσαι, στερεῶσαι, the word signifies to prepare, to perfect, to strengthen or corroborate. In the New Testament the word is variously used. but so as will by the circumstances of the Context be appliable to one or more of these three notions. Mat. 4. 21. and Mar. 1. 19. it is applied to the mending of the fishers nets, knitting them together, and so either strengthning, or preparing them for use; Mat. 21. 16. κατηρτίσω αἶνον (in reference to the childrens Hosannahs or testimonies of Christ) Thou hast out of their mouths compacted, or made up, or made ready, a song of praise, or confession, or testimony; Lu. 6. 40. Every servant shall be κατηρτισμένος made up, perfected, fitted for his crown, after the same manner as his master Christ is. So 1 Thess. 3. 10. καταρτίσαι ὑστερήματα, to make up, or perfect, or repair, defects, and Heb. 13. 21. καταρτίσαι ὑμᾶς, perfect you, build you up, and so perhaps v. 9. of this chap. τὴν ὑμῶν κατάρτισιν, I pray for your being perfect in all goodnesse, as v. 7. I beseech God that you doe no evill. So Rom. 9. 22. vessels of wrath κατηρτισμένα εἰς ἀπώλειαν it signifies formed, or framed, or made fit. So Heb. 10. 5. out of the Septuagint of the Psalme, σῶμα κατηρτίσω μοι, a body thou hast framed me, and Heb. 11. 3. by faith we conceive καταρτίζεσθαι τοὺς αἰῶνας, that the ages of the world were framed, that is, the world created. But besides all these places, one sort more there is, wherein, by reason of the affinity between the Church of Christ, and a building or body, the word hath a peculiar signification to compact Christian people (the stones in the building, or the members in the body of the Church) together into a society, where they may live and publickly serve God together: and that either 1. by first forming those societies uniting men in the profession of the same truths, and performance of the same services; or 2dly, by recovering or restoring any that hath been broken off from the Church by any fault, or criminous commission, especially if he have been for that cause cut off by the Governours of the Church, that is, cast out by Ecclesiastical Censures; or 3dly, by reducing him that hath voluntarily broken himself off by schisme, &c. or 4thly, by Gods restoring peace and tranquillity to the Church. that they may thus freely meet together. In the first sense we have it Ephes. 4. 12. where he speaks of the severall offices ordained in the Church, and the first end which he assignes of so doing, is, πρὸς τὸν καταρτισμὸν τῶν ἁγίων, for the compacting of the saints, that is, for the holding the body of the Church together to frequent publick assemblies, &c. In the second sense 'tis clearly used Gal. 6. 1. where the spiritual, or Governours of the Church, are advised to indulgence and tenderneſse, not too much sharpneſse or severity toward offenders, or lapsed persons, and accordingly are appointed καταρτίζειν, to restore such an one in the spirit of meekneſse; that is, either by mild reprehension, and exhortation, to recover him to a sense and reformation of his fault, without proceeding to any sharper course, or else, in case of greater severity, to be soon mollified again toward him, to take off the censures of the Church from him. Which there appears not only by the evidence of the words themselves, but by the subsequent precept of bearing one anothers burthens, ver. 2. as that may be explained by a parallel place in Ignatius's Epistle to Polycarpus, where he bids him as a Bishop, τὰ ἀνάσσεως φρόντιζειν, καὶ πάντας βαστάζειν, καὶ πάντων ἀνέχεσθαι ἐν ἀγάπῃ, take care of the unity, (that is, the καταρτισμὸς here, the keeping whole Chriſts body, the Church) bear all, and ſuffer, or bear, with all in love. And ſo perhaps in this chapter καταρτισις ver. 9. may be the reſtoring of the laps'd offenders upon their ſincerity of reformation, or rather the continuing them in the communion of the Church, without need of having the cenſures inflicted upon them; for ſo it there follows, as the conſequent of his praying for their καταρτισιν, for which cauſe I write theſe things being abſent, that being preſent I may not ἀποτόμως χρῆσθαι, deal ſharply, or uſe excision: where κατάρτισις, making up, reſtoring, or keeping whole, may very fitly be rendred, as oppoſite to ἀποτομία, excision, the word ſet to denote the cenſures. Thus in Hippodamus the Pythagorean, in his book De Republ. preſcribing ſociety or meeting together of old and young, in order to preſervation of peace, and moderating all ſorts of affections, he addes, ἐπειδήπερ τοὶ μὲν νέοι δέονται σωφρονισμῦ καὶ καρτύσιος, becauſe young men need to be taught ſobriety, or moderation, and to have their exceſſes corrected and allayed, καρτύσιος, correction, ſaith the interpreter in Stobæus, p. 250. but that ſure not by way of puniſhment, for the φρατειαὶ and συνίνια, the friendly meetings and feaſts were no places of judicature, nor inſtituted to any ſuch like deſigne. but by way of exhortation or friendly advice, the elder to the yonger, who might have ſuch an authority with them καταρτύνειν (which is all one with καταρτίζειν) to ſettle, or accompliſh them bring them to a ſtaiedneſs and ſtability of temper. In the third ſenſe 'tis uſed 1 Cor. 1. 10. where ἦτε κατηρτισμένοι, their being knit, or compacted toge her, in the ſame mind, or opinion, is ſet oppoſite to having ſchiſmes among them, and contentions, v. 11. and ſo here καταρτίζεσθε, be ye knit together, is preparative to their being of the ſame mind, and having peace among them. In the fourth or laſt ſenſe it ſeems to be taken 1 Pet. 5. 10. where he prayes to God for the diſperſed Jew-Chriſtians, that after that ſhort time of ſufferings, God will αὐτὸς καταρτίσαι ὑμᾶς, himſelf, by his ſpecial providence, take care for them, and reſtore them halcyonian daies of peace, to ſerve him in the publick aſſemblies. Thus S. Ignatius (in his Epiſtle to the Smyrnæans, making a motion to them to ſend a congratulation into Syria, διὰ τὸ καλὰ θεὸν αὐτοῖς γενομένην αὐδίαν that they had a fair ſunſhine in reſpect of the ſervice of God) doth thus expreſſe it, ὅτι εἰρηνεύουσι, καὶ ἀπέλαβον τὸ ἴδιον μέγεθος, καὶ ἀπεκατεστάθη αὐτοῖς τὸ ἴδιον σωμάτιον, or σωματῶν, becauſe they have peace, and have received their own magnitude, and their own body is reſtored to them; where the ἴδιον μέγεθος, and the σωμάτιον, are the body of the Church meeting together in aſſemblies. which is there ſaid ἀποκαθίστασθαι to be reſtored, as here καταρτίζεσθε to be repaired, or made up, that is, reſtored to them. See Jude Note c.

Αποτόμως χρῆσθαι

V 14. Communion] What is the notion of κοινωνία for charity, or liberality, hath been formerly obſerved, Note on Act. 2. d. and 2 Cor 8. 4 And agreeably, though in a ſpiritual ſenſe, is κοινωνία πνεύματος, the communication of the Spirit here, the liberality of the holy Ghoſt in the plentifull effuſion of his gifts, ſo as it will be all one with δωρεὰ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the gift of the holy Spirit, Act. 2. 38. and ſo as will be moſt fit to joyn with χάρις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the grace, or charity, or liberality, of Chriſt, and the love of God (as in Cicero de Nat. Deor. l. 3. Dei gratia & charitas, Gods grace or favour, and charity or love, are put together) For thus is χάρις Χριστοῦ, the grace of Chriſt, uſed 2 Cor. 8. 9. and thus κοινωνία πνεύματος, the communication, of the Spirit, Phil. 2. 1. being joyned with σπλάγχνα and οἰκτιρμοὶ, bowels and mercies, that is, the evidences of the higheſt liberality.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE [a]GALATIANS.

THE time of the Apoſtles writing this Epiſtle to the Galatians is generally conceived to be near the time of that to the Romans An. Chr. 55. above 20. years after his converſion. Chryſoſtome and Theophylact ſet it before that: And then there can be no poſſibility of believing the ſubſcription of the Epiſtle, which affirms it to be written from Rome, where we know the Apoſtle had not been when he wrote his Epiſtle to the Romans. But although of the time of writing this Epiſtle we have no ſure evidence, yet two things we diſcern of it: firſt, That the chief deſigne of it was to vindicate the liberty of the Goſpel from the Judaical yoke, which by being by them impoſed upon all Gentiles which ſhould receive the faith, was likely to prove a great hinderance to the progreſſe of the Goſpel among the heathens, or uncircumciſion, of whom S. Paul profeſs'd to be the Apoſtle. Secondly, That they which in this Church preſs'd this yoke moſt eagerly, were thoſe which did not themſelves obſerve it, [a]heretical Chriſtians, the Gnoſticks, which were not themſelves circumciſed, as being many of them neither native Jewes, nor Proſelytes of their Covenant, yet, to avoid perſecution from the Jewes, did thus farre comply with them, in preſſing circumciſion upon the converted Gentiles; to which end they vehemently oppoſed S. Pauls doctrine and practice, affirming that what he had, he had received from the other Apoſtles, and conſequently was to be rectified by them, S. Peter, &c. and indeed that he varied from himſelf. From which calumnies he ſeverally vindicates himſelf in this Epiſtle, ſhewing that he received his doctrine from none but Chriſt himſelf, that thoſe other Apoſtles profeſs'd the ſame doctrine that he did, and that though he himſelf uſed a greater liberty at ſome times then at other, in reſpect of the advantages of the Church, yet his doctrine was alwaies the ſame, the truth of which he therefore confirms by many arguments. That theſe hereticks were, ſoon after the planting the Faith here, crept in among them, appears by his words, c. 1. 6. he marvels they were ſo ſoon removed, &c. The Goſpel having, ſome three years before, been there if not planted, yet confirmed by his preaching, Act. 18. 23. about the time of Apollos being at Corinth (that is, about An. Chr. 51, or 52.) as it is affirmed Act. 19. 1. Galatia and Phrygia being in the number of thoſe upper coaſts (of Aſia, or Natolia) which there he is ſaid to have paſt through. By which it appears how cloſe at the heels of the Apoſtles, that ſowed the good corn, the Gnoſticks, the officers of the envious man, follow'd, to ſow their darnel, as in Samaria firſt, ſo in the other cities and regions, where the Faith was planted by the Apoſtles, and oppoſed by the Jewes and perſecuted.

4. Who gave himſelf for our ſins, that he might deliver us from this †preſent evil world, according to the will of * God, and our Father:]

4. Whoſe dying for us was purpoſely deſigned to work a reformation, and mortification of ſin in us, and to take us off from the corrupt practices of the men of this age, both idolatrous Gentiles, and corrupt hypocritical Jewes, which, with a zeal to circumciſion, and the like Moſaical rites, live in all the impurity and impiety in the world; and wherein Chriſt hath done nothing but what is exactly according to the will and appointment of the eternal God, and father of us all, the God of Iſrael, whom the Jewes acknowledge, and profeſſe to worſhip.

* our God & father, τῷ Θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ ἡμῶν

5. To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

[a]through διὰ

6. I marvel that you are ſo ſoon removed from him that called you * into the grace of Chriſt, unto another Goſpel.]

6. Having ſo lately preached the Goſpel of Chriſt among you, Act. 18. 23. and thereby either confirmed, or firſt converted you to the faith, I wonder you ſhould ſo ſuddenly forſake thoſe infuſions you received from me, and remove quite from the truth of the Goſpel to a new ſtrange doctrine.

7. Which

7. Which indeed is farre from being another Goſpel, or doctrine of Chriſt, fit to come in competition with what I preached to you, farre from being taught, as is pretended, by other Apoſtles; Onely there are ſome Gentiles that had lived in Judæa, of the ſect of the Gnoſticks, ſuch as were at Philippi ch. 3. 3. teaching the Gentile converts that they muſt be circumciſed, not out of any principle of piety, or true zeal to the Moſaical law, but that they might curry favour with the Jewes, and avoid the preſſures that lay upon the Chriſtians, whoſe perſecutions were generally cauſed by them, and theſe doe quite pervert and change that doctrine that I delivered you from Chriſt.

7. Which is not another, but there be ſome that trouble you, and would pervert the Goſpel of Chriſt.]

8. And if any attempt to doe that, though it were I my ſelf, or even an Angel from heaven, I proclaim unto you mine opinion and Apoſtolical ſentence, that you are to diſclaim and renounce all communion with him, to look on him as on an excommunicated perſon, under the ſecond degree of excommunication, that none is to have any commerce with in ſacred matters.

8. But † though we, or an Angel from heaven, * preach any other Goſpel unto you then that which we have preached unto you, let him be † accurſed.]

† if even ἐὰν
* ſhall preach, for the King's MS reads εὐαγγελίσηται † anathema ἀνάθεμα ſee Rom. 9. 3.
* anathema v. 8.

9. And that ye may take more heed to what I ſay, I repeat it again, Whoſoever teaches you any new doctrine contrary to what I at firſt preach'd to you, let him be caſt out of the Church by you.

9. As we ſaid before, ſo ſay I now again, If any man preach any other Goſpel unto you than that ye have received, let him be * accurſed.]

b. 10. By this you may gueſſe whoſe doctrine is moſt to be heeded; theirs ſure that deſire not to get the favour of men, to avert the diſpleaſure of men, but to ſecure the favour of God, to approve themſelves to him: and I hope 'tis clear, that is my onely deſigne, and not theirs, who labour to propitiate the perſecuting Jewes, as by their new infuſions 'tis manifeſt your Gnoſtick teachers doe. This if I did, I muſt prof ſe, I ſhould not faithfully diſcharge the truſt repoſed in me by Chriſt; or, If I had had a mind to this, I had never turned Chriſtian, loſing thereby all my intereſts among the Jewes.

10. For doe I now b perſwade men, or God? or doe I ſeek to pleaſe men? for if I yet pleaſed men, I † ſhould not be the ſervant of Chriſt.]

† would not have been, οὐκ ἂν ἤμην

11. And whereas it is objected to me, that being none of Chriſts immediate retinue; I have received the Goſpel from men, and not from Chriſt, and therefore may be thought to have made ſome change in it, I now declare to you, that the Goſpel preach'd unto you by me hath a more then humane authority, and ſo is not to receive prejudice by the lateneſſe of my vocation.

11. But I certifie you, brethren, that the Goſpel which was preached of me is not * after man.]

* according to κατὰ

12. For as it is not pretended to be any tradition of the Jewes, nor taught me by my inſtructers in the Jewiſh religion v. 13. (which if it were, there were reaſon that now their verdict ſhould be taken in it) ſo it is evident that I had it not from thoſe that were Chriſtians and Apoſtles before me, but by call from heaven, and by immediate revelation from Chriſt, in oppoſition to that way that had been taught me among the Jewes.

12. For I neither received it of men, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt.]

13, 14. For ye cannot but have been told what I did, how I employed my ſelf when I was a Jew, that I was the moſt zealous perſecutor of Chriſtianity, and maintainer of the Jewiſh cuſtomes (and traditions, ſuperadded to the Law) of any man.

13. For ye have heard of my converſation in time paſs'd in the Jewes religion, how that beyond meaſure I perſecuted the Church of God, and waſted it;

14. And profited in the Jewes religion above † many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the tradition of my fathers.]

c. 15, 16. But when God, who had from an infant determined to make uſe of me, and to ſet me apart for his ſervice, had in his good time, Act. 9. actually called me, and that when I deſerved no ſuch dignity or favour from him, (nay when I was bloodily ſet on perſecuting Chriſtianity) and ſoon after that expreſſed his pleaſure by Ananias that I ſhould preach the Goſpell to the Gentiles, and gave me authority to doe ſo, Act. 9. 15. immediately I ſet about my work, not thinking it needfull for me, who had it from heaven, to receive my miſſion from any mortall man (ſee note on Mat. 16. e.)

15. But when it pleaſed God, who c ſeparated me from my mothers womb, and called me by his grace,

Or to goe up to Jeruſalem to Peter, James, &c. as to thoſe that were inſtated to that office before me, and conſequently might inſtruct me in the Chriſtian doctrine; but without applying my ſelf to any, after my miſſion from Chriſt, I went preſently from Damaſcus into Arabia, and after returned again to Damaſcus, Act. 9. 19. and there preach'd Chriſt in their ſynagogues, v. 20.

18. Then being in danger of treachery from the Jewes, I eſcaped their hands, Act. 9. 25. and I came to Jeruſalem v. 26. and was by Barnabas brought to Peter v. 27. and ſtai'd with him and in Jeruſalem fifteen daies v. 28. and this ſome three years after my converſion.

18. Then after three years I went up to Jeruſalem to ſee Peter, and abode with him fifteen daies.]

19. But beſide him I ſaw not any Apoſtle of the firſt rank, that is, of the twelve, no nor any of the other rank, ſave onely James the kinſman of Chriſt, who was Biſhop of Jeruſalem at that time, and ſo an Apoſtle of a ſecond rank (ſee note on Rom. 16. b.) though not one of the twelve, ſee note on ch. 2. a.

19. But other of the Apoſtles ſaw I none, ſave James the Lord's brother.]

20. Of the truth of all this that I ſay, I call God to witneſſe, (as in a matter of greateſt weight, on the belief of which the profitable diſcharge of my office, and reception of my labours very much dependeth)

20. Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God I lie not.]

21. After this I went (by admonition from God, Act. 22. 17, 18.) to Cæſarea which is in Syria, (ſee note on Mat. 16. c.) and thence to Tarſus (my native city in Cilicia Act. 22. 3.) Act. 9. 30.

21. Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia:]

22. And all this while I was not ſo much as known to the Churches of Judæa that had received the faith, that is, to thoſe other beſide that of Jeruſalem mentioned v. 18. 22. And was unknown by face unto the Churches of Judæa which were in Chriſt.]

23. All that they knew of me was, that they had heard of my preaching the Chriſtian doctrine, which I had perſecuted.

23. But they had heard onely that he which perſecuted us in times paſt, now preacheth the faith which once he deſtroyed.]

24. And they magnified the name of God for this mercy of his wrought in my converſion.

24. And they glorified God in me.]

a. Ἀδελφοὶ σὺν ἐμοὶ

V. 2. Brethren which are with me] The word ἀδελφοὶ brethren doth oft ſignifie no more then believers, Chriſtians; but here being joyned with Paul in the writing of the Epiſtle οἱ σὺν ἐμοὶ πάντες ἀδελφοὶ, all the brethren with me, it ſeems to denote thoſe that accompanied S. Paul in his travails, & aſſiſted him in the preaching of the Goſpel, ſuch as Timothy and Clemens Phil 4. 3. and the reſt, who are there called his fellow-labourers. Thus Phil. 4, 21. The brethren that are with me ſeem to ſignifie, being diſtinguiſh'd from πάντας ἁγίους all the Saints, v. 22. And thus in the Epiſtles to the Philippians and Coloſſians, Timothy is joyned with him in the Inſcription, and Silvanus and Timotheus both in the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians (and ſo the ſame probably here, or the like, though they be not named.) And ſo ὁ ἀδελφὸς the brother 2 Cor. 8. 18. and c. 12. 18. is thought to be either Silvanus or S. Luke, the conſtant companion of S. Paul for ſome time: And ſo our brethren 2 Cor. 8. 23.

b. πείθειν

V. 10 Perſwade] What πείθειν ἀνθρώπους, and Θεὸν, to perſwade men and God ſignifies, muſt be taken from the like phraſe in the Old Teſtament, 1 Sam. 24. 7. where the Greek hath theſe words, Ἔπεισε Δαβὶδ τοὺς ἄνδρας αὐτοῦ ἐν λόγοις, David perſwaded his men with words, where we read, David ſtai'd his ſervants with theſe words. The men that were with David were very eager to have him take the advantage againſt Saul, and kill him, v. 4. & were ready to riſe up againſt him to kill him, v. 7. & Davids ſpeech to them took them off from this bloody purpoſe, and that is expreſs'd by ἔπεισε perſwading them, appeaſing, pacifying them. Thus is it the office of a Rhetor, or advocate, πείθειν to perſwade, that is, to appeaſe the judge to the client whoſe cauſe is pleaded, to propitiate him. So Mat. 28. 14. If the Governour hear of it, that is, of the ſouldiers being ſo negligent, as to let Chriſt be ſtolne out of the grave which they were ſet to watch, πείσομεν αὐτὸν, we will perſwade him, that is, appeaſe him, obtain his pardon for you, and, as it followes, ὑμᾶς ἀμερίμνους ποιήσομεν, we will free you from all ſollicitude of ſecuring your ſelves from that heavy puniſhment that by the Roman Laws Martiall was due to the watch-man that fell aſleep. By which it is clear that πείθειν is to propitiate, or gain ones favour, to appeaſe wrath, or puniſhment, to avert diſpleaſure; and ſo it is here, to perſwade men, that is, to ſay, or teach thoſe doctrines which will avert the diſpleaſure of the perſecuting Jewes, which the Gnoſtick teachers did; and to perſwade God is to endeavour to ſay and preach that which may avert Gods wrath, be acceptable to him, obtain and ſecure his favour. And this is in the next words explained by ἀρέσκειν to pleaſe men, as that is contrary to, and unreconcileable with, the ſervice, or approving himſelf to God.

c. Ἀφορίζειν

V. 15. Separated me from my mothers wombe] Ἀφορίζειν to ſeparate in this place ſignifies in the ſame manner as Act. 13. 2. (ſpoken of this Apoſtle) a conſecration to the Apoſtolical office, onely with this difference, that there it is ſpoken of it as inſtantly to be performed by the miniſtry of men, here onely in the deſignation or decree of God, which is therefore ſaid to be ἐκ κοιλίας from the womb, to denote the no-contribution made by him toward this decree of giving him a commiſſion to be an Apoſtle, or the no-merit conſider'd in him by God, when he deſigned him to this office. This farther includes a purpoſe of God's to call him from heaven, in the midſt of his madneſſe againſt Chriſtians, (which mercy of God's to him was founded in his doing it ignorantly, 1 Tim. 1. 13.) and his foreſight that he would immediately convert upon that call; which two being firſt ſuppoſed (in God's eternal purpoſe and preſcience) it muſt needs follow to be an act of his unmerited free choice from all eternity, that God purpoſed to make uſe of him for the converting of others, who had himſelf been wonderfully changed from ſo profeſs'd an enmity to the faith, to ſo perfect an obedience to it. But this being a deſignation onely to the dignity of the Apoſtolical office, (as Jeremy c. 1. 4. and John Baptiſt, and others appear to have been deſigned to the prophetick) can with no reaſon be ſo applied as to inferre any irreſpective decree or deſtination of his perſon to heaven and bliſſe; that being lai'd up for him as a crown of righteouſneſſe, a reward of the finiſhing his courſe and perſeverance, 2 Tim. 4. 8.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

a. *Afterward †about fourteen years

1.* Then [a] † fourteen years after I went up again to Jeruſalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me alſo.]

1. After this, ſome fourteen years after my converſion, (mentioned ch. 1. 16.) I went a ſecond time to Jeruſalem, Barnabas and I together, and Titus alſo attended me.

b. *ſeverally κατ' ἰδίαν †the chief men τοῖς δοκοῦσιν

2. And I went up by revelation, and communicated to them that Goſpel which I preach among the Gentiles, but × privately [b] to † them which were of reputation, leſt by any means I ſhould run, or had run in vain.]

2. And by God's appointment, either firſt ſignified, or after confirmed to me by viſion (ſuch as Paul often had about ſeveral matters) I went up at this time to Jeruſalem, and gave the Church there an account of my preaching (and the ſucceſſe of that) among the Gentiles. This I thought fit to doe, and yet firſt to doe it to thoſe that were the principal men among them, James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Peter, and John, v. 9. who were all Apoſtles of the circumciſion, or Jewiſh converts: and my reaſon of doing ſo was, leſt I ſhould miſcarry on one ſide or other, loſe either my preſent or my paſt labour, my preſent among the Jewes, my paſt among the Gentiles; that is, leſt by the Jewes I ſhould be thought to preach a different doctrine from thoſe who had been called before me, or by the Gentiles (if I ſhould to their prejudice comply with the Jewes) I ſhould be thought inconſtant, and be deemed not to count it lawfull to converſe with them, which would utterly obſtruct their way to receiving the faith, and ſhut it up from them.

c. *not ſo much as τὸ

3. But * neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was [c] compelled to be circumciſed.]

3. And by what I then did, they did all ſo fully conſent to my doctrine (that Gentile Chriſtians were not bound to the Jewiſh obſervances) that, as I would not yield, ſo they did not force Titus to be circumciſed, though he were known to be a Greek, and familiarly converſed with me, and was employed by me.

*†But this by reaſon of, διὰ) ×inſinuating themſelves παρεισάκτους

4. † And that becauſe of falſe brethren × unawares brought in, who came in privily to ſpie out our liberty which we have in Chriſt Jeſus, that they might bring us into bondage.]

4. This I thus did, becauſe of the ſlie Jewes, that making as if they were Chriſtians, came to obſerve what liberty I took in omitting the obſervances of the Law, that by ſome means or other they might accuſe me, and either by the verdict of the Councell of Jeruſalem, or by ſome other means (by bringing perſecution, &c. upon me) inforce me to the obſervation of the Jewiſh ceremonies.

5. To

5. To these men (though at other times I was content to comply with the weak) I could not think fit to doe it never so little while, though but for that space of my staying at Jerusalem, or to yield by any kind of acknowledgment or condescension, that the Gentiles should be obnoxious to that yoke, and this, that we might not betray the Gospel of Christ, but preserve it entire to you.

5. To whom we gave † place by subjection no not for an houre, that the truth of the Gospel might continue * in you.]

† not place so much as for an hour by submission, οὐδὲ πρὸς ὥραν τῇ ὑποταγῇ

d. 6. As for those prime men, intimated ver. 2. and named ver. 9. (James and Peter and John, I need not give any other character of them, God is not moved in this matter with the personal excellencies of any, but can make use of any the meanest, as well as most excellent instruments) for these, I say, though they were persons of great knowledge, and dignity, and authority, and that most justly, yet when they understood what I had done, they gave me no advice to alter any thing, nor said any more to me than what I knew before.

6. d But of these who seemed to be somewhat, (whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me, God accepteth no mans person) for † they who seemed to be e * in conference added nothing to me.]

† the chief men

* added no thing οὐδὲν προσανέθεντο

f. 7. But on the other side these three discerning (by the account I gave them of my successes) that I had received from Christ the commission of preaching to the Gentiles, and so an equality of office Apostolical to Peter, whose commission was to preach to the Jewes especially,

7. But contrariwise, f when they saw that the Gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the Gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter,]

8. (For the same God that had enabled Peter, and given him gifts and miraculous powers to discharge that office of an Apostle to the Jewes, gave me also the like commission and abilities to be an Apostle to the Gentiles.)

8. (For he that † wrought effectually in Peter * to the Apostleship of the circumcision, † the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles,)]

† wrought in Peter, ἐνεργήσας Πέτρῳ

* toward εἰς

† wrought also in me ἐνήργησε καὶ

9. These three, I say, James the Bishop of Jerusalem, and Peter, and John the son of Zebedee, two prime Apostles, who were looked on as the pillars of the Church, approved and commended all that we did, or had done, acknowledged us as their companions, joyned with us, and did by consent make an agreement, that they and we should betake our selves severally (into what city soever either of us entred) we to the Gentiles, and they to the Jewes of the city, and so constitute severall congregations in each city, of Jewes and Gentiles, (see note on Rev. 11. b.)

9. And when James, Cephas, and John, who * seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of † fellowship, that we should goe unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.]

* are reputed οἱ δοκοῦντες

† communication κοινωνίας

10. And all that they insisted on to us, was that we should take into our care the wants of the poor Christians in Judæa, who were sadly spoiled and wasted by their unbelieving countreymen, 1 Thess. 11. 14. Heb. 10. 34. (see Chrysostome) and get collections for them among the Gentiles, which I was as forward to doe as they to have me.

10. Onely they would that we should remember the poor, the same which I also was forward to doe.]

11. But when, after this, Peter came and preach'd to the Jewes at Antioch, I who was there also at the same time preaching to the Gentiles of that city, resisted him, because that had taken notice of his former actions, and the change that was observable in him, did look upon him as a dissembler, and lai'd that to his charge, not knowing the true ground of what he did.

g. 11. But when Peter was come to Antioch I withstood him * to the face, because he g was to be blamed.]

* face to face, because he had been blamed, κατὰ πρόσωπον

12. For before the time that some believing Jewes of Jerusalem, (James's See) who were generally zealous for the Mosaical performances Act. 21. 20. came from thence to Antioch (in like manner as those Act. 15. 1.) he freely conversed with the Gentile Christians, and eat with them; but while they were present, out of fear of displeasing and scandalizing those Jewish Christians, and occasioning their falling off, or forsaking the faith (see Theophylact and Chrysostome interpreting it by a like phrase, c. 4. 11. I am afraid of you least I have bestowed on you labour in vain) he abstained from using that liberty, and did not use any conversation with them for a time.

12. For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles; but when they were come, he withdrew, and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.]

13. And the whole number of the Jewish converts of Antiochia followed his example, and abstained from conversing freely with the Gentiles, making as if they were such zealots of the Mosaical law, as that they would not use this illegall liberty; and this was so universally done by all, that Barnabas, that came with me, began to be wrought on by it, and to make scruple to converse familiarly with the Gentiles, as if it were not lawfull to doe so.

13. And the other Jewes dissembled likewise with him, insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.]

14. Whereupon considering the inconvenience that would come on this, and that it would be a way to shut out all the Gentiles from the faith, if by Peter's fear of scandalizing the Jewes, men were brought to believe that the Gentiles might not freely be accompanied with (and consequently could not be preached to by us) and so that this was not the way which was most conducible to the propagating of Christian religion, which was like to consist more of Gentiles then of Jewes, I thus spake publickly to Peter, Thou hast hitherto lived like (and conversed with) the Gentile Christians, and not observed the Jewish rules; why dost thou now by thy practice bring the Gentiles to think it necessary for them to observe the Jewish law?

14. But when I saw that they walked not * uprightly according to the truth of the Gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of the Gentiles, and not as doe the Jewes, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as doe the Jewes?]

* the straight path to the truth, ὀρθοποδοῦσι πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθειαν

15. Certainly that which these men learn and think to be implied by this practice of thine, is farre from being true doctrine: For we that indeed were, before our Christianity, Jewes born, and so farre more obliged in any reason to observe the Mosaical Law, then the idolatrous ignorant heathens, whom the Jewes themselves never thought obliged to the Mosaical performances, and therefore looked upon them with such contempt, as impure, and not fit to be conversed with,

15. We who are Jewes by † nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,]

† birth φύσει

16. We, I say, being taught by Christianity, that by the observation of the Law (see note on Mat. 5. g.) by performance of the Mosaical rites, justification is not to be expected, but onely by the faith of Jesus Christ, without that we, I say, doe thus our selves receive the Christian religion, and ought in any reason to teach it others, so as not to depend on the Mosaical performances for justification, but on the faith of Christ, without them, and that upon this grand principle, that neither Jew nor Gentile can be justified by legal obedience, and therefore must seek to Christ for it, who not now requiring of us these outward rites, but the inward purity signified by them, is consequently to be obeyed in what he requires, and the liberty that he also gives to be vindicated by us against all contrary pretenders, who indeed will be farre from changing their minds by our yielding to, or complying with them.

16. Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the Law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the Law; for by the works of the Law shall no flesh be justified.]

17. But then it is objected by those that stand so for the Jewish law, that if, seeking to be justified by faith in Christ, we neglect the Mosaical Law, and live like Gentiles, we make by this means,

h. 17. But if while we seek to be justified by Christ, we our selves also are found h sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.]

or ſuppoſe Chriſt to be an enemy to the Law, and a favourer of Gentiliſme, (one that aſſiſts that againſt Judaiſme, makes proviſion for it.) To which we anſwer, that whatſoever be ſaid of his favouring thoſe that doe not bind themſelves to the Judaical Law, he is yet ſure no favourer of Gentiliſme or heathen life.

18. For if I build again the things which I deſtroyed, I make my ſelf a tranſgreſſour.] 18. But on the other ſide rather, when a man hath renounced juſtification by the Moſaical Law, and depended onely on Chriſt for it, if he ſhall again return to that which he hath renounced, and aſſert juſtification by that Law, affirm that the obſervance of Moſaical rites is neceſſary to juſtification, what doth he then but apoſtatize in ſome meaſure, depart from his former profeſſion, in returning to Judaiſme again?

* by the law did die ἐγὼ διὰ νόμου ἀπέθανον Syr.

19. For I* through the Law am dead to the Law, that I might live unto God.] 19. We are all taught by the very Old Teſtament, the Law and Prophets, that we muſt ſeek farther then the Law, viz. to Chriſt, and ſo I have done, and learned by the Law it ſelf not to value it too much, but to give over hope of juſtification or life by thoſe legal performances, that ſo I may find it in God, through Chriſt, in the New Covenant.

† I have been crucified Συνεσταύρωμαι * but, or, and I live, not any longer I, ζῶ δὲ οὐκέτι ἐγὼ † what I now live ὃ νῦν ζῶ

20. † I am crucified with Chriſt: * nevertheleſſe I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me, and † the life which I now live in the fleſh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me.] 20. Chriſt by his death hath aboliſhed the Moſaical Law, Epheſ. 2. 14. that is, hath taken away the diſcrimination betwixt Jew and Gentile, brought juſtification into the world for thoſe that obſerve not the Moſaical Law, and I by being a Chriſtian, have been made partaker of this fruit of Chriſts death, and ſo am alſo dead to the Law, v. 9. and Rom. 7. 4. and now I am no longer the man I was, that is, a Jew, but a Chriſtian, and am now bound to no other obſervations but thoſe which Chriſt requireth of me, to whom I am obliged by all the bands of love and duty, having given his own life for me to free me from the Moſaical Law, among other things.

21. I doe not fruſtrate the grace of God; for if righteouſneſſe come by the Law, then Chriſt is dead in vain.] 21. This freedome therefore I make uſe of, and doe not depend on the Law for juſtification, nor think the Moſaical obſervances ſtill neceſſary; for that were to evacuate the Goſpel of Chriſt (ſee note on Heb. 13. c.) for if ſtill the Moſaical performances are neceſſary and ſufficient to our juſtification, then Chriſt needed not to have died, it would be matter of no advantage to us, that he thus came into the world, and laid down his life for us.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Διὰ δεκατεσσάρων ἐτῶν

V. 1. Fourteen years after] What διὰ δεκατεσσάρων ἐτῶν here ſignifies, is by learned men made a matter of ſome queſtion. The time to wch S. Paul refers, muſt be that of his going (with Barnabas here mentioned) from Antioch to Jeruſalem, on the queſtion here diſcourſed of, about the neceſſity of the Gentile Chriſtians being circumciſed; that ſo firſt it may connect with the ſpaces mention'd c. 1. 18, 21. (ſo as the word πάλιν again ſeems to import) to denote the next time of his going to Jeruſalem after that mentioned v. 18. and 2dly, ſo as to denote a time wherein Peter may be ſuppoſed ſtill to reſide at Jeruſalem, and wherein Titus may be ſuppoſed to be with S. Paul as a neophytus, and a companion, (and ſo in danger of being preſſed to be circumciſed) not yet employ'd, or ſent out by him on any ſervice in the Churches. Now this is thought ſo unlikely to be fourteen years after the ſpace laſt mention'd c. 1. 21. (his going to Syria and Cilicia Act. 9. 30.) that it hath been thought probable, that (as in numeral letters it oft happens) fourteen ſhould be here ſet in ſtead of four. For which emendation ſeeing there appears not any ground in the Antient Manuſcripts, it will ſurely be more reaſonable to obſerve, 1. that διὰ doth not diſtinctly ſignifie after (as μετὰ c. 1. 18. had done) but by, or about, that is, neer that ſpace, though not preciſely fourteen years: 2dly, that the Ἔπειτα Afterward, or then, referres not to that which was mention'd immediately before, his paſſing through Syria and Cilicia, ſo as to affirm this to have been fourteen years after that; no, nor to the former Epocha's, either his going up to Jeruſalem, v. 18. or departing into Arabia, v. 17. but to that great Epocha, ſo conſiderable to him, the time of his converſion, which immediately ſucceeding the death of S. Steven may reaſonably be placed (in the firſt year after Chriſts aſſumption,) An. Ch. 34. From whence to the time of that Councel, which is ordinarily placed An. Ch. 47. it was about thirteen or fourteen years. And then there will be no more need of an emendation, then there is authority for the imagining any.

b. Δοκοῦντες

V. 2. To them which were of reputation] For the notion of δοκοῦντες here, and δοκοῦντες εἶναί τι, v. 6. it muſt be obſerved, that it ſignifies not the mens own opinion of themſelves, or their aſſuming any great authority over others (as of Simon Magus it is ſaid, Act. 8. 9. that he did λέγειν εἶναί τινα ἑαυτὸν μέγαν, ſay, or take upon him, that he was ſome great one) but that they were ſo in the reputation and eſteem of others, and that the great opinion that at that time all Chriſtians had of them, above the reſt of the Apoſtles, was it that moved Paul to go up, and addreſs himſelf particularly to them. This is fitly expreſs'd by οἱ δοκοῦντες, as from that Verb the Noun δόξα, reputation or glory, comes, thoſe that are in eſteem in an eminent manner, and more ſo by δοκοῦντες εἶναί τι, thoſe that are eſteemed to be ſomething, that is, ſomething above other their ὁμότιμοι or fellow-Apoſtles; not ſeemed, ſo as that is equivocal either to ſeeming falſely, bare ſeeming, or ſeeming in their own eyes, but ſeeming ſo in truth, and to the generality of the beſt and wiſeſt Chriſtians. In proportion to this, οὐδέν μοι διαφέρει, it maketh no matter to me, ver. 6. is far from any thing of ſcorne or deſpiſing in S. Paul, that ſpeaks it: it is a ſolemne forme onely of inſiſting on his own commiſſion from Chriſt, which could no way be prejudiced by the reall excellency of their perſons, how great ſoever they were. God, who accepts no perſons, and attends not to perſonal excellencies, may give his Commiſſion to an ἄνθρωπος, to the meaneſt and unworthieſt as well as to thoſe which are really of the greateſt eminence. All this paſſage therefore is rather an expreſſion of great reverence to Peter, &c. than of ſcorne. Onely for his miſſion and revelations, Paul hath them from Chriſt, not from any man, cap. 1. 16. and 2. 6.

c. Οὐδὲ Ἕλλην ἠναγκάσθη

V. 3. Compelled] What οὐδὲ ἠναγκάσθη, was not conſtrained, ſignifies here, is a matter of ſome difficulty, which being explained will make the next verſe perſpicuous, which otherwiſe ſeems not intelligible. That ſome pretended Chriſtians looked very jealouſly on S. Paul, as one averſe from the Moſaical Law, is ſufficiently known. Theſe, when Paul came to Jeruſalem, laid it to his charge that he preached to the Gentiles that were not circumciſed converſed freely with them, and Titus (being a Græcian, and at that time with him) they ſpecified to be one of them, and him they would have conſtrained to be circumciſed. But, ſaith S. Paul, οὐδὲ ἠναγκάσθη, though he were ſuch as was pretended, and though this were thus preſſed by them, and though I was by this means likely to aliene the Jewes minds from the Goſpel, as it was preach'd by me, (this being an act of confeſſion that I was guilty of what was laid to my charge) and ſo matter of ſome ſcandal to the Jewes of Jeruſalem; yet I that was willing to yield at ſome times (to avoid the ſcandal of the Jewes) to perform ſome ceremonies of the Law, Act. 21. 26. and ſo circumciſed Timothy, was reſolved not to doe it now, becauſe if I did, it muſt appear that thoſe falſe brethren, pretended Chriſtians, had overcome me at Jeruſalem, and that the Church there judged on their ſide againſt me, and ſo that Titus had been by order of the Church or Councel of Jeruſalem forced to be circumciſed: Which thing muſt needs have been matter of ſo much greater ſcandal and diſcouragement to the Gentiles, in aliening their minds from the Chriſtian faith, and that ſcandal have been more conſiderable to the hindrance of the progreſſe of the Goſpel, which was to be hoped for more plentifully among the Gentiles then the Jews, that I was very reſolute, and took ſpecial care that Titus ſhould not be circumciſed. And this v. 3. διὰ τοὺς παρεισάκτους ψευδαδέλφους, becauſe of the falſe brethren, that came in to watch what I would doe, and to carry it againſt me in the Councel at Jeruſalem, which is expreſſed by καταδυλώσωνται bringing under in the end of the verſe. By theſe Paul reſolved he would not be worſted, and therefore though at other times he was content to comply πρὸς ὥραν for ſome ſhort time, yet now he would not doe ſo, that the truth of the Goſpel might abide toward you, that is, that the Galatians, that is, Gentile Chriſtians, might not be ſcandalized at this compliance, which is before meant by μήπως εἰς κενὸν τρέχω v. 2. leſt I ſhould have run in vain, that is, leſt I ſhould diſcourage and loſe the Gentiles, which I had brought to the faith; as on the other ſide he went and gave an account at Jeruſalem to the δοκοῦντες eminent perſons there, of his preaching the Goſpel to the uncircumciſed Gentiles, and the reaſons of it, μή πως εἰς κενὸν τρέχω, leſt he ſhould now ſcandalize the Jewes that were Chriſtians, and aliene them (at Jeruſalem and elſewhere) from hearkning to him.

V. 6. But of theſe——] What hath often been obſerved of the uſuage of Greek words, in theſe ſacred writers, otherwiſe then in the propriety of the Greek language belongs to them, muſt alſo from words be extended to ſyntaxis, which is oft ſuch as the rules of Grammar and uſe of authors doth not admit of. And this for the moſt part falls out by the interpoſing of ſome parentheſis, of greater or leſſer length, and then proſecuting what was begun before it in another form of conſtruction, then that in which it had been begun. Some examples of this in an inferior degree are obſervable Col. 1. 10. where after περιπατῆσαι ὑμᾶς, ſome words interpoſing, the conſtruction is altered, and goes on with καρποφοροῦντες καὶ αὐξανόμενοι —— And c. 3. 16. where after ὁ λόγος οἰκείτω ἐν ὑμῖν —— Let the word of God inhabit in you, the conſtruction is ſoon alter'd into διδάσκοντες καὶ νουθετοῦντες ἑαυτούς —— So Epheſ. 3. 17. where after κατοικῆσαι τὸν Χριστὸν διὰ τῆς πίστεως ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν, follows v. 18. ἐρριζωμένοι, καὶ τεθεμελιωμένοι· and ſo chap. 4. 1. where after παρακαλῶ οὖν ὑμᾶς —— ἀξίως περιπατῆσαι, &c. (after a few words) follows ἀνεχόμενοι, and σπουδάζοντες, which doth not regularly cohere with it. But this is more eminently obſervable in the beginning of the ſecond and third Chapters of that Epiſtle. In the ſecond after Ὑμᾶς ὄντας νεκροὺς τοῖς παραπτώμασι καὶ τῇ ἀμαρτίαις, there follows a long parentheſis to ver. 4. by which means the Verb that ſhould govern ὑμᾶς is omitted, and the period again begun, with Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς —— —— ἠγάπησεν ἡμᾶς, καὶ ὄντας ἡμᾶς νεκροὺς τοῖς παραπτώμασι συνεζωοποίησε τῷ Χριστῷ, which συνεζωοποίησε hath quickned together with Chriſt was ſure the Verb omitted in the firſt verſe. So c. 3. 1. after Τούτου χάριν ἐγὼ Παῦλος ὁ δέσμιος, —— —— For this cauſe I Paul a priſoner of Chriſt Jeſus for you Gentiles, comes in a long parentheſis, εἴγε ἠκούσατε, &c. and another involved in that ver. 3. καθὼς προέγραψα, &c. to the end of the fourth verſe, and then the former parentheſis reſumed again either unto the end of verſe 7. and then the form of the conſtruction is changed from ἐγὼ to ἐμοὶ, or perhaps to the end of v. 12th, or poſſibly the 13th, and then the period begins anew, Διὰ αὐτοῦτο, that is, For which cauſe I (that Paul, the priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt, ver. 1.) beſeech you that ye be not diſcouraged at my tribulations, or for this cauſe I bow my knees, &c. or yet more probably, it concludes not till the end of that chapter, the fourth chapter beginning, I therefore the priſoner in the Lord beſeech you—— And by this means the ἐγὼ Παῦλος hath no Verb following it, whereſoever the parentheſis be concluded. 'Tis true indeed ſome have endevoured to avoid this by acknowledging an ellipſis in that firſt verſe, and ſupplying it thus, For this cauſe I Paul am the priſoner—— But there be many inconveniences conſequent to that rendring. And the many other examples of the like, ſhew that there is no reaſon to flie to that refuge. And to omit other inſtances, thus it is twice in this place; Firſt v. 4. where having begun the period with Διὰ δὲ τοὺς παρεισάκτους —— ſome words intervening by way of parentheſis to the end of the verſe, the ſenſe begun is not finiſh'd, but in ſtead of it, οἷς οὐδὲ πρὸς ὥραν εἴξαμεν ver. 5. And then in like manner here v. 6. the period being begun, Ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν δοκούντων εἶναί τι, but from theſe prime men, or that appeared to be ſomewhat, (by which it appears that οὐδὲν προσανέθεντο I received nothing, or ſomewhat like, was deſigned to be joyned to it) after the interpoſing of a parentheſis, ὁποῖοί ποτε ἦσαν &c. Whatſoever they were it maketh no matter to me, &c. the ſenſe is begun again in another form, Ἐμοὶ γὰρ οἱ δοκοῦντες οὐδὲν προσανέθεντο, For theſe prime men added nothing to me. So Theophylact on occaſion of a reading in his Copy Heb. 10. 1. οὐδέποτε δύνανται, in the plural, they could not, which we read δύναται in the ſingular, acknowledgeth that ſo it muſt be read as we read, ὅσον γε τὸ τῆς γραμματικῆς ἀκριβείας ἀκόλουθον, as far as concernes the conſequence of Grammatical exactneſs, that is, in reſpect of the Syntaxis, ἵνα μὴ σολοικισμὸς ἀναφύῃ that there may be no ſolœciſme in it (for ſuch it muſt be, in an high manner, if with his Copy we read δύνανται in the plural, and underſtand προσφέροντες, as he doth, for the Nominative caſe to govern it) ἐπειδὴ δέ, ſaith he, τῇ γραφῇ τεχνολογῶν οὐδεὶς λόγος, but becauſe the Scripture ſtyle takes no care of technical, that is, Grammatical, exactneſs, καὶ ὥστε ἀντὶ ποήσωμεν, ὡς τὰ ἀντίγραφα ἔχουσι, we may ſo underſtand it as the copies have it, that is, ſo as the words will yield a very good ſenſe, it onely the Grammatical exactneſs be diſpenſed with, viz. that the offerers, that is, the Levitical prieſts, cannot perfect thoſe that come (that is, bring their ſacrifices) unto them. In which words his opinion and teſtimony is clear, viz. that the ſacred writers ſtood not upon ſuch niceties as other authors do, bound not themſelves to the obſervation of Grammatical rules. And ſo frequently in S. Hierome; On the Epheſ. cap. 3. Quotieſcunque ſolœciſmos aut tale quid annotamus, ſpeaking of the Apoſtles writings; and ſo Ep. cap. 1. qu. 10. 2dly, That copies were not to be diſturbed, or any change attempted in them upon this one ſcore, the avoiding of a ſolœciſme in the period. So the Learned Mr. Bois on Act. 27. 10. Laudandi mihi videntur, quibus in ſacris Literis vel ſolœciſmos manifeſtos, modò veritati nihil detraherent, religio eſſet emendare, they are to be commended that would not in the Scripture mend manifeſt ſolœciſmes, ſo they do not hurt the truth of the matter. And the ſame was the account of Dr. Reynolds, a very learned man among us, when he was by Sir Henry Savile conſulted in a like matter. For when in preparing the Edition of S. Chryſoſtome ſoſtome, there were ſome expreſſions obſerved, unvaried in all copies, which yet were not allowable by any rules of Greek Syntaxis, and from thence a neceſſity appeared of either receding from all copies, or elſe admitting of falſe Greek, the queſtion was propoſed to that Doctor, whether it would be derogatory to that divine writer and learned Orator S. Chryſoſtome, to acknowledge that he wrote falſe Greek; and his anſwer was, that ſuch writers were more carefull of the ſenſe than of the Syntaxis, and, ſo the former were perſpicuous, oft neglected the latter, eſpecially when the falſe Greek was most promptly intelligible (as in the inſtances produced it generally was) adding, that indeed S. Paul himſelf was guilty of the like, out of whom he ſet down two places (for a ἁρπαξις) which were not reconcileable with the rules of Grammatical Syntaxis. The places have already been taken notice of in the Epiſtles to the Coloſſians, c. 3. 16. and Epheſians, c. 4. 2. To this I adde the obſervation of Maimonides, More Nev. l. 2. c. 29. Unumquemque prophetam eâ linguâ, eâque loquendi ratione, quæ ipſi eſt familiaris & conſueta, impelli à prophetia ſua ad loquendum ei qui ipſum intelligit. That every prophet is by his prophecy impelled to ſpeak in that language and manner of ſpeaking which is familiar and cuſtomary to him; that is, (ſaith Buxtorfe out of the Rabbins Commentaries) ſi propheta eſt Hebræus, impellit eum prophetia ut loquatur Hebraicè; ſi purum & ornatum ſermonem habet, eodem modo prophetiam ſuam eloquitur; ſi minùs ornatum, minùs ornatè quoque prophetiam ſuam profert; ſi Ephraimita, Ephraimiticè, ſi Galilæus, Galilaicè; If the prophet be an Hebrew, his prophecy impells him to ſpeak Hebrew, &c. if he have pure language, he delivers his prophecy after that manner; if his language be leſs pure or eloquent, he doth deliver his prophecy leſs eloquently; if he be an Ephraimite, Ephraimitically, if a Galilean, he ſpeaks in that dialect.

Ἀγνοι magis τὸ τοῦ γράφοντος ἐπιτήδευμα ἐπανορθοῦται τὰ ῥήματα ſæpe negligit, ſee Note in Gen. p. 5. & 27. where after mention of the many ἀνακολουθα and ἀνωμαλότητα, he adds, μᾶλλον ſpectabat omnes ad Grammaticæ normam dirigi.

e. Οὐδὲν ἐμοὶ προσανέθεντο

Ib. In conference added nothing to me] What is the full meaning of οὐδὲν ἐμοὶ προσανέθεντο, they added nothing to me, is, I think, exactly ſet down by S. Chryſoſtome, in οὐκ ἀνταπώσαντο, ἀλλὰ συνέπνευσαν καὶ συνεφώνησαν, they oppoſed me not, but conſpired and accorded with me, οὐ πλέον τι προσέθηκαν ὧν ἤδειν, they added no more to me than I knew before, μαθόντες ἐμὰ, οὐδὲν προσέθηκαν, οὐδὲν διώρθωσαν, when they had knowledge of my affaires, they neither added nor altered any thing in my courſe: and this as a farther explication of what went before, that they gave no appointment for the circumciſing of Titus, that went along with Paul, and never had been circumciſed. And ſo in proportion to this ſenſe follows his notion, ἀλλὰ τἀναντίον, but contrariwiſe; not that they were taught by Paul, for they needed not that, but that they were ſo far from blaming or altering any thing in his practice, that they not onely approved, but commended his whole courſe.

Ἀνὰ τἀναντίον

f. Ὁράω

V. 7. When they ſaw] The three names that lie in the Greek v. 9. will in the conſtruction be beſt placed here v. 7. as the Nominative caſe to which ἰδόντες, ſeeing, agrees. Now who theſe three were that are here called pillars, and who are by S. Paul found at Jeruſalem, may appear by what hath been ſaid (Note on 1 Cor. 15. a.) out of ancient writers, of James the brother of the Lord. Him, ſaith Clemens ἐν ὑποτυπ. l. 5. Peter, James, & John thoſe Biſhop of Jeruſalem (ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων, not Apoſtolorum, biſhop of the Apoſtles, as Ruffinus miſreads, or miſrenders it) and though they were the three by Chriſt preferred, and more honoured then all the reſt of the twelve, yet did they not contend one with another for this dignity, but after our Saviours reſurrection (the next year, ſaith Euſebius in Chronico, or the 19. of Tiberius) unanimouſly conferred it on James the Juſt. So before Clemens, Hegeſippus; James, ſaith he, the brother of the Lord, called by all James the Juſt, received, or undertook, the Church of Jeruſalem with, (not as S. Hierome reads, poſt, after, as if it were μετ' Ἀποστόλους, not Ἀποστόλων) the Apoſtles. So ſaith Athanaſius in Συνοψ. Epiphan. Hær. 78. Greg. Nyſſ. de Reſurrect. Or. 2. Hierome in Catal. and in Gal. 1. Now 'tis clear that at this time of which S. Paul ſpeaks, one of theſe three Apoſtles who made him Biſhop, James the ſon of Zebedee (one of the περιπεμπομένοι preferred before the other Apoſtles) was dead, and ſo onely Peter and John left, who therefore are the latter two here named, and James the Juſt ſet foremoſt before either of them, as being now Biſhop of Jeruſalem; A dignity, ſaith Clemens, even in reſpect of the Apoſtles themſelves. In reſpect of which dignity placed on him, it is alſo that he is called an Apoſtle c. 1. 19. and Act. 15. 6, and 22. and by S. Hierome, Apoſtolus decimus tertius, the thirteenth Apoſtle.

Ἰάκωβος

g. V. 11. Was to be blamed] The Hebrew חקר, which ſignifies to find out, to detect, and is ſometimes rendred ἐγκρίνειν, ἐξετάζειν, δοκιμάζειν, ἐλέγχειν, is alſo rendred καταγινώσκειν to condemn; ſo Prov. 28. 11. σοφὸς παρ' ἑαυτῷ φρόνιμος πλούσιος, ὁ δὲ νοήμων πένης καταγνώσεται αὐτοῦ, The rich man is wiſe in his own conceit, but the poor man that hath underſtanding ſhall detect him. So Eccluſ 5. 17. καταγνωσις πονηρὰ ὅτι διγλώσσῳ, Detection is very grievous, or troubleſome, to a man that is double-tongued. Accordingly the word properly belongs to that charge or blame that falls on an hypocrite when his diſſimulation ſeems to be detected; and that this is the meaning of κατεγνωσμένῳ here, appears by that which follows, v. 13. ζωυπεκρίθησαν, &c. the reſt of the Jewes diſſembled with him. As for the præter-tenſe, wherein here 'tis ſet, that ordinarily ſignifies in the ſenſe of the præteritum pluſquam perfectum; and ſo Theophylact here interprets it, he had been found fault with, or charged of hypocriſie (viz. that ſpecified v. 12.) not by Paul, but ὑπὸ ἄλλων, by others that ſaw the fact, but knew not why he did it, and ſo thought it hypocriſie in him to eat with the Gentiles, when they of Jeruſalem were abſent, and to withdraw from the Gentiles, when they of Jeruſalem were preſent.

Κατεγνωσμένῳ

h. Ἁμαρτωλοὶ

V. 17. Sinners] What ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſignifies in this place, will beſt be reſolved by the Context, which enforceth the ſenſe (which I have given it) of Gentiles, in oppoſition to the Jewes; ſo v. 15. ἐξ ἐθνῶν ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners of the Gentiles, oppoſite to φύσει Ἰουδαῖοι Jewes by birth. (See Note on Lu. 7. b.) It is known that the Jewes look'd on all Gentiles with an odium, as on thoſe which were of a contrary religion to them, and ſo they did conſequently on all thoſe that convers'd with them, and it was that, (and not ſo much their other ſins) that made the Publicans ſo odious to them in Chriſts time: and as Chriſts eating with ſuch, and not obſerving (as they thought) the Judaical Law, made them look upon him as an ἁμαρτωλὸς, a ſinner, Joh. 9. 24. ſo S. Paul's teaching liberty to lay aſide the Moſaical performances, is here look'd on by them as Gentiliſme, and ſo is objected to him in this phraſe, that he being a Jew born is found ἁμαρτωλὸς a ſinner, that is, guilty of Gentiliſme under the name of ἁμαρτία ſinne; and that by teaching this to be the Doctrine of Chriſt, he makes Chriſt διάκονον ἁμαρτίας, one that came to aſſiſt and contribute to the ſetting up of Gentiliſme againſt Judaiſme. This S. Paul, that knew what Judaiſme truly ſignified, (the doctrine of good life in the Old Teſtament, which was by God thought fit to be fenced in by thoſe Ceremonies, not placing Religion in the bare obſervance of the Ceremonies, without heeding the ſubſtance of them) doth with deteſtation deny, μὴ γένοιτο God forbid, taking the words of the objection as by them that made it they were meant, that he taught Chriſt to be a favourer of Idolaters, & the worſhip of the heathen falſe-Gods, in oppoſition to the way of worſhipping the true God by himſelf preſcribed to Moſes. This Paul denies, knowing that thoſe Moſaical ceremonies were not the thing wherein (abſtracted from the inward purity, ſignified, & deſired by God to be secured by them) the worship of the true God consisted; as on the other side he neither favoured any part of heathen worship, or wicked life, nor by any thing he preach'd, taught Christ to be a favourer of it, but directly the contrary. All this being thus implied in this form of aversation, & disclaiming, and detesting the calumny in the objection, he proceeds v. 18. to a further answer, by retorting the objection on such as did as S. Peter had done, (whose action set down v. 11, 12. occasion'd this discourse, which brought in this objection) first conversing with the Gentiles, and then teaching by his example v. 12. that they were not so freely to be conversed with; which he justly cals the building again what he had destroyed, teaching the unlawfulnesse of a Jewes conversing with Gentiles, which from a divine vision Act. 10. he had both by his doctrine & practice formerly asserted. And this, saith Saint Paul, is the making himself a transgressor, παραβάτην, the word that is elsewhere used for an Apostate, one that forsakes and disclaimes that true doctrine which he had formerly taught, and is by way of eminence since applyed to Julian ὁ παραβάτης the Apostate, that forsook the Christian faith which he had once embraced. And it can be no more strange that this should be applyed to this action of Saint Peters, then that ὑπέστειλεν ἑαυτὸν, he withdrew himself, should be used of him, ver. 12. when Heb. 10. 38. the same word ὑποστείλεται is evidently used of the Gnosticks falling off for fear of persecution, which is c. 3. 12. ἀποστῆναι departing, or apostatizing, from the living God. Παραβάτης

Paraphrase.

CHAP. III.

1. What heretick with his sorceries hath brought you off from Christianity to Judaisme again (see c. 4. 10.) you, I say, to whom Christ crucified hath been formerly as convincingly declared by our preaching, as if he had been set before your eyes, nailed to the crosse among you?

a. b.

1. O Fooliſh Galatians, [who hath [a] bewitched you, that you ſhould not obey the truth, * before whoſe eyes Jeſus Chriſt hath been evidently ſet forth, [b] crucified among you?]

* to whom before your eyes Jeſus Chriſt hath been ſet forth among you having been crucified, or (leaving out, among you, for the Kings MS. omits ἐν ὑμῖν) to whom Jeſus Chriſt, that was crucified, hath been ſet forth before your eyes.

2. I pray let me diſpute it a while with you, and demand this one thing, which may reaſonably ſet an end to the whole controverſie, The gifts of the Spirit that are in your Church, were they there till the Goſpel was preach'd to you? (1 Cor. 12. 28.) was the Moſaical Law able to give you any ſuch privileges, to work ſuch miracles among you? undoubtedly it was not.

2. This onely would I learn of you, Received ye the ſpirit by the works of the Law, or by the hearing of faith?]

3. And then is there any reaſon, that having by the Goſpel receiv'd the gifts of the Spirit, and ſo begun to be a Chriſtian Church, thriven and proſpered well in that plain way, you ſhould now think it neceſſary to take in the Law as a ſuppletory, to make your ſelves up with the externall, Moſaical, carnall rites and ceremonies?

3. Are ye ſo fooliſh? having begun in the Spirit † are ye now made perfect by the fleſh?]

† doe you now end in the fleſh? νῦν ζηλοῦσθε;

4. You have ſuffered many perſecutions and hardſhips for Chriſtianity, which, if you would have Judaized, you might have avoided (your perſecutions generally proceeding from that fountain;) and if this doctrine be true, then what are ye the better for all theſe ſufferings? Nay, 'twere well if this were all, that you ſhould onely loſe the benefits of your ſufferings; 'tis to be feared this change will bring worſe effects on you, the loſſe of that Evangelicall ſpirit, if you mend not.

4. Have ye ſuffered ſo many things in vain? *if it be yet in vain.]

* and I would it were even in vain, εἰγε καὶ εἰκῇ

5. God therefore that hath furniſh'd your Church with ſo many extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, and wrought ſo many miracles among you, did he any ſuch thing under the Moſaical Law? is there any thing in that fit to draw you back to it again from the profeſſion of the Goſpel? v. 2. Is not faith it that all the great privileges and advantages have ſtill belonged to?

5. He therefore that miniſtreth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the Law, or by the hearing of faith?]

6. As 'twas believing upon which Abraham was juſtified.

6. Even as Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteouſneſſe.]

7. From whence it follows, that thoſe which are juſtified as Abraham was, are not the Moſaical obſervers, but believers onely, thoſe that receive and obey that doctrine which is taught and required by Chriſt, the Gentiles as well as Jewes.

7. Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the ſame are the children of Abraham.]

8. And the words of the promiſe made to Abraham, which was an Evangelical not legal promiſe, did in effect contain this in them, that all nations of the world, and not onely the Jewes, ſhould be juſtified by faith, and ſo the Gentiles now, and that without legal Moſaical performances, for thus the words of the promiſe ran, In thee ſhall all the nations of the earth be bleſſed; [All the nations] and ſo the heathens, and not onely the Jewes, who lived according to the Law, [ſhall be bleſſed in thee] that is, the form of benediction uſed among the Gentiles, and not onely the Jewes, ſhall be with mention of Abraham's name, viz. that God will bleſſe them as he bleſſed Abraham, juſtifie them as he did him, make the whole Gentile world partakers of that promiſe made perſonally to Abraham, on condition they believe and obey as he did: All looking on Abrahams obedience and juſtification, as the example of all Chriſtians, that all that believe and obey, as he did, ſhall be bleſt as he was.

8. And the Scripture foreſeeing that God would juſtifie the heathen through faith preached before the Goſpel unto Abraham, ſaying, [c] In thee ſhall all nations be bleſſed.]

9. From all which 'tis clear that believers or Chriſtian livers, without Moſaical performances, have their part of that bleſſing that was promiſed to Abraham; and thoſe that ſprang from him (from his faith, as well as from his loynes) are bleſt on the ſame terms as he was.

9. So then they which be of faith, are bleſſed with faithfull Abraham.]

10. For all that expect to be juſtified by the Law without the faith of Chriſt, (which if it be acknowledg'd, takes away the wall of partition betwixt Jew and Gentile, and conſequently the Law, which in the external part of it eſtabliſh'd that partition and non-communion between them) or without accepting thoſe reformations, and changes of ſhadow for ſubſtance, brought in by Chriſt, doe ſet up Moſes, not onely abſolutely, but comparatively and excluſively to Chriſt; and they that do thus, are ſtill involved under the curſe for every ſin they are ever guilty of, and conſequently being guilty of ſome breach or other, can never have any thing but curſe by this means, and ſo are farre from being juſtified.

10. For as many as are of the works of the Law are under the curſe, for it is written, Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the Law to doe them.]

11. And the ſame is proved by that known teſtimony Hab. 2. 4. (ſee Rom. 1. 17. Heb. 10. 38.) They to whom life is promiſed are the believers, or they that are juſtified after the Evangelical manner.

11. But that no man is juſtified by the Law in the ſight of God, it is evident; for, The juſt ſhall live by faith.]

*the juſt by faith ſhall live ὁ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται

12. Whereas the Law makes no account of faith, allows no juſtification but on condition of legal obedience, performance of all that requires,

12. And the Law is not of faith; but the man that doth † them, ſhall live in them.]

† thoſe things αὐτὰ

13. Chriſt

13. Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the Law, being made a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree.]

13. In which case, there being no means in the Law to justifie any, but rather to bring curses on all, because all have sinned v. 10. Christ hath been seasonably pleased to interpose, to make satisfaction for sin, to bear that curse which belonged to us (and that he did by being crucified, which being a Roman punishment was yet near kin to that of hanging on a tree, that is, a gibbet of wood, Deut. 19. 23. which is said there to be an accursed death.)

14. That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ: that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.]

14. That the favour bestowed on Abraham, of being justified by faith, and not by ceremonial observances, may be communicated to the Gentiles who believe in God as Abraham, and all those pretious consequents thereof, the gifts of the Spirit usefull to the building up of a Church, v. 5. as well as that single promise of justification.

15. Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth or addeth thereto.]

15. Brethren, 'tis ordinarily acknowledged among men, that a covenant, though it be but of a man, being once firmly made, cannot be voided.

16. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made; he saith not, And to seeds, as of many, but as of one, And to thy seed, which is [d] Christ.]

16. And much lesse can the promises of God miscarry, which were made to Abraham and to his seed; not to seeds in the plural, which might make a difference betwixt Jewes and Gentiles, but in the singular, To thy seed, viz. as to Isaac (who was therein a type of Christ) so distinctly to Christ, as he is the head of a family, a spiritual father of children, all believers coming from him as a spiritual progeny, and consequently to all Christians without discrimination, Jews or Gentiles, circumcised or uncircumcised.

[d] Christ] Χριστὸν, but the King's MS. omits those words.

17. And this I say, that the covenant that was confirmed before of God * in Christ, the Law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannull, that it should make the promise of none effect.]

17. To the same purpose again it is observable, that the Law, that was delivered by Moses above four hundred and thirty years after the time that that promise was made to Abraham, Gen. 12. 3. cannot in any reason be thought to disannull, or frustrate, or invalidate the covenant made by God to Abraham, and in him to all believers or Christians, his spiritual as well as carnal progeny, so as to leave believers now under obligation to observe the Mosaical Law, or to propose justification to them upon no other terms but those; when in the promise to Abraham, so long before, it was made over to them upon these other cheaper and better terms of fidelity, and sincerity, and purity of the heart.

* εἰς Χριστὸν, but the King's MS. omits those words.

18. For if the inheritance be of the Law, it is no more of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise.]

18. For if the blessing that is promised to Abrahams seed, whether carnal or spiritual, that is, to believing Gentiles as well as circumcised Jewes, came by the performance of the Mosaical Law, then comes it not by the promise made to Abraham; which is directly contrary to the Scripture, which affirms it to come, as to Abraham, so to all others, by promise onely.

19. † Wherefore then serveth the Law? it was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made: and it was * ordained by Angels in the hand of a mediatour.]

19. You will ask then if the promise made to Abraham be the onely thing by which now and ever since justification hath been to be had, to what purpose the Law was given. I answer, It was given to restrain men from sin, and to shew them their guilt, and to make them seek out for a remedy, which is to be found only in the doctrine of the Gospel; and in this respect it was usefull for the while, till Christ and his members, disciples and believers, should come; and that the Law might be the more effectual to that end to restrain us from sin, it was given in a glorious formidable manner, by Angels delivering the ten Commandements in thunder, so terribly, that the people durst not approach the mountain, and therefore was Moses called up to be a Mediatour, standing betwixt God and the people to shew them the word of the Lord, Deut. 5. 5. and by his hand it was delivered to them.

† What then is Τοῦ? * delivered διατάγεις

20. Now a mediatour is not a mediatour of one, but God is one.]

20. Here again it may be objected, that if in the delivery of the Law Moses were a mediatour, he must then needs be so between God and the Israelites, and then it must be supposed that as in a covenant, so in that giving of the Law, there must be a contract between God and the people, and then the subject matter of this contract will in all probability be justification upon performance of legal obedience, and then God will by pact be obliged to observe this truth still, and justifie such, and none else.

21. Is the Law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousnesse should have been by the Law.]

21. To this I answer, that if this were conclusive, it would then make void those promises made to Abraham, which must be as carefully preserved as the objecter seems carefull to make good God's pact by the Law. And indeed the true way of stating the difficulty must be, by preserving both as farre as the matter will bear. But there is one thing supposed in this objection which is utterly false, and the cause of all the mistake, viz. that 'tis possible to perform the Law (for that must be presupposed before we can talk of justification by that contract betwixt God and man) or that the Law furnishes with strength sufficient to doe it. If that indeed were true, there would be no reason to expect the performance of the promises made to Abraham, and consequently of justification, but only by the Law; but when the Law doth no such matter, 'tis clear that that cannot be a valid contract, but void alloon as made, and so that it superseds not that other of promise to Abraham, or that which is now by me insisted on in Christ, which is purposely to supply the defects and defailances of the Law.

22. But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.]

22. But 'tis clear by Scripture, that all men of all nations, Jewes and others, are guilty of sin, Rom. 3. 19. and so uncapable of justification by the Law, which requires perfect obedience, or else cannot justifie, and so still there is no justification to be had upon other terms but those of grace and promise, upon condition of performing sincere Evangelical faithfull obedience.

23. But before faith came we were kept under the Law, shut up unto the faith, which should afterward be revealed.]

23. All that can be said of the Law is, that before Christ and the Gospell came, we were by God put under that œconomy, kept under and disciplin'd by it, as in a state of candidates or expectants, untill the time should come for the revelation of the Gospell.

24. Wherefore the Law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.]

24. And so the Law was onely a guardian or institutor of us, in time of minority, as it were, an imperfect rule proportion'd to an imperfect state, not to justifie, but onely to keep us in order, and to leave and deliver us up to the Gospell onely for justification.

25. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.]

25. Now therefore the Gospell being come, the school-master, or guardian in minority, is quite out-dated.

26. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.]

26. For all that are true believers are adopted by God, and consequently justified without legall observances onely by faith.

27. According to that known rule, that All of what ſort ſoever that have received the faith, and are accordingly baptized into it, are made members of Chriſt.

27. For as many of you as have been baptized into Chriſt have put on Chriſt.]

28. And there is no diſcrimination from any outward accidents of countrey, relation, ſex, but circumciſed or uncircumciſed, ye are all equally accepted in Chriſt, if ſincere believers, or being members of Chriſt v. 27. ye are all accepted by God.

28. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are * all one in Chriſt Jeſus.]

* or, all Jeſus Chriſt's, for the Kings MS. reads ἀνακτι τῳ γαρ ὑμεις ἐστε Χριστῳ Ιησου

29. And if received and accepted by God, as members of Chriſt, then are you that ſpirituall ſeed of Abraham, to whom the promiſes of juſtification made by him doe belong by way of inheritance, without any neceſſity of legall performances or any other ſuppletory claime or tenure.

29. And if ye be Chriſts, then are ye Abrahams ſeed, and heires according to the promiſe.]

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ἀνόητοι Galatæ

V. 1. Bewitched you] Theſe two words ἀνόητοι and ἐβάσκανε, fooliſh and bewitched, being applyed by the Apoſtle to theſe Galatians, referre to the prevailing of the Gnoſticks infuſions upon them, the ſorceries uſed by the Leaders of that Sect, and the follies of thoſe that were ſeduced by them: or, if the time would agree, 'tis not improbable that the former of theſe, ἀνόητοι, ſhould refer to ſome beginnings of the hereſie of the Ebionites, the ſpreading of which not long after this (in Trajans time) is ſet down by Euſebius at large, l. 3. c. κζ'. but ſo as it is uncertain whether the originall of it were not more antient, as early as might be taken notice of by this Apoſtle. Of them it is Euſebius's obſervation, that their name was given them from the Hebrew אביון poor, διὰ τὸ πλωχείαν διανοίας αὐτῶν, becauſe of the poverty of their underſtandings, the men being very ſilly men, and their hereſie accordingly a ſenſeleſſe one. They did πλωχοῖς καὶ ταπεινοῖς περὶ Χριστοῦ δοξάζειν, ſaith he, entertain very mean and poor thoughts and opinions of Chriſt, and that he was ψιλὸς καὶ κοινὸς ἄνθρ, a meer and common man, κατὰ προκοπὴν ἤθους δεδικαιωμένον, by proficiency in vertue juſtified, but yet not more then a man; and moreover, δεῖν πάντως τὸ νομικὸν θρησκεύειν, &c. that Chriſtians had need of legal obſervations, and not onely of Faith and Chriſtian life, to ſalvation. In reference to which their doctrine, (and perhaps by this time, known title,) it is not ſtrange that when the Apoſtle looks upon any ſeeds of this hereſy among the Galatians he ſhould, to awake and reproach them out of it, in an unaccuſtomed ſtyle of ſome contumely, call them ἀνόητοι Γαλάται fooliſh Galatians: It being ſuch a ſcandalous piece of folly in them to leave the Apoſtles to follow ſuch ſilly teachers as theſe. To this agrees the ſtyle which he gives theſe legal obſervances, calling them ἀσθενῆ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα c. 4. 9. weak and poor elements, in relation, as it ſeems probable, to that name of Ebion ſignifying poor. And becauſe Simon Magus, and after him Menander, had uſed Magick and ſorcery, done ſome feigned miracles to gain them followers and diſciples (as appears by Euſebius l. 3. c. κα'. and therefore among the ſinnes of the fleſh, which the Gnoſticks, a great ſpawn of them, had brought into the Church, he puts φαρμακείαν in the ſecond place; ſee Note on c. 5. 20. but theſe poor fools did not pretend to any ſuch, as Euſebius there ſaith,) therefore it may well be (if the times will permit) that he here addes τίς ἐβάσκανε; who hath bewitch'd you not to obey the truth? intimating that they have not had any ſuch excuſe for their being ſeduced, the fathers of this hereſie, which now he is about to ſpeak of, being no ſuch witches, having not ſo much ſubtlety or cunning, and conſequently not able to ſeduce any but meer ſots and fools. Now among the doctrines of theſe Ebionites we find in Euſebius, in the places forecited (beſide that ſo much to the diminution of Chriſt) that they taught the obſervation of the Jewiſh Law, δεῖν πάντως αὐτοῖς τῆς νομικῆς θρησκείας, ὡς μὴ διὰ μόνης τῆς εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν πίστεως καὶ τῆς κατ' αὐτὸν βίου σωθησομένους, that they were altogether bound to retain the legal ſervice or Judaical religion, and that the faith in Chriſt, and living according to it, would not prove ſufficient to ſave them. And ſpeaking of a ſecond brood of them, differing from the firſt in the point of the conception of Chriſt, yet, ſaith he, they agree'd with them in this, ὁμοίως ἐκείνοις τῷ σωματικῷ περιτὸν νόμον λαβεῖαι διέπειν, that they were obliged to obſerve the bodily legal religion, as the former did; and thereupon, ſaith he, they rejected the Epiſtles of Saint Paul, ἀποστάτην αὐτὸν καλοῦντες τοῦ νόμου, calling him an apoſtate from the Law, and uſing the Goſpell, which is called the Goſpell according to the Hebrews, and no other, obſerving the Sabbath, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ Ἰουδαϊκὰ ἄλλα ἀγωγὰ, and all their other obſervances, and on the Lords dayes joyning with the Chriſtians in commemorating the reſurrection of Chriſt, and doing παραπλήσια ἡμῖν, like to us Chriſtians. Agreeably to this we here find theſe ſo many things which poſſibly referre to them or ſome ſeeds of them. Firſt, the vindicating of the doctrine of Chriſt crucified, v. 1. (which in other places containes the whole ground of our Chriſtian profeſſion, and particularly that of the abolition of the Moſaical rites; ſee c. 2. 20. and Eph. 2. 14.) by the clear undeniable evidences of it ſet forth and teſtified among them, before theſe ſilly teachers came among them, ſo that 'tis a prodigie to ſee them ſeduced by ſuch men, againſt ſuch conviction and evidence to the contrary. Secondly, the phraſe ἐν σαρκὶ in the fleſh v. 3. to denote their σωματικὴ λαβεία bodily religion, circumciſion, &c. aſſerted by them. Thirdly, the whole diſcourſe following, concerning the neceſſity of the Moſaical Law, and the ἔτως ἀνόητοι; are ye ſo fooliſh? (again v. 3.) to introduce it. Mean while it muſt be remembred that at that time, the hereſie of the Gnoſticks being the great peſt of the Church, into which all other leſſer ſects like diſeaſes were converted, the common ſewer or ſink into which they were poured, this of the Ebionites, if it were now ſprung, was in conjunction with that of the Gnoſticks alſo, and not ſeparated from it.

b. ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος

Ib. Crucified among you] That it ſhould be here ſaid to the Galatians that Chriſt Jeſus was ἐν ὑμῖν ἐσταυρωμένος crucified among them, is not well to be imagined, neither is there any reaſon to underſtand the words ſo, which are otherwiſe interpretable, either by removing the comma after προεγράφη, or by ſetting it after ὑμῖν, thus, To whom Jeſus Chriſt having been crucified, hath been ſet forth among you, before your eyes, that is, with evidence and conviction. Another way of conſtruction might alſo be pitch'd on, by joyning οἷς and ἐν ὑμῖν (as 1 Pet. 2. 24 τῷ μώλωπι αὐτοῦ by whoſe ſtripes of him, that is, by whoſe ſtripes) among whom, that is, you. But that which removes all difficulty is, that the Kings MS. leaves out ἐν ὑμῖν among you, and then the ſenſe will be obvious, and the conſtruction clear, οἷς κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς προεγράφη, to whom before your eyes (that is, evidently) Chriſt Jeſus hath been ſet forth, or expoſed to publick view, (ſo προγράφειν ſignifies; ſee Note on Jude a.) ἐσταυρωμένος having been crucified, that is, made known and evidenced in his ſufferings, whereby he took away the partition partition betwixt Jew and Gentile, aboliſhed the ceremonies of the Moſaical Law, and ſo alſo in the power of his reſurrection, the conſequent of theſe ſufferings of his.

c. ἐν σοὶ εὐλογηθήσονται

V. 8. In thee ſhall all nations be bleſſed] The likelieſt way of interpreting this phraſe ἐν σοὶ εὐλογηθήσονται will be by obſerving firſt, what is meant by εὐλογεῖσθαι, and then by ἐν σοί. For the firſt, it referres clearly to the form of benedictions among the Jewes, Lev. 9. 23. uſed ſolemnly by the prieſts, who did bleſſe the people in ſet forms, Num. 6. 24. (as well as bleſſe God for them, as Gen. 14. 19. Melchiſedek bleſſed Abraham, and ſaid, Bleſſed be Abraham of the moſt high God, as well as, Bleſſed be the moſt high God, v. 20.) Thus alſo did parents bleſſe their children, Iſaac Jacob, Gen. 28. 3. and Jacob his ſons, Gen. 49. Then for the ἐν σοὶ, that will be interpreted by the uſe of the phraſe Gen. 48. 20. where Jacob ſpeaking to, and bleſſing Ephraim and Manaſſeh, ſaith, In thee ſhall Iſrael bleſſe, (the very ſame phraſe as here) ſaying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manaſſeh. By which it may be reaſonable to conclude, that to bleſſe others in this form, God make you as Ephraim, &c. to make uſe of his enſample in bleſſing any, is to bleſſe them ἐν Ἐφραὶμ in Ephraim. And ſo proportionably this will be the meaning here of Ἐν σοὶ, In thee ſhall all the nations of the earth be bleſſed. They among all the nations or Gentiles, and not onely the Jewes, that bleſſe themſelves or others, ſhall uſe this proverbial form of benedictions, by mentioning the bleſſings that God beſtowed upon Abraham, God make thee as Abraham, &c. or as the form is ſet down Gen. 28. 4. God give to thee the bleſſing of Abraham. Thus Rabbi Solomon interprets it on Gen. 12. 3. that men ſhall ſay to their children, Be thou as Abraham, adding that the phraſe is uſed in Scripture alwaies in this ſenſe. And ſo ſure it hath been uſed according to that prediction; Ever ſince, this form hath been retained among the Gentile part of the world, The God of Abraham, &c. bleſſe thee. And the full importance of that bleſſing is, that Gods mercy to Abraham, his bleſſing him and his ſeed in this world with thoſe bleſſings of proſperity, but eſpecially his looking upon him as on a friend, (upon his faith in Gods promiſes, and obedience to his commands) his juſtifying him by faith without the deeds of the Law, is and ſhall be recited as an example of Gods dealing not onely with the reſt of the Jewes, but alſo with the Gentile world; and the form of the Gentiles bleſſing or praying for themſelves, or of the prieſts for them, ſhall be this, that God will deal with them as he did with Abraham: which is here uſed by the Apoſtle as a proof that the Gentiles are now to be juſtified by faith, without the Moſaical performances, which was the thing to be proved, v. 7. Thus was the phraſe uſed in the places of Geneſis, to which this here referres, Gen. 12. 3. where v. 2. theſe other phraſes are uſed to the ſame purpoſe, I will make thy name great, or illuſtrious, and thou ſhalt be a bleſſing, that is, thy name ſhall be proverbially uſed in benedictions. So c. 18. 18. ſo c. 22. 18. the form is a little changed, In thy ſeed ſhall all the nations of the earth be bleſſed, that is, I will give thee ſo numerous, and potent, and victorious a progeny, and make good the promiſes made to thee, ſo viſibly to them alſo, to Iſaac and Jacob, &c. Eccluſ 44. 22. juſtifie them as I have juſtified thee and that the progeny of Eſau as well as Jacob, thoſe that ſhall obey me of the Gentiles as well as Jewes) by faith without Judaical obſervances, that all the Gentiles ſhall take notice of them, and when they would bleſſe themſelves or others, or pray for Gods acceptation or juſtification, they ſhall uſe the mention of thy progeny or poſterity, that God would deal with them whom they bleſſe as he dealt with Abraham's ſeed, exceedingly proſper them, and multiply them, bleſs, and accept, and juſtifie them. So Act. 3. 25. where theſe words are cited again of Gods telling Abraham τῷ σπέρματί σου ἐυλογηθήσονται πᾶσαι αἱ πατριαὶ τῆς γῆς, in thy ſeed ſhall all the families of the earth be bleſſed, the meaning is clearly this, that God hath ſo bleſſed Abraham's ſeed, the Jewes, in giving Chriſt to them, and to them firſt or primarily v. 26. that all the families or nations of the earth, when they ſhall bleſſe themſelves (as the Greek paſſive is oft in the ſenſe of the Hebrew Hithpael) or when they ſhall be bleſſed by their parents, or prieſts, or friends, this ſhall be the form, God bleſſe thee as he did the Jewes, or Abraham's ſeed. To this matter it may perhaps be farther obſervable, that the phraſe, It was counted unto him for righteouſneſs, ſo often applied to Abraham Rom. 4. may ſeem to ſignifie in this ſame ſenſe alſo, that his faith and ready obedience in going out of his country, &c. were by God looked on as ſuch heroick acts, in one brought up among examples of idolatry and villany, that it took off that entaile of curſe that lay upon that nation and family, and entailed a ſignal bleſſing on him and his ſeed, viz. upon that part of it that imitated him, Iſaac and Jacob, and the obedient Jewes (though the rebellious were cut off in the wilderneſs, and after by captivities, and at laſt the crucifiers of Chriſt by the Roman Eagles) accordingly as it is ſaid of Phinees upon that heroicall fact of his, It was counted to him for righteouſneſſe among all poſterities for evermore; that is, that act of his zeal to God brought a bleſſing not onely upon his perſon, but upon his poſterity, as it is ſaid, Num. 25. 12. Behold I give unto him my covenant of peace, and he ſhall have it, and his ſeed after him, the covenant of an everlaſting prieſthood. And why may not (in Analogie to this uſe of the phraſe in the Pſalmiſt) that of imputing Abraham's faith to him for righteouſneſs, be this bleſſing his ſeed, thoſe of his ſtock, and all others that imitated his obedience, for his ſake, or in the like manner as God had bleſſed him.

Ἐλογίσθη εἰς δικαιοσύνην

d. Χριστὸς

V. 16. Chriſt] The word Χριστὸς ſometimes ſignifies Chriſt, conſidered as head of the Church, together with the body annex'd to it, that is, Chriſt and all believers, or Chriſtians. So 1 Cor. 12. 12. As the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body, ſo alſo is Chriſt. Where anſwerable to the body with many members in the firſt part, is ὁ Χριστὸς Chriſt in the ſecond, which muſt therefore ſignifie the whole ſociety of Chriſtians. So 1 Pet. 1. 11. when he ſpeaks of the Spirit of Chriſt, that is, of prophecie, foretelling the ſufferings which ſhould befall Chriſt, and the glories after them, it ſignifies not perſonally to Chriſt but in this greater latitude, the crucifixion of Chriſt, and the perſecuting of Chriſtians, and proportionably the reſurrection of Chriſt, and the deliverance of the perſecuted Chriſtians by the deſtruction of their enemies. And ſo here the Context makes it clear, that by Chriſt all Chriſtians are to be underſtood, circumciſed or not, Jewes or Gentiles: ſo if ver. 17. the words εἰς Χριστὸν be to be retained, it muſt be underſtood of the whole body joyned with the head, the Chriſtians or all faithfull people, with Abraham the father of all ſuch, for to them was that covenant eſtabliſhed, and thoſe promiſes made. But thoſe words are left out in the Kings MS. and ſo it ſeems moſt probable they ſhould be, and then the ſenſe will be clear, that the covenant was eſtabliſhed by God to Abraham.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. IV.

1, 2. Now as it is of heirs to eſtates among men, when though their fathers are dead they are in their minority, they are governed by guardians, and their eſtates ordered for receits and expences by ſtewards, till the time come, after which either their father in his will, or elſe the laws of the land put them in their own power, and free them from guardians, though all this while they are owners of their whole eſtates:

1. NOw I ſay that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a ſervant, though he be lord of all:
2. But is under * tutors and governours, untill the time appointed by the father.]

* guardians & ſtewards ἐπιτρόπους καὶ οἰκονόμους

3. So was it with us children of Abraham and of God, we were obliged to obſerve thoſe firſt rudiments of the worſhip of God in the Jewes religion, (ſee note on Col. 2. b.) with which God would have men brought up, and exerciſed to the more ſublime pure way of ſerving him:

3. Even ſo we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world:]

4, 5. But when that time was come, v. 2. wherein God ſaw it fit to remove the guardian of the heir, that is, to lay the Moſaical Law aſide, then God ſent his own Son in humane fleſh, who ſubmitted to, and performed the whole Law, to redeem us out of that ſlavery of Moſaical performances, and to receive us into participation of the promiſes made to Abraham, that is, to juſtification, without thoſe legal obſervances; and he, at his parting from the world, finally removed all thoſe obligations from the Chriſtians ſhoulders, nailed thoſe ordinances to his croſſe, aboliſhed them by his death, Epheſ. 2. 14, &c.

4. But when the fulneſſe of the time was come, God ſent forth his Son made of a woman, made under the Law,
5. To redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the adoption of ſons.]

6. And that you are ſons appears by this, that God hath ſent his Spirit into your hearts, giving you power and authority to call upon God, and make your addreſſes to him, not onely as your God, but your father, the Goſpel aſſuring you that ye are no longer in that ſervile condition, bound to legal obediences, but that God will deal with you according to the promiſes made to Abraham and his ſeed, juſtifie you upon the Goſpel-terms of faith, without the deeds of the Law.

6. And † becauſe ye are ſons, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, father.]

† that is

7. So that you are no longer enſlaved to thoſe Moſaical performances, but are put into the ſtate of ſons, and conſequently through faith in Chriſt you are ſure of juſtification, according to the promiſes made to Abraham.

7. Wherefore thou art no more a ſervant, but a ſon; and if a ſon, then an heir of God through Chriſt.]

8. In time of your heatheniſme, before your converſion to Chriſtianity, ye ſerved idols, and were farre from thinking your ſelves obliged to the Moſaical Law, knowing and conſequently heeding nothing of it:

8. Howbeit then when ye knew not God, ye did ſervice unto them which by nature are no gods:]

9. But now that you have converted to Chriſt, or rather are prevented by God, and called to this ſonſhip, when you were not a looking after it, but lay immerſed in idolatry, what reaſon is there, or how comes it to paſſe, that now being Chriſtians, and ſo obliged to no part of the Jewiſh Law, whoſe Proſelytes ye are not, ye ſhould make another change ſo extremely to the worſe for your ſelves, in falling to the Moſaical performances, from which Chriſtian religion hath freed thoſe which were before obliged to them, that is, the Jewes themſelves, (and which, now Chriſt is come, the ſubſtance of thoſe ſhadows have nothing in them for which they ſhould be valued) and reſolving to be ſervants ſtill, in deſpight of that liberty of ſons that Chriſt hath given you?

9. But now after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggerly elements, whereunto ye deſire again to be in bondage?]

10. Ye obſerve the Moſaical ceremonies, (ſee note on ch. 3. a.) ſabbaths, and new moons, and ſolemn feaſts, and anniverſary feaſts, or thoſe that return every ſeventh and every fiftieth year, ſabbaticall years, or Jubilees, after the ſame manner that the Jewes before Chriſt thought themſelves obliged to obſerve them.

10. Ye obſerve daies, and months, and times, and years.]

11. Theſe practices of yours make me fear that the Goſpel by me preached will ſoon be loſt among you.

11. I am afraid of you, leſt I have beſtowed upon you labour in vain.]

12. I pray follow my example, for I did once place my truſt in the Law for juſtification: And I beſeech you doe not think that 'tis out of any ill affection that I write this; I have not been at all provoked by you, nor conſequently is it imaginable that I ſhould mean you malice, or deſire to bring on you perſecutions to no purpoſe, (the avoiding of which is the only bait which the Gnoſticks make uſe of to ſeduce you.)

12. Brethren, I beſeech you, be as I am, for * I am as ye are: ye have not injured me at all.]

* I was alſo as ye, καὶ ἐγὼ ὡς ὑμεῖς

13. Nay why ſhould this fear ſo trouble you now, more then formerly it did? You know, and cannot but remember, that when I formerly preached unto you, I was perſecuted for my doctrine.

13. Ye know how through [a] infirmity of the fleſh I preached the Goſpel unto you † at the firſt.]

† formerly τὸ πρότερον

14. And you then were not at all moved by that diſcouragement to deſpiſe me or my preaching, but received me with all the reſpect, and belief, and chearfulneſſe imaginable.

14. And my temptation which was in my fleſh ye deſpiſed not, nor rejected, but received me as an Angel of God, even as Chriſt Jeſus.]

15. And then how happy did you think your ſelves, that you had ſuch an Apoſtle? What would you not have parted with for our ſakes, were it never ſo dear to you, though now you are ſo ſhie and afraid of a little perſecution? or what is now become of all that for which you were ſo taken notice of, and magnified among men, as the kindeſt and lovingeſt of any to your teachers, ſo kind, that I am able to bear you witneſs, that nothing was ſo pretious to you, but you would have parted with it for my ſake? (Theophylact.)

15. *Where is then the bleſſedneſſe that you ſpake of? for I bear you record, that if it had been poſſible you would have plucked our your own eyes, and have given them to me.]

* What therefore is, or was, your happineſſe? Τίς οὖν ὁ μακαρισμὸς ὑμῶν;

16. Am I then, who was at firſt ſo pretious to you, now taken for an enemy of yours, for one that means you miſchief, and am likely to bring perſecution and preſſures among you, (of which your now teachers, the Gnoſtick complyers, undertake to rid you) for no other crime but onely telling you my conſcience, and revealing the truth of the Goſpel unto you? This is a little unhappy.

16. Am I therefore become your enemy becauſe I tell you the truth?]

17. Their great zeal toward you is out of no ſincere

17. They † zealouſly affect you, but not well: yea, they would exclude * you, that you might † affect them.]

† Wooe you very earneſtly ζηλοῦσιν ὑμᾶς * the King's MS. reads ἡμᾶς you, but other copies have ὑμᾶς us † wooe them affection, ζηλοῦτε αὐτούς affection, or desire of your good, but that they may supplant me, and get all your affection to themselves, or that they may shut you out of the fold of Christ, that ye may follow them as your new pastors.

18. But it is good to be zealously affected alwaies in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.] 18. But in a good cause ye ought to be constant, and therefore so you ought in your affections to me, and to the doctrine then preached to you, and that now when I am absent, and not only when I am present among you: Such a feeble decaying affection as that is good for nothing.

19. My little children, of whom I travail in birth again, untill Christ be formed in you,] 19. My babes, which cost me the same pain now, that you would if I were now to convert you anew, till I can hear that the doctrine and practice of the Gospel be purely and perfectly received among you (Thus great is my kindnesse to you)

20. I * desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice, for †I stand in doubt of you.] 20. It was no want of care or kindnesse in me, that I was not with you before this. Many resolutions I have had to come to you, and to speak with (in stead of writing to) you, and so to apply these remedies, sharper or milder, as should appear most convenient, being uncertain at this distance which is the best way of dealing with you.

21. Tell me, ye that desire to be under the Law, doe ye not hear the Law ?] 21. Certainly ye that stand for the necessity of legal performances to justification, may in the very Law it self see your selves confuted.

22. For it is written that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bond-maid, the other by a free-woman.] 22. For of the two children that Abraham had, the one of Hagar, which denotes the Law, the other of Sarah, which denotes the Gospel, without legal performances;

23. But he who was of the bond-woman, was born after the flesh: but he of the free-woman was by promise.] 23. 'Tis apparent that one, viz. Hagar's child, was born after an ordinary manner; but Sarah's child was not by the ordinary course of nature, but above it, by the power of God, and by virtue of the promise made to Abraham.

24. Which things * are b an allegory; for these are the two Covenants; the one from the mount Sinai, which gendreth to bondage, which is Agar.] 24. And these two mothers are figurative expressions, and allegorically denote the first and second Covenant (see note on the Title of these books) the Law and the Gospel; Hagar denotes the Law given from Sinai, and that brings nothing with it but servitude, and strict observances, and yet thereby helps no man to the condition of sons, to justification.

25. For † this Hagar is mount Sinai in Arabia, * and c answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and † is in bondage with her children.] 25. For the name of Hagar signifies the mount where the Law was given; and this is answerable to the present state of the Jews, these Hagarens and all that spring from Ismael being by their own laws bound to be circumcised, and observe the Mosaical Law, like the Jewes, and so they, like Hagar their mother, are in a servile condition still.

26. But * Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.] 26. But Sarah, which denotes the state of the Gospel, that new city which Christ hath brought from heaven with him, (see Rev. 21. b.) of which all we Christians are free-men or citizens, she is a free-woman, and signifies that we Christians, Gentiles as well as Jews, are free from the Mosaical rites, &c. and that we may be justified without them.

27. For it is written, Rejoice thou barren that beareſt not, break forth and cry thou that travaileſt not, for the desolate hath many more children then she which hath an husband] 27. According to that prophecie, Isa. 54. 1. Rejoice, &c. the meaning of which is, that the Gospel-covenant, which when Christ was here on earth, had few children, few that were brought forth by it, after his death, upon the preaching of the Gospel by the Apostles to the Gentiles, had many more then among the Jewes in his life-time.

28. Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.] 28. But, my brethren, as Isaac was born only by strength of God's promise, not by any ordinary means, Abraham and Sarah being beyond age, so are the children of God received to be such, and justified only by the promise of God (that is, through the strength of that promise to Abraham and covenant in Christ, that all faithfull, obedient, persevering believers should be justified) without any Mosaical performances.

29. But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so is it now.] 29. But as Ismael then, who was born by the strength of nature, persecuted him that was born by the strength of God's promise only, viz. Isaac, so now it comes to passe; they that depend on the Law for justification, persecute them that depend onely on God's promise, that are perswaded that through faith, without legal performances, they shall be justified.

30. Nevertheleſſe, what saith the scripture ? Caſt out the bond-woman and her son; for the son of the bond-woman shall not d be heire with the son of the free-woman.] 30. To these therefore is applyable that which follows in the story, that Ismael is to be cast out, and none but Isaac to inherit: they that depend on the Law for justification never attain to it, but they that depend on the sole promise of God, and accordingly expect to be justified upon performance of sincere Evangelical obedience, without necessity of legal performances, they only shall be heires of this mercy.

31. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bond-woman, but of the free.] 31. And so all this belongs to us who are Christians, and consequently are not obliged to the Mosaical performances, but justified by the Gospel-way without them.

V. 13. Infirmity of the flesh] What ἀσθένεια σαρκὸς infirmity of the flesh here signifies, will appear by the ordinary use of ἀσθένεια for afflictions. So 2 Cor. 12. εὐδοκῶ ἐν ἀσθενείαις I take pleasure in infirmities, that is, afflictions, of which the several sorts follow, contumelies, necessities, persecutions, distresses for Christ. The same as before v. 6. I will not rejoice but in mine infirmities, that is, afflictions (as elsewhere he resolves not to rejoice but in the crosse of Christ) and so v. 9. when he praies for deliverance from the thorn in the flesh, that is, afflictions (see Note on that place) he saith Gods answer was, My strength is perfected in ἀσθενείᾳ in weakness, that is, in the afflictions that befall my servants, the giving them strength to bear those is an act of the greatest power and mercy. So 1 Cor. 11. 30. πολλοὶ ἀσθενεῖς many weak, may signifie afflicted, as that notes pressures on their estates, because for diseases on the body, they follow in the ἄῤῥωστοι sick; though elsewhere

where 'tis manifeſt that ἀσθένια is uſed particularly for diſeaſe, as Jam. 6. 14, & 15. (ſee Note on Rom. 8. m.) So 1 Cor. 2. 3. I was among you ἐν ἀσθενείᾳ in weakneſs, that is, perſecution, as it follows, and in fear, and much trembling. So 2 Cor. 11. 29. Τίς ἀσθενῆ, καὶ οὐκ ἀσθενῶ; who is weak, and I am not weak, that is, afflicted? for it follows v. 30. If I muſt glory, I will glory of my ἀσθενείας weakneſſes, the afflictions that I ſuffer for Chriſt, as he inſtances thereupon c. 9. And ſo here, as appears by v. 14. where it is expreſs'd by another phraſe of the ſame importance in the Scripture-dialect, ὁ πειρασμὸς ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ, temptation in the fleſh, that is, affliction, as when 'tis ſaid that God will not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but will with the temptation give us ἔκβασιν, a paſſage out; and ſo πειρασμὸς ἀνθρώπινος temptation or affliction that ordinarily this humane ſtate is ſubject to, 1 Cor. 10. 12, 13.

ὁ Πειρασμὸς ἐν τῇ σαρκὶ

Πειρασμὸς ἀνθρώπινος

b. Ἀλληγορέια

V. 24. An Allegorie] The word ἀλληγορέια ſignifies a figure, expreſſing one thing by another, from ἄλλος, and ἀγορέω enuntio; and here the Verb medium muſt be in the Active ſenſe, ſo ἅτινά ἐστιν ἀλληγορέμενα will be beſt rendred which things doe expreſs, enuntiate, one thing δι' ἄλλα by another; for, as it follows, theſe are two Covenants, that is, ſignifie two Covenants.

c. Συνοιχῶ

V. 25. Anſwereth to] Συνοιχῶ is by Theophylact interpreted γειτνιάζει, ἄπεστι, mount Sinai being not far from Jeruſalem, but, as he acknowledgeth alſo, it ſignifies originally to walk along with, & being Metaphorically uſed of things compared one to another, it ſignifies to be parallel, anſwerable, or proportionable to another; and accordingly here in the compariſon begun v. 22. Hagar is made parallel to Jeruſalem, the then preſent ſtate of the Jewes: and the parallel conſiſted in two things; Firſt, that as the people of the Hagarens bound themſelves to Circumciſion, and the obſervation of the Moſaical Law in many particulars, ſo the preſent Judaizers did; and Secondly, that as in this reſpect, theſe Hagarens were juſt as their mother had been, in a ſervile eſtate, ſo theſe Judaizers kept themſelves and all their diſciples in a meer ſervile condition, oppoſite to the liberty of the Goſpel. Of the Hagarens or Iſmaelites being circumciſed, Joſephus gives clear teſtimony, l. 1. c. 12. Ἄραβες περιτέμνονται μὴ ἔτος πεντακαιδέκατον. Ἰσμαὴλος γὰρ ὁ κλεινὸς αὐτῶν τῷ ἔθνους, Ἀβραάμου νόμῳ καὶ ἐν τῷ παλλακῆς, ἐν τούτῳ περιτέμνεται τῷ χρόνῳ, The Arabians are circumciſed at thirteen years old. For Iſmael the founder of that nation, being the ſon of Abraham by the handmaid, was circumciſed at that time. So Origen in Φιλοκαλία, ſhewing the ridiculouſneſs of them that aſcribe all to the χαμαλισμὸς ὅτε τῆς γενέσεως, the poſition of the ſtarres at their birth, profeſſes not to imagine how they can aſſigne the Circumciſion of all the Jewes (and ſo the wounding, and want of a Phyſitians help) on the eighth day (conſtantly) after they are born, to any ſuch poſition: ἐφ' ᾧ δὲ ὁ Ἰσμαηλίτης τῶν κατὰ τὴν Ἀραβίαν τοιόνδε, ὡς πάντας περιτέμνεσθαι τεσσαρεσκαιδεκαέτεις· τοῦτο γὰρ ἱστόρηται περὶ αὐτῶν, and on the other ſide, that the poſition of the ſtarres at the nativity of all the Iſmaelites in Arabia ſhall be ſuch as ſhall cauſe them to be circumciſed when they are thirteen years old, for ſo, ſaith he, 'tis ſtoried of them. d.

V. 30. Be heir with the ſonne of] The explication of this depends on the Jewiſh matrimonial lawes, or the nature of concubinate, viz. when a ſervant, or a Gentile woman was taken in by a Jew to be (his wife ſhe was not to be by law, but) his concubine, upon agreement firſt made concerning her dowry. For ſuch a perſon as this is among them improperly called a wife, though farre from any ill character of a whore, or any unlawfull copulation, any farther then will be affirmed of Polygamie, which yet we know was allowed among the Jewes, and practiſed by the Patriarchs. Now the ſons of theſe concubines were excluded from ſucceſſion to the inheritance, and in ſtead thereof the father gave them gifts or portions (and that was agreed upon by pact with the wife at firſt) Gen. 25. 6. Thus was Jephthe ejected from the inheritance by his brethren, becauſe his mother was a ſtrange woman, Jud. 11. 2. Agreeable to this is that cuſtome of matrimonium morgengabicum in ſome countries, as Denmark, &c. at this day, where the ſecond wife, and her children that ſhall come from her, are not taken in to a right to the husbands eſtate, ſhe to have any part of it for her joynture, or they for their inheritance, but only ſome gifts or portions aſſigned them by compact, which are called morgengab, or marriage-gift, with which they are to content themſelves without any part of the inheritance.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. V.

1. From all this the concluſion is of exhortation to you and all Chriſtians, that ye retain the freedome from being obliged to the Moſaical Law, which Chriſt hath beſtowed on all, and not return to your former yoak, or weight of obſervances again, which are a ſervility perfectly unprofitable, and nothing elſe.

1. STand faſt therefore in the liberty * wherewith Chriſt hath made us free, and be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage.] * to which ſ

2. I your known Apoſtle, that have been, and taught the faith among you, pronounce to you poſitively, that if you depend on circumciſion and legal obſervances for juſtification, Chriſt will ſtand you in no ſtead.

2. Behold I Paul ſay unto you, that if ye be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing.]

3. For by laying upon himſelf a neceſſity of circumciſion, and expecting juſtification by that, he abſolutely obliges himſelf to perfect obedience, without which the Law cannot juſtifie any, ch. 3. 10.

3. For I teſtifie again to every man that is circumciſed, that he is a debtor to doe the whole Law.]

a.

4. All that run this way of the Judaizers, muſt know that Chriſt is become uneffectual to them: If you expect to be juſtified by legal performances, ye have diſclaimed all title to the Goſpel. See Heb. 13. a.

4. † Chriſt is [a] become of no effect unto you: whoſoever of you are juſtified by the Law, ye are fallen from grace.] † ye are diſcharged from Chriſt.

5. For we, according to the Goſpel, and the promiſe made to Abraham, expect to be juſtified without legal performances, only by faith or Evangelical obedience.

5. For we * through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteouſneſſe by faith.] * by the Spirit through faith πνεύματι ἐκ πίστεως.

b.

6. For now under the Goſpel 'tis not material whether a man be circumciſed or no, all that is required to our juſtification is faith; not all that is called by that name, but ſuch as is made perfect by addition of thoſe duties which we owe to God and our brethren.

6. For in Jeſus Chriſt neither circumciſion availeth any thing, nor uncircumciſion, but faith, which † [b] worketh by love.] † is conſummate by charitie.

7. Ye began well in receiving the Goſpel, as I preach'd it to you; who hath cauſed you not to continue in that courſe?

7. Ye did run well; who did hinder you, that ye ſhould not obey the truth?]

8. This

* called you καλέσαντος

8. This perſwaſion cometh not of him that * calleth you.] 8. This new doctrin of the neceſſity of Judaical obſervances is not taught you by God, or by him (whether my ſelf, or any others) who brought you to the faith.

9. A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.] 9. It comes from a few falſe teachers among you, that have infected you with this ſowre falſe doctrine of Judaizing, which will ſpoil all your Chriſtianity, v. 2, 4.

† toward εἰς

* will not mind any other thing, ἄλλο οὐδὲν φρονήσετε

10. I have confidence † in you through the Lord, that you * will be none otherwiſe minded: but he that troubleth you ſhall bear †his judgment, whoſoever he be.] 10. And I hope it will not extend farre, for I am confident of you in reſpect of the faith planted among you, that you will not be carried away with theſe errors; but the teachers of this doctrine, whoſoever they are, or of what quality ſoever, ſhall ſuffer and be cenſured for it.

† the condemnation τὸ σκάνδαλον

† Is the offence of the croſſe (the King's MS. adds τοῦ Χριστοῦ) of Christ dege-

11. * And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumciſion, why doe I yet ſuffer perſecution? † then is the offence of the croſſe ceaſed.] 11. Some of your teachers, it ſeems, have told you, that I am for the urging of circumciſion upon Chriſtians, and that I have done ſo in ſome places: But I pray doe you gueſſe of the truth of this ſuggeſtion, by the perſecutions which I ſuffer, which generally fall upon me among the Jewes, for my affirming the Moſaical Law to be aboliſhed, and would not fall upon me if I preſſed the obſervation of the Moſaical Law in this particular of ſo great importance. The great exception that the Jewes have againſt my preaching, and others believing me, is the abolition of the Moſaical Law, and the removing of that one exception would be the appeaſing of the wrath of the Jewes, who probably would oppoſe it no longer; but this, you ſee, is not done, for the Jews are ſtill as great oppoſers of Chriſtianity (where it is preached by me) and of me for preaching it, and of others that ſo receive it from me, as ever they were.

* unſettle you ἀναστατοῦντες

12. I would they were even c cut off which * trouble you.] 12. Thus unreaſonable are their pretenſions that would ſeduce you from your conſtancy, and are content to ſay any thing, though never ſo falſe and improbable, to that purpoſe; all that I have to ſay of them is, I wiſh they were excommunicated, turned out from among you, that thus endevour to pervert you.

13. For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only uſe not liberty for an occaſion to the fleſh, but by love ſerve one another.] 13. Chriſt hath freed you believers from the rigour of the Law, that is, both from the neceſſity of Moſaical obſervances, and of perfect exact obedience under the penalty of the curſe: onely do not you make an uncharitable or a carnal uſe of this liberty, either to contemn and ſcandalize thoſe that dare not uſe this liberty, Rom. 14.1. or to fall into acts of ſin, and to think your Chriſtian liberty will excuſe you; but by charity behave your ſelves toward all your brethren in this matter of legal ceremonies, as may be moſt for their advantages.

14. For all the Law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf.] 14. For this is indeed the ſumme of that Law which ye pretend ſo much to vindicate, endevouring the good of all others as much as ye can, or as you would your own, and not permitting your zeal to ſet you on deſignes of malice, and defaming of others.

15. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not conſumed one of another.] 15. But if you be ſo uncharitable as to calumniate and defame one another, this will break out in a while, as in other places it doth already, to open feuds, perſecuting and miſchieving your fellow-Chriſtians.

* fulfill not μὴ τελέσητε

16. This I ſay, Walk in the Spirit, and * ye ſhall not fulfill the luſts of the fleſh.] 16. My adviſe therefore is, that you order your actions according to the Goſpel rule, and doe not thoſe things which are moſt acceptable to the ſenſes, moſt agreeable to your carnal or worldly ends.

† doe not μὴ ταῦτα

17. For the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh, and theſe are contrary one to the other: ſo that ye † cannot doe the things ye would.] 17. For this is certain, that he that will ſerve God muſt doe many things contrary to his ſenſual or ſecular ends: For there being two deſires in you, the one proceeding from the carnal, the other from the rational ſpiritual faculty or reaſon inſtructed by the Goſpel, and theſe being ſo oppoſite one to the other, that whatſoever one liketh, the other diſliketh, it follows that whatſoever you doe in compliance with the one, you doe in oppoſition to the other, and ſo that you doe not will or chuſe with both wills, rational and ſenſual, whatſoever you will or chuſe, but one of theſe ſtill reſiſteth the other.

18. But if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the Law.] 18. That then which is your duty, is, to follow the duct of the Spirit; and if ſo, if you follow the Goſpell rule in deſpight of all the temptations of the fleſh, whether luſts of the fleſh, or fear of perſecution for the Goſpel, to the contrary, then you are neither obliged to the Moſaical performances, nor to the perfect exact obedience, without which the Law allowes no juſtification.

19. Now the works of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, fornication, uncleanneſſe, laſciviouſneſſe,] 19. Whereas on the other ſide, the actions that the fleſh is moſt apt to betray one to, and which you have moſt need to be admoniſhed of, are ſuch as every man knows to be ſuch, and which yet your preſent falſe-teachers doe induſtriouſly infuſe into you: ſuch are, breaking the bands of wedlock, nay making marriage abſolutely a work of the devil, that that perſwaſion may bring after it all manner of unlawfull luſts. (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. a.) which marriage might prevent,

20. Idolatry, d witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, ſtrife, ſeditions, hereſies,] 20. The ſenſual villanies committed in the idol-worſhips (ſee note on 1 Cor. 5. i.) to which the Gnoſticks would bring you back, and ſo likewiſe ſorceries, and then all the ſorts of uncharitableneſſe, hating or maligning of others, &c.

21. Envyings, murthers, drunkenneſſe, revellings, and ſuch like; of the which I tell you before, as I have alſo told you in time paſt, that they which doe ſuch things ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God.] 21. And at length envying either the quiet, or the innocence of all that will not doe as they doe, and ſo falling into all acts of riotous and bloody malice againſt them, together with drunkenneſſe and night-revells, &c. all which are of a moſt dangerous and deſperate nature, and will certainly deprive and exclude all that are guilty of them from the kingdome of God.

* kindneſſe χρηστότης

22. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-ſuffering, * gentleneſs, goodneſs, faith,] 22. On the contrary, the duties that the Goſpel requires of us are 1. love to our brethren; 2. joy in doing them any good, (ſee note on Rom. 14. c.) 3. ſtudy to preſerve peace among all men (ſee note on Phil. 4. b.) 4. a patient bearing with the provocations and injuries of other men; 5. a kindneſſe in diſpoſition and actions, actual performance of all kindneſſe to others; and 6. fidelity, in oppoſition to betraying others, or inconſtancy to our courſe,

† continence, ἐγκράτεια, * the Law is not againſt ſuch, κατὰ τῶν τοιούτων οὐκ ἔστι νόμος

23. Meekneſſe, † temperance; * againſt ſuch there is no Law.] 23. Meekneſſe and quietneſſe of ſpirit, in oppoſition to unquietneſſe and ſedition, and laſtly perfect charity either in the ſingle or conjugal ſtate: And be you never ſo ſtrict and zealous obſervers of the Law, that can never engage any of you to neglect theſe Chriſtian virtues (as many of you, that pretend to be all for the Law, that maintain the neceſſity of the Moſaical performances, are yet found to doe, behaving your ſelves ſo carnally in your religion, and oppoſing all other Chriſtians ſo bitterly, v. 19, 20, 21. as if you thought thought that the Law did as much countenance your filthineſſe, and your perſecuting others, as it doth countenance or oblige, in your opinion, to thoſe ceremonies.)

24. And however ye may be deceived in thus judging of the Law, yet 'tis certain that Chriſtianity is directly contrary to all this; the true believers, or Chriſtians, have in their baptiſmes renounced all the deſires of the fleſh, and accordingly muſt perform.

24. And they that are Chriſts have crucified the fleſh, with the affections and luſts.]

25. And they that are ſpiritual, as the Gnoſticks pretend to be, let them behave themſelves in all their actions Chriſtianly and ſpiritually, in oppoſition to all theſe carnal ſins, or elſe know that they have no right to that title.

25. If we live † in the Spirit, let us alſo walk * in the Spirit.]

† by the Spirit πνεύματι

26. And not be puffed up with an opinion of themſelves, and the vanity of appearing to the Jewes to be great zealots, and thereupon inciting the Jewes to the perſecuting of the orthodox, and vehemently maligning of them.

26. Let us not be deſirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.]

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Καταργήθητε

V. 4. Become of no effect] Καλαργεῖται, ἀποπαύεται, ſaith Phavorinus; the word ſignifies according to the notion of ἀργὸς, whence 'tis compounded, fruſtration, annullation, evacuation, abolition; and ſo 'tis applied to the Law, νόμ☞ καλαργεῖται, the Law is annulled. In a ſenſe not farre from thence 'tis uſed Rom. 7. 2. when 'tis ſaid, that the husband being dead, the wife καλαργεῖται ἀπὸ νόμ☞ τ☞ ἀνδρὸς, is diſcharged from the law of the husband, that is, receives no benefit from, nor owes any obedience or obſervance to the matrimonial contract. So here καληργήθητε ἀπὸ τ☞ Χριστ☞, ye are diſcharged from Chriſt, as when a ſervant is from the maſter, or as a wife from the husband, diſcharged from the advantages as well as burthens, ye receive no benefit or virtue from Chriſt, or the ſecond Covenant (all one with Chriſt) ſhall profit you nothing, ver. 2. and ἐξεπέσατε, in the end of this verſe, ye have fallen from, diſclaimed all right or title to the Goſpel, or ſecond Covenant, that of Grace.

Ἐξεπέσατε

b. Ἐνεργέω

V. 6. Worketh] 'Tis not amiſſe in this place to ſet down the particular notion of ἐνεργῶ in the New Teſtament. And to that purpoſe the firſt thing to be obſerved, will be, that there is no kind of neceſſity or reaſon to render it in an Active ſenſe, but rather in a Paſſive, throughout theſe books. So Rom. 7. 5. the motions of ſin ἐνεργεῖτο ἐν μέλεσιν, were wrought, or conſummate, or perfected, in our members, that is, the motions and inclinations were brought to act and habite. So 2 Cor. 1. 6. σωτηρίας τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ἐν ὑπομονῇ, ſalvation which is perfected, or conſummate, by patient enduring. So 2 Cor. 4. 12. θάνατ☞ ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεῖται, &c. death is wrought in us, as it appears by the Context εἰς θάνατον παραδιδόμεθα, we are delivered to death, v. 11. So Epheſ. 3. 20. κατὰ τὴν δύναμιν ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ἡμῖν, according to the power which is wrought in, or among, you, parallel to Col. 1. 29. κατὰ τὴν ἐνέργειαν αὐτ☞ ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ἐμοὶ, according to the force, or act, or virtue which is wrought in me. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. of the word of God, ὃς καὶ ἐνεργεῖται ἐν ὑμῖν which is wrought in you, preached unto you, and obtained its end (or perfection) to which it was deſigned, among you believers. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 7. the myſterie of iniquity ἤδη ἐνεργεῖται is made, or wrought, or (as in the Preſent tenſe) is in fieri, agitur, ſaith Caſtellio, agreeably to that of Heſychius, Ἐνεργεῖται, καλασκευάζεται, is prepared to enter, to diſcloſe it ſelf to the world. And ſo here πίστις δι' ἀγάπης ἐνεργουμένη, faith perfected by charity; ſo the Syriack reads it, and ſo Tertullian, Perficitur per charitatem fides, contra Marcion. l. 5. directly parallel to that of S. James ch. 2. 22. ἐξ ἔργων πίστις ἐτελειώθη faith is made perfect by works, as an habite by the effects or fruits. To which purpoſe it is obſervable that in Clemens Alexandrinus Strom. l. 4. ἀγάπη τελεῦται, and δι' ἀγάπην τελεσθὲν, and ἐνεργούμενον, are put as phraſes of the ſame importance. There is one only place behind, where this word is uſed, that of Jam. 5. 16. of the righteous mans prayer, δέησις δικαίου ἐνεργουμένη, of which what is the direct importance will not perhaps be eaſily reſolved, but yet there is little reaſon to doubt but that it is in the Paſſive ſignification alſo. To which purpoſe it will be obſervable, that one other notion of the word there is, which is ordinary among Eccleſiaſtical writers, for one that hath received afflation from ſome Spirit, evil or good. Thus (among many other examples,) in the Author of the Eccleſical Hierarchie, when there are repelled from the Sacrament καληχέμενοι, ἐνεργέμενοι, &c. there ſaith Maximus the Scholiaſt, ἐνεργέμενοι, τέλεσιν ὑπὸ πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων, they that are acted by unclean ſpirits. Why it ſhould not be taken alſo in a good ſenſe, for thoſe that are acted by good ſpirits or the Spirit of God, there is no reaſon imaginable from the nature of the word, only 'tis true the moſt frequent uſe is of thoſe that are poſſeſſed by the Devil (οἱ ἐνεργέμενοι, δηλονότι δαιμονιῶντες, ſaith Pachymerius the Paraphraſt of that Author of the Eccleſiaſtick Hierarchie p. 136.) but yet in the Apoſtle 1 Cor. 12. 6, 10. ἐνεργήματα is uſed of the chariſmata or extraordinary gifts of the Spirit of God: and ſo ſaith Phavorinus, ἐνεργημάτων, ἀντὶ τῶν χαρισμάτων, of which the gift of healing (and doing that only by praying and anointing,) being one, in thoſe times, 'tis poſſible enough that δέησις ἐνεργουμένη may be that prayer of him that hath that gift of healing, and conſequently that which is thus formed by afflation of the Spirit (for that the word belongs not only to perſons ſo acted by any ſpirit, but to actions that are ſo produced, appears by the uſe of the word in Juſtin Martyr, in Dial. cum Tryph. p. 87. where ſpeaking of Magicians, he ſaith, they were περὶ πάσας κακὰς πράξεις τὰς ἐνεργουμένας ὑπὸ τῆς δαιμονίου ἰσχυλευμένοι, carried captive by the devil to all wicked diabolical actions) which is here accordingly joyned with the gift of healing, & therefore called εὐχὴ πίστεως v. 15. the prayer of faith, viz. of that faith which is mentioned 1 Cor. 12. 9. which enabled them to work cures, σώζειν κάμνοντα to recover the ſick, as there it follows, or which πολὺ ἰσχύει here, availeth much, that is, miraculouſly, or as much as Elia's prayer for rain or fair weather did, in the next words. To that which hath been thus looſly ſaid of this word, may be added by way of appendage the words of Heſychius in his Gloſſary, ἡ ἐνεργουμένη, αἱ μὴ ἀργαὶ, ἐσκευασμένη, τελειμένη. In which 'tis clear, as in the greateſt part of that book, that there is ſome corruption in the copie, I ſuppoſe from ſome decaies in the MS. from whence 'twas printed. 'Tis poſſible there might be ſome Lacuna in the parchment which might take away part of the words in the midſt of this, which he that printed it was fain to repair by conjecture, and therein might miſtake. And then this other form of words I ſhall only propoſe (inſtead of that which we now read in the printed book) Ἡ ἐνεργουμένη δαιμονῶσα, καλεχομένη, τελειμένη or τελειωμένη, ſuppoſing that the word δαιμονῶσα and καλεχομένη were ſo either blotted or eaten out, that there remained mained nothing of them but thus much --αμ|------ομένη. If this conjecture be not too wide, then this Gloſſary will clearly afford the ſeveral notions of this word ἐνεργουμένη in the latitude, viz. that it ſignifie two things among ſacred authors, firſt δαιμονῶσα as Pachymerius rendred it, (and κατεχομένη, which is all one) a perſon poſſeſſed with the Devil, or that had ſome affliction, and ſecondly, τελουμένη, or τελειουμένη, wrought, or conſummate. One thing onely more will be obſervable in this verſe here to the Galatians, that by comparing it with other parallel places ch. 6. 15. 1 Cor. 7. 19. it appears that πίστις ἐνεργουμένη δι' ἀγάπης faith conſummate by charity, is all one with καινὴ κτίσις, the new creature, in one place, and τήρησις ἐντολῶν the keeping of the commandments of God, in the other, as indeed charity is the fulfilling the whole law, of all the moral law, together with the ſuperſtructions of Chriſt. p. 33. Agreeable to which is that of Marcus Eremita περὶ πνευμ. νόμ. Πᾶσα χάρις δίδοται ἐν βαπτίσματι, πληροφορεῖται δὲ λοιπὸν καὶ τελειοῦται ἐν ἐργασίαις τῶν ἐντολῶν, Every grace is given in baptiſme, but 'tis perfected (as πληροφορεῖσθαι and πληροῦσθαι is all one) by performing of the commandements.

c. Ἀποκόπτεσθαι

V. 12. Cut off] Ἀποκόπτεσθαι here, and in the Canons of the ancient Councels ἐκκόπτεσθαι καθαιρεῖσθαι, ἀφορίζεσθαι, are all expreſſions of Excommunication of the higheſt degree, anſwerable to the ſhamatha among the Jewes (ſee Note on 1 Cor. 16. d.) and conſequently here the ὄφελον καὶ ἀποκόψονται, I would they were cut off, is an expreſſion of a menace or threatning of Excommunication, an Apoſtolical denunciation, that they that doe not mend this ſeditious, ſchiſmatical humour, ſhall be cut off: or if the ὄφελον be but a wiſh it is then becauſe he diſcerned ſo much of the obſtinacy of the evil humour, that he thought this would not be likely to cure, but exaſperate it, or becauſe he ſaw his authority contema'd among them. As for that other notion of ἀποκόπτεσθαι which S. Hierome and others ſeem to referre to, in relation to the matter of theſe mens diſturbance, viz. that about Circumciſion, which they would impoſe upon all Chriſtians, Si putant ſibi hoc prodeſſe, non ſolùm circumcidantur, ſed etiam abſcindantur, 'tis ſomewhat too light to be affixed to the words of the Apoſtle.

d. Φαρμακείας

V. 20. Witchcraft] Among the practices of the Gnoſticks φαρμακεῖαι ſorceries are here juſtly reckoned (ſee Note on c. 3. a. and Rev. 9. 21. and c. 21. 8. and 22. 15.) And the grounds of that are clear, not only by the founder of them Simon, who was a Magician, but alſo by Menander his ſucceſſor, who was ſuch alſo; ſee Euſeb. l. 3. c. ult. Εἰς ἄκρον δ' γοητείας οὐκ ἔλαττον τῷ διδασκάλῳ περιελθὼν, μείζοσιν ὑπεραφιεὶς περιλογίαις, He was not inferiour to his maſter in magick, but more vainly profuſe in his portentous undertakings and aſſuming to himſelf to be ſent for the ſaving or delivering of men from the inviſible ἄιωνες or angels, ἀγγέλους κοσμοποιοὺς, as he calls them, taught that no man could eſcape out of their power but he that was brought up in the μαγικὴ ἐμπειρία magical skill, and by the Baptiſme by him delivered to them, of which they that were vouchſafed to partake, he promiſed them eternal life here in this world, without any danger of death or old age. Of this Irenæus hath ſpoken at large, and Juſtine Martyr hath given this account of it. See 2 Tim. 3. 7, 8.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphraſe.

1. BRethren, * if a man be † overtaken in a fault, ye which are [a] ſpiritual, reſtore ſuch an one in the ſpirit of meekneſſe; conſidering thy ſelf, leſt thou alſo be tempted.]

1. When any Chriſtian falls into a fault, you that are the governours in the Churches ſhall doe well not to exerciſe too great ſeverity on him, but either to regaine him by friendly advice, or els upon ſight of his contrition reſtore him to the peace of the Church again, conſidering how poſſible it is, that thou alſo thy ſelf mayſt fall into the like ſin in time of temptation. See Jam. 1. 13.

2. Bear ye one anothers burthens, and ſo fulfill the Law of Chriſt.]

2. Eaſe one another as much as ye can, as in a building every ſtone aſſiſts the next, helps to bear the weight that lyes upon it, and contributes its part to the ſupport of the whole fabrick, &c. and lay not weight on one another by cenſuring and aggravating of other men's crimes, for ſo charity requires, which is the ſumme of the Law, ch. 5. v. 14.

3. For if a man think himſelf to be ſomething, * when he is nothing, he deceiveth himſelf.]

3. And, becauſe of the aſſuming, haughty Gnoſticks among you, I ſhall adde, that if any man think highly of himſelf above other men, that man firſt, is nothing, his opiniating is an argument of it; and beſides ſecondly, he brings danger upon his own ſoul by this errour, falls into cenſuring and contemning of others, and into many dangerous ſins by that means, and ſo cheats himſelf, and perſwades no man elſe, but becomes ridiculous by his vanity.

† toward himſelf only, and not toward another, εἰς ἑαυτὸν μόνον καὶ οὐκ εἰς τὸν ἕτερον

4. But let every man prove his own work, and then ſhall he have rejoicing † in himſelf alone, and not in another.]

4. But let every man ſo prove and examine his own actions, as to approve them to his own conſcience and to God (ſee Rom. 2. note. f.) and then he ſhall take comfort in looking on himſelf abſolutely, (and not only in compariſon with others, whom he judgeth to be inferiour to him,) and diſcerning how he is a better Chriſtian to day then he was yeſterday.

5. For every man ſhall bear his own burthen.]

5. For you ſhall anſwer for no man's ſins but your own, and therefore need not buſie your ſelves about other mens actions, but onely your own.

*of all his goods ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς

6. Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth * in all good things.]

6. He that receiveth the benefit of ſpiritual inſtruction from another, ought to be very liberal and communicative of all that he hath to that perſons wants.

7. Be not deceived, God is not mocked: for whatſoever a man ſoweth, that ſhall he reap.]

7. And in this, as in all other acts of charity, eſpecially of piety toward thoſe that are employed by God, let a man reſolve, that as he deals with God, ſo ſhall God deal with him: as a man's courſe of life is, ſo ſhall he ſpeed at God's tribunal.

8. For he that ſoweth to the fleſh, ſhall of the fleſh alſo reap corruption: but he that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reap life everlaſting.]

8. For as he that makes proviſion, and layes out all his care and wealth for the feeding his own carnal deſires, ſhall thereby bring loſſe and ruine to himſelf; ſo he that liveth according to the Goſpel rule of liberality and charity to others, ver. 6. and laies himſelf out in works of piety, &c. ſhall thereby inherit eternal life.

9. And let us not † be weary in well doing, for in due ſeaſon we ſhall reap, if we faint not.]

9. And in duties of charity, &c. which have promiſes annexed to them, let us not be diſcouraged, though we meet not preſently with our reward; For as if we fall off, we ſhall loſe all our reward, even for that which we have hitherto laboured, ſo if we hold out conſtantly, we ſhall be ſure to have our reward in that ſeaſon which God ſees fitteſt for us, whether in this life or another.

10. This is ſufficient matter of encouragement to us, to make uſe of thoſe abilities that God hath or ſhall give us, and accordingly to expreſſe our liberality, and beneficence to all men, but eſpecially to thoſe that are of the family of the Goſpel, and take pains continually in the work of the Lord (in Apoſtleſhip, &c.) and whoſe lot is the Lord, who preaching the Goſpel are to live by it in all reaſon, ſee v. 6.

10. As we have therefore * opportunity, let us doe good unto all men, eſpecially unto them who are † of the houſhold of faith.]

* ability, ſee note on Phil 4. d. † the domeſticks of the faith, τους οἰκειους της πιστεως

b. 11. You ſee ||[b] how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.

|| with what kind of letters

12. They that deſire to appear Jewes, and comply with them, and not to be perſecuted by them (for the Jewes out of zeal to their law did then perſecute the Chriſtians) will needs have you circumciſed, that by that means they ſeeming earneſt for Judaiſme (not Chriſtianiſme) may eſcape perſecution from the Jewes, ſee note on Rev. 2. b.

12. As many as deſire to make a fair ſhew in the fleſh, they conſtrain you to be circumciſed, only leſt they ſhould ſuffer perſecution for the croſs of Chriſt.]

13. This, 'tis clear, is the ground of their practice, and not any conſcientious perſwaſion of the obligingneſſe of the Law; for they doe not themſelves obſerve the Law in other things, perhaps not in that of circumciſion (ſee note on Rev. 2. e.) but that they may make a fair ſhew that way, by being able to ſay that they have made you obſerve the Judaical law, they force you to be circumciſed, &c.

13. For neither * they themſelves who are circumciſed keep the Law, but deſire to have you circumciſed that they may glory in your fleſh.]

* doe they themſelves being circumciſed keep the law, οὐδε περιτεμνομενοι αὐτοι νομον φυλασσουσιν

14. Such complyances and ſuch boaſtings as theſe God forbid that I ſhould ever make uſe of, or of any other, but only that one matter of true boaſting and rejoicing in my ſufferings for Chriſt, in my conſtancy to the Chriſtian religion and diſcipleſhip, by which the pleaſures and honour and riches of the world are become liveleſſe and untempting to me, and I in like manner liveleſſe, mortified to the world; and therefore as I profeſſe not to be wrought on by thoſe motives with which your Judaizing falſe-teachers are moved, ſo I would not have you cheated by them.

14. But God forbid that I ſhould glory, ſave in the croſſe of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.]

15. the renewed regenerate heart, c. 5. b.

15. For in Chriſt Jeſus neither circumciſion availeth any thing, nor uncircumciſion, but [a new creature.]

16. all renewed regenerate perſons, which, whether circumciſed or no, are equally the people of God, and acceptable in his ſight.

16. And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon [the Iſrael of God.]

17. For the time to come, I ſhould be glad if they that are Chriſtians, or would be eſteemed ſo, would not cauſe trouble or vexation to me, for I am now otherwiſe employed then to need that trouble, and have greater evidence of my being a ſervant of Chriſt, then to doubt of the ſincerity of the diſcharge of my office, and my acceptance with him, howſoever I am looked on by you; for I have on me thoſe afflictions which are marks and notes of a ſervant of Chriſt, and which teſtifie me to belong to him, and that 'tis not long before he will ſeiſe me as his own peculiar.

17. From henceforth let no man trouble me, for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jeſus.]

18. the favour and loving kindneſſe

18. Brethren, [the grace] of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with your ſpirit. Amen, Annotations on Chap. VI.

2. οἱ Πνευματικοὶ

V. 1. Spiritual] What is meant by οἱ Πνευματικοὶ the Spiritual here, may appear by what hath been ſaid of the word Πνεῦμα Spirit Luk. 9. d. which ſignifies not onely the Spirit of God, whereby men are reformed, and the deeds of the fleſh (in the precedent chapter) mortified, but alſo the χαεισματα, the powers and gifts, which were beſtowed on men in the Church, in order to Miniſterial functions or offices there. And that Πνευματικοὶ Spiritual are here thus to be underſtood in proportion to, and by Analogie with, theſe, may be gueſs'd by the ſeverals which here follow: firſt, the Πνεῦμα πραότητος, Spirit of meekneſſe, which theſe Spiritual men are to uſe. This clearly belongs to the power of the keyes, veſted in the Governours of the Church, and is therefore ſet oppoſite to ῥάβδος the rod 1 Cor. 4. 21. where as coming with the rod, evidently ſignifies proceeding to diſcipline, to Cenſures of Excommunication, ſo coming in the Spirit of meekneſſe, (and ἐν πραότητι παιδευων, diſciplining in meekneſs, 2 Tim. 2. 24.) is admoniſhing thoſe meekly that have offended, (and to whom that method of fraternal reprehenſion is firſt neceſſary) as perhaps alſo admitting to repentance and abſolution thoſe that have reformed upon the infliction of the Cenſures. And accordingly this Spirit of meekneſſe here is this milder part of the Apoſtolical office, which is to precede the more ſevere; (and to prevent it if it be poſſible) firſt, Admonitions and Reprehenſion, which if they prevail, there is no need of proceeding any farther; and ſecondly, an eaſy admiſſion to penitence, (in caſe the Cenſures have paſs'd upon him) without proceeding to any higher degree of Cenſures, as in caſe of obſtinacy might be ſeaſonable.

πνευμα πραοτητος

To this ſecond the word καταρτίζειν may incline, which we render Reſtore, but ſignifies properly to put in joint any member of a body which is diſlocated, and ſo it fitly belongs to the reſtoring an Excommunicate perſon to the ſociety and peace of the Church; but yet not onely ſo, but ſignifies alſo to recover the offender to a ſenſe and reformation, be it by admonition, reprehenſion, or any ſuch milder means, ſee Note on 2 Cor. 13, c. And the doing of this being proper to the Governours of the Church, it follows, that theſe be here meant by the Spiritual.

καταρτίζειν

b. Πηλίκοις γράμμασι

V. 11. How large a letter] What πηλίκοις γράμμασι ſignifies, Theophylact hath expreſs'd his opinion. S. Paul, ſaith he, was accuſed to preach in other places for the obſervation of the Moſaical Law, contrary to what this Epiſtle contains. This forced him to teſtifie, what here he ſaith, under his own hand, that he did no where preach for the Law, c. 5. 2. and c. 6. 14. And therefore, whereas his other Epiſtles were oft written by an Amanuenſis, and onely the ſalutation with his own hand, yet here, ſaith he, he was forced to write all himſelf, and that, as he will conjecture, though he was not very well ſkilled in writing, μὴ οὐδὼς ἄειν γεφειν, ſaith he: And this, as he thinks, is noted by πηλίκοις γράμμασιν. πηλίκος is by Heſychius rendred ὁποῖος, ὁποδαπός, ποταπός, not how long, or how great, but of what manner, what ſort, noting the quality rather than quantity. And γράμματα are letters, meaning the letters of the Alphabet, and not ſo properly an Epiſtle. And accordingly, ſaith Theophylact, πηλίκοις, ὡ μεγέθους δηλωτικὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀμορφίας τῶν γραμμάτων, it is not to denote the length or magnitude, but the deformity, mity of the letters, or characters, in which this Epiſtle was written, S. Paul being neceſſitated to write it all with his own hand. But now, granting, as we have reaſon, this to be the right notion of the ſingle words, yet there is no neceſſity either this ſhould be thus applyed to the illneſs of the character, or inlarged to the writing the whole Epiſtle with his own hand: that is not ſo much as intimated in any other place, or in any antient record, and this one place cannot conclude it; for πηλίκοις notes the ſort or kind of the hand indefinitely, not defining what it was, ſave onely that it was ſuch as was known to be his. For ſo 2 Theſſ. 3. 17. the writing the ſalutation (ſome few words in the cloſe) with his own hand, was, ſaith he, σημεῖον ἐν πάσῃ ἐπιστολῇ, the token in every Epiſtle, that by which it was known to be his. And ſo if here it be ſuppoſed, that the whole Epiſtle were written by an Amanuenſis, as far as to c. 6. v. 11. and then the pen taken into the Apoſtles own hand, and uſed by him to the end of the Epiſtle, he may well begin thus, Ἴδετε πηλίκοις γράμμασιν ἔγραψα, you ſee and know with what kind of letters I have written, you know the character, that it is my own hand, under which it is that I teſtifie all that is before written in the Epiſtle, particularly that which is in anſwer to the calumnie againſt me, as if I preached circumciſion, &c. in other places, which I have aſſured you, and demonſtrated by my perſecutions from the Jewes, that I do not; and to this purpoſe I here adde again, under my own hand, a character of your Gnoſtick ſeducers, v. 12, 13. and the profeſſion of my own opinion and practice, v. 16, 18. and again an evidence of my doctrine and practice from my ſufferings, v. 17. And thus the whole difficulty is ſufficiently explicated without imagining any more. Or if the ἔγραψα I have written be thought Ἔγραψα to conclude, that he had written that which went before, and ſo the whole Epiſtle, I anſwer that it is poſſible he might, but not neceſſarily to be concluded by that forme of that word; becauſe if we ſtill reſtrain it to theſe laſt verſes, this will have perfect truth in it. For when he ſaith, Ἴδετε ye ſee, he muſt needs refer to that Ἴδετε point of time wherein his Epiſtle ſhould be received and read by the Galatians, and then 'tis certain that ἔγραψα I have written will be as true of the laſt verſes, as of the former part of the Epiſtle. And ſo that difficulty is removed alſo.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

a. Ἐφέσιοι

THat Epheſus was the prime Metropolis of the Lydian or Proconſular Aſia, hath been elſewhere ſhew'd, (ſee Note on Col. 4. a.) And therefore this Epiſtle inſcrib'd to the Epheſians, muſt not yet be ſo confined to them, but that it belong alſo to the other cities of this Province, even to all Aſia. Here S. Paul was, and diſputed with the Jewes, Act. 18. 19. (which ſeems to be about An. Ch. 51.) at which time he ſtayed not ſo long among them as to convert many, but left Aquila and Priſcilla there, v. 19. And to them Apollos came, v. 24. And by theſe the Chriſtian faith ſeems to be planted there Act. 18. 25, 26. And accordingly at Pauls return thither Act. 19. it is ſaid that he found diſciples there, v. 2. but thoſe only baptized with the baptiſme of John, which ſeems to conclude them to be of Apollos converting, who when he firſt preached, knew only the baptiſme of John, c. 18. 25. Soon after Paul returned thither again, according to his promiſe, Act. 19. 1. There he is oppoſed by the Jewes, and by their inſtigation, by the Gentiles alſo, yet continues preaching the Goſpel among them neer three years, Act. 20. 31. ſo that all Aſia, both Jewes and Gentiles, had it preach'd to them, and that with a mighty ſucceſſe, c. 19. v. 20, and 26. At his departure from thence, going to Macedonia, Act. 20. 1. he gave Timothy commiſſion to be Biſhop there, 1 Tim. 1. 3. there being already ſome hereticks, ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντες teaching other, that is, falſe doctrines, infuſing the leaven of the Gnoſticks among them, againſt whoſe poyſon Timothy was to watch, and ſo alſo the Elders, or Biſhops of the other cities in Aſia, ordained by the Apoſtle at his planting the Goſpel there, and all together, at a meeting at Miletus, are ſolemnly warned to watch over their flocks, and defend them againſt the grievous wolves, and Gnoſtick hereticks, which he foreſaw would ſpeedily break in among them. And accordingly here in this Epiſtle (as afterwards in Chriſts Epiſtle to them Rev. 2.) the doctrines, but eſpecially the practices of theſe men are inveighed againſt, which if permitted would ſoon bring them all back to heatheniſm again. In which reſpect it is, that he labours ſo magnificently to ſet out the mercies of God in receiving the Gentiles to the faith, and their huge advantages thereby, which therefore they are not to betray or loſe for all the flattering ſhewes of either the Jewiſh ceremonies, or the Gentile philoſophy, of which two the Gnoſticks divinity was compounded, and their lives filled with all villany. This Epiſtle was written and ſent to them from Rome, after his carrying thither, about the year 58. ſome ſix years after his firſt preaching at Epheſus. And it was ſent them by Tychicus, to which he ſeems to referre 2 Tim. 4. 12. And Tychicus have I ſent to Epheſus.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. I.

1. to the ſociety of Chriſtians which are under the chief Metropolis of Aſia, Epheſus, and which doe ſtill adhere faithfull and conſtant to Chriſt, in deſpight of all the temptations to the contrary.

1. PAUL an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt by the will of God, [to the ſaints which are at Epheſus, and to the faithfull in Chriſt Jeſus ;]

2. Grace be to you, and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3. who hath called us to Chriſtianity, and thereby afforded us, as many as have received the faith, and live in obedience thereto, all things in great abundance which may tend to our ſpiritual and eternal good :

3. Bleſſed be the God and father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, [who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual * bleſſings in heavenly places in Chriſt :]

* benediction in the things that belong to heaven through Chriſt. εὐλογήσαντα ἐν πάσῃ πνευματικῇ ἐν Χριστῷ

a. 4. Agreeably to what before the creation of the world he had determined in his decree of giving of Chriſt, viz. to call men from vicious living to Chriſtianity, and ſanctity, and purity of life, ſuch as he will accept of, coming from the ſincere love of him, and of our brethren;

4. According as he hath [a] choſen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy and without blame before him in love;]

5. Having in his eternal purpoſe of mercy appointed his Son to be preach'd unto the world, and that as many as received his meſſage, obeyed his commands, ſhould be received by way of adoption into the number of his children, and live lives of obedience, of holineſſe and purity unto him ; A mercy attended with very rich advantages, all which have accrued to us, not from any merit or deſert of ours, being ſuppoſed ſinners and enemies unto him, but only from his free goodneſſe toward us, which was pleaſed ſo to determine it.

5. Having predeſtinated us unto the adoption of children by Jeſus Chriſt to himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of † his will,]

† his own αὐτῷ

6. And this tends eminently to the ſetting forth th exceeding luſtre of his mercy towards us, or of the Goſpel, revealed to ſuch unworthy wretches, (ſee note on Heb. 13. c.) whom in Chriſt, the ſon of his love, he hath received graciouſly, as many as perform obedience unto him :

6. To the praiſe of the glory of his grace, * wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved :]

* with which he hath favoured us in ἐν ᾗ ἐχαρίτωσεν ἡμᾶς, or, ἐν ᾧ ἐχαρίτωσεν which he hath afforded us. for the King's MS. reads ἣν ἐ

7. In

7. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveneſſe of ſins according to the riches of his † grace,]

7. Having by that precious ranſome paid for us, the blood of that dear Son of his, afforded us captives to ſin a way of freedome, viz. a free pardon for all our paſt ſins, upon our preſent repentance and renovation; a work of the abundant favour and bounty of almighty God,

† or bounty, for the Ks MS. reads χαριτος & * which he hath made to abound, or abundantly poured out upon us

8. * Wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wiſdome and prudence,]

8. Wherein alſo his infinitely wiſe diſpoſal hath eminently appeared in this (of all others) moſt probable and powerfull means of bringing home ſinners to new life and bliſſe.

9. Having made known unto us the myſtery of † his will, according to * his good pleaſure, which he hath purpoſed in himſelf,

10. † That in the diſpenſation of the fulneſſe of times, * he might [b]gather together in one all things in Chriſt, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, † even in him:]

9, 10. Having now by the preaching of the Goſpel to the Gentiles alſo manifeſted to us that ſecret will of his, of which there can be no cauſe or motive rendred, but his own free mercy and purpoſed reſolution, which till now hath been kept as a myſtery (no man imagining that God ever intended any ſuch thing,) but which he had long ſince propoſed to himſelf, and referred in his wiſe diſpenſation to be performed and delivered out at this ſeaſon, in theſe laſt and worſt times, when the ſinnes of men being advanced to ſuch an height, it might rather have been expected that God ſhould proceed to execute vengance on them. This, I ſay, which was the juſt time that God had reſolved on for this purpoſe, to gather together his diſperſions, as it were, and to unite all in Chriſt, to bring into the pale of the Church a whole world of believers, the very Gentiles, (ſee note on Col. 1. c.) all diſcrimination being removed by Chriſt through his death and reſurrection:

b.

11. In whom alſo we † have [c]obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things according to the counſel of his own will,]

11. Through the ſame Chriſt I ſay, by whom we Jewes have had the will of God revealed to us, now above all that we ever had before, the Goſpel being firſt preached unto us, Act. 3. 26. and thoſe of us which have believed, taken poſſeſſion of, as of a patrimony, or portion aſſigned and ſet apart to God, to ſerve him in holineſſe, according to the ſecret counſel of him, who had long ſince decreed and determined this, of his own free mercy to us, c.

12. That we ſhould be to the praiſe of his glory, who firſt truſted in Chriſt:]

12. To this end, that we that were firſt converted to Chriſtianity, might publiſh, and preach, and make known the Goſpel to all others, and ſet it out as illuſtriouſly as might be.

* you alſo, having heard the word of truth, the Goſpel of your ſalvation, and in whom having believed ye were ſealed by the ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, ἀρραβὼν τῆς κληρονομίας ἡμῶν † for the buying out of the poſſeſſion, εἰς περιποίησιν τῆς δόξης * having heard † to the acknowledgment of him ἐν τῇ ἐπιγνώσει αὐτοῦ

13. In whom * ye alſo truſted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the Goſpel of your ſalvation; in whom alſo after that ye believed, ye were ſealed with that holy Spirit of promiſe,]

13. By whom alſo it is that ye Gentiles, though after called, yet now alſo having heard and believed the Goſpel, by which you are eſcaped out of your idolatrous ſinfull courſe, are in like manner ſecured, and marked out by God for good, by receiving that Spirit which is promiſed to believers, and which is the mark of all thoſe whom God receives (ſee note on c. 4. 30. k.)

14. Which is the [d]earneſt of our inheritance, † untill the [e]redemption of the purchaſed poſſeſſion, unto the praiſe of his glory.]

14. Which is given by God as a pledge or firſt part of payment of that inheritance which he hath deſtined to us (grace, pardon, ſalvation, and all the inheritance that God will inſtate upon his children) and this on purpoſe to purchaſe to himſelf a peculiar people, living gracious and godly lives, which tends ſo much to the illuſtrating of his grace and glory.

15. Wherefore I alſo, * [f]after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jeſus, and love unto all the ſaints,]

15. Conſidering therefore this mercy of God, as to others, ſo particularly to you, both knowing my ſelf the good ſucceſſe of my preaching the faith among you, and having received advertiſement of your great proficiency in it, ſince the time I was among you, and of that inſeparable effect and branch of it, your great charity to all Chriſtians that want your aſſiſtance, f.

16. Ceaſe not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers,

17. That the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the father of glory, may give unto you the Spirit of wiſdome and revelation, † in the knowledge of him,]

16, 17. I cannot chooſe but (as I pray for you continually, ſo) give thanks for you to God continually alſo; farther beſeeching the ſame God, who is known now to us by a more glorious title then that of the God of Abraham, even the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whom he hath own'd on earth, and now raiſed and ſet at his right hand in heaven, and who is the author, as of raiſing Chriſt glorioufly from the dead, ſo of all grace, and bliſſe, and glory to all that are obedient to the faith, that he will beſtow on you all things needfull to a Chriſtian Church, the gift of underſtanding the higheſt natural and ſpiritual truths, the ſkill of veiling the higheſt conceptions, ſpeaking parables, &c. and of underſtanding and interpreting prophecies, and diſcerning Chriſt and his doctrine in them; See note on 1 Cor. 1. c.

18. The eyes of your underſtanding being inlightened, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and * what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the ſaints,]

18. That by this means of illumination ye may be furniſh'd to all ſpiritual uſes, diſcerning throughly what is the benefit of his calling us to Chriſtianity, and what the glorious bleſſed condition of thoſe graces of his which are diſtributed among Chriſtians here (as alſo of thoſe endleſſe joyes, which are now inſtated on all penitent obedient faithfull ſervants of his) as an inheritance to the children, infinitely above that Canaan that was beſtowed on Abraham's poſterity;

19. And what is the exceeding greatneſſe of his power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power,

20. Which he wrought in Chriſt when he raiſed him from the dead, and ſet him at his own right hand in the heavenly places,]

19, 20. And withall the infiniteneſſe of his power that hath been engaged in this work toward us believers in ſubduing our enemies, ſin, and death the puniſhment of ſin, and raiſing us ſinners, firſt to a new, and then to an eternal life, which was a work of the ſame omnipotence with that which he firſt evidenced in that miraculous raiſing of Chriſt from the grave, and exalting him to the higheſt degree of glory, next to himſelf in heaven, (An embleme and eſſay of the methods which he hath now uſed toward us, by the preaching of the Goſpel to raiſe us from the grave of ſin, to a new Chriſtian life, and from thence to a glorious eternity)

21. Farre above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not onely in this world, but alſo in that which is to come;]

21. Farre, infinitely farre above all thoſe rulers and potentates (that have but fading power) by whom he was here put to death, ye above the higheſt degree of Angelical powers that inhabit heaven to all eternity;

22. And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the Church,]

22. And by ſo doing gave him victory and ſuperiority over over all his enemies, and conſtituted him the Prince of his Church, who ſhould till the day of doom have in his hands the ſole diſpoſing of that (every one that is placed in any power therein, moving regularly, and ſubordinately to him.)

23. The Church, I ſay, 23. Which is his body, the fulneſſe of him † that filleth all in all.] which is the body of Chriſt, and ſo is required to make him perfect in this relative perfection (as the body is required and neceſſary to the perfection of the head) though abſolutely conſidered, he is moſt exactly perfect of himſelf, (ſee note on Rom. 11. d.)

Annotations on Chap. I.

8. V. 4 Choſen us in him] What is the notion of ἐξελέξατο chuſing, in this and all other places, will be found ſet down at large, Note on 1 Pet. 2. c. All that must here fitly be enquired is, what is meant by ἐν αὐτῷ ἐξελέξατο Gods chuſing in Chriſt. And that will beſt be diſcerned by comparing it with the phraſe εὐλογήσας ἐν Χριστῷ, bleſſing us in Chriſt ver. 3. For that the bleſſing and the electing belong to the ſame matter, appears by the καθὼς according as, a term of proportion or ſimilitude in the front of this verſe, which makes the connexion betwixt them thus, that God hath bleſſed us in Chriſt, according as he hath choſen us in Chriſt, that is, that his actual, preſent bleſſing them, at that point of time, was correſpondent to what God had decreed before the foundation of the world. Now what the bleſſing there ſpoken of is, appears in general by the addition of πνευματικὴν, and ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις, a ſpiritual bleſſing, or bleſſing in things which belong unto heaven; and again by the predeſtination (in order of nature precedent to it) which is ſpecified to be εἰς υἱοθεσίαν to adoption; and laſtly, by what is here added, ἵνα ἡμᾶς ἁγίους καὶ ἀμώμους, for us to be, or that we ſhould be holy, and unblemiſh'd before him in love: all which ſpecifie the matter of the election here ſpoken of to be the ſame as of his bleſſing of us, viz. our holy blameleſs converſation, ſuch as becomes ſons of God, a ſpiritual, Chriſtian obedience in all manner of piety and charity, ſuch as Chriſt came to plant in the world, and in which reſpect he is ſaid to bleſs us in turning every one from his iniquities, Act. 3. 26. and ſo 'tis here diſtinctly added c. 2. 10. that good works are the things to which God hath before prepared (that is, elected) us, that we ſhould walk in them. This then being the general matter of the election here ſpoken of, (not ſalvation, or bliſs in another world, but) holineſs, or piety here, is yet farther determined, or limited, by the ἐν αὐτῷ, or ἐν Χριστῷ, in him, or in Chriſt, ſpecifying Chriſt to be the means of bringing all, particularly the Gentiles, to this holy life, from all eternity predetermined by God to doe ſo; as in that place of the Acts God ſent him thus to bleſs us. And this Chriſt hath done by revealing Gods Will both in the precepts which contain this holy and blameleſs life in them, and by his promiſes, which ſo ſtrongly and powerfully invite and oblige, and by his terrors, or threats, which engage us to the performance of his precepts; and ſo again by the miracles, &c. which ſignifie him to be ſent by God, but eſpecially by his death and reſurrection; the firſt to teſtifie the truth of what he preach'd, and withall to expiate for our ſins, and ſtrike, and ſeal in his blood a covenant of mercy with all, Gentiles as well as Jewes, of pardon of foregoing ſins, upon condition of reformation and amendment, and of giving ſtrength and grace to perform what God now under this Covenant requires of us (without which as we ſhould have had no encouragement to amend, ſo we had been utterly unable to have performed that work of reformation:) and the ſecond to confirm from heaven that he dyed an innocent perſon, in the teſtimony of that truth thus owned by his father, and by enſtating him in that power and dominion at Gods right hand, to enſtate on him alſo the power of actual giving that grace to Gentiles as well as Jewes, which by his death he purchaſed for all. This then is the plain meaning of Gods electing in Chriſt, &c. Gods free, undeſerved mercy in decreeing to beſtow Chriſt upon all, as the means (of all other moſt effectual) to engage and bring men to holineſs and purity of life, that is, by what Chriſt hath done and ſuffered for Gentiles as well as Jewes, to call and bring home ſinners of all ſorts to repentance. And this farther appears v. 9, 10. where the myſtery of his Will according to his own good pleaſure (which is all one with his election here) is ſpecified to be the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις the gathering all things, that is, Jewes and Gentiles, together in Chriſt, that is, making Chriſt the means of calling and bringing in the moſt Idolatrous Gentiles, as well as Jewes, to receive the faith, and obey the commands of God in Chriſt. And this is the ſubject of a great part (ſee ch. 2.) of this enſuing Epiſtle. All which as it makes the vocation of the Gentiles as well as Jewes to be the matter wherein Gods election here is terminated, (and is very farre from denoting any irreſpective Decree, of beſtowing eternal ſalvation on ſome few, which includes the abſolute rejection or dereliction of all others) ſo it no way inferres their faith or repentance to be irreſiſtibly wrought in them by this Decree of election, or by the means determined therein, but only that God hath in Chriſt pitch'd on moſt wiſe, moſt powerfull, moſt efficacious means of calling, and melting even the Gentiles, the worſt of men, which he likewiſe foreſaw would be effectual on many by the power of his grace, though many others through their own obſtinacy would contemn, and not make uſe of it.

b. V. 10. Gather together in one] Κεφάλαιον in Arithmetick ſignifies a ſumme, Συναίρεσις the putting many members together into one; hence ἀνακεφαλαιῶν to put many ſeverals together, and when 'tis uſed of ſpeech, then 'tis to ſpeak briefly and ſummarily, Eccleſ. 32. 8. and ſo ſaith Chryſoſtome, ἐν τύπῳ τὰ ὅλα μακρὸν λεγόμενα, &c. to contract a long diſcourſe into few words. It is uſed in military affairs for the contracting or putting together ſcattered ſouldiers into one troop. In Rhetorick it is the repeating and gathering the head of the former diſcourſe or oration. In all, it is the bringing into one thoſe that were ſeveral, and ſo it is here the uniting and joyning together of thoſe that were diſparate and ſevered before; the ſame that in the parallel place Col. 1. 20. is ἀποκαταλλάξαι and εἰρηνοποιήσας binging all to an agreement or pacification.

c. V. 11. Obtained an inheritance] κληροῦν (if ἐκληρώθημεν be the right reading) ſignifies, to be taken as a κλῆρος, lot or patrimony, in the paſſive voice and ſenſe. Now the κλῆροι among the Hebrews were thoſe portions of land that fell by lot to any in the diviſion of a land or eſtate, as in the firſt diviſion of Canaan, Judah had his lot, or portion, or diviſion, Reuben his, and God was Levi's lot, or inheritance, or poſſeſſion, as we call it. So in like manner, when in the diviſion of the world into Jewes and Gentiles, God choſe the Jewes, they were ſaid to be his κλῆρος or portion, Deut. 4. 20. and ſo believers or Chriſtians are now ſtyled 1 Pet. 5. 3. and in a more peculiar manner they that preached the Goſpel, the Apoſtles, who ſeem to be here noted by the ἡμᾶς (raiſing it ſomewhat higher then thoſe had had the knowledge of his Will v. 9.) and ſurely are the ἡμᾶς we v. 12. and προηλπικότας the firſt that hoped, or believed in Chriſt, and who, as ſuch, were before others preferred red to that dignity. And so accordingly have all that have served God in the ministery been called God's κλῆρ& or clergie, by whom therefore they are here said κληρωθῆς, to become Gods peculiar possession, or portion. But the Kings MS. hath not this word, but onely ἐκλήθημεν, we were called.

d. ἀρραβὼν

V. 14. Earnest] The Greek ἀρραβὼν is a Syriack word, ערבון from ערב contraxit, mercatus est, fidejussit, to make any bargain, as it signifies Gen. 38. 17. a pledge or first part of a payment, which is an assurance, or security, that the rest of the whole price shall not fail to follow. This is it which in English is peculiarly called the Earnest, that which confirms and assures the bargain. And so the Spirit and gifts thereof after the Ascension of Christ poured out not onely upon Jewes but Gentiles, is the pledge or earnest paid by God, the first part of the price which he hath agreed to give for the bringing in and redeeming the Gentiles out of the hands of Satan and sin, to be the servants of the living God: Those many other graces and rich treasures consequent to that gift, pardon of sin, increase of grace, and at last salvation it self, being the residue of the price, and here called κληρονομία ἡμῶν our portion, or that which we receive in the bargain, in this great purchase of Gods, his work of redeeming of souls.

e. περιποίησις

Ib. Redemption] What περιποίησις signifies will be seen Note on Heb. 10. d. and on 1 Pet. 2. e. Here it must be taken not for the action of acquiring or possessing, but the persons that are so acquired, all one with λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν, a people for a possession, or, which is all one, λαὸς περιούσι&, a peculiar people, Tit. 2. 14. that is, a Church of pure Christian livers, which are here said to be to the praise of his glory, as in the place of S. Peter, That they may shew forth the power, or virtues, of him that hath called them out of darkness into his marvellous light. As for ἀπολύτρωσις ransoming or redeeming, that is used sometimes for temporal deliverance, ἀπολύτρωσις σώματ& redeeming, or rescuing, the body out of persecutions and calamities, (see Rom. 8. Note l.) but here for spiritual deliverance from the power of reigning sin, as Tit. 2. 14. λυτρώσηται ἀπὸ πάσης ἀνομίας, redeeming from all iniquity, rescuing from all wicked life. And so ἀπολύτρωσις περιποιήσεως is no more then that which is mentioned of Christ, Lu. 1. delivering men from their spiritual enemies, ransoming them from those servile habits of sinne wherein they lived, that they may serve him in holinesse, &c. Hereby may also appear what is meant by the ἡμέρᾳ ἀπολυτρώσεως day of redemption cap. 4. 30. that redemption which had here been mentioned, the redeeming them out of their course of sin to the service of God (every one that is redeemed being his goods, possession, servant, that bought him) and so the sealing them by the Spirit to the day of redemption there, is perfectly agreeable to the sealing them here, by the same Spirit, v. 13. to this redemption of God's peculiar people, God's sending his Spirit and the gifts thereof among the Gentiles (which was done at the first preaching the Gospel to them) being the marking them out as God's purchase, such as are to be servants of his, and being so, shall be accomplish'd and crown'd by him.

Απολύτρωσις

V. 15. After I heard] The word ἀκούω to hear is answerable to the Hebrew שמע, and that signifies to know, as well as to hear, and is sometimes rendred εἰδέναι and γινώσκειν to know: And so it seems to be used in this Epistle, ch. 3. 2. εἴγε ἠκούσατε, If indeed ye have known, not heard, for his Apostolick Commission to the Gentiles, which is the thing there spoken of, was that which they to whom he had preach'd must needs know immediately, and not by hearsay onely. And so here their faith was a thing known by him also, and not onely heard; though it is also true, that their growth in the faith since he was there, and the evidences of their charity might be brought to him by the advertisement of others. Thus ch. 4. 21. If ye have heard him is, if ye have known.

CHAP. II.

Paraphrase.

1. AND you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins,]

1. And you heathens lying like so many carcasses, desperately gone in all kind of sins (see note on Lu. 15. c.) hath God quickned and raised to new life, v. 5. (all between being to be read as in a parenthesis)

2. Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the Prince of the power of the aire, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience,]

2. You, I say, that for so many years together lived formerly, & securely went on in the Epidemical sins of the nations, the customes of the Gentile world, following the direction of your Idol false Gods, (who prescribed all villany in their worships) that is, of Satan, that hath such power here below, and doth still exercise his power among all that have not received the Gospel of Christ,

3. Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past, in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of * the mind, and were by † nature the children of wrath, even as others.]

† birth φύσει

3. Among whom we of the Gentile Church of Rome from whence I write, formerly lived, and yielded our selves to those sensual sins and idol-worships which our lusts and our phansies were pleased with, and so went on in those heathen customes, which did universally overspread them, and were born, and lived, & continued in a damning condition (see note on 1 Cor. 11. f.) as all other heathens did.

4. But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,]

4. But God, who is infinitely mercifull, beyond what we can ask or think, without any thing in us to invite him to it, meerly out of that kindnesse of his which he bare to us, as we were in that sad desolate condition of sin and misery,

5. Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickned us together with Christ, (by grace ye are * saved)]

* delivered, σεσῳσμένοι

5. Hath by that power by which he raised Christ from the grave, raised us out of this heathen state of all kind of impieties, a state so farre from meriting any such dealing, that it deserved nothing but utter desertion (and therefore 'tis as wonderfull an act of goodnesse and mercy in God, that we are thus rescued, and escaped out of that condition by the preaching of the Gospel to us (see Heb. 13. c.) as it was for Lot, when he was by the Angel led out of Sodom, and commanded to escape for his life, &c.)

6. And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus,]

6. And as he hath quickened us out of this spiritual death, so in Christ our head he hath also in assured hope raised us up from the dead, and set us with him in heaven: For he sitting there, which is our head, we are at present not unfitly said to sit there also, and shall infallibly come thither in due time,

† τοῖς ἐπερχομένοις αἰῶσι τὸ ὑπερβάλλον πλοῦτος

7. That † in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindnesse toward us, through Christ Jesus.]

7. By which means he hath given an eminent testimony to all ages that shall follow this of the Apostles, how exceedingly gracious he is to those that live under Christianity

(which is called The age to come, ſee Mat. 11. note a.) by thoſe undeſerved mercies ſhewn unto us, by giving us Chriſt and his Goſpel to be revealed to us.

8. For you are delivered out of that heathen ſtate by the meer undeſerved mercy of God, who might juſtly have left you in it without ever calling you (who had ſo ſinned againſt nature) out of it; and the preaching of the Goſpel, which hath been the means of reſcuing you thus, is a meer free, undeſerved gift of God, the matter of the Goſpel being no way to be known, but by divine revelation, and God having ſent Chriſt, and Chriſt his Apoſtles, to make that known unto you, without which you had never heard, as without hearing you could never have believed, ſuch ſupernatural truths, (ſee Rom. 10. 17. and note on Heb. 13. c.) and all this an act of Gods free will and mercifull pleaſure;

8. For by grace are ye * ſaved through faith, and † that not of your ſelves; it is the gift of God:]

* delivered σεσωσμένοι

† this is not from you, οὐκ ἐξ ὑμῶν

9. Not from any merits of yours to move God to it, that ſo all may be imputed to him, nothing at all unto your ſelves.

9. Not of works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt.]

10. For we are formed anew by God, and as it were out of a ſtate of nothing (the heathen idolatry, in which we were) raiſed by the preaching of the Goſpel to a being, and a life, and ſo are as ſo many new creatures of his creating, on purpoſe that we ſhould bring forth fruit, live Chriſtianly, and that we might doe ſo, he hath accommodated us with all things which may be any way uſefull to that end.

10. For we are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, * which God hath before ordained that we ſhould walk in them.]

* to which God hath before prepared us, εἰς ἃ προητοίμασεν

11. And this conſideration and remembrance may be uſefull to you, viz. that by birth or natural generation ye were originally Gentiles, called the uncircumciſed by the Jewes, who had that circumciſion in their fleſh wrought by the hands of men,

11. Wherefore remember that ye being in time paſſed Gentiles in the fleſh, who are called uncircumciſion by that which is called the circumciſion in the fleſh made by hands,]

12. That being then without Chriſt, ye lived in a very diſtant manner from the Iſraelites, both in reſpect of cuſtomes and laws, but eſpecially of the worſhip of God, were juſtly deteſted, and not permitted to live among them; and for the promiſes made to Abraham, ye were utterly ſtrangers from them; and ſo in the firſt reſpect you had no God, nothing but Idols to worſhip, and in the latter, no kind of hope of good to entertain your ſelves with.

13. But now in Chriſt Jeſus ye, who ſometime were afarre off, are made nigh by the blood of Chriſt.]

14. For he is our peacemaker, and hath joyned thoſe two diſtant people into one, having, as it were, broke down or removed that little ſept or wall in the Temple, that ſeparated the court of the Jewes from that of the Gentiles, and ſo hath laid all common, brought them both into his Church to live without any diſcrimination of ceremonies, &c.

And having united them one to another, might alſo reconcile them to God, having by his ſufferings taken away all quarrel or falling out, whether betwixt God and them, or (eſpecially here) betwixt Jew and Gentile, having died for both indifferently, and thereby ſealed his covenant of mercies to both.

a. Μεσότοιχον τ φραγμ

V. 14. Middle wall of partition] We have oft ſpoken of the Gentile Proſelytes, the ſecond ſort of which, thoſe of the Gates, which were not circumciſed, were by the Jewes ſo farre accounted unclean according to the Law, that they were not permitted to come into that court of the Temple, called holy, where the Jewes were. So it is charged upon them as a fault, Ezek. 44. 7. that they had brought into Gods ſanctuary ſtrangers, &c. and Act. 21. 28. on Paul, that he brought Greeks into the Temple. The Proſelytes of righteouſneſs indeed, thoſe that had undertaken the whole Law, which were circumciſed, &c. they were admitted with the Jewes into the inner court: but theſe other onely into the outer court, called the court of the Gentiles, and the unclean, in which reſpect it is that the Temple is called the houſe of prayer to, or for, all nations, Mar. 11. 17. becauſe in that court the Gentiles were admitted to pray. In the ſecond Temple theſe courts were divided one from the other by a little ſept of ſtone, three cubits high, called, ſaith Joſephus, by the Hebrews γεισον, and by the Greeks δειξὸς, by the author of the book of Maccabees (1 Mac. 9. 54.) τὸ τεῖχος τ ἀυλῆς τ ἁγίων ἐσωτέρας, the wall of the inner court of the ſanctuary, which Alcimus there commanded to be taken down. On this wall was written in many places μὴ δεῖν ἀλλόφυλον ἐντὸς ἰέναι, that no alien might go within. The firſt mention of this law in Joſephus is Ant. l. 12. c. 3. where he ſets it down as a ſanction of Antiochus, Μηδενὶ ἐξὸν εἶναι ἀλλοφύλῳ εἰς τ περίβολον εἰσέναι τῦ ἱερῦ, that no alien might enter into that court of the ſanctuary, which was incloſed with the ſept, (ſo περίβολος ſignifies a court incloſed.) So again l. 15. c. ult. in the deſcription of the Temple built by Herod, there is mention of ἕρκιον a ſept, which incompaſſed the περίβολος or court, whereon there was a prohibition εἰσέναι ἀλλοεθνῆ, that any of another nation ſhould enter. This is called by him δρύφακτος λίθινος, and ἕρκιον λιθίνι δρυφάκτῳ, a partition of ſtone, or a ſept of a ſtone-partition, the word δρύφακτος from δρῦς (an oake primarily, then any kind of tree) being ὁ ἐκ δρυῶν φραγμὸς a partition (the word that is here uſed) made of timber, and vulgarly uſed for any kind of partition, though here of ſtone (as a leaden ink-horn, or a ſilver box among us.) This doth Gorionides affirm to have been a ſilver wall, betwixt the Sanctuary and the porch, with a golden doore in it, (but this I ſuppoſe not that the maſſe of the wall was ſilver, or of the doore gold, but that they were ſilver'd and gilt over) on the upper poſt of which, ſaith he, there was a golden ſword of twelve pounds of gold, on which were written theſe words, הנר הקרב יומות, A ſtranger that comes neer ſhall die. That this is it which is here called moſt expreſſly τὸ μεσότοιχον τῦ φραγμῦ, the middle-wall of partition, there is no queſtion; and this Chriſt is ſaid to take down, by making the Jewes and Gentiles for the future, without any diſcrimination, one ſheepfold under one Chriſt. To this ſept and prohibition of entring, as it ſtood among the Jewes, that of Eccleſiaſticus 19. 29. ſeemeth to referre, where the man of the houſe is ſaid to turn the ſtranger out of doores, as out of the Sanctuary or inner court, ἔξελθε, πάροικε, ἀπὸ προσώπε τ δόξης, Goe out, ſtranger, from the preſence of glory, that is, as ſtrangers were commanded to go out of the Temple, where was the ſchechina or appearing of God, which is ordinarily called δόξα glory.

b. Ἅγιοι ξένοις

V. 19. Saints] That ἅγιοι ſaints here ſignifie the Jewes, will appear by the oppoſition to ξένοι ſtrangers before; for in reſpect of the Jewes it was that they were called ſtrangers, they being the only people of God before, and now the Gentiles, that were but גרי ſtrangers (vulgarly known by that name) being received in to be συμπολίται fellow-citizens; with whom? why, with the ſame to whom they were ſtrangers, that is, the Jewes. Thus doth Procopius interpret it in Iſa. p. 683. who accordingly calls the Jewes τὸ ἐκ πατέρων ἁγίων ἔθνος the nation made up of the holy fathers: which ſaying of his gives the reaſon of this phraſe, why the Jewes are called ἅγιοι holy, viz. in reſpect to the Patriarchs, Abraham, &c. who were truly ἅγιοι ſaints, to whom the promiſes were made, to the participation of which the Gentiles are now called.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

1. FOR this cauſe I Paul, the priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt for you Gentiles,]

1. Hereupon I Paul, as an Apoſtle, ſo at this time a priſoner alſo of Jeſus Chriſt, who am perſecuted for this one thing, becauſe I preach to the Gentiles, and according to the doctrine of Chriſt vindicate the liberty of the Gentile converts, and the no-neceſſity of circumciſion to them (ſee note on Gal. 2. c.)

2. If ye have heard of the diſpenſation of the grace of God, which is given me to you-ward;]

2. Which you cannot chuſe but know, if you underſtand (ſee note on c. 1. f.) any thing of my Apoſtleſhip, my commiſſion to preach and conſtitute Churches among you Gentiles.

*have afore written προγεγρα

3. How that by revelation he made known unto me the myſtery (as I * wrote afore in few words,

4. Whereby when ye read ye may underſtand my knowledge in the myſtery of Chriſt)]

3, 4. To wit, that Chriſt ſhewed to me by revelation, or viſion, that great ſecret of ſending the Goſpel to the Gentiles (of which I have ſaid a little already in this Epiſtle c. 1. 9, &c. by which you may diſcern (if you read and conſider) ſomewhat of that ſecret or myſtery which I ſpeak of)

5. Which in other ages was not made known unto the ſons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy Apoſtles and Prophets by the Spirit,]

5. Which myſtery in the former ages was ſo farre from being revealed to men, that it was generally thought unlawfull to converſe or have any thing to doe with the Gentiles, till now the contrary hath been revealed (as to Peter, Act. 10. ſo) particularly to me v. 3. and generally to the Apoſtles and others (that received viſions to that purpoſe, and extraordinary gifts for the benefit and uſe of the Church, the gifts of tongues, &c. on purpoſe that they might preach to all nations,)

6. That the Gentiles ſhould be fellow-heirs, and of the ſame body, and partakers of his promiſe in Chriſt by the Goſpel,]

6. viz. That the Gentiles were to be taken in with the Jewes into the ſame inheritance, and have part in all the pardon and grace, acceptation and reward, which is now made over to believers in Chriſt, that they were to be members of Chriſt, and ſo receive influences from the head, (as well as the Jewes) that they were to partake of all the promiſes made in Chriſt, and that the preaching of the Goſpel to them was to be a means of all this;

7. Whereof I was made a miniſter, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me, by the effectual working of his power:]

7. In which work I have been made uſe of as an inſtrument, God out of his free grace to me, that was a perſecutor, being thus pleaſed to employ me, and by the gift of tongues and miracles, &c. fitting me for the diſcharge of it.

8. Unto

a. 8. I, I ſay, who am the unworthieſt perſon, and moſt unfit for ſuch an office, have yet had this dignity, this favour, this commiſſion vouchſafed to me, to make known to the Gentiles this bounty of Chriſt's toward them, in receiving them freely into covenant, without thoſe impoſitions of circumciſion &c. which were required of the Jewes: A thing which could not by any clue or ſearch have been found in the Jewiſh Law, if Chriſt had not commanded, and I and other Apoſtles received revelation to doe it;

8. Unto me, who am leſſe then the leaſt of all ſaints, is this [a] grace given, that I ſhould preach among the Gentiles the unſearchable riches of Chriſt,]

9. And to let all men ſee what this myſtery is which hath ſo long lain hid in God (who, as he created all things at firſt by Jeſus Chriſt, ſo hath now wrought this great work of new creation, of regenerating the Gentiles, calling them out of their heathen idolatries by Chriſt alſo) but is now communicated to the world; (ſee note on Acts 2. d.)

9. And to make all men ſee what is the † fellowſhip of the myſtery which * from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jeſus Chriſt;]

† communication κοινωνία.

* hath been hid from the ages ἀποκεκρυμμένου ἀπὸ τῶν αἰώνων

10. That by what is now done in the Church, the very Angels may now come to know that which before they knew not, the great variety of God's wiſe diſpenſing of things, as in his dealing formerly with the Jewes, ſo now in calling the Gentiles to the light of the truth, and knowledge, and practice of all Chriſtian virtue,

10. †To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the Church the manifold wiſdome of God,]

† That now ἵνα νῦν

11. According to the * eternal purpoſe which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord,]

* fore-diſpoſing of the ages, προθεσιν τῶν αἰώνων

12. Through whoſe mediation the Gentiles, all that believe, have now boldneſſe given them and liberty to approach (ſee note on Joh. 7. a.) and addreſſe themſelves to God, with confidence of reception and acceptation.

12. In whom we have boldneſſe, and acceſſe with confidence by the faith of him.]

13. And therefore I that am perſecuted for this reaſon peculiarly, becauſe I preach to the Gentiles (which the Jewes think to be unlawfull, and 'tis not ſtrange they ſhould, when it was a myſtery not formerly revealed to the very Angels, v. 10.) doe deſire and pray firſt for my ſelf (as after he prayes for them, v. 16.) that I be not amated at any thing that befalls me in this cauſe; or I doe beſeech you and pray for you that you be not diſcouraged, or ſtopt, or amated (ſee note on Luk. 18. a.) in your courſe, upon conſideration of the ſufferings that have fallen on me for your ſakes, (that is, becauſe I converſe with and preach to you, or aſſert this dealing of God toward the Gentiles) which ſhould be rather matter of glorying or rejoycing to you.

13. Wherefore I * deſire that you faint not at my tribulation for you, which is your glory.]

* intreat you not to be diſheartned αἰτοῦμαι μὴ ἐκκακεῖν, I deſire or pray not to be, or that I be not troubled; ſo the Syriack, that my ſpirit be not troubled.

14. For this cauſe I humbly beſeech God daily for the ſake of his dear ſon Chriſt Jeſus our Lord,

14. For this cauſe I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,]

15. (Through whom it is that the whole world of men, Gentiles as well as Jewes (ſee note on Col. 1. c.) are now acknowledged and owned by God as children, called after his name, Chriſtians, received into his family upon their receiving of the faith)

15. Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named,]

16. That according to the abundance of that power by which he hath called you to the faith, and wrought in you obedience to it, he will alſo by his Spirit give you to grow in all inward ſtrength and abilities of the ſoul, to perform all holy duties,

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Χάρις

V. 8. Grace] The word χάρις here, and χάρισμα in other places 1 Tim. 4. 14. ſignifies ſome ſpecial favour of Gods in order to ſome charge or office, that eſpecially of the miniſtery. So when Levi is called Gods holy one, Deut. 33. 8. the word there uſed in the Hebrew is חסידך, not thy ἅγιος ſo properly, (that would be קדוש) as thy κεχαριτωμένος, חסר ſignifying χάρις favour here; and ſo the perſon to whom the חסר belongs, is he that is favoured by God in a ſpecial manner, preferred to ſuch a dignity (an office) before others, without conſideration of any dignity in the perſon, onely upon the free mercy and good pleaſure of God.

b. Γνῶσις

V. 9. Know] The meaning of this verſe will not eaſily be pitch'd on, becauſe it is not certain whether the reading be ὑποβάλλουσ τὴ γνῶσιν ἀγάπῃ τῦ Χριστῦ or,

as the Kings MS. reads, ὑπερβάλλοντ ἀγάπω τ γνώσεως τ̃ Χριστ̃. If the firſt be the right reading, it muſt then be rendred the love of Chriſt which exceedeth knowledge; where the compariſon being laid betwixt the love of Chriſt and knowledge, and the love of Chriſt being by ver. 18. determined to ſignifie Chriſts love of us, the knowledge muſt probably ſignifie thoſe things which the Gnoſticks pretend to know, and boaſt ſo much in that knowledge; and ſo to know the love of Chriſt, which paſſeth knowledge, is to ſtudy and contemplate that one ſubject, Chriſts infinite love to us, which is infinitely more worth our ſtudying then what they boaſt of: and ſo this is no improbable ſenſe of the place, that the Apoſtle having prayed that they may comprehend the immenſe love of Chriſt toward them, v. 18. ſhould adde alſo, that they may know that love of Chriſts, which excelleth knowledge, that is, (as the Gnoſticks are very proud of their deep and ſecret knowledge, and place great perfection therein, ſo they on the other ſide ſhould) look upon the huge love of Chriſt toward them, ſuch as being conſidered, will by way of gratitude incline them to ſuffer any thing for his ſake, in oppoſition to being diſcouraged at tribulations, v. 13. and to poſſeſſe their hearts of that, as that which is farre more worth their thinking of and ſtudying, then the higheſt knowledge or skill of myſtical interpretations, which the Gnoſticks ſo pretended to. As for the notion of γνώσεως for knowledge ſimply taken, ſo as to exceed knowledge ſhould ſignifie unſearchable, unintelligible, that cannot probably be the meaning of it, when at the ſame time he prayes they may know it, and beſides the Genitive caſe γνώσεως, being the note of compariſon, ſeems rather to referre to the former notion, to compare love and knowledge together, and preferre the former. But if the other be the right reading, then the rendring will be plain, the exceeding love of the knowledge of Chriſt: and though that be capable of ſeverall interpretations, whether firſt, the love of God in revealing, and of Chriſt in vouchſafing to be known to us, or ſecondly, our love of Chriſtian knowledge; yet the former will be more commodious, becauſe more agreeable to v. 18. where it is Gods love toward us that they are to comprehend, and this is one ſpeciall branch of that, his revealing his Son unto us; to which alſo it is conſequent, that we ſhould (which is the point in hand v. 13.) adhere conſtantly to him, endure perſecutions, and not ſuffer our love to be cooled by them. And to this interpretation the words which follow will well connect, ἵνα πληρωθῆτε, &c. that ye may be filled to all the fulneſs of God, (ſee note c.) as an effect in us of this knowledge, or conſideration of Gods infinite love toward us.

Ὑπερβάλλοντ ἀγάπω τ γνώσεως τ̃ Χριστ̃

πᾶν γνώσεως τὸ ἀγαπᾶν τ̃ Χριστ̃

c. Πληρόω

Ib. Filled with all the fullneſs of God] Πληρόω to fulfill ſignifies to fill up vacuities, to perfect, to complete; ſee Note on Mat. 5. h. ſo here having recommended to them the βάλλοντ ἀγάπω exceeding love, or charity, of God toward them, viz. rich love, and promiſes of God in Chriſt, he adds that they may be fulfilled, that is, (as an effect of their conſideration of Gods love towards them) filled up and perfected to the higheſt pitch that God now in Chriſt requires of us, and that is properly called πᾶν πλήρωμα Θεοῦ, all the fulneſs of God, that is, all that perfection of charity to which God in Chriſt hath deſigned to elevate the Chriſtian, and wherein in a manner all Chriſtianity doth conſiſt, and to which we are engaged by his love to us.

Πλήρωμα Θεοῦ

V. 21. In the church] The variety of reading, either with, or without καὶ and, makes it doubtfull how this verſe ſhould be rendred. If it be without καὶ and, then it muſt firſt be obſerved, that the prepoſition ἐν, ſignifying ſometimes in, as in a place (and ſo it may poſſibly be here, in the aſſembly of Chriſtians for ever) ſignifies alſo through and by; and ſo it may moſt probably ſignifie here, and be all one with διὰ τ̃ ἐκκλησίας by the Church v. 10. that as there the various wiſdome of God was demonſtrated by the Church, that is, by Gods dealing in it, ſo here that various wiſdome and mercy of his ſhould be acknowledged with thankſgiving. And then, though 'tis poſſible ἐν Χριστῷ may adhere to ἐκκλησίᾳ, and ſo be rendred, the Church in Chriſt Jeſus, that is, the Chriſtian Church; yet becauſe probably, if that were it, it would be expreſſed by repeating the article τῇ after ἐκκλησίᾳ, as it is 1 Cor. 1. 2. therefore it will be more reaſonable to render ἐν Χριστῷ through Chriſt, as the mediator through whom as we pray Rom. 1. 8. ſo we give thanks and praiſe to God alſo. And ſo the meaning will be, All honour and glory be unto God through Jeſus Chriſt (by whom theſe mercies are conveied to us) for, or by, or through the Church, that is, through thoſe gracious and wiſe diſpoſals of his, that are now wrought by receiving the Gentiles into the Church, a thing which is likely to have main influence upon all poſterities of the world for ever. But if the καὶ be taken in, (as in that antient MS. it is) then as that muſt neceſſarily connect ἐκκλησίᾳ and Χριστῷ, Church and Chriſt, whether it be rendred and or even, ſo the ἐν cannot ſignifie in, as in a place, becauſe that cannot be applied to ἐν Χριστῷ in Chriſt, but muſt neceſſarily be rendred by, or through, and the Church and Chriſt muſt be the two means (though perhaps thoſe two knit into one, by rendring καὶ even) whereby this glory is to come in to God, and ſo is aſcribed to him thus, All glory be to God the Father, the wiſe diſpoſer of all, through that which is now done in the Church, and, or even, through what hath been done by Chriſt, in reconciling the Gentiles, and bringing them into the ſame fold with the Jewes, making up one Church of both.

e. 16. Chriſt being that head from whoſe influence, (as from the influence of the principal member, the body of any living creature is ordinarily compacted, and by the ſupplies that the veines and arteries binding faſt the joints, afford to every part, proportionably to the power or efficacy of the one, and the wants of the other, doth daily increaſe and grow, till it come to perfect maturity, and all this through the mutual amity that is preſerved in the body, ſo) the whole body of the Church being held together in frequent aſſemblies ver. 12. by every man's doing his beſt in the capacity he is in, towards the ſervice of the Church, (or by means of the rich men's contributing to the maintenance of the poor, accordingly as one wants, and the other is able to ſupply) grows into a complete ſpiritual body fit for the ſervice of Chriſt, and all this by the means of mutual love and charity.

16. 22. To wit, that you ſhould change your former courſe of life, and put off all your idolatrous uncleanneſſes that before you lived in, defiled and corrupted by unnatural luſts, (ſee 2 Pet. 1. b.) which now your falſe teachers the Gnoſticks deſire to bring in again;

25. Wherefore putting away lying, ſpeak every man truth with his neighbour; for we are members one of another.]

25. To this purpoſe theſe ſo many ſinnes will be fit to be avoided at this time: Firſt that of lying, which is a ſin deſtructive to ſociety, and for the reſtraining of this, ye muſt conſider that not only all Chriſtians, but all men are members of the ſame body, viz. of mankind, and ſure one member never ſpeaks falſe, or deceives another member, nor conſequently muſt we lie to any man in the world, though he be not a Chriſtian, much leſſe when it is to the injuring of our fellow-Chriſtians.

26. Be angry, and ſin not: h let not the ſun go down upon your wrath.]

26. Another ſin to be guarded by you is wrath; and if you be ſurprized ſuddainly with any commotion of mind for any thing done injuriouſly to you or others, yet let it not break out into bitter or contumelious behaviour, or if it doe, make all haſt to ſubdue that rage, and to reconcile thy ſelf to him that hath been thus injured by thee. h.

27. Neither give place to the † devil.]

27. And to this end take care that you give not ear to calumniators; or doe not ſuffer the devil to gain in upon you, and bring you to thoſe black deteſtable ſinnes of malice, miſchievous machinations, &c. by your continuing indulgently in this ſinne of wrath, v. 26.

28. Let him that ſtole, ſteal no more; but rather let him labour, i working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth.]

28. A third ſinne is ſtealing, and deſpoiling of others, which ſome, under pretence of Chriſtianity and their right to the creature, have freely ventured upon. They that have been thus guilty, let them reform, and reſolve that by their own labour and earnings they ought to get that which may ſuffice for their own neceſſities, and enable them to ſupply the wants of others. i.

29. Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the * uſe of edifying, that it may miniſter grace unto the hearers.]

29. A fourth ſinne is that of filthineſs, from which ye ought to be ſo farre removed, that not ſo much as your tongue ſhould admit any impure word; and therefore be ſure that no unclean diſcourſe (ſo farre from uſefull, that 'tis poyſonous and infectious, as putrid, rotten meats) be indulged to among you, but in ſtead of it, that which is wholeſome, profitable, inſtructive in thoſe things that are neceſſary for a Chriſtian to know, that it may bring advantage to them that hear you, and increaſe of piety, ſee note on chap. 5. c.

*inſtruction of uſe οἰκοδομὴ τῆς χρείας

30. And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are k ſealed unto the day of redemption.]

30. And repell not by your neiſome converſation the holy Spirit of God, by which you are marked, and ſealed, and ſet by, as wares that are by Chriſt purchaſed, to be uſed in his ſervice, a Church of pure Chriſtians, (ſee note on ch. 1. d.) k.

31. Let all bitterneſſe, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil ſpeaking be put away from you, with all malice.

32. And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Chriſt's ſake hath forgiven you.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

V. 8. Gave gifts] It hath been the manner of many nations, in their triumphs after victories, to go up to the city in pomp and ſplendor, to bring in captives bound, all people coming forth to the ſpectacle, and then to give ſolemn gifts or largeſſes to their friends and countrey-men, or kindred, as part of the ſolemnity: So M. Aurelius gave eight pound a peece to the poor people in the time of triumph. And this is here accommodated to Chriſt in his victory and triumph over hell, accompliſhed by his death and reſurrection. For to increaſe the ſolemnity of that, he went up to the heavenly Jeruſalem, his own city, from which he came forth, carried the Devil and ſin and death captives, ſhew'd them openly, ſhackled and unarmed, the Devil gagg'd and ſilenc'd in his oracles, death's ſting pulled out, and ſin left unable to hurt any that had truly repented of it; and, for a complement of all, he ſent his largeſſes to his Diſciples and clients, the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt. That which is here ἔδωκε gave, is in the Greek of the Pſalme, 78. 19. ἔλαβες received, probably from the nature of the Hebrew לקח, which as it ſignifies to give, ſo 'tis to receive alſo, as in Engliſh to take ſometimes ſignifies to give, and in Greek λῆμμα and δῶρον are all one. a. ἔδωκε

V. 11. Evangeliſts] The reſt of theſe offices of the Church have been explained in the Notes on 1 Cor. 12. a. b. c. And this of Evangeliſt, by the way, Note on Mat. 9. l. and Joh. 20. a. To which ſomewhat may here be added, for the giving the full notion of it. As firſt that the word εὐαγγέλιον, good news, or meſſage, being common to that which is written, and which is delivered by word of mouth, two notions there are of Evangeliſt, one for the writer, another for the preacher of the Goſpel. In the firſt notion we have the four Evangeliſts, of which two were Apoſtles of the twelve, Matthew and John, and yet thoſe as ordinarily called Evangeliſts as the other two. But this is not the notion which belongs to this place (where Evangeliſt is a diſtinct office from Apoſtle) but the ſecond, which denotes an office then known in the Church, when any that was taken notice of for ſome eminent degree of proficiency in the Goſpel, and ſpecial abilities of utterance and diligence, &c. was upon recommendation of the Church (as it is ſaid of Timotheus Act. 16. 2.) b. Εὐαγγελιστὴς chosen by any of the Apostles to assist them in their work, and sent out with power of preaching the Gospel (and of doing miracles, and with gifts of healing, to that purpose) and of baptizing those that should receive the Gospel, and with other powers also of ordaining Bishops, when the Apostle thought fit to allow it him. For as the office of Evangelist, being to preach to unbelievers, requires not the donation of all the Episcopal power, viz. of ruling, nor the power of Ordination necessarily, because when the Evangelist hath planted the faith, the Apostle himself may come and confirm, and ordain Bishops, as we see in Samaria Act. 8. 17. (and therefore the Author of the Commentaries on the Epistles under S. Ambrose's name, saith on this place, Quamvis non sint sacerdotes, Evangelizare tamen possunt sine cathedra, quemadmodum Stephanus & Philippus, Though they be not Priests, (that is, Bishops) yet they may Evangelize without a chair) so the donation of that superior power doth not yet make them cease to be Evangelists. And accordingly as Philip, which was but a Deacon (and therefore only preached and baptized the Samaritanes, Act. 8. 12. Peter and John the Apostles being sent to lay hands on them v. 17.) was yet an Evangelist, and is so styled Act. 21. 8: so others that were Evangelists had also power given them by the Apostles that sent them out to constitute Churches, and so to ordain rulers over them, as of Mark it is said that being sent into Ægypt by S. Peter, he constituted Anianus Bishop of Alexandria; and so when Timothy was constituted Bishop of Ephesus, 1 Tim. 1. 3. he is yet commanded by S. Paul to doe the work of an Evangelist, 2 Tim. 4. 5. that is, as he was Bishop of those that believed under that Metropolis, and of those also that should come in to the faith in all Asia, so he had also authority to make known the Gospel to them that knew it not, to call them to the faith, which is the peculiar notion of εὐαγγελίζεσθαι and κηρύσσειν, to Evangelize and to preach, and μαθητεύειν, Matth. 28. 29. to gather disciples, as those words are opposed to teaching, Act. 15. 35. and c. 5. 44. and as ὁ λόγος the word differs from doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. Now as he that from a Deacon is made a Bishop hath all the powers that belonged to a Deacon still continued to him, and the addition of so much more; so he that is an Evangelist, if he be farther invested with power of Ordination, may still remain an Evangelist, the power of constituting Bishops over them that believe and are baptized being reconcileable with the power of preaching to them that believed not. Only the word Evangelist denoting no more then that of being sent by an Apostle to preach, is indifferently used, whether he have the power of Deacon onely, as Philip, or more, as of Timothy and Mark hath been affirmed, and so is here set after the Apostles and Prophets, and distinguish'd from Pastors and Doctors, that come after, by which the ruling Elder or Bishop is understood.

c. Κυβεία

V. 14. Sleight] The word κυβία from κύβος a dye, might possibly signifie inconstancy and mutability, because nothing is more variable then that. And so in Antoninus l. 1. ἀναμφιβόλως ἀκύβδηλος is set to signifie the firmest constancy of mind. In this sense it might well enough agree with the περιφερόμενοι here, being carried about with the wind, &c. and so Xylander upon that place hath taken confidence to interpret it, that S. Paul advises us to avoid κυβίας ἀνθρώπων, that is, saith he, nè omni vento doctrinæ circumagi nos & in errores abripi patiamur, that we doe not permit our selves to be driven about, and snatch'd into errors by every wind of doctrine. But the Glosse of Phavorinus is more to be heeded, who renders it πανουργία, craft, subtilty, dexterity to deceive; and agreeably the very word πανουργία is here set with it, in the sense wherein we proverbially say of a cunning cheat, that he sets the dice upon us. And so Eusebius out of Irenæus speaking of Marcus, saith he was μαγικῆς κυβίας ἐμπειρότατος, by κυβία signifying deceitfull artifice, such as Conjurers use, Eccles. Hist. l. 4. c. 11. See Theophylact, who comparing the false teachers to κυβευταὶ Dicers, saith of them, that they do μεταπείραι ἀφελεσίφους, ὥσπερ πίπας, ὡς βάλοντα, remove the simple as they please, as at dice they can cast what throw they have a mind to; and this, saith he, is the κυβία here spoken of, and the μεθοδία πλάνης, ὅπερ ἡ πλάνος αὐτῶν μεθοδία βάλεται, whatsoever their deceitfull artifices have a mind to.

Ib. Ly in wait to deceive] What μεθοδία signifies in this place may thus be collected. Hesychius seems to render it τέχναι arts, for so I suppose the words in his Glossarie must be mended, in stead of Μεθοδίτας τέχνας reading μεθοδίας, τέχνας for as to μεθοδίτας, that followes after, and is rendred τεχνίτας. Thus μεθοδεύειν in Suidas is τεχνάζειν, ἀπατᾶν, to use any artifice, and to deceive. The word, saith * S. Chrysostome, is used ἐν λόγοις, ἐν ἔργοις, ἐν παλαίσμασι, in speeches, in works, in wrestlings. In speech it is set down by the Rhetoricians for one of the ἰδέαι λόγου· see Hermogenes περὶ Ἰδέ. Τόμ. α'. p. 217. and because these are all designed to the working on, and perswading, the auditors, therefore μεθοδεύειν τὸν λόγον is thus to contrive the speech, that it may probably be most perswasive: see Chrysost. Tom. 4. p. 416. l. 16. ἑτέρως δὲ αὐτὸ μεθοδεῦσι προσηνέστερον, he otherwise dresses up the same thing and proposed it more softly, or calmly, and cunningly. So Tom. 3. p. 495. l. 20. and p. 880. l. 1. ἐδέησε φανερὰ πεποιῆσαι τὰ ἁμαρτήματα, ἀλλ' ἑτέρως αὐτὸ κατασκευάζει μεθοδεύων, τυτθὸν πιθανὸν κατασκευάζων τὸν λόγον, ἐπικαλύμμασι κεχρημένος, he proposes not sins plainly, calling it idolatry, &c. but after another manner contrives and formes his speech, so as it may best perswade, by concealing what is likely to avert. So in Marcus Eremita in his ψυχωφ. p. 941. D. μέθοδόν τινα ἐπιζήτησις, καὶ λόγους παρεμύθιον, you desired some method, and exhortatory discourses, that is, some colours of perswasion. And the like arts of dissimulation and disguise as these, in all sorts of actions, and particularly in combates, are in like manner expres'd by this word μεθοδεῖαι. So μεθοδεῖαι τοῦ διαβόλου, Eph. 6. 11. the crafts and ambushes, ἐνέδραι, δόλοι, the treacheries, deceits, and cunning contrivances of the devil. Accordingly ἀμεθόδευτος is one that is not apt to be deceived by any subtilties, contrivances, concealments, as in Hermes Trism. l. 13. p. 32. ἀμεθόδευτος κριτής, a most wise Judg, that cannot be imposed upon by any artifices of the advocates or pleaders. And thus in this place, the craftiness of men is designed εἰς μεθοδείαν τῆς πλάνης to the managing and contriving of their false doctrine so, as they may be most likely to perswade and gain upon seducible auditors.

e. Κεφαλὴ

V. 16. From whom the whole body——] This verse hath much of difficulty in it, and the first part of that is, whether, Christ being called in the former verse the head of the Church, the influences that here are said to come from him, and are set down by Analogie with the natural body, are those that come from the head, and not rather from the heart. To this the solution may be easie, first, that it is very probable, that in a mans body the growth is from the head. For the animal spirits are by the nerves conveyed to the nourishing and encreasing the several parts, through the whole body; and those nerves descend from the brain by the spina dorsi, and are from the vertebræ there branch'd out over the whole body, from whence it comes to passe in crooked persons, where the vertebræ are displaced, that the growth is thereby hindered. And then the Analogie will hold exactly to the Church, the body of Christ, that it receives its supply for encrease, or growth, from Christ the head. Secondly, that if this be not so, but that the heart should be found to be the fountain both of life and growth, yet the Analogie here will still hold, it being reasoreaſonable to affirm that Chriſt ſupplies the place of both theſe parts in the Church, is the head to rule and direct, and the heart alſo to ſupplie it with all it wants, with graces for the beginning and increaſe of life. In the next place therefore, it is not eaſie to give an account of that phraſe, συμβιβαζόμενον διὰ πάσης ἁφῆς τῆς ἐπιχορηγίας. Συμβιβάζειν is ſufficiently expounded by Heſychius, εἰς φιλίαν ἄγειν, to bring to friendſhip; and ſo συμβιβαζόμενον applied to the body, ſignifies a cloſe conjunction, ſomewhat above that agreement of parts, or fitting together, noted by ζωαρμολογούμενον precedent; that ſignifying the fitting one part to another by jointing, or putting together, but the latter, the faſtning them when they are ſo jointed, either as by cementing, or by pinning, or by clapping plates of iron upon them, which will keep them from falling (or being pluck'd) aſunder: and this is done διὰ τῆς ἁφῶν καὶ ζωνδέσμων Col. 2. 19. Firſt, δι' ἁφῶν, literally by touches, or contiguous, but not continuous parts, that is, by joints, ſo called from ἅπτω tango, becauſe though the joints, like ſeveral pieces of timber fitted together, doe touch one another, yet there is not that continuity, as in each part is diſcernible: and ſecondly διὰ ζωνδέσμων, by ligatures, and bands, and here διὰ πάσης ἁφῆς by every touch, that is, every joint, without mention of the bands. Where there being no matter of doubt but that the ζωνδεσμοι bands denote the veines and arteries, thoſe ligaments of the body, by which the blood and ſpirits are conveyed to every part, it muſt follow, that the ἁφαὶ joyned with it muſt ſignifie the joints that are ſo cemented, and kept together with theſe bands, and ſo by both of them there, and by one here, (comprehending alſo the other under it) the body is ἐπιχορηγούμενον and συμβιβαζόμενον, ſupplied by the one, and knit together by the other. And then it being evident that this place and that are parallel, it will follow, Firſt, that πᾶσα ἁφὴ here, every touch, or contiguity, or joint, will be all one with ἁφαὶ καὶ ζωνδεσμοι touches and ligaments in the Plural there; and Secondly, that the Genitive τῆς ἐπιχορηγίας, that follows here, muſt be the latter of two Subſtantives, and denote the office or uſe of the ἁφαὶ, the joints, and veins, and arteries, viz. ἐπιχορηγεῖν, to ſupply, or contribute to every part that which it wants, as in the place to the Coloſſ. the body is ſaid ἐπιχορηγεῖσθαι in the Paſſive, to be thus ſupplied and provided for by them. The third difficulty is, what is the importance of κατ' ἐνέργειαν, and that will now be more eaſily ſalved. For the ſupply being made by the veines and arteries (that knit the joints) to all the parts of the body, thoſe parts that receive the ſupplie being after mentioned, and ἐν μέτρῳ, noting their proportion of want, the degree or meaſure of their capacity of receiving it, ἐνέργεια muſt needs belong to the Agent in this ſupply, the joints, and veins, and arteries, that thus contribute to the wants of each part; and ſo κατ' ἐνέργειαν will ſignifie by, or according to, their operation, or operative virtue, or efficiency, or power, ἐν μέτρῳ ἑνὸς ἑκάστου μέρους in the proportion of every member, that is, in proportion to what every member wants, not only for its preſent ſubſiſtence, to repair what is daily loſt, but for growth alſo, till it attain to the full dimenſions that belong to it. The laſt difficulty is, why when τὸ σῶμα the body is the Subject of the Propoſition, and conſequently ποιεῖται αὔξησιν cauſes increaſe is the Predicate that connects with it, here is yet added τοῦ σώματος of the body, thus, the body cauſeth encreaſe of the body. But that is anſwered alſo by the uſe of the word בָּשָׂר in Hebrew, to which τὸ σῶμα body in Greek is anſwerable, which ſignifies not only body, but being, eſſence, and being joined with any thing elſe, ſignifies that to which it is joined, בְּשָׂרוֹ his body, that is, himſelf; and ſo here 'tis taken, and ſo ſignifies no more but that the body by thoſe means ſpecified cauſeth increaſe of it ſelf, that is, is daily nouriſhed and increaſed, εἰς οἰκοδομὴν ἑαυτοῦ ἐν ἀγάπῃ, to the building up, or improving, it ſelf in love, which is, as it were, the reciting of the whole verſe, and applying of it to the buſineſſe in hand, the Church, as it is the body of Chriſt; that as union and kindneſſe, and the ſupply that is made by one part of the body to the other, is that that ſuſtains and gives growth to the body, ſo is amity and joining together in common aſſemblies, and the rich mens and the maturer and ſtronger Chriſtians contributing their ſupplies to the temporal, but eſpecially to the ſpiritual wants of the poorer and weaker, a means of increaſing and building up the Church of Chriſt, whereſoever it hath been planted. By what hath been here ſaid thus largly, that other parallel place Col. 2. 19. is ſufficiently explained alſo.

V. 19. Paſt feeling] Ἀπαλγῶν is, ſaith Pauſanias, παύσασθαι ἀλγεῖν, to ceaſe to feel cold; as ἀλγῶν is not πονῶν, but πάσχειν, not Actively to labour, but Paſſively to ſuffer pain. So ἀπαλγοῦντες ὑπὸ τοῦ πολλοῦ ῥίγους, they that through extreame cold are num'd, and can neither feel, nor doe any thing. f. Ἀπαλγῶν

Ib. Uncleanneſſe] Ἀκαθαρσία περὶ ἀῤῥένων, καὶ θηλέων ἀῤῥητοποιΐας, ſaith S. Baſil ad Diodorum, the word is uſed for thoſe abominable ſins not to be named, whether of men or women. g. Ἀκαθαρσία

V. 26. Let not the ſun goe—] What is here adviſed by the Apoſtle, is parallel to the directions of the antient Philoſophers, known by the Epheſians to whom he wrote. Ariſtotle diſtinguiſheth in this matter, Eth. l. 7. c. 6. between ἀκρόχολοι thoſe that are highly enraged, and πικροὶ bitter, or contumelious in their anger, and χαλεποὶ hard to be reconciled, whom elſewhere he calls δυσδιάλυτοι thoſe that hardly are diſſolved, hardly put off their diſpleaſure, Eth. 4. 5. Theſe three ſorts are here referred to by the Apoſtle. The firſt (ἀκρόχολοι) is intimated in the ὀργίζεσθε be angry, whether by that be meant ſuddain anger and haſtineſſe, or whether diſtemper and rage, conceived upon any the greateſt provocation. This firſt degree is here ſuppoſed, and the exhortation founded in the preſence of it, which yet concludeth not this whether ſuddenneſſe of paſſion, or inordinacy of rage, to be no ſin; for certainly the contrary to the ſlowneſſe to anger is elſwhere commanded, βραδὺς εἰς ὀργὴν, Jam. 1. 19. and ſo of the charitable man it is ſaid 1 Cor. 13. 4. μακροθυμεῖ, he is ſlow to anger. And Pſalm 2. 4. whence theſe words are recited from the Septuagint, 'tis certain, thoſe that are there ſpoken to did ſinne, in being diſpleaſed at Gods ſetting up David; and their rebellion againſt him was but an higher degree of it, of which he forewarns them in the next words, ſinne not, that is, fall not into that horrible ſin. The ſecond ſort, πικροὶ, is forbidden in the μὴ ἁμαρτάνετε, ſinne not, this being the firſt aggravation of the fault of anger indulged to, that it becomes bitter, which is expreſs'd by παροξύνεται 1 Cor. 13. 5. a παροξυσμὸς an exaſperation, or paroxyſm of this evil humor. And the third, χαλεποὶ or δυσδιάλυτοι, is here expreſs'd by the very ſame colour, that the antient Philoſophers, the Pythagoreans, had thought fit to expreſſe it by. For of them, ſaith Plutarch, de Fat. am. that when they fell into any λοιδορία ὑπ' ὀργῆς contumely through anger; πρὶν ἢ τὸν ἥλιον δῦναι--διελύοντο, before the ſun went down, they ſhook hands, and were diſſolved, (directly contrary to the δυσδιάλυτοι) or made friends again. And ſo here ὁ ἥλιος μὴ ἐπιδυέτω ἐπὶ τῷ παροργισμῷ ὑμῶν Let not the ſun goe down upon your wrath, where παροργισμὸς being that παροξυσμὸς exaſperation of anger, which breaks out into bitter words, and ſo all one directly with the λοιδορία ὑπ' ὀργῆς, the contumelious behaviour produced by anger, the Apoſtles command is, that he that hath been guilty of it, muſt come to temper, and ſue for reconciliation, (as the ſame Pythagoreans did, τὰς δεξιὰς ἐμβάλλοντες ἀλλήλοις καὶ ἀσπαζόμενοι, ſhaking hands and embracing one another) before the h. Ὀργίζεσθε παροξύνεται δυσδιάλυτοι Παροργισμὸς ὁ Ἡλιος μὴ ἐπιδυέτω

the ſun goe down, that is, either ſpeedily (as Chriſt adviſes, agree with thy adverſary quickly) or elſe before the time of ſolemn praying to God, which was conſtantly at evening, and ſo the exhortation here will bear proportion with that Mat. 5. 23, 24. If thou bringeſt thy gift unto the altar, and there remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee (as he that hath been reproached by thee in thy wrath hath.) leave there thy gift, and firſt be reconciled to thy brother (that is, obtain his reconciliation to thee) and then, and not till then, thou mayeſt offer thy gift.

i. γνωμίτει κλεπτίτω μᾶλλον δὲ κοπιάτω

V. 28. Working with his hands] The reaſon of the conjoining of the prohibition of ſtealth, and the precept of labour, will be diſcerned by remembring the old verſe in Phocylides,

Πᾶς γὰρ ἀεργὸς ἀνὴρ ζώῃ κλοπιῇσι μάλιστα,

There is no way for a ſlug-gard to live, but by ſtealing, and acts of that kind. And ſo ſaith Chryſoſtome, Τὸ γὰρ κλέπτειν ἀργίας ἐστὶν. ſtealing is an effect of idleneſſe.

k. ἐσφράγισε

V. 30. Sealed] The ſpecial uſe of a Seal, and that which in this and other places of the Scripture is moſt commonly referr'd to, is that of a mark or Character ſet upon wares or commodities that are bought by any; and becauſe men were as ordinarily bought as any other commodity, nothing was more ordinary then to ſet a ſeal or mark upon them, either in their forehead or ſome other part, to diſtinguiſh them from all other mens ſervants. So ſaith Theophylact on Rom. 8. 10. Ὁ μὴ ἔχων σφραγῖδα, ἐκ ἔστι τοῦ δεσπότου τῆς διὰ τῆς σφραγῖδος ἐκείνης δηλωθείσης, He that hath not the ſeal, is not the ſervant, or goods, of the Maſter, who is expreſs'd to be ſo by that ſeal. Thus Rev. 7. 3. the ſealing is there accommodated to the ſervants of God, who are there ſuppoſed to be bought, and are now farther to be reſcued out of the temporall enſuing danger, and as a token of that, ſealed in the forehead; as ſervi, ſervants, in reſpect of the originall of the word, à ſervando, is all one with σωζόμενοι, who being ſpiritually reſcued and ſaved already from the pollutions of the world, are now to be delivered from the approaching deſtruction, when, without that mark of diſcrimination, the good and ill might all be involved in the ſame calamity. See Note on Rev. 7. c. Thus when Joh. 6. 27. 'tis ſaid that God the father hath ſealed Chriſt, the meaning is clear, that by the miracles which he did, and eſpecially by the Holy Ghoſt's deſcending upon him, with οὗτός ἐστι this is he, he had owned him his ſervant, Iſa. 42. 1. (ſee Note on Mar. 3. l.) and demonſtrated it as punctually, as if he had mark'd him in the forehead that this was his anointed ſpecial ſervant, ſent by commiſſion from him, diſcriminated from all others, and that whatſoever he ſaid, was the will and pleaſure of God. In reference to what was there ſaid of Gods ſealing Chriſt, is that which is here ſaid to be underſtood alſo. For there the Spirits coming down upon Chriſt was the ſealing of him, the ſignifying that he was Gods ſervant ſent on his meſſage to the world; and here in like manner the Epheſians are ſaid to be ſealed by the Spirit to the day of redemption, that is by the preaching of the Goſpell, and ſeling of a Church among them, which is an effect directly of the Holy Ghoſts deſcending on the Apoſtles (as before upon Chriſt) and an act of the office of the Holy Ghoſt, by which the Epheſians that were believers were demonſtratively pointed out to be by God deſigned to his ſervice, to a gracious Chriſtian life, and nothing ſo contrary ſo grievous to this Holy Spirit, as their neglecting and contradicting theſe deſignes of God, living unchriſtianly v. 29. By this 'twill be eaſie to underſtand the like phraſe 2 Cor. 1. 22. where alſo, as here, to Gods ſealing us is ſtraight added his giving his ſpirit as a pledge, &c. So Eph. 1. 13. ye were ſealed by the holy Spirit of promiſe, that is, by that holy Spirit promiſed by Chriſt, and in the Goſpell called, the promiſe of the father, Luk. 24. 49. which whereſoever it is given (that is where a Church is ſetled and eſtabliſhed) is ἀρραβὼν κληρονομίας, a pledg or firſt part of that inheritance or portion, which ſhall hereafter be beſtowed on thoſe which by this appear to be received and acknowledged as ſervants and ſonnes of God.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. V.

1. Be ye therefore as diligent to render your ſelves the pictures and reſemblances of God, which hath thus vouchſafed to be your Father, as any children are by nature in the lineaments of the face, or by inſtitution in the qualities of the minde, like to their naturall parents.

1. BE ye therefore * followers of God as dear children;] * imitators μιμηταὶ

2. And continue conſtant to death in the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith, (ſee note on Rev. 2. b.) thereby imitating the love of Chriſt to us, who that he might confirm and ſeal the truth of his preaching for which he was ſent by God, offered up his own life, was willingly content to die; which death of his, as it was for our ſakes, ſo was it moſt acceptable to God, and ſo cannot be better compared, then to a meat-offering or drink-offering, which being offered for our ſins unto God (and of the former a part burn'd upon the altar, and the reſt for the uſe of the Prieſt, Lev. 2. 3. but the latter wholly conſumed on the altar,) is ſaid to be of a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord, and Gen. 8. 20. to ſatisfie for us, and work our peace.

a. 2. And walk in love, as Chriſt alſo hath loved us, and given himſelf for us, an [a] offering and ſacrifice to God for a ſweet ſmelling ſavour.]

3. And for the Gnoſtick noiſome foule practices, unlawfull, unnaturall, riotous luſts, let them never get the leaſt admiſſion among you, but be utterly deteſted by you, according to that obligation that lies on you as Chriſtians, in oppoſition to the heathens:

3. But fornication, and all uncleanneſſe or † covetouſneſſe, let it not be once named amongſt you, as becometh Saints:] † inordinate deſire, ſee note on Rom. 1. h.

b. c. 4. And ſo all unclean geſtures, and obſcene talking, or unſavory jeſts to cauſe laughter, which are all unbeſeeming a Chriſtian: but purity, chaſtneſs, graciouſneſs of language, oppoſite to the filthineſs before, or elſe bleſſing and praiſing of God, a far fitter ſubject for our rejoycing.

4. *Neither filthineſſe, nor [b] fooliſh talking, nor jeſting, which are not convenient: but rather [c] giving of thanks.] * And filthineſſe, and fooliſh ſpeaking, or jeſting, which are things unſeemly, but rather graciouſneſſe.

5. For by the Chriſtian doctrine ye are aſſured, that he that is guilty of any unlawfull, eſpecially unnaturall, inordinate luſt (ſee Rom. 1. note i.) thoſe ſins which were uſed in the myſteries of the heathens, is an abſolute Gentile perſon, hath no portion in the Church of God under Chriſt, nor inheritance in heaven. See note on 1 Cor. 5. 1.

5. For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean perſon, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Chriſt & of God.]

6. Let no man flatter you, that theſe are tolerable for a Chriſtian, for they are the very ſins for which God hath ſo plagued the heathens, as he did Sodome, &c.

6. Let no man deceive you with vain words: for becauſe of theſe things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience.]

7. Doe not ye then joyn in their ſins, that ye may not in their puniſhments.

7. Be not ye therefore partakers with them.]

8. For

8. For ye were sometimes darkneſſe, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light,]

8. For though ye were formerly heathens, yet now ye are become Christians, and that layes an obligation on you, and all such as you, to live like Christians, * or light: for the King's MS reads φωτὸς, see v. 8, and 11.

9. (For the fruit of * the Spirit is in all goodneſſe, and righteousneſſe, and truth)]

9. (For that Spirit that God hath sent among us in the preaching of the Gospel, being the Spirit of God, must bring forth all kindneſſe, justice, fidelity, and such like, (Gal. 5. 22.)

† Examining δοκιμαζοντες

10. † Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord.]

10. Searching and approving, and accordingly practising, whatsoever you shall find acceptable to God: see note on Rom. 2. f.

* discover them ἐλέγχετε

11. And have no fellowship with the unfruitfull works of darkneſſe, but rather * reprove them.]

11. And goe not ye to their heathen mysteries, comply not with their close dark abominable practices, but oppose and help to bring them to light, that they may leave them, (the secrecy being the onely thing that secures and continues them in them.)

12. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.]

12. For those secret practices are such that they dare not appear in the light, and therefore are by the devill, who prescribes them as parts of his worship, appointed to be used in close recesses, which are called their mysteries, as the highest, but indeed the vilest part of their religion, (see note on Rev. 17. c.)

† being discovered by the light are made manifest, ἐλεγχόμενα ὑπὸ τοῦ φωτὸς φανεροῦται

13. But all things † that are approved are made manifeſt by the light; for whatsoever doth make manifeſt, is light.]

13. But Christianity is a means to discover and display these abominable cheats and villanies, as light is the direct means to discover what darkneſſe hath hid, and to make them renounce and forsake it, when they see it is seen and abhorred by men.

* shine upon thee ἐπιφαύσει σοι

14. Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepeſt, and ariſe from the dead, and Christ shall * give thee light]

14. According to that saying of Isaiah, c. 60. 1. Arise, be enlightned, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee; that is, this Christian estate is a lightsome condition, and engages every man that expects to have his part in it, to get out of all these horrible dark secrecies, which are put to shame and discomfited by the light.

† how ye walk exactly, ὡς σοφοὶ περιπατεῖτε

15. See then d † that ye walk circumſpectly, not as fooles, but as wiſe,]

15. See therefore and consider how ye may walk most exactly and inoffensively, to which end ye will need great circumspection, as being placed in the midst of such temptations and dangers, by one or other ready to be insnared on every side. If your circumspection be not intense enough, ye will be insnared as fools in their lusts and complyances, which bring such carnal temptations along with them; and if ye be over earnest in admonishing them, and vehement unseasonably, ye will exasperate and incurre the danger Mat. 7. 6. of being rent by the swine. d.

16. eRedeeming the time, becauſe the dayes are evill.]

16. And therefore as you must be sure to preserve the innocence of the dove, so ye have need of prudence and warinesse and wisdome of behaviour, because the world is at this time full of corruption, and of contumacy, and persecuting of all good and orthodox Christians. e.

17. Wherefore be ye not unwiſe, but underſtand what the will of the Lord is.]

17. And therefore see that ye be not corrupted by their insinuations, but let the knowledge of your Christian duty so fortifie you, that ye be not befooled or insnared by them.

* dissolutenesse

18. And be not drunk with wine wherein is f * exceſſe; but be filled with the Spirit:]

18. And do not ye, like those heathens in their Bacchanals, inflame your selves with wine, to which all manner of inordinate lust is consequent, (and then think ye are inspired, and able to prophesy by that means) but let your hearts be filled with zeal and devotion (see note on Luk. 9. e.) f.

19. Speaking to your ſelves in g Pſalms, and Hymnes, and ſpiritual ſongs, † ſinging and making melody in your hearts to the Lord,]

19. And let all your mirth and jollity be expres'd in the several kindes of hymnes, &c. that are used among Christians, after a pious manner, singing, and inwardly in your hearts rendering praises to God, and not finding out such grosse carnal wayes of expressing your joyes, as the heathens use; g.

* even τοῦ † or, Christ, for the King's MS reads Χριστῷ

20. Giving thanks alwayes for all things unto God * and the Father, in the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt;]

20. Upon all occasions acknowledging the great and fatherly mercies of God to you, through our Lord Jesus Christ;

21. Submitting your ſelves one to another in the fear of † God.]

21. Yielding obedience to those to whom 'tis due, in subordination to God, obeying their lawfull commands upon God's command to honour them, but yet not doing any thing in obedience to them which is forbidden by that superior Law of God.

22. Wives, ſubmit your ſelves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.]

22. All wives must be subject to their husbands by virtue of the Christian law, which in this and other things doth no way disannul, but rather confirm God's first institution.

23. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Chriſt is of the Church, and he is the Saviour of the body.]

23. And the same obligation that lies on the Church to obey Christ, viz. because he is the head of it, lyes on the wife to obey the husband, who is the head of the wife, 1 Cor. 11. 13. by the law of creation, which is in force among all nations; and as Christ did for his Church, so it is the office of the husband, as of the head, to take care for, and secure, and defend the body which belongs to it, that is, to doe all that he can for the good of the wife.

24. Therefore as the Church is ſubject unto Chriſt, ſo let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.]

24. And this subjection of the wife to the husband is not restrained to some sorts of things, but extended unlimitedly to all, where there is not a prohibition of some superiour law (see v. 21.) as the Church is to be regulated by Christ, and those whom he hath placed over it, in all things.

25. Husbands, love your wives, even as Chriſt alſo loved the Church, and gave himſelf for it,]

25. And, by the same rule of analogie with Christ, the husbands are obliged to expresse that care of their wives, that love to their good, as Christ had to the good of his Church, which is his wife (for whom he laid down his life)

* it, having cleansed it ἁγιάσῃ καθαρίσας

26. That he might ſanctifie * and cleanſe it with the waſhing of water by the word,]

26. That he might purifie it from all sin, & to that end appointed baptisme, therein obliging us to forsake the devil, &c. and covenanting to give us grace to doe so, and to that adding his word, the whole doctrine, commands, promises of the Gospel, as a powerfull means to oblige and enable us to doe so, or baptizing us in the name of the Father and the Sonne and the holy Ghost. Theophylact.

27. That he might preſent it to himſelf a glorious Church, not having ſpot, or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing; but that it ſhould be holy and without blemiſh.]

27. And all this, that as a wife he may set it out in beauty and comelineſſe, as a garment come new out of the fuller's hand, purged from ſpots, ſtretched from wrinkles, the former newly contracted, the latter by long time of cuſtome and habit; the former more eaſy, the latter hard to be removed; and ſo not having any of the baſe pollutions before mentioned v. 5. but that it may be perfectly clean without ever a blemiſh in it.

28. And this love of the husband to the wife muſt be as to a part of himſelf (for ſo Eve was taken out of Adam.)

28. So ought † men to love their wives, as their own bodies: he that loveth his wife loveth himſelf.] † husbands ἀνδρες

29. And not to love a man's ſelf, and every part of that, is unnatural; and therefore every ſenſible man will love his wife as part of himſelf, & endevour her good, as Chriſt doth the Churches, with all the zeal imaginable.

29. For no man ever yet hated his own fleſh, but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it, even as the Lord the Church.]

h. 30. (For he is the head of the Church, and we are members of him.)

30. For we are h members of his body, of his fleſh, and of his bones.]

31. And this is the reaſon of that precept in the firſt creation, that a man ſhall at marriage put off all other neereſt relations, ſo farre as to preferre this newly contracted relation before them all, of two to make up one common perſon, Gen. 2. 24.

31. For this cauſe ſhall a man leave his father and mother, and ſhall * be joyned unto his wife, and they two ſhall be one fleſh.] * cleave προσκολλησεται

32. This place of Geneſis is ſpoken literally of marriage, but it hath alſo a divine, ſecret, myſtical ſenſe in it, to denote firſt the forming of the Church, after the manner of Eve out of Adams ſide. Adam was alone, God caſts him into a dead ſleep, then takes a bone out of his ſide, and makes a woman meet for him, and ſhe is the mother of all living. So Chriſt being the ſecond Adam, and alone alſo, he is caſt into a dead ſleep on the Croſs, and then out of his ſide the Church is formed; and ſhe becomes his ſpouſe, and ſo the mother of all living, in the ſpirituall ſenſe. (See Proſper de prædiction. l. 1. c. 1.) Secondly, the conjunction conſequent to this marriage between Chriſt and his Church, who are literally one fleſh, by Chriſt's aſſuming our nature upon him, and myſtically one body, by the ſtrict union which he hath made, both by infuſing his graces, as the head to the members, and obliging us to continue in him, as members in union with, and ſubjection to, the head. And ſo the Jewes themſelves ſay of the taking Eve out of Adam's ſide, that it was to ſignifie the marriage of the moſt higheſt, God bleſſed forever, who left his father in heaven (ſaith Chryſoſtome) to cleave to this wife, this ſpouſe of his, the Church.

32. This is a great myſterie; but I ſpeak concerning Chriſt and the Church.]

33. The ſhort is, that by the law of our creation confirm'd, and not diſannulled, by Chriſt, and exemplified to us in his dealings with his ſpouſe the Church, every Chriſtian husband is bound to account of his wife as of a great part of himſelf, and accordingly to love and care for her, and ſhe back again, as to the head, behave her ſelf reverently toward the husband.

33. Nevertheleſſe let every one of you in particular ſo love his wife even as himſelf, and the wife ſee that ſhe † reverence her husband.] † fear φοβηται

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Προσφορὰ Θυσία

V. 2. Offering] The difference of προσφορὰ offering and θυσία ſacrifice, is ordinarily obſervable: ſee Heb. 10. where in ſtead of θυσία and προσφορὰ, ſacrifice and offering v. 5. is ὁλοκαύτωμα καὶ περὶ ἁμαρτίας, Burnt-offering and ſacrifice for ſinne, v. 6. where, as θυσία ſacrifice is certainly expreſſed by ὁλοκαύτωμα, the bodies of beaſts wholly burnt upon the altar (of which therefore no part came to the Prieſt, Heb. 13. 11.) ſo the προσφορὰ oblation is the מִנְחָה, or meat-offering, the flour and oyle Lev. 2. 2. of which part was burnt with fire, and the remnant was Aaron's and his ſons, v. 3. And as of the former of theſe, when it was offered by Noah, Gen. 8. 20. it is ſaid that the Lord ſmelled a ſweet ſavour, v. 21. and that as a token that his wrath was pacified, as it follows, the Lord ſaid in his heart, I will not again curſe the ground any more, &c. ſo Lev. 2. 2. the other is ſaid to be an offering made by fire, a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord. And accordingly here to the mention of offering and ſacrifice, meat-offering and burnt-offering, is added, εἰς ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας, for a ſmell of ſweet ſavour, which notes this death of Chriſt, which is expreſſed by it, to be a means appointed by God for the averting his wrath from us, for the appeaſing and reconciling him to us, as thoſe ſacrifices were wont to doe, and an engagement to us to live ſuch lives as may be acceptable to God, contrary to the noiſome luſts ver. 3.

εἰς Ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας

b. Μωρολογία Εὐτραπελία

V. 4. Fooliſh talking] That μωρολογία ſignifies fooliſh ſpeaking, and that εὐτραπελία ſignifies the ſame, onely with this addition of deſigning it as jeſt, to move laughter (and therefore εὐτράπελος is ordinarily interpreted γελοιαστὴς, and γελωτοποιὸς, a ridiculous perſon, or one that cauſeth laughter) there is no queſtion. But that the text may here reaſonably be thought to confine them both to obſcene and filthy diſcourſe, may alſo appear, not onely by the company that they are ſet with, fornication, uncleanneſſe, inordinate luſt, filthineſſe, but eſpecially by the reaſon that is rendred for the abandoning of all theſe, v. 5. For this you know, that every fornicator, or unclean perſon, or inordinate luſter, which is an idolater, hath no inheritance in the kingdome of Chriſt or of God. Where if theſe two be not of the ſame ſort with the former, belonging all to uncleanneſs, that enumeration in the reaſon would not comprehend the ſeverals in the exhortation, which it muſt be ſuppoſed to doe. To this purpoſe therefore it is firſt obſervable of the word μωρολογία fooliſh-ſpeaking, that it is the Scripture elegance to expreſſe uncleanneſſe by folly; ſo folly in Iſrael is adultery; and ſo in Euripides' Ἀφροδίσια, matters of Venery, are called μωρὰ fooliſh, and in Ariſtophanes ἀνόητα, which is the ſame, and ſo μωρολογία ſpeaking folly may be ſpeaking obſcenely: ſecondly, that εὐτραπελία, (which is joyned with it by ἢ or, and ſo is but an explication of it) as it is by Heſychius rendred κυρόσις levity, and μωρολογία fooliſh-ſpeaking, ſo it is alſo αἰσχρολογία filthy, unclean ſpeaking: thirdly, that after all theſe here is added τὰ μὴ ἀνήκοντα, which being in the plural, belongs equally to all the foregoing words, and that ſignifying not barely that which is not convenient, but indecent, foul, unbecoming, doth by a kind of propriety belong to that of immodeſt, unclean behaviour: fourthly, by this way of rendring theſe words all manner of uncleanneſſe will be comprehended in this prohibition; that in the members, acted through all the ſorts, will be comprehended in the three words ver. 3. that of unſeemly behaviour, geſtures &c. under the word αἰσχρότης filthineſſe v. 4. and that of the tongue in the other two words of fooliſh ſpeaking, or jeſting: fifthly, it is ordinarily known how much of the wit and jeſting of wicked profane perſons conſiſts in this one ſubject of obſcene and ſcurrilous diſcourſe, and ſo how reaſonable it was, in the prohibiting all uncleanneſſe, to name that of obſcene jeſting, which, I ſuppoſe, was meant by the σαπρὸς λόγος, putrid, rotten communication, c. 4. 29.

Σαπρὸς λόγος

c. Εὐχαριστία

Ib. Giving of thankes] What εὐχαριστία here ſignifies may be matter of ſome queſtion. It ſignifies ordinarily thanksgiving; and that belonging eſpecially to God

God (from whom all mercies are received, and to whom all thanks are due) may be meant here by the word, though no mention of God be added to it: and ſo the Context may well bear, Let there be no unclean ſcurrilous jeſts uſed among you, but rather giving of thanks, that is, Let the Chriſtians way of mirth be farre from that of obſcene wit; the recounting the mercies of God in Chriſt, calling you from darkneſſe to his marvellous light, will farre better become a Chriſtian, and to this purpoſe ſee ver. 20. But yet it may be obſerved what notion there is of χάεις (of which this word is compounded) ſeveral times in the Epiſtles, for piety, Chriſtian virtue in general. Thus c. 4. v. 29. where the corrupt communication is forbidden, and in ſtead of it the good commanded, for profitable inſtruction, or edification, this is deſigned ἵνα δῷ χάειν τοῖς ἀκέυσι, that it may give grace, that is, afford ſpiritual advantage in increaſe of piety, in the hearers. So Col. 4. 6. Let your ſpeech be alwaies ἐν χάειτι, with grace, that is, gracious, pious, ſeaſoned with ſalt, contrary to the putrid, corrupt, mentioned to the Epheſians. So Col. 3. 16. ἐν χάειτι ᾄδοντες, with grace ſinging, that is, after the manner of pious gracious perſons, in a Chriſtian manner: and ſo 'tis alſo Eph. 5. 19. in the reading of the Kings MS. And agreeably to this notion of χάεις we have γυνὴ εὐχάεις, a gracious pious woman, Prov. 11. 16. And ſo perhaps εὐχαεισία may ſignifie in this place, gracious, pious, religious diſcourſe in general, being ſet oppoſite to the filthy, obſcene diſcourſe preceding, and not to be reſtrained to one ſpecies of it, recounting the mercies of God.

V. 15. That] The word πῶς generally in the New Teſtament is not to be rendred that, but how, eſpecially when it follows βλέπετε· ſo Luk. 8. 18. βλέπετε πῶς ἀκέετε, take heed how you hear, and 1 Cor. 3. 10. βλεπέτω πῶς ἐποικοδομεῖ, Let him take heed how he ſuperſtruct. And ſo 'tis here to modify the accurate walking, and accordingly 'tis anſwered with ὡς ἄ, that they behave themſelves warily between the two dangers of being corrupted on one ſide, and devoured on the other; in the firſt not ὡς ἄφρονες as eaſie, ſeducible people, in the ſecond ὡς σοφοὶ as wiſe, prudent men, that can manage their affairs to the beſt advantage, and not run hazards to no advantage.

V. 16. Redeeming the time] Ἐξαγοραζόμενοι τὸν καιρόν, though it have a ſenſe very unlike the Engliſh words redeeming the time, yet cannot well be literally rendred otherwiſe, then either ſo, or buying out, or gaining the time. Theodotion uſeth it in the Active, ἐξαγοράζοντες καιρόν, Dan. 2. 8. by that rendring the Chaldee עִדָּנָא, אַנְתּוּן זַבְנִין, and there the Vulgar have, redimitis tempus, and we, gaining, or buying the ſeaſon, referring particularly to the delaies that they ſought to make, thereby to ſave themſelves from danger. The full meaning of the phraſe in that place is, to uſe caution, and cunning, and dexterity, whether by delaies, or any other means, for the ſaving of themſelves from that danger that was threatned them, v. 5. And it ſeems to be a proverbial ſpeech, which the uſe had made to ſignifie more then the very literal of the words imported; and you may find it uſed in Authors in the ſame or like words. So in Plutarch, who ſets it down for an Apophthegme of Scipio, Ὁρῶν γὰρ τὴν ἀπόνοιαν τῶν πολεμίων, ἔλεγεν ὠνεῖσθαι τῷ χρόνῳ τὴν ἀσφάλειαν, ἢ γὰρ ἀγαθὸν στρατηγὸν, ὥσπερ ἰατρὸν, ἐν μάχαις δεῖσθαι ἢ διὰ τῆς σιδήρου θεραπείας, Seeing the madneſs of the enemies, he bid them buy the ſafety of the time, that is, avoid fighting with them at that ſeaſon, for that it was with Commanders as with Phyſitians, who uſed not the ſword or lance, but in extreme cures. Thus S. Chryſoſtome interprets it by the contrariety to κινδύνους περιττοὺς ὑπομένειν, καὶ κέρδους ἐκ τούτων, undergoing ſuperfluous dangers, and ſuch as bring no gain: and again he explains this exhortation by paying tribute, &c. and never oppoſing them in any thing, but in preaching the Goſpel, Ἐν οἷς μὴ βλάπτεσθαι, μηδεμίαν αὐτοῖς δίδοτε λαβὴν, in things wherein they hurt not, give them no occaſion. Διὰ τὸ κήρυγμα μόνον ἔσται σοὶ πόλεμος, μηδεμίαν ἑτέραν ἀρχὴν ὁ πόλεμος λαμβανέτω, The very preaching the Goſpel ſhall bring their rage upon you, let it not take other beginning. Thus in Nazianzen's στηλιτευτ. α'. p. 14. of Julian, ὁ δὲ ἐξαγόμενος καιρὸν, καὶ κρύπτων ἐν ὑποκρίσει πλάσμα τὸ πανοῦργες, where buying out of time is a proverbial expreſſion for carrying himſelf cunningly, dextrouſly concealing (what he had not a mind to diſcover) his ill diſpoſition under a diſguiſe of gentleneſſe. And proportionably 'tis ſo here, to uſe all prudent artificial deviſes to preſerve them from the evil times then preſent, times of high corruption, and ſo of danger to their ſouls, wherein the carnal heathen ſenſualities (to which they had ſuch temptation, and which were uſed in their myſteries and devotions) were very frequent among them, and againſt which the warning is very particular in the former part of the chapter, v. 6, 7, &c. and to which he returns again, as farre as concerns drunkenneſſe (the expreſſion of the heathens devotion in ſome of their worſhips, the Bacchanalia) ver. 8. And that 'tis this wiſdome and dexterity which is here primarily meant, in reſpect of thoſe ſpiritual dangers, the ſnares that were neer their ſouls, may be conjectured by the verſe immediately following, where διὰ τοῦτο for this cauſe, for this evilneſſe of the daies, they are adviſed not to be ἄφρονες fools (as v. 16. μὴ ὡς ἄφρονες, not as fools, and μηκέτι νήπιοι, no longer children, or fools, c. 4. 14.) but underſtanding (συνίετες, noting that prudence, σύνεσις, that we ſpeak of) what the will of the Lord is, that is, how contrary Chriſtianity is to thoſe heathen courſes, which now by the cheats of the Gnoſticks are put off and commended to them, ver. 6. as things that are abſolutely indifferent. Beſides this it may be applied alſo to that other prudence for avoiding of perſecutions, as thoſe are expreſſed by evil daies, Gen. 47. 9. and Pſal. 49. 5. not to throw our ſelves upon dangers unſeaſonably, where there is no probable advantage in our proſpect, but to ſpeak and exhort when 'tis likely to proſper, and at other times to refrain; and this may properly be ſtyled gaining the time, watching opportunities, and when interpoſing would prove gainleſſe, then to hold the peace, and expect ſome fitter ſeaſon; ſee Rom. 12. 11.

V. 18. Exceſſe] The word ἀσωτία ſignifies generally being given up to all wickedneſſe, particularly luxury, meaning by that not onely exceſſe of drinking or eating, or waſting an eſtate, but eſpecially giving himſelf up to riotous enormous luſts: thus Heſychius renders Ἀσώτως by ἀκρατῶς, ἀπλήστως, filthineſſe, inſatiableneſſe; and ſo when of the prodigal Lu. 15. it is ſaid that the means of ſpending his patrimony was his living ἀσώτως ver. 13. that is interpreted v. 30. by καταφαγών σου τὸν βίον μετὰ πορνῶν devouring his livelihood with harlots. And then we may diſcern the meaning of this phraſe ἐν ᾧ ἐστιν ἀσωτία, ſpeaking of drunkenneſs and filling themſelves with wine, in which, ſaith he, there is (not exceſſe, as that ſignifies immoderate drinking, for that was contained before in drunkenneſs, or being filled with wine, and to ſay that in drunkenneſs or in wine were immoderate drinking, would not be ſo commodious, but) unclean inordinate behaviour, all kind of Venery and enormous luſts: ſo Theophylact Ἀσωτίαν ἀκολασίαν φησὶν, ἐκ γὰρ τῆς μέθης ἀκολασία τίκτεται, It ſignifies incontinent luſt, for that is begotten by drunkenneſs: and ſo it is true not onely in common obſervation, that inflaming themſelves with wine betraies men to all uncleanneſs, but particularly in the heathen Bacchanals (to which he ſeems to refer, by oppoſing to them the being filled with the Spirit, and expreſſing that in Pſalms, &c. the Chriſtian way of rejoicing, contrary to their propheſying Wiſd. 14. 28. or their mad howlings in their Orgia) where after their drinking, uncleanness was wont to succeed, as in the Israelites Idol-feasts, after their sitting down to eat and drink, 'tis added, they rose up παίζειν, to sport, or mock, which that it belongs to this of uncleanness, see Note on 1 Cor. 10. c. And so this is a seasonable exhortation to the Christians at Ephesus, living among the heathens, and in danger to be seduced by the Gnosticks to the Idol-feasts, that in stead of the Bacchanals, and unclean consequents of them, which were their way of worship to their idols or devils, they should entertain themselves after the Christian manner of singing Psalms, blessing and praising of God, which is the Christian jollity, to be preferred before those heathen bestial practices.

V. 19. Psalmes and hymnes and——] The difference of these three ψαλμοὶ. ὕμνοι, ᾠδαὶ, Psalmes, hymnes, songs, must be fetch'd from the Jewes who have three sorts of Canticles, first מזמור from זמר amputavit, a concise verse, which is here called ψαλμὸς. a Psalm; secondly, תהלה Praise, celebration, depredicating of any thing, which is here ὕμνος hymne; thirdly, שיר Canticum or cantio, whence is שיר השירים Canticum canticorum, the song of songs, and to this answers here the ᾠδαὶ, and the word πνευματικαὶ added to it, spiritual or Christian, is both in opposition to the εὐα Βάκχε, and the like drunken, sensual songs and Ovations in their Bacchanalia, and perhaps in respect of the χάρισμα then among them, as of praying, so of singing also, by that extraordinary gift of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 14. 26. see Note on Jude f.

V. 30. Members of his——] It is the manner of the Sacred writers to expresse a complex body by the enumeration of the several parts of it, as the heaven and the earth for the world, evening and morning for the natural day, and many the like; see Note on Col. 1. c. and 2 Pet. 3. b. and so here his flesh and his bones signifies no more then he: and so the whole importance of the verse is, that we are members of Christ, and nothing else, (see Note on Joh. 6. d.)

Paraphrase.

CHAP. VI.

1. And so likewise all children and subjects must be obedient to their parents and Princes, now under the Gospel: for this is commanded by the Law in the Old Testament, which Christ came not to evacuate, but to confirm.

1. CHildren, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is *right.] *just δίκαιον

2. For so are the words of the fifth Commandement of the Decalogue, Honour thy father and mother, not onely thy natural, but civil Parents, and all other placed over thee by God, or the lawes under which God hath placed thee. And this is the first commandement of the second table, and that with a promise annex'd to it,

2. Honour thy father and mother (which is the first commandement with promise,)]

3. viz. of prosperity and long life in the land of Canaan, as it concern'd the Jewes, and to all others of prosperous peaceable living upon earth, (toward which obedience to superiors is ordinarily an eminent means of security, see Mat. 5. 5.) and of eternall blisse in heaven by the promise of Christ.

3. That it may be well with thee, and † thou mayst live long on the earth.]

† thou shalt have a long time on the land, ἔσῃ μακροχρόνιος ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς

4. And parents likewise are to behave themselves lovingly and gently toward their children, and not to tempt them, by tyrannical usage of their power, to disobedience, but use all care to bring them up in the knowledge of their duty to Christ.

4 And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the * nurture and admonition of the Lord.]

* discipline and nurture, παιδείᾳ καὶ νουθεσίᾳ

5. And doe not think that Christianity hath set all servants at liberty, or given them any privilege of disobeying those whose servants they are according to the course of this world, be they heathens, &c. But let all such know themselves to be obliged to perform obedience unto their masters, with all diligence and sincerity (see note on Phil. 2. c.) as unto Christ, who sees their hearts, and laies this command on them.

5. Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ:]

6. And this not onely to avoid the displeasures of their masters, (which will extend no farther then to those things which they can see whether they be done or omitted, and consequently punish in them) but upon sense of obligation to the Law of Christ, who can see the secrets of the hearts, and so must be served accordingly;

6 Not with eye-service as men-pleasers, but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God † from the heart;]

† or, from the soul with good will doing them service, for the King's MS points it thus, ἀπὸ ψυχῆς μετ' εὐνοίας δουλεύοντες τῷ Κυρίῳ καὶ οὐκ ἀνθρώποις, εἰδότες ὅτι ἕκαστος ἐὰν ποιήσῃ τὸ ἀγαθὸν τοῦτο κομιεῖται παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἔκ τε δούλου καὶ ἐλευθέρου. * or, the Lord both of them and you, for the King's MS reads ὅτι καὶ αὐτῶν καὶ ὑμῶν

7. viz. with uprightnesse and cheerfulnesse, a voluntary obedience, which may approve it self to Christ, and not a forced one, which arises from fear of man, and so extends no farther then the master can see and punish:

7. With good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men:]

8. Knowing that as all other performances of duty, so his faithfull service to his master, shall be rewarded in him by God.

8 Knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doth, the same shall be received of the Lord whether he be bond or free.]

9. And the masters must use their servants, as fathers were appointed to use their children ver. 4. not wrathfully and imperiously, but calmly and gently, either as knowing that they themselves have a master to obey, who commands them to doe thus; or knowing that you and they are but fellow-servants in respect of Christ, and indeed that if masters doe not their duty, they shall be as punishable before God as any others of the most inferiour degree, God favouring or sparing none upon so slight considerations as these, of their being greater men in this world then others.

9 And ye masters, doe the same things to them, forbearing threatning: knowing that * your master also is in heaven, neither is there respect of persons with him.]

10. Finally, brethren, consider the all-sufficience and omnipotence of his might, who is able to sustain you against all opposition of men or devils, and confirm your selves in the faith, and clear up your selves with that consideration.

10. Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.]

11. And make use of all the defensatives and weapons that Christ hath afforded you, to the repelling of all the temptations and stratagems of the devil, that ye may be able to hold out against all his assaults, both of force and cunning.

11. Put on the † whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the * wiles of the devil.]

† complete armour πανοπλίαν * contrivances, μεθοδείας

12. For the combat for which we are to be fortified, is not against any ordinary

12. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against † the rulers of the darkness of this world, against * spiritual wickedness † in a high places.]

humane enemies, but against the several ranks of devils, the chieftains and gods of this present idolatrous heathen world, and against those evil spirits that are in the aire, all grosser carnal, and all more spiritual dangerous sins, of pride, heresie, and malice, &c.

13. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand.] 13. The variety and greatnesse of the danger being thus considered, makes it reasonable for you to arm your selves in every part, with all that the Christian faith hath provided you with, that in time of temptation ye may be able to hold out against the contrary allurements of those hereticks, and in conclusion to be so farre victorious, as not to have been ensnared on any side.

14. Stand therefore, having your loynes girt with truth, and having on the breast-plate of righteousnesse, 14, 15. Let your military preparations against these assaults be these: first, Truth, the doctrine of the Gospel in opposition to heathen errors and heretical insinuations, and let that be your military girule (see note on Luk. 12. b.) that keeps on all the other armour, and withall will restrain you from all libertinisme and licentiousnes, as a girule restrains and keeps in the body. Secondly, Righteousnesse, sincere faithfull obedience to Christ, to guard the whole man from assaults of sin, as the breast-plate guards him, Isa. 59. 17. Thirdly, The practice of Christian charity and peaceableness, to supply the place of shooes, that ye may goe on expeditely in the Christian course, and not fall or miscarry by the way, through the traps that hereticks and schismaticks lay to wound and gall you, and hinder your progresse. b.

16. † Above all taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of * the wicked.] 16. Fourthly, Faith, or the believing both the promises of Christ to all reformed penitents, and the threats to all impenitent sensual persons; which will keep temptations from entring, and be able to allay the pleasures of those sensual baits proposed to you, either by Satan or any other tempter, which, like poysoned darts (which are wont to inflame the parts that are wounded with them, and therefore are called fiery darts, as the serpents with poysonous stings are called fiery serpents) will wound you to death, if the consideration of your duty, the promises and terrors of Christ, received by your faith, doe not help to quench them.

17. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God.] 17. Fifthly, The hope of salvation, which may serve as an helmet, Isa. 59. 17. to bear off any blow (at least secure you from the hurt of it) that can light upon you. And lastly, The Spirit, that is, the word of God, which may serve as a sword to assault the assailants, and destroy them, to slay all that is temptation in them, by proposing to the Christian much stronger motives to obedience, then the world can afford to the contrary.

18. Praying † alwaies with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and * watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for † all saints,] 18. Praying heartily and fervently (see note on Luk. 9. e.) upon every opportunity and time of need, for God's assistance to enable you to persevere, and for the removal or averting of temptations; not so much for secular, as spiritual things (which Theophylact sets as the meaning of the phrase in the Spirit) and then adding vigilancy to prayer, and so continuing and persevering in a constant performance of that office of prayer, for all virtues and graces that are needfull for you, and all means that may tend to the securing or increasing holinesse in you.

19. And for me, that utterance may be given unto me that I may open my mouth * boldly, to make known the mysterie of the Gospel,] 19. And let not these your prayers be wholly confined to your selves, but let me have my part in them, that I may be enlarged from my present restraint, and so have liberty to propagate the faith of Christ (see note on 1 Cor. 1. b.) and publickly, or freely, or with authority (see note on Joh. 7. a.) to preach to the Gentiles, and in stead of the heathen mysteries, wherein all their impieties are acted, to reveal to them the nature of the Gospel, to which they are initiated, the purity and holinesse which are there required:

24. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in * sincerity. Amen.] 24. The blessing of God be on all those that continue constant in their love to Christ, and are not corrupted out of it by any of the baits or seductions of these times. See note on Rev. 2. b.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

2. Ἐπουράνια

V. 12. High places] What ἐπουράνια signifies here will be soon discerned, first, by remembring that the several regions of the aire, and all above the globe of the earth, is in the Hebrew stiled שמים, and in the Greek of these books, οὐρανοὶ heavens, and so ἐπουράνια will signifie those places, the several regions of the aire: secondly, that the Syriack reading for πνευματικὰ spiritual parts πνεύματα spirits, and the phrase spirits of wickedness readily signifying wicked spirits, and those oft us'd to denote Devils, the spirits of wickedness in heavenly places will be no more then the powers of the air under their ἄρχων or prince, c. 2. 2. that is, devils under Beelzebub the prince of the devils. These are here distinguish'd from the κοσμοκράτορας τοῦ σκότους τοῦ

Οὐρανοὶ

αἰῶνος τούτου, the worldly rulers of the darkness of this age. Noting several sorts of devils, either in respect of their mansions, ἀερίων καὶ ἐπιγείων πνευμάτων, saith Ignatius ad Ephes. aerial or earthy spirits; or else of the inclinations which they suggest. The earthy devils suggesting grosser carnal appetites, filthinesse of the flesh, &c. the aerial, pride, vain-glory, malice, &c. the filthinesse of the spirit. And the Gnostick hereticks by power of sorcery seducing men to both sorts of these filthinesses, all fleshy abominable lusts, and all malice and rancour against the Orthodox Christians, it is here truly said, that they were to contend with both sorts of evil spirits, terrestrial and aerial; the terrestrial that ruled among the heathen dark parts of the the age, and the aerial wicked ſpirits.

b. Ὑποδήματα

V. 15. Shod] The uſe of ſhooes in the celebration of the Paſſeover hath been formerly obſerved: For ſo the Iſraelites were commanded at their eating of it, that they might be ready for their journey, to have each of them their ſhooes on their feet; ſo when the Apoſtles, Mar. 6. 8. were commanded to be ſhod with ſandals, the meaning is, that they ſhould be ready to take their journey. So in * Plautus, calceati dentes, ſhod teeth, that is, ready to devour the feaſt. So the Ægyptian virgins were not permitted to wear ſhooes, that is, to be ready to goe abroad. All this belongs to the explication of this phraſe, as it is joyned with ἐν ἑτοιμασίᾳ in readineſſe, denoting the preparation or readineſſe for the journey, the whole Chriſtian courſe, for which the doctrine of peace and charity doth provide and furniſh them. But then this is not all, for the ſhooes are here mention'd among the armour (and ſo * Strabo lib. 10. ſpeaking of the Cretian youths, ſaith of them, that they did ἐδῶν ἢ ὑποδύσει πολεμικῇ χρῆσθαι, uſe military attire and ſhooes) and ſo they clearly were, and were ordinarily made of braſs. A mention we have of them in the ſtory of Goliah, his greaves of braſs; and ſo among the Grecians they were ſo ordinary, that they are known in Homer by that title of χαλκοκνήμιδες Ἀχαιοὶ, the brazen-ſhooed Grecians, οἵς σιδηρεῖ ἦεν ἢ χαλκῷ εἰ κνῆμαι ſaith Phavorinus, who had greaves of braſs or iron, as alſo of ſilver, in Virgil, l. 7. lin. 634.

Aut leves ocreas lento ducunt argento,
They cover their bootes with ſilver.

The uſe of theſe was to defend their feet againſt the gall-traps which were wont to be thrown in the fields or waies, to ſtop their marches, ſharp ſtakes ſticking up to wound or gall their feet, and make them that had fallen upon them unable to goe afterward. This uſe then of the ſhooes for marching is here referred to, and the Goſpel of peace, the obligation to peace and charity, (that lies upon Chriſtians by the Goſpel, and which is here ſet before faith, and hope of ſalvation) is the furniture or preparation for the feet, ſupplies the place of thoſe greaves, fits us for our Chriſtian courſe, which beyond all things, conſiſts in preſerving of peace with all, and eſpecially now in oppoſition to thoſe hereticks that broke the unity of the Church, and breath'd out nothing but malice and perſecution againſt all the Orthodox Chriſtians, and laboured all they could to draw others to partake with them.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE [a] TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

a. Επιστολη προς Φιλιππησιους.

THE conversion of the Macedonians, and among them first of the Philippians, to the faith by the labours of Paul and Timothy, is set down Act. 16. 12. and Act. 20. 3. where having had very good success among them, & after his departure having received many testimonies of their kindness and constancy, and now being prisoner at Rome, Epaphroditus their Bishop being sent from them to him with a supply of mony, about the year of Christ 59. he returns them this Epistle by Epaphroditus, full of kind acknowledgments and chearfulnesse; and Timothy, who had been with S. Paul at Philippi, being now at this time at Rome with him, he is joyned with Paul in the front of the Epistle. One thing is farther observable in this Epistle, that upon the newes of S. Pauls imprisonment at Rome, (certainly his first imprisonment there, see c. 1. 25, 26. and c. 2. 23, 24. and not that immediately preceding his Martyrdome) the Gnosticks, the known enemies of the cross of Christ, c. 3. 18. (which are not for confessing a crucified Saviour, or a persecuted faith) joyning with the Judaizing Christians, were very ready to infuse their discouragements, perswading to Judaize, c. 3. 2. as among the Galatians they had done. And by way of necessary antidote against these seducers, he opposeth the benefit which Christianity had received by his sufferings, c. 1. 12. and the no losse, but advantage which should come to him by it, v. 19. and then conjures them to unity and perseverance, c. 2. warns them against the Gnosticks, c. 3. and again encourages them to constancy, c. 4.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1. PAUL and Timotheus the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at [a] Philippi, with the [b] Bishops and [c] Deacons,]

1. I Paul the Apostle that preached the Gospel to the several cities of Macedonia, but first to Philippi, Act. 16. 12. & Timothy that accompanied me in that work, Act. 16. 1. a. b. c.

2. Grace be unto you and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.]

to all the Christians that are in Macedonia, of which Philippi is a Metropolis, and therein especially to the several Bishops of the several cities, and the Deacons that attend upon and assist them,

2. Send greeting in the Lord.

3. I thank my God upon every remembrance of you,]

3. I cannot but render thanks to God (the author of all the good which is wrought in any) as often as I think of you;

4. Alwaies in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy,]

4. And accordingly whensoever I pray for you, I cannot doe it without rejoicing;

* communication toward κοινωνιαν

5. For your * fellowship in the Gospel from the first day untill now:]

5. To consider your great liberality toward the propagating the Gospel (see note on Act. 2. e.) which hath been observable in you since your first receiving the faith untill this present time.

† among you εν υμιν * perfect επιτελεσει

6. Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work † in you, will * perform it untill the day of Jesus Christ;]

6. And I make no doubt but that God, who hath wrought this and all other Christian graces in you thus farre, will proceed to consummate it, (upon your persevering to make use of his grace) and to reward it at the great day of doom.

† to have this care for: φρονειν υπερ * as those that are all my copartners of grace, συγκοινωνους μου της χαριτος παντας υμας οντας

7. Even as it is meet for me to † think this of you all, because I have you in my heart, * in as much as both in my bonds, and in the defence and confirmation of the Gospel, ye all are partakers of [d] my grace.]

7. This affection to you it is but justice for me to have, as considering that you both in sufferings, and in the defence (see v. 17.) and maintenance of the Gospel have joyned and participated with me, done and suffered the same things that I have done. d.

8. For God is my record how greatly I long after you all, in the bowels of Jesus Christ:]

8. And before God I solemnly protest to have it in the highest and most passionate degree of Christian love imaginable:

† acknowledgment & all sense, in επιγνωσει και παση αισθησει

9. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in † knowledge, and in all judgment:]

9. And I daily pray that your Christian charity (which already expresses it self in liberality toward the Gospel, and suffering for it, v. 5, 7.) may yet farther increase more and more, so that ye may acknowledge and discern whatever ye ought to doe, have a quick sense of your duty in every particular:

* pure ειλικρινεις

10. That ye may approve things that are excellent, that ye may be * sincere and without offence till the day of Christ.]

10. That ye may continue constant unto the truth, examine first, and then approve, and like, and practice all Christian virtues in the highest degrees (see note on Rom. 2. f.) and and not be led into evil under the ſhew of good, but remain unblemiſhed and ſpotleſſe unto the day of judgment, and ſo bring Chriſtianity into a reputation among men,

11. Bringing forth all manner of Chriſtian fruits, thoſe works of piety and charity, which are commended by Chriſt above what was by the Law of Nature or Moſes required, which may tend to the honour and praiſe of God.

11. Being filled with the fruits of righteouſneſſe, which are by Jeſus Chriſt unto the glory and praiſe of God.]

12. As for my ſelf, and the things that concern me, my ſufferings and impriſonment at Rome, you may pleaſe to take notice that they have tended to the advancement rather then hindrance of the Goſpel.

12. But I would ye ſhould underſtand, brethren, that the things † which happened unto me, have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the Goſpel :]

† that concerned me τὰ κατ' ἐμὲ

e. 13. For by my ſufferings it is that the Goſpel hath come to be taken notice of, and ſo to be propagated both to all the officers of the Emperour in the Courts, (the Romans that act under him) and alſo to all others.

13. So that my bonds in Chriſt are manifeſt in the e* palace, and † in all other places.]

* hall, or place of judicature † to all others, τοῖς λοιποῖς πᾶσι

14. And withall many that have received Chriſtianity, through the confidence and courage that the example of my ſufferings and patience hath infuſed into them, have with much more zeal and conſtancy then formerly made confeſſion of the faith.

14. And many of the brethren in the Lord waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to ſpeak the word without fear.]

15. Some indeed envying the dignity which God hath beſtowed on me, by giving ſuch ſucceſs to my preaching, now that they ſee me under reſtraint, preach the Goſpel of Chriſt by way of emulation, hoping and endeavouring to get that glory to themſelves ; and ſome doe it out of good liking of what I have done, and out of a pious intent, deſiring ſincerely to maintain what I have preached.

15. Some indeed preach Chriſt even of envy and ſtrife, and ſome alſo of good will.]

16. The former ſort of theſe doe it out of unkindneſs to me, not out of deſigne ſeriouſly to advance the ſervice of Chriſt, but eſteeming of me by their own affections, they ſuppoſe they ſhall gall and grieve me thereby, and ſo adde to my preſent ſufferings :

16. The one preach Chriſt of contention, not ſincerely, ſuppoſing to * adde affliction to my bonds :]

* or, ſtir up, for the K's M's reads ἐγείρειν

17. But others out of a ſincere kindneſſe toward me and the Goſpel, as knowing that what is befallen me, is in defence of the Goſpel, or for my defending it, and conſequently but dury in me who have not intruded my ſelf, but am by Chriſt from heaven call'd and ſent with commiſſion for diſcharge of this office.

17. But the other of love, knowing that I am ſet for the defenſe of the Goſpel.]

f. 18. And ſo by one means or other, ſome to vex me, others out of reſpect to the words preached by me, doe farther propagate it : and though this is by the former ſort done maliciouſly, and the good that comes from it be only accidental, not intended, but only occaſioned by them, yet 'tis matter of rejoicing to me that the Goſpel of Chriſt is preached and publiſhed by this means.

18. What then ? notwithſtanding every way, whether † in f pretence, or in truth, Chriſt is preached, and I therein doe rejoice, yea and will rejoice.]

† by occaſion, or by

19. For I am confident, by the help of your prayers, and by the aſſiſtance of the Spirit of Chriſt attainable thereby, that what hath thus befallen me, ſhall be a means of advancing the ſalvation of many ;

19. For I know that this ſhall turn * to my ſalvation through your prayer, and the ſupply of the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt,]

† to ſalvation εἰς σωτηρίαν

20. As I verily perſwade my ſelf, and hope that God will ſo aſſiſt me, that I ſhall expreſſe no puſillanimity in any thing, but continue as conſtant as ever, and as bold (Joh. 7. a.) to confeſſe Chriſt and preach the Goſpel, and ſo, whether by life or death, advance the kingdome of Chriſt, by preaching it, if I live, by ſigning the truth with my blood, if I die.

20. According to my earneſt expectation and my hope, that in nothing I ſhall be aſhamed, but that with all boldneſſe, as alwaies, ſo now alſo, Chriſt ſhall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death.]

21. For as for my ſelf, thus it ſtands with me, if I live, my life ſhall be ſpent in Chriſt's ſervice ; and if I die, my death tends to mine own unſpeakable advantage and joy, and to the ſervice of Chriſt alſo, whoſe glory may be advanced by my dying his martyr (ſee ver. 20.)

21. For to me † to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain.]

† living is Chriſt, and dying gain, τὸ ζῆν Χριστὸς, καὶ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν κέρδος

g. 22. On the other ſide, my living in the fleſh is matter of ſome advantage alſo : life is in it ſelf, and for the advantages of ſerving God and encreaſing our crown, a deſirable thing, and ſo the ſcales being in a manner even, I know not what to chooſe.

22.  But if I live in the fleſh, this is g † the fruit of my labour : yet what I ſhall chooſe, I wot not.]

* But if it be living in the fleſh, εἰ δὲ τὸ ζῆν ἐν σαρκὶ

† to me worth my labour, and

h. 23. But I am in a great difficulty, equally inclined on both ſides, on one ſide having before me the benefit of death, as of a returne into my country, which is the viſion and ſociety of Chriſt, and that very much more deſirable both in reſpect of the glory that will redound to Chriſt by my martyrdome, and the benefit that will redound to me :

23. For I am in a ſtreight betwixt two, having a deſire || to h depart, and to be with Chriſt, * which is farre better.]

|| to goe home or returne. * for this is much rather to be preferred, or better, πολλῷ μᾶλλον κρεῖσσον.

i. 24. And on the other ſide, conſidering the advantage which may accrue to you, which is farre greater by my life, and that which you can very ill ſpare.

24. † Nevertheleſſe to abide in the fleſh is more needfull for you.]

† But ſ this, I know, I hope, that

25. And on this latter conſideration of the want you have of me, and the benefit you may reap from my life, I am ſure that this is the thing I deſire and hope, that I ſhall be ſome time permitted to live as a means of growth and proficiency to you, and of giving you comfort in your Chriſtianity ;

25. And i * having this confidence, I know that I ſhall abide and continue with you all, for your furtherance and joy of faith ;]

† through me ἐν ἐμοὶ

26. That you may rejoice the more through the goodneſſe of Chriſt, by reaſon of me, that is, of my coming yet again to be preſent among you.

26. That your rejoycing may be more abundant in Jeſus Chriſt † for me, by my coming to you again.]

27. Onely let your courſe of life be ſuch as becomes the citizens of this divine city, the members of the Church of Chriſt, whoſe faith ye have received, that whether preſent or abſent, I may hear ſuch things of you that I may take comfort in, viz. that you have the ſame affections and common deſignes, all jointly contending, the beſt you can, to propagate the faith of Chriſt, to gain men to embrace the Goſpel.

27. Onely * let your converſation be as it becometh the Goſpel of Chriſt : that whether I come and ſee you, or elſe be abſent, I may heare of your affairs, that ye ſtand faſt in one ſpirit, with one mind ſtriving together for the faith of the Goſpel :]

* behave your ſelves worthy of ἀξίως πολιτεύεσθε.

28. And whatſoever oppoſition ye meet with, let it not diſcourage or affright you, but look on it only as a ſigne or teſtimony that they are wretched obdurate people, but that you

28. And in nothing terrified by your adverſaries, which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of ſalvation, and that of God.]

are

are the true penitent believers, reſcued out of the ſnares of ſin, and that this teſtimony is given by God himſelf of you,

29. For unto you it is given in the behalf of Chriſt, not onely to believe on him, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake :] for, as well as to believe in, Chriſt, which is a proof of your ſincerity and conſtancy, and an inſtance of God's goodneſſe and favour to you.

29. Who hath vouchſafed you this favour, to ſuffer

30. Having the ſame conflict which ye ſaw in me, and now hear to be in me.]

30. Suffering in the ſame manner as ye ſee and hear of me that I ſuffer.

Annotations on Chap. I.

V. 1. Philippi] The Philippians here named muſt (by Analogie with the Corinthians, and the reſt to whom the other Epiſtles are addreſs'd) be interpreted to be of a larger extent then the inhabitants of that one city, and either to contain all the Chriſtians throughout all Macedonia, or at leaſt all that were under that Metropolis. For that Philippi was ſuch, is the diſtinct affirmation of S. Luke, Act. 16. 12. ἐκεῖθεν εἰς Φιλίππους, ἥτις ἐστὶ πρώτη τῆς μερίδος τῆς Μακεδονίας πόλις, Philippi is the prime, or firſt, city in the province of Macedonia; that is, either of all Macedonia, as one wider Province, or at leaſt of one Province of it. And it is there added that it was then a colony, that is, inhabited by Romans (from whence it is that v. 21. they ſpeak of themſelves as Romans :) and ſuch colony-cities that were ſo inhabited by Romans, were generally (though not onely they) pitched on by the Roman Pretors or Preſidents to be the cities whither the neighbouring regions ſhould come for juſtice, the places of aſſiſes, &c. and ſo became the chief cities. So * Photius, Ἡ Φιλίππων πόλις τῆς Μακεδόνων ἐπαρχίας μητρόπολις ὤν, The city of Philippi being a metropolis of the Province of the Macedonians, and this expreſly ſpeaking of it as it was in S. Pauls time, Act. 16. 21. where the inhabitants of it, as of a Romane Colony, call themſelves Romans. So S. Chryſoſtome on Act. 16. λέγει καὶ τοῦ τόπου, ἅτε ἱστορίαν ἐξηγούμενος, καὶ δεικνὺς τῇ ἐπιχειρήσει, καὶ ἐδείκνυσι ὅτι οὐ πᾶσι μέλλοσι, τὰς δὲ ἄλλας παρήσει, S. Luke ſets down the places, as writing an hiſtory, and ſhewing where the Apoſtle ſpent any time, he names onely the greater cities, (ſuch are Metropoles) and paſſeth by the reſt, making Philippi, thus named, one of thoſe greater. And this is ſuppoſed by the antient writer under Ignatius's name, in Epiſt. ad Tarſenſ. when he tells them to whom he writes, Ἀσπάζονται ὑμᾶς αἱ Ἐκκλησίαι Φιλιππησίων, the Churches of the Philippians, in the plural, ſalute you, that is, the Churches under that Metropolis. And therefore when Philippi is by the Geographers (and out of them by the author of the argument of this Epiſtle) affirmed to be μικρὰ πόλις ὑπὸ Μητροπόλεως Θεσσαλονίκης τελοῦσα, a little city under the Metropolis Theſſalonica, it muſt be remembred that that definition belongs to ſome other time, probably long before that of S. Pauls writing here, or, in the Acts, his preaching to them. For ſo 'tis certain that this city built and thus named by Philip King of Macedon, had formerly been called Κρηνῖδες, and then Δάτος (whence was the proverb, Δάτος ἀγωνίζου, becauſe of a golden mine which Appian ſaith was near it) and was then a ſmall city; which hinders not but that now under the Roman Empire it might be improved and advanced, eſpecially being now a Colony of Romans; (and being ſo, 'tis not imaginable it ſhould be ſubject to Theſſalonica, a city in another Region, * an hundred and ten miles off from it, which was no Colony.) As when in Paleſtine, Cæſarea Stratonis became a Colony of the Romans, called Colonia Prima Flavia, by * Pliny, à Veſpaſiano deducta, the Prime Colony called Flavia, as being brought thither by Flavius Veſpaſianus, it became alſo, in reſpect of the Eccleſiaſtical Government, a Metropolis, under which Jeruſalem it ſelf was. For that many cities became Metropoles, which formerly were not, there is no doubt, and is affirmed in the 12. Can. of the Council of Chalcedon, πόλεις διὰ γραμμάτων βασιλικῶν τῷ τῆς μητροπόλεως ὀνόματι τιμηθεῖσαι, Cities are honoured with the names of Metropoles by the Emperors letters. So alſo Strabo, Geog. l. 17. p. 840. Αἱ ἐπαρχίαι πολλάκις διῄρηνται καὶ ἄλλοτε καὶ ἄλλως, Provinces have been at ſeveral times variouſly divided; which concludes the Metropoles to be changed alſo: and l. 13. p. 629. giving an account of the confuſion of Provinces by him obſerved, he ſaith it was cauſed διὰ τὸ τοὺς Ῥωμαίους μὴ κατὰ φῦλα διελεῖν αὐτὰς, ἀλλ' ἄλλον τρόπον διατάξαι διοικήσεις, ἐν αἷς τάς τε ἀγορὰς ποιοῦνται καὶ τὰς διαδικασίας, becauſe the Romans diſtributed them not according to the diviſions of tribes, but another way, according to the keeping of courts and aſſiſes. And thus doth * Pliny ſet down for Metropoles of Aſia, Laodicea, Sardis, Smyrna and Epheſus, upon this onely account, that the courts were kept there to which other cities reſorted. The truth is Κρηνῖδες, or Δάτος, which was now changed and advanced into Philippi, and a Metropolis of Macedonia, by being a Colony of the Romans, was originally a city of Thrace, and ſo is affirmed to be by Stephanus περὶ Πόλ. And ſo * Scylax Caryandeus among the cities of Thrace hath Δάτου πόλις ἑλληνὶς, next after Neapolis. And * Euſtathius on Dionyſii Περιήγ. to the ſame effect, Δάτου, πόλιν Θρᾴκιον περὶ τὸν Στρυμόνα παραλίαν, ſeating it on the banke of Strymon, where * Pomponius Mela in his deſcription of Thrace placeth Philippi, and ſo doth Plinie Nat. Hiſt. * l. 4. in his Survey of Thrace, A Strymone —intus Philippi Colonia : and ſo Dio deſcribing Pangæum Montem in Thrace ſaith 'tis cloſe by Philippi. But granting all this of the former times, 'tis yet certain that at the time of S. Pauls converting this city, it was changed from the antient forme, firſt it was a Roman Colony, and the inhabitants thereof Ῥωμαῖοι Romans, Act. 16. 21. and in that ſtate made a Metropolis of the adjoyning part of Macedonia, where the Roman Preſect kept his aſſiſes for all that meſi. According to this Diviſion ſaith * Ulpian, in provincia Macedonia Dyrracheni, Caſſandrenſes, Philippenſes Italici Juris ſunt. This may be illuſtrated à pari. Nicopolis is by * S. Chryſoſtome affirmed to be a city of Thrace, Νικόπολις ἡ Θρᾴκης ἐστὶ, and ſo by Theodoret τῆς Θρᾴκης ἐστὶ Νικόπολις, τῇ δὲ Μακεδονίᾳ πλάζει, Nicopolis is a city of Thrace, but borders on Macedonia, (in like manner as Philippi did;) and yet in the Subſcription of the Epiſtle to Titus we read, ἀπὸ Νικοπόλεως τῆς Μακεδονίας, from Nicopolis of Macedonia. This may ſerve to give account of the varieties which ſeem to be among writers about this city. And as in Civil, ſo in Eccleſiaſtical diviſions ſuch variety is obſervable. Thoſe cities were chief and Metropoles where the Goſpel was firſt planted, and thence communicated to the neighbouring regions. And ſuch was Philippi, as 'tis clear by the ſtory of S. Pauls preaching the Goſpel in Macedonia, Act. 16. 9, 10, &c. and 1. Theſſ. 2. 2. firſt at Philippi, then after at Theſſalonica. In which reſpect, of the πρωτοκλησία priority of converſion to the Faith, and being S. Pauls ἀπαρχαὶ firſt-fruits in that region, ſome privilege belongs to Philippi even before Theſſalonica, that chief Metropolis of Macedonia, viz. that Philippi was the elder ſiſter in the Faith, and ſo in that reſpect, though not in others, the prime Metropolis of Macedonia. Hence it is that the liberality of the brethren of Macedonia (in common) 2 Cor. 11. 9. is imputed to the Philippians peculiarly, Phil. 4. 16. by which it appears that all the Chriſtians of that region or μερὶς of Macedonia are contained under that title. And ſo though there be but one Epiſtle written by S. Paul to theſe Philippians, yet S. Polycarpe mentions Pauls Epiſtles (in the Plural) to them, by which learned men underſtand thoſe other inſcribed to the Theſſalonians, that other chiefe city of Macedonia, which might therefore belong to Philippi alſo. And to that the ſevere adjuration of the Apoſtle, 1 Theſſ. 5. 27. ſeems to belong, where he adjures them by the living God that that Epiſtle be read πᾶσι to all the holy brethren indefinitely, that is, I conceive, to all the Chriſtians in each Church of Macedonia. And ſo it is evident that the Epiſtle inſcribed to the Corinthians belonged to all the Churches of Achaia, 2 Cor. 1. 1. and ſo that inſcribed to the Coloſſians was alſo to be read Col. 4. 6. by the Church of Laodicea, the chief Metropolis of Phrygia, to which Coloſſe is adjoyn'd as a ſecundary, Col. 2. 2. By all this appears how in Philippi there may be more Biſhops then one, indeed as many as were in all Macedonia, at leaſt as in the cities under that Metropolis.

b. Ἐπίσκοπος

b. Biſhops] What the word ἐπίσκοποι and ἐπίσκοπος notes in the Old and New Teſtament, hath been ſaid already, Note on Act. 1. h. viz. prafecture or ruling power in the Church. But whether this belonged to ſingular perſons, one in each city and region adjoyning, or to a number of ſuch, ruling together as collegues, hath been of late controverted by ſome, and this place, which mentions in Philippi Biſhops in the Plural, hath been a principal teſtimony to conclude that in one Church there were many Biſhops. This, if it were granted, and conſequently, that Biſhops here denote no other then thoſe whom we now call Presbyters, would be of no force to inferre this concluſion, That Churches in the Apoſtles times were ruled not by ſingle Biſhops, but many Presbyters; becauſe 1. it were poſſible that the Apoſtle himſelf might at this time retain that ſupreme Epiſcopal power in his own hands, and though abſent in body, yet by letters (being preſent in ſpirit) exerciſe that power over them: Or 2dly, if the Apoſtle had conſtituted a Biſhop over them, yet 'tis poſſible that at the writing this Epiſtle the Chair might be vacant, or that the Biſhop might be abſent. And indeed Epaphroditus, who is by Theodoret and others affirmed to be Biſhop of Philippi, by * Theophylact, διδάσκαλος Doctor, which that it is the title of Biſhop, we have formerly ſhewed, (Note on 1 Cor. 12 d.) appears c. 4. 18. to have been with Paul at this time, when he wrote the Epiſtle. (ſo ſaith Theophylact, that the Clergy are mentioned in this, and in no other Epiſtle, becauſe they had ſent Epaphroditus with neceſſaries for the Apoſtles uſe) and to have carried the Epiſtle to them, which one thing might make it inconvenient to inſcribe the Epiſtle to him. And yet in the body of the Epiſtle c. 4. 3. there is an Apoſtrophe which in all probability belongs to him, under the name of his yoke-fellow, that is to look to the relief of the widowes, ſuppoſing him preſent at the opening of the letter. But there is no need of ſuch anſwers as theſe to avoid the force of this argument. That which hath been ſaid Note 2. will give a clear account of it, that Philippi being a Metropolis, under which were many other Churches, which had each of them a Biſhop, all thoſe Biſhops are here meant by ἐπίσκοποι in the Plural, as this Epiſtle was written to all thoſe cities or Churches, and not onely to that of Philippi. Of this it is clear in Eccleſiaſtical writings, that there was a Biſhop conſtituted by the Apoſtles. For ſo * Tertullian diſtinctly mentions it for one of thoſe Churches which derived the pedegree of Biſhops from the Apoſtles as founders. And Ignatius, S. Pauls ſucceſſor at Antioch, in his Epiſtle to them, names Vitalis as their Biſhop, and the Latine old copie of Polycarps Epiſtle to them mentions Vitus, which is ſurely the ſame. And though that Epiſtle mentions πρεσβυτέρους καὶ διακόνους Elders and Deacons onely, yet conſidering the notion of πρεσβύτεροι, ſet down Note on Act. 11 b. there will be little doubt but that Elders there and Biſhops here are all one, viz. all the Biſhops of the cities under that Metropolis, which may well be contained under the title there prefixed to it, Ἐκκλησίᾳ τῇ Θεοῦ παροικούσῃ Φιλίπποις, to the Church of God adjoyning, or belonging, to Philippi. And indeed as the word Πρεσβύτεροι Elders is a note of Prefecture, and ſo may fitly belong to the Biſhop in each city (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.) in all the places of the New Teſtament, ſo there is little reaſon to doubt of the word Ἐπίσκοποι biſhops. The firſt mention of it is Act. 20. 28. where thoſe that had been called Elders of the Church, v. 17. are ἐπίσκοποι τῆς ποιμνίς, Biſhops of the flock, ſet over it by the Holy Ghoſt: where, if the flock were the Chriſtians of any one city, there might be ſome pretence that the Elders or Biſhops in the Plural might be thoſe which are now called Presbyters. But it is apparent that the flock is the Chriſtians of all Aſia, of which it is ſaid c. 19. 10. that all that dwelt in Aſia heard the word of the Lord, and almoſt all Aſia were converted, ſaith Demetrius v. 26. which Paul calls the opening of a great doore to him in thoſe parts, 1 Cor. 16. 9. And conſequently the Elders or Biſhops there, are the Biſhops of all Aſia, at leaſt thoſe that belonged to Epheſus as their * Metropolis. To which purpoſe is that of S. Ireneus l. 3. c. 14. In Mileto convocatis Epiſcopis & Presbyteris ab Epheſo & proximis civitatibus, the Biſhops and Elders being aſſembled at Miletus, from Epheſus and the next of the cities. And therefore S. Paul in his oration to them tells them, they had known how he had been with them all the time from the firſt day that he came into Aſia, c. 20. 18. noting thoſe to whom his ſpeech was addreſs'd to be the Biſhops of Aſia, and not of that city only. The next mention of Biſhops (beſide that in this place) is that 1 Tim. 3. 2. He that deſires the office of a Biſhop, &c. A Biſhop therefore muſt be blameleſſe, &c. and in the ſame words Tit. 1. 7. In both which places, as it is agreeable to the affirmations of the Antients (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.) that there ſhould be conſtituted Biſhops only and Deacons in the ſeverall Churches, (there being no middle order yet in uſe) ſo that Ἐπίσκοποι diſtinctly notes thoſe Biſhops, and not thoſe whom we now call Presbyters, is the joynt affirmation of Chryſoſtome and Theophylact and Oecumenius. † Ἐπισκόπων ἔδει πολλῶν, καθ' ἑκάστην πόλιν προκαθημένων, there was need of more Biſhops, and of thoſe which preſide in every city. And again, * Κατὰ πόλιν πρεσβυτέρους] Ἐπισκόπους ἴσως ὀνομάζει φησι, ὡς καὶ ἐν τῇ πρὸς Τιμόθεον· καὶ πόλεις δέ φησιν· ἐ γὰρ ἐβούλετο πᾶσαν ἐπιτρέφεσθαι ἑνὶ, ἀλλ' ἑκάστῃ πόλιν ἴδιον ἔχειν ποιμένα, Elders in every city] he there means Biſhops, as alſo in the Epiſtle to Timothy: And when he ſaith in every city, it is becauſe he would not have the whole Iſland intruſted to one, but that every city ſhould have ther own Paſtor. And ſo ſaith † Euſebius of Titus, that there being an hundred cities in Crete converted to the faith by S. Paul, Titus had the biſhoprick of them all, that is the Metropolitical power; that he might ordain Biſhops under him, ſaith * Theodoret; that he might exerciſe judicature and ordination, ſaith Chryſoſtome and Theophylact.

Theophylact. There are no more mentions of this word Ἐπίσκοπος in the New Testament, and in all these it is fairly appliable to the Bishops, or single Prefects or Governours of Churches: And so though it be generally resolved that the word Bishop and Elder are equivalent in the Scripture, yet is not this to be understood so, that either, and both of them signifies indifferently those whom we now call Presbyters, but that they both signifie Bishops, one setled in each Church by the Apostles, there being no use of that second order in the Church, till the number of believers increased.

c. Διάκονος

Ib. Deacons] Of the word διακονῶν we have spoken at large, Note on Luk. 8. 2. both as that signifies indefinitely to serve, and as to wait at the table, and give every man his dimensum from the ἀρχιβήκλινος, and from thence to distribute to the poor, to all that want. And thus the seven Deacons institution Act. 6. may be thought to confine their name and office in the Church of Christ to that (especially and principally) of διακονῶν τραπέζαις serving tables, distributing to the poor, v. 2. called the καθημερινὴ διακονία, daily ministration ver. 1. But (beside that those seven were not wholly imployed in those inferiour imployments, but Stephen and Philip made use of for the preaching of the Gospel, cap. 7. 8. and Samaria converted and baptized by the latter of them, and he therefore called Philip the Evangelist, Act. 21. 8.) it is every where clear, that the word διάκονος is not to be restrained to that notion, but taken in a more general, for any officer, or servant, or minister, without particular notation of the kind wherein the service or ministerie consists, and being taken in an Ecclesiastical notion, shall signifie any inferiour Church-officer, however imployed by the Bishop or Apostle to whom he belongeth. The original of this word and office is to be taken from the Jewes, among whom the ministers and officers that attended the Judges in every city, Deut. 16. 18. are in the Scriptures called שֹׁטְרִים, by the Rabbines, חזנ'ם ministers, and with the addition of הכנסורת, ministers of the synagogue, or Consistory, and juniores, the younger, saith Maimonides, such as had not attained to the age of Doctor; and these sure are the νεώτεροι that buried Ananias, Act. 5. 6. These † Epiphanius calls ἀζανίται (a word lightly varied from the Hebrew חזנ'ם) and saith the Deacons in the Christian Church are directly parallel to them: For as they were the Γαζοφύλακες, keepers of the treasure, so did they also διακονικὰς χρείας ἐπιτελῶν, perform all ministerial offices indifferently. And of them the Jewes have a saying, that about the time of the destruction of Jerusalem the learning of the wise men, that is, Doctors, was degenerated into that of the Azanitæ, and the learning of the Azanitæ into that which was competible to the Notaries, noting the subordinarion of the Azanitæ to the Doctors, and of the Notaries to the Azanitæ. From hence appears the notion and office of these Deacons in the Christian Church, those that attended and waited on the Bishop, and did whatsoever he appointed them, preach, baptize, &c. read the Gospel, attend the Bishop in ministring the Sacrament of the Lords supper, receive the oblations from the sub-deacon, and bring them to the Bishop, mind the people in performing the several parts of the divine office, call on them to pray, to sing, to hear, to kneel, &c. And as these were first trained up for these ministeries in the family of the Bishop, so were they after in Religious houses and Colleges, or Monasteries, (which appear by the antients to have been seminaries of the Church, and not instituted onely for prayer and devotion:) and such, when they have used the office of a Deacon well, καλῶς διακονήσαντες, 1 Tim. 3. 13. purchase to themselves a good degree, that is, παχίως ἐπὶ τὰ ἀνωτέρω ἐλεύσονται, say the scholiasts, shall soon ascend higher, as Clemens being Peters Deacon at Rome, succeeded him in the Episcopal chair. Proportionable to which it was, that afterwards the Bishops were chosen out of Monasteries, Gregory Nazianzen, Basil, Chrysostome, &c. Thus is the word Deacons to be understood in this place, being joyned to Bishops, as those that attend on them in every Church, and were then next to them, there being not then (as farre as appears) any middle sort of Church officers instituted betwixt the Bishops and them. And the same is certainly the notion of it in that other place, 1 Tim. 3. 8, 12. where the rules are given for the qualifying them that are ordained to that office (as before had been given for the Bishops) in stead of which are the πρεσβύται antient men, Tit. 2. 2. all one with διάκονοι Deacons, in this more comprehensive notion, as it contains the διαιρέσεις διακονιῶν diversities of ministrations, 1 Cor. 12. 5. And these are elsewhere called διάκονοι Θεοῦ ministers of God 1 Thess. 3. 2. the title that was then bestowed on Timothy, as the fellow-labourer of Paul in the Gospel, and ἐν Χριστῷ, in Christ, as of Epaphras 'tis said, Col. 1. 7. our fellow-servant (all one with his fellow-labourer before) who is for you a faithfull minister in Christ, and ἐν Κυρίῳ in the Lord, as of Tychicus, Ephes. 6. 21. our beloved brother and πιστὸς διάκονος faithfull minister in the Lord. In all which places διάκονος with those adjuncts is applied to those assistants and attendants on the Apostles, that were, as they pleased, employed by them in the Gospel. Besides these, other places there are wherein 'tis applied to the Apostles themselves, διάκονοι deacons or ministers simply, 1 Cor. 3. 5. Θεοῦ of God, 2 Cor. 6. 4. of Christ, 2 Cor. 11. 23. Ephes. 3. 7. 1 Tim. 4. 6. of the Church, Col. 1. 25. of the Gospel, ver. 23. of the New Testament, 2 Cor. 3. 6. And this still in a more general notion, as it denotes servants, officers, of what kind soever.

† Hær. Elvion.

d. Χάριτας

V. 7. My grace] That the word χάρις, which signifies any favour or mercy of God, should here peculiarly be used for the sufferings which had befaln S. Paul in the discharge of his office, will not appear strange, if first it be considered, how often this state of suffering is mention'd by Christ, and by S. Paul, S. Peter, and S. James, as an eminent mercy of Gods to them who are thus honoured by him, & accordingly that it is to be look'd on as matter of all joy (in their account) whensoever it befalls any; secondly, if it be compared with ver. 29. where the Philippians suffering for Christ, as eminently as their believing in him, is mention'd as that which ἐχαρίσθη ὑμῖν was granted them by way of χάρις grace, or mercy, or special favour of God. As for that which is affirmed in both these verses, that this Church of Philippi was thus persecuted for Christianity, and so participated with him in his bands or sufferings, though it be not mention'd in the story of the Acts, yet it is in it self easie to be believed, (and by these testimonies put beyond all question) the Jewish unbelievers everywhere stirring up the Roman magistrates to persecute the believers in their Provinces.

e. Πραιτώριον

V. 13. Palace] Πραιτώριον signifies in the Latine (and so in Greek the same) the common hall, or court, where judgment used to be had, the Prætor being a Roman officer in their judicatures; τόπος ἔνθα συνάγεται ὁ λαὸς, the place where the people meet, saith Phavorinus: and so sure it signifies here, and S. Paul's being imprisoned, and brought before the judges, might be a means to make Christianity known to the bench and the whole court. Thus one of his Judges had told him that he had perswaded him, ἐν ὀλίγῳ a little way, to be a Christian, which is the thing that here seems to be related to, or some other of the same nature.

f. Πρόφασις

V. 18. Pretense] The word πρόφασις signifies not only a pretext or pretense (and so is opposed to ἀλήθεια a true cause) but also an occasion, as πρόφασις ζητεῖ, he ſeeks occaſions, Prov. 18. 1. and ſo it ſeems to be taken here, (and ſo more fitly to connect with παντὶ τρόπῳ, by all means, then it could doe if it were rendred in pretenſe,) thus, by all means ὅτι προφάσει, whether by occaſion onely, that is, accidentally, and not by a deſigned cauſality, ἢ ὅτι ἀληθείᾳ, or whether by truth, that is, by a direct real way of efficiency.

g. Καρπὸς ἔργου

V. 22. Fruit of my labour] Καρπὸς ἔργου ſeems to be a Latiniſme, operæ pretium, and ſo to ſignifie accordingly worth my labour, worth doing, as we ſay a deſirable thing. So Theophylact renders it οὐκ ἀκαρπον not fruitleſs, καρποφορῶ γάρ, ſaith he, for I bring forth fruit by this means.

h. Ἀναλύσειν

V. 23. To depart] Of the many acceptions of the word ἀναλύειν none ſeems more proper to this place then that which is in its ſelf moſt ſimple and plain, that it ſignifie to depart this world, or retire, remove out of this life, migrare, abire, diſcedere, reverti; every of which is uſually taken for an expreſſion of death, and are anſwerable to the Hebrew פטר, which the Syriack here makes uſe of, the ſame which is by the Chaldee uſed of Moſes on Cant. c. 1. when Moſes's time came למפטר מן עלמא to depart, or, that he ſhould depart, out of the world: and ſo 2 Tim. 4. 6. ὁ καιρὸς τῆς ἐμῆς ἀναλύσεως, is ordinarily rendred, the time, or ſeaſon of my departure, or deceaſe. Ἀναλύειν ἐν τεύδεν in Palladius (Hiſt. Lauſiac. p. 506. A) to looſe from thence, or moſt properly to return, alluding to Eccleſ. 12. 7. where the body returnes to the earth as it was, to the place from whence originally it came out, and ſo the ſpirit unto God that gave, or firſt breathed, it into the firſt man. And ſo ordinarily in Chriſtian Authors ἀναλύειν, and ἀνάλυσις πρὸς Χριστὸν, and the like. And for the original of this uſe and acception of the word, nothing can be more probable then that it is a phraſe of the Mariners, who are ſaid λύειν to looſe from the haven, when they goe out, oram ſolvere, and abſolutely ſolvere, to looſe; and when they do this by way of return homewards, then 'tis properly ἀναλύειν. So Luk. 12. 6. ἀναλύσει ἐκ τῶν γάμων, is coming home, returning from the marriage feaſt. So 2 Mac. 8 1. ἀναλελυκὼς ἀκόσμως retiring diſorderly. So the method of reducing concluſions to their principles is by Ariſtotle ſtyled ἀναλυτικὴ, ἢ ἐκ γνωστῶν εἰς τὰς ἀρχὰς ἐπάνοδος, ſaith Philoponus, & again ἢ ἐκ τῶν αἰτιατῶν ἀναδρομὴ ἐπὶ τὰς ἀρχὰς, a returning, or running back, from the concluſions, or effects, to their Principles; adding that it is a metaphor ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποδημούντων, καὶ ὑποστρεφόντων εἰς τὰ οἰκεῖα, from travailers returning to their homes, and εἰς τὰ οἰκεῖα ἀπὸ τῶν ξένων ἐπάνοδος, ἀνάλυσις λέγεται, a returne from ſtrangers to ones own home is thus ſtyled. * In 2 Poſt.

i. Πεποιθὼς οἶδα

V. 25. Having this confidence] Τοῦτο πεποιθὼς οἶδα is ſomewhat an obſcure phraſe, and may beſt be explicated by two conſiderations. Firſt, that πεποιθὼς ſignifies hoping with ſome confidence, anſwerable to the Heb. בטח which is ordinarily rendred ἐλπὶς hope, but 2 Kin. 18. 20. πεποίθησις perſwaſion, confidence. So v. 6. πεποιθὼς αὐτὸ τοῦτο, hoping confidently this very thing. So 2 Cor. 1. that which is expreſs'd by ἐλπίζω I hope, v. 13. is ταύτῃ τῇ πεποιθήσει in this perſwaſion v. 15. Then for the phraſe πεποιθὼς οἶδα, that is in ordinary conſtruction all one with οἶδά με πεποιθέναι I know that I hope, or, am perſwaded, or, of this I am ſure, (ſo οἶδα τοῦτο is ordinarily uſed) that I hope, or am perſwaded. And this is very agreeable to the matter in hand, where to comfort them in their ſadneſſe for his afflictions, he minds them that, in order to their good, he foreſees it very probable that he may be permitted to live, and though he knows not by any certain revelation whether he ſhall or no, yet this he knows that he hopes, and conſidering Gods diſpenſations of providence, is verily perſwaded (which alſo includes his deſire) of it.

CHAP. II.

1, 2. I therefore conjure you by all thoſe benefits which are afforded us in Chriſt, by the great joy and pleaſure there is in loving one another, by that liberal effuſion of graces from the Spirit of God (ſee note on Act. 2. d.) and by your affection and compaſſion toward men in calamity, and particularly toward me, at this time a priſoner for Chriſt, that to all the other matter of rejoicing that I have concerning you, you will adde this alſo, (and ſo make my joy complete) that you live in unity, loving one another mutually, having as it were the ſame ſoul, and ſo affections and deſignes, all ſtudying and taking care for this ſame thing.

a. Μορφὴ

V. 6. Forme of God] Μορφὴ ſignifies not onely an external and accidental form, as Mar. 16. 12. nor at all an image or picture (as μόρφωσις ſeems to doe, Rom. 2.20. 2 Tim. 3. 5. and is rendred by Heſychius σχηματισμὸς, εἰκὼν, a perſonation or image) but it is taken alſo in good authors for an internal eſſential form or being. Thus in Æſchylus, ſpeaking of Ζεὺς καὶ γαῖα, they are, ſaith he,

πολλῶν ὀνομάτων μορφὴ μία, one form, that is, thing under divers names. The words of Phavorinus are moſt obſervable for the explication of this place, Μορφὴ τὸ καθ' ἑαυτὸ ὄν, καὶ κοινωνίας ἑτέρου εἰς τὸ εἶναι ἀδέομένον, the word ſignifies that which hath a being of it ſelf, and needs not the aſſiſtance of another to its being; and again, Μορφὴ κυρίως ἡ οὐσία, it properly ſignifies eſſence, & then cites theſe very words ὃς ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων, which is, ſaith he, ἐν οὐσίᾳ Θεοῦ γνωσκόμενος, known in the eſſence of God, being God, and by the raies and beams of his Divinity (ſhining even in his firſt conception and birth) diſcerned and known to be ſo. This here appears to be the notion of the word by μορφὴν δούλου, the form of a ſervant, that followes ver. 7. for that was not onely an external, but alſo a real form; he was really a ſervant of Gods, in his humane nature undertaking an office deſign'd him by God, and moſt ſtrictly obeying him in all things; and ἠλάττωσας αὐτὸν βραχύ τι παρ' ἀγγέλους Heb. 2. 7. he was a little lower, or for a little while (the time that he ſpent here on earth) lower than the Angels, who we know are the ſervants of God: and ſo the words ὁμοίωμα and σχῆμα ver 8. (which frequently ſignifie likeneſs, and external habit, and forms) doe here ſignifie that outward appearance, which doth not exclude but include the inward being and reality; for it is certain, and by all acknowledged, that he was really a man, & not onely in likeneſs & appearance ſo. Thus doth Theophylact interpret it, Μορφὴν δὲ Θεοῦ ἡ οὐσία λέγει, the forme of God ſignifies his eſſence, ὥσπερ μορφὴ δούλου ἡ φύσις, as the form of a ſervant is the nature of a ſervant. This being thus evident of this firſt phraſe ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων, where Chriſts Divinity is aſſerted, and that precedaneous to his humiliation, and as the terminus à quo the term of elevation, from which his exinanition and humiliation takes the riſe, and is much encreaſed thereby, there would now be little gained to the cauſe of the Photinians, or ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο

Arrians, in caſe the phraſe that follows, οὐχ ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα τῷ Θεῷ, which we render, thought it no robbery to be equal with God, ſhould appear to be miſtaken. For when it is once acknowledged that Chriſt was God before his aſſumption of our humane nature, and that being really God, or ὑπάρχων ſubſiſting in the real form of God, he took our humanity upon him, it is by neceſſary conſequence concluded that he was equal with God, which is all that is pretended by any from this ſecond phraſe. For as to them that affirm Chriſt a Deus factus, a God that had a beginning of being ſo, and from thence deny his equality with the Father, it is evident that they dare his Divinity from his reſurrection and exaltation, (which is manifeſtly confuted by his being God before his humiliation) and they that affirm him ὁμοιούσιον, of like, (but not ὁμούσιον, of the ſame) being with the Father, are ſufficiently confuted by the notion of μορφὴ here ſet down, as it ſignifies the real being of God, wherein he was ὑπάρχων ſubſiſting, for that includes Equality, and not likeneſs onely. Now for the phraſe οὐχ ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα τῷ Θεῷ that it ſhould ſignifie Chriſt's not aſſuming to appear like God, or ſpectari tanquam Deum, to be look'd on as God, and ſo belong to his forbidding many times to have his power and divine greatneſs proclaimed, there is but one argument which to me makes it any thing probable, (and that not taken notice of by them that defend that ſenſe) and that taken from the ἀλλὰ but which followes v. 7. For in this notion of the phraſe it would moſt commodiouſly agree with that he would not aſſume, or own, ſo much greatneſſe, but humbled, or emptied, himſelf, &c. where that aſſuming and that humbling are directly oppoſite, and ſo moſt agreeable to the importance of ἀλλὰ but, a note of Oppoſition. And indeed this notion of the phraſe would very well connect it to the antecedents, thus, he being in form, &c. that is, really and eternally God, when he came down on earth, would not thus aſſume and magnifie this power, but ἐκένωσε, diminiſh'd or leſſen'd and humbled himſelf, asked at one time, Why calleſt thou me good? none is good ſave God; and at another, commanded that his miracles, which demonſtrated him to be God, ſhould not be divulged. And this notion conſiſts very well with the Context. and the aſſertion of Chriſt's Divinity, for being God he might yet chuſe to conceal his being ſo. But yet after all this, there is no reaſon to adhere to this interpretation. For firſt, ἁρπαγμὸν ἡγεῖσθαι doth no where appear to ſignifie jactare, or oſtentare, or venditare, to aſſume, or take upon one. And though ἁρπαγμὸς may ſignifie prey, or prize, in warre, yet ἡγεῖσθαι to eſteem or account being joyned with it, no way inclines it to this notion, but to that which the ordinary interpretation affixes to it, that he counted it no prey, prize, acquiſition, or (which is all one) robbery, to be equal with God. And whereas it is pretended that it is a Syriack phraſe, and that proved by a paſſage in the Syriack Liturgie, where upon Chriſts asking Baptiſme of John, John anſwers, לא אלביך גולתא I will not aſſume rapine, that is no proof of this notion. For firſt, that which John thus expreſſed, was, that he would not doe ſo injurious a thing as to pretend to have greater authority then Chriſt, and conſequently to admit him to his Baptiſme, and ſo it ſeems, to aſſume rapine, in Syriack, is to doe an injurious thing. And ſecondly, there is ſome difference between aſſuming and thinking, and conſequently ἡγεῖσθαι to think being joyn'd with ἁρπαγμὸν rapine, muſt ſignifie to think or count it a rapine, or an injury, (which is very diſtant from boaſting of it as a prize, triumphing or aſſuming) and that is the notion that the ordinary interpretation gives of it. As for the phraſe εἶναι ἴσα Θεῷ, there is as little reaſon to render that, Ita Oſi ſpectari tanquam Deum, to be look'd on as God, for neither is εἶναι to be look'd on, but to be, nor ἴσα tanquam, as, but equal, or as great as another. It is true in the verſe cited out of Homer,

Τὸν νῦν ἴσα Θεῷ Ἰθακήσιοι ὑποδῶσι, that ἰσοῦσθαι ἴσα Θεῷ is to look on him as equal to God, and that proves that ἴσα Θεῷ ſignifies either a God, or one equal to God; but then εἶναι and ἰσοῦσθαι, to be and to be look'd on, are not the ſame, and ſo εἶναι ἴσα is to be equal, and not onely to be look'd on as ſuch. The true notion of ἴσα may be diſcerned by Luk. 6. 34. where they that lend to the rich are ſaid to doe it ἵνα ἀπολάβωσι τὰ ἴσα, that they may receive from them loanes, τὰ ἴσα or benefits, of as great a value; where τὰ ἴσα in the plural, (juſt as here) ſignifies that which is equally valuable: and as there ἀπολαβεῖν τὰ ἴσα is to receive that which is equal, or equivalent, ſo εἶναι ἴσα is to be equal, and ἴσα Θεῷ equal to God, of the ſame value and real power and Divinity with God the Father. And theo followes ἀλλὰ ἐκένωσε, either in the notion of ἀλλὰ for Αλλὰ yet, though he were thus great, yet he vilified, ſubmitted himſelf; or as ἀλλὰ ſignifies but, He was God, and, without any injury, equal to his Father, but for all this, or notwithſtanding this, he vilified himſelf &c. And this is the clear rendring of this whole place.

V. 7. Made himſelf of no reputation] Κενόω ſignifies to leſſen, diminiſh; ſo Phavorinus, Κενωθῆναι ἐλάττωσιν ὑπο- h. Κοίν ὑστερεῖν, to ſuffer or undergo diminution: ſo the Hebrew חסר, which Jer. 14. 4. and 15. 9. is rendred κενόω to empty, is Joel 1. 10, 12. Nehem. 1. 4. ὀλιγόω to diminiſh, and Hoſ. 4. 3. σμικρύνω, to make little.

c. φόβῳ καὶ τρόμῳ

V. 12. Feare and trembling] That the phraſe μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου, with fear and trembling, ſignifies μετὰ ταπεινοφροσύνης with humility, is ordinarily ſaid from the Antients, and is confirmed by * S. Chryſoſtome, uſing it of the Angels, Ἀγγελικαὶ δυνάμεις παρεστήκασι μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου· οἱ Χερουβὶμ, κατακαλύπτοντες τὰ πρόσωπα, οἱ Σεραφὶμ κεκράζοντες τρόμῳ, ἅγιος, ἅγιος, ἅγιος Κύριος, the Angelical powers aſſiſt with fear and trembling, the Cherubims hide their faces, the Seraphims cry with trembling, holy, holy, holy Lord, &c. And thus it may here have a very commodious ſenſe, ſo as to be anſwerable to thoſe words in the ſecond part of this ſpeech v. 13. for God worketh in you to will and to doe, of his good pleaſure, which is a foundation of all humility. But the notion of the phraſe in other places of theſe books ſeems to imply ſomething more, not onely lowlineſs of mind, but diligence and caution, and ſolicitude, and fear of diſpleaſing, as a qualification of obedience, (and ſo fearing the Lord with all the heart and ſoul, Deut. 10. 12. conſiſts in keeping his commandements, &c.) ſuch as will be required to render it acceptable to God. Thus Epheſ. 6. 5. Servants, obey your maſters with fear and trembling, that is, a very great fear of offending, terror, or trembling, leſt they ſhould doe any thing amiſs. So 2 Cor. 7. 15. upon S. Pauls orders of ſeverity v. 9. either delivered by Titus, or made known to him by S. Paul v. 14. (and ſo he an officer of S. Pauls, ſent to ſee how they behaved themſelves under it) Titus tells him of the Corinthians obedience (ὑπακοὴ again) ὡς μετὰ φόβου καὶ τρόμου ἐδέξασθε αὐτὸν, how with fear and trembling ye received him, that is, entertained him and his meſſage from Paul with all readineſs of obedience, all diligence, and fear, and zeal v. 11. to approve your ſelves unto him. Thus ὁ φόβος ὁ φόβος ὁ φόβῳ in fear ſignifies, 1 Pet. 1. 17. with all diligence and care to approve themſelves to God; and ſo 2 Cor. 7. 1. in the fear of God is the qualification of their cleanſing from all filthineſs, and perfecting holineſs: and Heb. 12. 28. as the qualification of ſerving God acceptably, is added μετὰ αἰδοῦς καὶ εὐλαβείας with reverence and fear; and that back'd with the conſideration of, Our God is a conſuming fire. And accordingly the worſhippers of God, the pious among the Gentiles, are called εὐλαβεῖς and φοβούμενοι, men of reverence and fear, their fear ſignifying their ſollicitude and diligence to pleaſe God, wherein their piety conſiſted. And ſo 1 Pet. 3. 15. ἕτοιμοι ready (as ſervants are to be at every call) to give anſwer to every one that aſks you an account of the hope in you, (that is, to confeſs Chriſt even in perſecutions and dangers) with meekneſs and fear, as with all meekneſs to men, ſo with all care to approve your ſelves to God. And thus it is here ſet as the qualification of godly obedience, As, ſaith he, you have alwaies obeyed-- ſo, &c. work out-- with fear and trembling, χωρὶς γογγυσμῶν καὶ διαλογισμῶν v. 14. without murmurings & diſputings, which are the worſt evidences of an untoward obedience, and ſo moſt contrary to the ſincere diligence and zeale to Gods ſervice, meant by the fear and trembling.

d. ὁ ἐνεργῶν τὸ θέλειν

V. 13. Worketh in you both to will——] The word ὁ ἐνεργῶν that worketh being joyned with ἐν ὑμῖν in you on one ſide, and with ὑπὲρ τῆς εὐδοκίας of his good pleaſure on the other ſide, muſt in reaſon ſo be interpreted, as ſhall be moſt directly anſwerable to the exhortation given to them, v. 12. of working out their own ſalvation with fear and trembling. To which it will be conſequent, that as this which is done by God is done of his own free mercy, without any merit of ours which may claim it from him, and therefore requires not only our humility, but our diligence, and caution, and ſolicitude, and fear of diſpleaſing ſo gracious a father, who may, if he be provoked by our unworthineſs, withdraw it from us; ſo it is not to be conceived to be wrought by God in ſuch an irreſiſtible manner, as that it ſhall be impoſſible for thoſe in whom God thus works to contradict or reſiſt his working. For if it were ſo, there could be no place for the exhortation to doe that, which could not be otherwiſe, to work out their own ſalvation, &c. To work then in us the τὸ θέλειν καὶ τὸ ἐνεργεῖν the willing and the acting, or operating, is the giving us that ſtrength, working in us thoſe abilities which are required to our willing, or working, as neceſſary to prepare and aſſiſt us to doe either. So (Gods χαρίσματα and ἐνεργήματα, gifts and operations, being all one) δοῦναι λατρεύειν, to give to ſerve him Luk. 1. 74. ſignifies his affording that grace which enables us to ſerve him, not which forceth or neceſſitateth us to doe ſo. The Kings MS. here adds the word δυνάμει by his power, which as it agrees well with this ſenſe, ſo hath it a farther energie in it, to encourage our diligence, which is wont to be diſheartned by the difficulty and impoſſibility of the task. Be we never ſo weak and inſufficient of our ſelves, God hath all-ſufficient ſtrength, and by that ſtrength of his he worketh in us the willing and the doing: and ſo if we be not wanting to our ſelves, but work, and work out our own ſalvation with all diligence, we ſhall have no reaſon to complain of want of ſtrength, we are able to doe what he requires of us, διὰ τοῦ ἐνδυναμοῦντος, through him that ſtrengthneth us.

e. σπένδομαι

V. 17. Offered upon the ſacrifice] The word σπένδομαι denotes the pouring out of wine upon the ſacrifice; ἡ τοῦ οἴνου ἔκχυσις ἐπὶ τὰ ἱερουργήματα, the effuſion of wine on the ſacrifices, ſaith Ammonius of σπονδή, and ὁ ἐπιχεόμενος τῇ θυσίας οἶνος, ſaith Heſychius, wine poured out on the ſacrifice. This wine being thus offered up to God is ſaid to chear the heart of God, Jud. 9. 13. And to this S. Paul here compares the effuſion of his own blood, which is moſt fitly reſembled by wine. And the words that follow, make the reſemblance complete. For the bringing in of men to the faith of Chriſt, to the embracing and receiving the Goſpel, is elſewhere compared to a Sacrifice, Rom. 12. 1. your bodies a living ſacrifice, and 15. 16. and offering of the Gentiles acceptable, &c. And a Sacrifice being firſt kill'd, then dreſs'd and prepared by the Prieſts and Levites, the former of theſe is called θυσία, the latter λειτουργία, and both are made uſe of here, the ſacrifise, and the ſervice of their faith: where their faith ſignifying their receiving of the Goſpel, the converting them is this θυσία τῆς πίστεως, ſacrifice of their faith; and the farther labour beſtowed upon them (in the confirming and fitting them for this honourable employment of being offered up to God a living ſacrifice.) is the λειτουργία the ſervice, and Paul's ſpending his life, ſhedding his blood in the employment, is the pouring out the wine on the ſacrifice. Thus 2 Tim. 4. 6. ſpeaking of his ſufferings and danger under Nero, ἤδη σπένδομαι, ſaith he, I am already poured out.

f. ἰσόψυχος

V. 20. No man like-minded] The notion of ἰσόψυχος among Greek authors is clear all one with ἴσος ἐμῇ ψυχῇ, equal to my ſoul, a ſecond ſelf, moſt dear to me, ſuch as Patroclus to Achilles in Homer, whom, ſaith he, I love ἴσον ἐμῇ κεφαλῇ equal to my head, or life. Thus alſo the Greek interpreters of the Pſalmes uſe it Pſal. 55. 14. σὺ δὲ ἄνθρωπε ἰσόψυχε, ἡγεμών μου καὶ γνωστέ μου, thou my companion, my guide, and my known friend. This therefore in all reaſon is to be the meaning of it here alſo, not to expreſs what care Timothy had of the Philippians (for that is ſaid in the next words, ὅστις γνησίως τὰ ὑμῶν μεριμνήσει, who will ſincerely take care of your affaires) but how dearely valued he was by Paul, ſo that when he came to them, they ſhould think a ſecond Paul was come to them. If there were any difficulty in this rendring or place for conjecture, a man might gueſs S. Paul to have written either σύζυγον or ἰσόζυγον, the firſt uſed by this Apoſtle in this Epiſtle, c. 4. 3. γνήσιε σύζυγε, true yoke-fellow, and the latter of the ſame ſignification, he that drawes in another yoke. So I ſuppoſe the Gloſs in Heſychius muſt be read, not ἰσοζύγιον, ἴσον, ζυγῷ ἀντίσηκον, but ἰσόζυγον, ἴσον ζυγῷ, ἀντίζυγον, and ſo in Phavorinus alſo. But there is no reaſon to doubt the reading ἰσόψυχον, nor to fly to this or any other uncertain conjecture.

g. παραβολευσάμενοι

V. 30. Not regarding] The word παραβολεύομαι is not ordinarily to be met with, unleſſe in Heſychius and Phavorinus and other Gloſſaries, which ſeem not only to have taken it from hence, but alſo to have read the word παραβολοσάμενοι (though the impreſſions have it otherwiſe) for they place it betwixt παραβολὴ and παραβόλιον, which would not be done according to the order of the letters, if it had been παραβολ. It is therefore very probable that the reading here ſhould be παραβολευσάμενοι τῇ ψυχῇ ſo παραβόλου in Ariſtophanes is ῥιψοκινδύνου he that caſts himſelf into danger (in which ſenſe we have παραβεβλημένοι, 2 Mac. 14. 38.) which is the very notion of this word in Heſychius, ὃς θάνατον αὐτὸν ἐκδίδωσι, one that gives himſelf up to death, for ſo ſaith Phavorinus the phraſes are uſual, παραβάλλομαι τῇ ἐμαυτοῦ κεφαλῇ I venture, or gage, my head, παραβάλλομαι ἀργυρίῳ I lay any money. Thus in * Plutarch, παραβολώτερον ἀγωνίζεσθαι, to be more venturous in fighting than ordinary, and in Pliny's Epiſtles, parabola, that is periculoſa. So doth Chryſoſtome expound this place, ἔδωκεν ἑαυτὸν, ὡς κἂν ὁπῶν δέῃ παθεῖν, he gave himſelf up to ſuffer whatſoever ſhould be neceſſary, and again, καταλολμῶν θάνατον, contemning death. So Theophylact, πάντας κινδύνους καταφρονήσας, deſpiſing all danger, and ἐπέῤῥιψεν ἑαυτὸν τῷ θανάτῳ, he threw himſelf upon death, and at length ῥιψοκινδύνου, the very expreſſions that are ſet by the Gloſſaries to explain παραβολοῦ. For the explaining of this the learned Iſaac Caſaubon in Epiſt. 438. ſaith that he found in Puteans copie this reading, with this interpretation to it, Parabolanus fuit de anima ſua, in the ſame manner as in Juſtinians Code they that goe to them that are ſick of the plague are called parabolani and paraborarii.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. III.

a. 1. To conclude, my brethren, I ſalute you in the Lord: ſomewhat I have to write to you, which flowes not from any cowardiſe in me, though I have taſted of the ſharpneſſe of it, but from my great care to preſerve you from the great dangers into which I have fallen my ſelf.

b. 2. There are a ſort of men I would have you take eſpecial heed of, very malicious perſons, that bark at and bite every orthodox profeſſor, and that live themſelves in all villany, I mean the heretical Gnoſticks v. 18. Others alſo there are to beware of, as with whom the Gnoſticks combine, viz. the Jewiſh believers, which ſtill obſerve the Moſaicall Law, and require all to Judaize, and perſecute them that do not. Theſe take upon them to be the circumciſion, but are onely the conciſion, thoſe that tear the Church in peeces, condemne and ſeparate from their brethren, Rom. 14.

For many there are now-adaies abroad in the Church, of a moſt unhappy, unchriſtian temper, that will not ſuffer any thing for Chriſt, or venture that that may bring any affliction or ſuffering upon them (ſee note on Apoc. 2. b.) and therefore comply with the Jewes to avoid perſecutions from them,

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ομοιον

V. 1. Grievous] What ὀκνηρὸς here ſignifies will be clear enough out of Phavorinus. Ὀκνῶν, ſaith he, is uſed by Homer for ὀκνηρῶς ἔχειν, and is τὸ μὴ κινεῖν, or ἐνεργεῖν, not to work, or doe any thing: thence ὄκνος, ſaith he, ῥᾳθυμία, cowardiſe or idleneſſe, and φυγὴ πόνων avoiding of labours, and φόβος & μελλήσεις ἐνεργείας fear of approaching action: and again of ὀκνεῖν, 'tis ἀλόγῳ καὶ ἀναιδεῖ ῥᾳθυμίᾳ καλέσχεδε, ὅθεν καὶ ὀκνηρὸς, to be held or poſſeſs'd with an irrational and cauſleſs ſluggiſhneſs, and from thence the word ὀκνηρὸς comes, which here we ſpeak of. So then it ſignifies avoiding of danger or labour, fear of action when 'tis near, an unreaſonable and cauſleſs cowardiſe: and from thence it comes in Homer, ſaith he, generally or for the moſt part (ἢ πλείων χρῆσις) to ſignifie φόβος & fear, cowardiſe, and ſo 'tis often uſed in Sophocles, πολλὴ ἡ χρῆσις παρὰ Σοφοκλεῖ, ſaith he, in this ſenſe. And therefore this will be a proper rendring of it, ὀκνηρὸν cowardly, and ſo the Context beſt bears alſo; That to write what he is about to write next, viz. thoſe cautions againſt the dogs, the evil workers, the conciſion (βλέπετε take heed of them, thrice in a verſe) ὀκ ὀκνηρὸν ἐμοὶ is not cowardiſe in the Apoſtle (that is the notion of ῥᾳθυμία) but yet ſafe for them, viz. to be ſo warned and admoniſhed by him.

b. Κατατομὴ

V. 2. Conciſion] That κατατόμην ſignifies to cut, or rend aſunder, there is no queſtion, but the reaſon why the word κατατομὴ, conciſion or cutting aſunder, is here uſed for a ſort of men called before dogs and evil workers, is the onely thing to be conſidered. That the Jewes are called περιτομὴ the circumciſion, meaning by it thoſe that are circumciſed, is clear from many places, Gal. 2. 8, 9. Now the Gnoſticks, which were not all of them Jewes, nor themſelves circumciſed, did yet comply with, and take upon them to be very zealous Jewes, and would conſtrain all others to be circumciſed, Gal. 6. 12. Hence it is that Rev. 2. 9. they are expreſſed by λέγοντες ἑαυτοὺς Ἰουδαίους εἶναι, καὶ οὐκ εἰσὶν, they that ſay they are Jewes, but are not; ſee Note on Rev. 2. e. And hereupon, becauſe theſe Judaizers that pretend ſuch zeal to the Law, and particularly for Circumciſion, do neither perform any part of the Law (but are evil workers here, the ſynagogue of Satan, Rev. 2. 9.) nor are circumciſed themſelves (οὐδὲ περιτεμνόμενοι, Gal. 6. 13.) and all that they doe is, as dogs, to tear and rend all they come near, and cut aſunder the unity of the Church, (which comes no nearer true Judaiſme then dogs and Schiſmaticks doe to circumciſion) therefore by an elegance and ſarcaſme the Apoſtle calls them κατατομὴν conciſion, or cutting aſunder, they that, inſtead of circumciſing themſelves, cut aſunder the Church of Chriſt. So ſaith Theophylact, τῶν ὀκνηρίαν ἐπιφερόντων κατατέμνειν, they endea- deavoured to cut aſunder the Church of Chriſt. In oppoſition to whom followes, ἡμεῖς γάρ ἐσμεν ἡ περιτομή, for we are the circumciſion: we that are the true Orthodox believers are the true circumciſion, the true children of Abraham, that actually perform that to which Circumciſion was deſigned to engage his poſterity; and they that pretend thus to be Jews and Chriſtians, but are not, are κατατομή more truly then περιτομή, the conciſion, then the circumciſion.

c. Λαμβάνειν V. 12. Attained] What λαμβάνω ſignifies among the Agoniſtical writers, hath been formerly noted, the receiving the reward that is due to the conquerour; ſee Note on Rom. 9. l. and 1 Cor. 9 f. and accordingly it is uſed of him that hath finiſhed his race and courſe, conquered and gained the prize, although he have not yet received it; and ſo 'tis here taken, οὐκ ὅτι ἤδη ἔλαβον, not that I have finiſhed my courſe, or that my crown is ſo immutably and irreverſibly yet aſſigned me (for that he was not yet in heaven, he needed not have ſaid, 'twas ſufficiently known to all) as that I ſhould ſpeak confidently of it: That which is fitter for me to entertain my ſelf with, is, to uſe all diligence that I miſcarry not.

d. Τετελείωμαι Ib. Perfect] The word τελειόωμαι is an Agoniſtical word, and ſignifies likewiſe the being crowned, or receiving the reward. So in Gregory Nyſſen, ſpeaking of the Martyrs, the phraſe uſed is τελείωσις ἀθλητῶν (in the ſame ſenſe that we had καταρτίσεις 2 Cor. 13. 10.) agreeable to the uſe of τέλεια νικητήρια, perfect prizes in the Agones. For of their prizes there were ſome more valuable then others, the meaner, ſuch as the tripodes and Shields and Cups, but the more eſteemed, the Crowns, which had nothing of mean profit in them, but only the glory and renown of victory, the crowns being made but of leaves only, as hath been formerly ſaid. Now the more illuſtrious were called τέλεια νικητήρια the perfect rewards or prizes; and to this, ſaith Peter Faber, referres that of S. James c. 1. 17. where πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ is every good donative, parallel to thoſe of the meaner firſt kind of reward, and πᾶν δόσις ἀγαθὴ δόμημα τέλειον, this more illuſtrious of a crown. And proportionably to this, τελειοῦσθαι will be to receive this crown. So Heb. 11. 40. ſpeaking of the Saints of the Old Teſtament, which, ſaith he, were afflicted in this life, and received not perſonally the completion of the promiſes that were made unto them, but received them by faith then, and we their poſterity now really; and tha he there calls τελειωθῶσι, to be perfected, all one with κομίζεσθαι τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν, receiving the promiſe, ver. 39. for which Oecumenius puts, στεφανωθῶσι, καὶ πίσης ἀγαθῶν ἀπολαβῶσι, to be crowned, and receive the perfection of good things. So Heb. 2. 10. God was pleaſed τελειῶσαι τὸν ἀρχηγὸν σωτηρίας, to crown, or conſummate, the captain of our ſalvation (that hath reſcued us out of the ſins and hazards of this life) διὰ παθημάτων, by ſufferings. So Heb. 12. 23. δίκαιοι τετελειωμένοι, the juſt that have received their reward. Thus the Hebrew word עקב ſignifies both τέλος an end, and βραβεῖον a reward. In the former ſenſe 'tis Pſal. 119. 33. I will keep it עקב (underſtanding לְ) in finem, where the Chaldee paraphraſt reads עד נמירה even to the conſummation, and v. 112. עד סופה even to the end. In the ſecond ſenſe it is Pſal. 19. 11. in the keeping of them there is עקב reward, the Greek reads ἀνταπόδοσις, retribution. This is almoſt † S. Chryſoſtomes note, παρ' Ἑβραίοις γὰρ τὸ τέλος καὶ ἡ νίκη διὰ μιᾶς σημαίνεται λέξεως, end and victory are by the Hebrews expreſs'd by the ſame word; and thence it is, ſaith he, that in ſome Pſalms in ſtead of εἰς τέλος in finem, the inſcription is Νικοποιῷ to him that overcomes. Thus Rom. 6. 21. τέλος is put for reward, the ſame with ὀψώνια v. 23. and ſo 1 Pet. 1. 9. τέλος πίστεως, the reward of our faith, and Heb. 6 8. τέλος καῦσιν, reward to be burnt. Of another notion of this word ſee Heb. 5. c.

† on Job 23.

Ib. Follow after] Διώκω is the word that expreſſes the contention ὁ δρόμῳ in the race, and it ſignifies to endeavour to get before thoſe that are before us, to labour and ſtretch, ἵνα καταλάβω that he may get the prize by being foremoſt. e. Διώκειν

Ib. Am apprehended] The word καταλαμβάνω here is ſtill in the Agoniſtical ſenſe, and being now applied to Chriſt, it ſignifies moſt elegantly, that Chriſt doth, as in a race, contend and ſtrive, and that for no other reward that he hath in his eye, but only the faithful diſciple, whom when he converts and brings to repentance, he conceives himſelf to have attained his reward or crown; and ſo we are, as it were, the crown that is caught and wore by him, as Epheſ. 1. 11. we are ſaid κληρωθῆναι, that is, to be the κλῆρος or portion which he hath for his patrimony, as it were, or as he is ſaid to purchaſe λαὸν, a people, Tit. 2. 14. and as the Church, 1 Pet. 2. 9. is ſaid to be λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν, a people purchaſed, or acquired, by him, Act. 20. 23. f. Καταλάβω Κληρωθῆναι

V. 13. Forgetting thoſe things which are behind] This phraſe of ὀπίσω ἐπιλανθανόμενος τὰ ὀπίσω, not looking at that which is behind, or paſs'd, referres likewiſe to the cuſtome of the racer, who doth not uſe to ſtand ſtill, and looke behinde him, to ſee either how much of his journey he is paſs'd, or how farre the reſt are behinde him, (for this is the ſluggards trick) but ſets bodily to his buſineſs, to overtake and outrun all that are before, and to get through the remainder of his race, and that is ἐπεκτεινόμενος τοῖς ἔμπροσθεν, to ſtretch himſelf as vigorouſly as he can (for ſo ſaith Heſychius, Ἐπέκτασις, ἡ ὅτι μάλιστα σπουδή) to get to the goale firſt. This hath Horace expreſſed diſtinctly in his deſcription of a racer in a chariot, Serm. l. 1. Satyr. 1. g. Ἐπιλανθανόμενος τὰ ὀπίσω

Ut cùm carceribus miſſos rapit ungula currus, Inſtat equis auriga ſuos vincentibus, illum
Prætereunt temnens, extremos inter eunt em.

The ruler of the chariot preſſeth to overtake thoſe horſes that are before his, but contemns and never looks after him that is behinde, and outrun by him.

V. 14 The marke] That σκοπὸς ſignifies the goale, hath been ſaid already, Note on 1 Cor. 9. g. and that κατὰ σκοπὸν εἰς βραβεῖον is the prize, or crown, which either hung over the goale, or was given the conquerour by the Judges: and ſo the meaning of κατὰ σκοπὸν εἰς βραβεῖον is, that the racer takes the goale in the way to the crown, firſt conquers, and then is rewarded, the goale being the concluſion of the race, but the way to the crown. h. Κατὰ σκοπὸν εἰς βραβεῖον

V. 16. Attained] That φθάνειν is an Agoniſtical word, and ſignifies to be foremoſt in the race, ſee Note on Rom. 9. d. & 2 Cor. 10. b. and ſo εἰς ὃ ἐφθάσαμεν will ſignifie, In as much as we are gotten before other men in the race, have attained ſome degree of ſpiritual proficiency. i. Φθάνειν

Ib. The ſame rule] What κανὼν in the ſtadia ſignifies, ſee Note on 1 Cor. 9. g. and 2 Cor. 10. d. viz. the white line that marked out the path wherein they were to run, and ſo τῷ αὐτῷ στοιχεῖν κανόνι here is, to goe or run by the ſame line, in that path, never ſtepping over, or out of it, leſt they loſe all. And thus are they moſt concerned to doe that are before other men, and if they have but this one care are not likely to miſcarry by any thing elſe. That which is moſt contradictory to this in our Chriſtian race, is, dividing into factions & ſides, Peace, unity, and charity being the white within which they are commanded to walk; and therefore it followes that they ſhould τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν mind the ſame thing, live in unity and amity, run all the ſame way to the ſame end, and be συμμιμηταὶ v. 17. all fellow-followers of the Apoſtle. k. Κανὼν

V. 20. Converſation] Πολίτευμα from πολίτης citizens is literally citizenſhip, and denotes a municipium, ἀντὶ Κολωνία which is the ſtate and condition of thoſe who dwelling l.

out of the city have yet the jus civitatis Romanæ, the privileges of the city of Rome belonging to them. Thus ſaith Cicero de Legib. l. 2. Omnibus municipibus duas eſſe patrias, unam naturæ, alteram juris, Catonis exemplo, qui Tuſculi natus in populi Romani ſocietatem ſuſceptus eſt, All ſuch have two countreys, one of nature, the other of law, after Cato's example, who being born at Tuſculum, was received into the ſociety of the people of Rome. And Tacitus, ibi municipes fiunt, ubi in civitatem recepti. But this ſo, that theſe ſhall differ from thoſe that had their habitation in the city, who alone might be choſen to offices in it. Thus is πολιτεία Act. 22. 28. (by which Heſychius expounds πολίτευμα) the privilege of being a free-man of Rome, belonging to one that lived in Judæa, and that bought by the χιλιαρχὸς there, but by birth belonging to S. Paul. And thus is the Chriſtian here on earth, συμπολίτης τῶν ἁγίων, Epheſ. 2. 19. a fellow-citizen of the ſaints, not ξένος or πάροικος, a ſtranger or ſojourner, but a free-man, or municeps of heaven; though while he dwells here, he be in an inferiour condition to them who have domicilium in urbe, the ſaints that are in heaven, who alone are capable of reigning with God. See Act. 22. d.

Paraphraſe.

Συμπολίτης τῶν ἁγίων

CHAP. IV.

1. THerefore, my brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, ſo ſtand faſt in the Lord, my dearly beloved.]

1. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, ſo paſſionately affected by me, whoſe good is matter of all joy and felicity to me, according to theſe former directions of peace, chap. 3. 15. continue ſtedfaſt in the faith, I beſeech you.

* Syntyches Συντύχην

2. I beſeech Euodias, and beſeech * Syntyche, that they be of the ſame mind in the Lord.]

2. And particularly I beſeech Euodias and Syntyches to preſerve peace, and not to be contentious and unquiet.

† or, Yea I beſeech, for the Kings MS. reads Nai

* combated or contended συνήθλησάν

3. † And I intreat thee alſo, true yoke-fellow, help thoſe women which * laboured with me in the Goſpel, with Clement alſo, and with other my fellow-labourers, whoſe names are in the [a] book of life]

3. Yea I earneſtly beſeech thee, Epaphroditus, Biſhop of Philippi, (bearer of this Epiſtle) and ſo my fellow-labourer in the Goſpel, which haſt ſhewed thy ſelf to be ſincerely what thou oughteſt to be, take care of and relieve thoſe women which for their zeal in the Goſpel have ſuffered perſecutions (ſee note on 1 Theſ. 2. b.) with me, or in the ſame manner as I have done, and ſo likewiſe Clemens, and all that have undertaken the ſame task with me in preaching the Goſpel to the Gentiles, thoſe pious good men, faithfull ſervants of Chriſt. a.

4. Rejoice in the Lord alway, and again I ſay rejoice.]

4. Whatever afflictions befall you in your ſervice of Chriſt, they are matter of continuall rejoicing to you, and not any way of grief.

† gentleneſs τὸ ἐπιεικὲς

5. Let your † moderation be known unto all men: The Lord is at hand.]

5. And therefore let your patient enduring of them (ſee note on 2 Cor. 10. a.) be diſcernible to all; and to this you may receive encouragement, by conſidering that ye are not likely to expect long: The famous coming of Chriſt in judgement viſibly to puniſh his crucifiers, and to ſhorten the power of the perſecutors, and reſcue all faithfull patient ſufferers out of their hands all the world over, in Greece as well as Judæa, is now neer approaching: ſee Heb. 10. 37.

6. Be carefull for nothing, but in every thing by prayer and ſupplication with thankſgiving let your requeſts be made known unto God.]

6. And for this your reſcue, it will not at all be uſefull, that ye be ſolicitous or anxious how to deliver your ſelves; doe but recommend your eſtate to God in prayer ardently and importunately, rendring him your acknowledgements for all the mercies received from him, (even for your preſent afflictions, with Job, ſee v. 4.) and that is all that belongs to you.

* thoughts νοήματα

7. And the [b] peace of God, which paſſeth all underſtanding, ſhall keep your hearts and * minds through Chriſt Jeſus.]

7. And this Chriſtian unity and peaceable-mindedneſs bequeathed to all by Chriſt (and ſo recommended to you c. 3. 1. &c. and c. 3. 15. &c. and here v. 3.) which is to be preferred before all deep (eſpecially pretended) knowledg, ſhall be an excellent armature to keep you from all heretical practices and doctrines. b.

8. Finally, brethren, whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things are †honeſt, whatſoever things are juſt, whatſoever things are pure, whatſoever things are lovely, whatſoever things are of good report; If there be any virtue, if there be any praiſe, think on theſe things.]

8. And to conclude, I conjure you, as you have any care of what is virtuous or commendable, that ye ſo farre remember and conſider what I have now ſaid to you, that ye adhere to the truth of doctrine, & in your practice doe nothing but what is agreeable to gravity and ſobriety, to exact juſtice, and purity or chaſtity, and farther ſuperadde that care of abounding in all Chriſtian virtue, that whatſoever is moſt deſirable and amiable in the eyes of men, whatſoever moſt venerably thought and ſpoken of, that ye will propoſe to your ſelves as the pitch to be aſpired unto by you.

9. Thoſe things which ye have both learned and received, and heard and ſeen in me, doe: and the God of peace ſhall be with you.]

9. What both by my doctrine and practice hath been inſtilled into you, ſee ye be carefull to perform; meaning by my doctrine, 1. what I taught in the firſt preaching the Goſpel to you, 2. what I have farther revealed in the confirming you, and 3. what in familiar diſcourſes I have let fall to you. And if thus ye doe, that God which is ſuch a lover of peace and amity, will abide with you and direct and proſper you in all things.

* you have reviv'd your care of me, or made your care of me to flouriſh again, † wanted ability.

10. But I rejoyced in the Lord greatly that now at the laſt * your care of me hath [c] flouriſhed again, wherein ye were alſo carefull, but ye † lacked [d] opportunity.]

10. It was matter of great Chriſtian joy to me, and thankſgiving to God, that now after ſome decay ye have revived your liberality toward me, wherein I ſuppoſe formerly ye failed not, but only wanted ability of ſhewing it. c. d.

11. Not that I ſpeak in reſpect of want: for I have learned in what ſtate ſoever I am therewith to be content.]

11. Which I ſay, not in reſpect of any eminent want that I was in at the coming of Epaphroditus (ſee note on Mar. 12. b.) for Chriſtianity hath taught me (and I thank God I am able to doe it) to be very well ſatisfied with my condition, whatever it is.

* at all time ἐν παντὶ † or, in all things ἐν πᾶσιν

12. I know both how to be abaſed, and I know how to abound: * every where, and in all things I am † inſtructed both to be full, and to be hungry, both to abound, and to ſuffer need.]

12. Nay, I can contentedly bear a yet lower condition then that which hitherto I have been in: And yet the abundance which now I have by your liberality, I can make uſe of to the glory of God. It is a ſpecial part of that learning with which Chriſtianity hath imbued me, to be unconcerned in theſe outward things of plenty and want, and that too, what ſoever the circumſtances are, at what time ſoever, and in what ſort of adverſity ſoever I am exerciſed.

13. 'Tis the great mercy of Chriſt which hath thus enabled me; but thanks be to him, I am able to doe all this (ſee 1 Cor. 13. Note i.) without much difficulty.

13. I can doe all things through Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth me.]

14. Yet doth not this at all leſſen your kindneſſe or charity in ſending me that ſupply by Epaphroditus, when I was in ſome ſtraights.

14. Notwithſtanding ye have well done that ye did communicate with my affliction.]

15. And indeed this was no new thing in you, for at my firſt preaching the Goſpel among you, when, after I had made an end, I was departing out of your region, you continued ſo mindfull of me, as to ſend me contributions, and having received of me ſpiritual things, communicated their carnal things, which no other Church but you had then done.

15. Now ye Philippians know alſo that in the beginning of the Goſpel, when I departed from Macedonia, no Church * communicated with me, as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.]

* communicated in reſpect. ἐκοινώνησεν εἰς λόγον

16. For firſt while I was at Theſſalonica, another eminent Chriſtian city of Macedonia, and ſince I came thence, more then once, you made a collection and ſent it to me.

16. For * even in Theſſalonica ye ſent once and again to my neceſſity.]

* both at Theſſalonica, and once καὶ ἐν Θεσσαλονίκῃ, καὶ ἅπαξ

17. And that I thus commend you, v. 14. it is not by that means to draw any more from you, that I may have the more, but to give you occaſion of exerciſing your liberality, the more acts of which there are, the richer ſhall your reward be which it will bring you in from God.

17. Not † becauſe I * deſire a gift: but I deſire fruit that may abound to your account.]

† that ὅτι

* require ζητῶ

18. What you ſent by Epaphroditus I received, and here ſigne my acquittance for it, (ſee note on Mar. 14. d.) and thereby I have all abundance and plenty, having received your almes and charity, which under the Goſpel is the prime kind of offering, which God accepts and receives, and which ſupplies the place both of incenſe and of ſacrifice.

c.

18. But I have all, and abound, I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were ſent from you, c an odour of a ſweet ſmell, a ſacrifice acceptable, well pleaſing to God.]

19. And you will have no reaſon to repent of your liberality, for God, that looks on it as given to him, is both able and willing to ſupply this and all other your wants (through Chriſt Jeſus, by whom he diſpenſes all his gifts to you) to make you the richer by having been ſo charitable, and to pour out all his other graces on you.

19. But my God ſhall ſupply all your need according to his riches in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus.]

20. Now to him who, as he is our God, ſo is he our Father alſo, be all glory aſcribed for ever and ever. Amen.

20. † Now unto God and our father be glory for ever and ever. Amen.]

† Now to our God & father τῷ δὲ θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ ἡμῶν

21. My love I preſent to every Chriſtian among you.

21. Salute every ſaint in Chriſt Jeſus: the brethren which are with me greet you.

All the believers that are conſtantly with me, Titus, Linus, Clemens, &c. ſalute you.

22. Nay all the Chriſtians in Rome, but eſpecially they that belong to the Emperor's family, the ſervants of his court, ſalute you.

22. All the ſaints ſalute you, chiefly they that are of Cæſar's houſhold.]

23. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

It was written to the Philippians from Rome by Epaphroditus.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

1. Βίβλος ζωῆς

V. 3. Book of life] The Book of life referres to the cuſtome of well-ordered cities, which kept regiſters containing all the names of the citizens out of which as Apoſtates and fugitives and infamous perſons were raſed (and agreeably there is mention of blotting out of names out of Gods book, Rev. 3. 5.) ſo they that did continue obedient, orderly citizens, their names were ſtill continued in. Accordingly life ſignifying ſpiritual life here, (the ſtate of grace and favour of God, the inchoation of that future eternal life) the Book of this life is the regiſter of all ſincere Chriſtians, (as the book of the living in the Pſalmiſt is the number of men that live in this world) from which they are expunged that ceaſe to continue ſuch. (This is expreſſed in another like phraſe Rev. 3. 12. I will write on him the name of the city of my God, and new Jeruſalem.) And as this was ordinary in cities, ſo was it every where in armies, into which whoſoever entred, he had his name taken, and put into the muſter-role. And thus the life of every Chriſtian, but eſpecially of thoſe that labour in the word and doctrine, being a warfare, the phraſe is ordinarily uſed, in all authors, of all Chriſtians. Thus in Cyril's περιπτ. p. 1. ſpeaking to thoſe that were baptized, ὀνοματογραφία πῶς ὑμῖν γέγονε, καὶ στρατείας κλῆσις, καὶ νυμφαγωγίας λαμπάδες, καὶ ἀγγέλων πολιτείας ἐπιδημία, καὶ παῤῥησία ἀγαθὴ καὶ ἐλπὶς ἐπακολουθοῦσα. Where the writing of their names, and, which is all one, the calling to the militia, are uſed to ſet down the ſtate of a Chriſtian; as alſo thoſe other expreſſions of the lamps, for fetching of the bridegroom, and deſire of the heavenly citizenſhip, the good purpoſe, and the conſequent hope. And as of all Chriſtians, ſo in a more eminent manner of the Apoſtles and their fellow-labourers here 'tis affirmed, that their names were written in the book of life, ἐν τῇ γνώσει καὶ κρίσει Θεοῦ, in the knowledge and judgement of God, ſaith Theophylact, (or elſe, ἤδη τὴν ζωὴν αὐτοῖς ἐπιψηφίσατο ἐντεῦθεν, that from thence God had already adjudged life to them, as when it is ſaid, he that believeth not is condemned already, and ſo inſcribed in the book of death,) either as actual ſouldiers in the Chriſtian camp or Church (as the Apoſtles called themſelves) or as thoſe that had right to that ſuperior heavenly citizenſhip, to which all labourers had title, and conſequently all theſe ζωγροὶ or fellow-labourers of S. Paul: Which at that preſent was perfectly true of them, though afterward Demas one of them, Col. 4. 14. Philemon 24. forſooke the imployment 2. Tim. 4. 10. And as of cities and armies, ſo in families the phraſe and cuſtome is uſed, to which that of Ulyſſes in Homer referres, that is, he was born of a Goddeſſe; ſee Note on Rev. 3. b.

b. Εἰρήνη Θεοῦ

V. 7. Peace of God] That by peace is meant the ſtudy of preſerving peace among men, appears Gal. 5. 22. where εἰρήνη peace is ſet among the fruits of the Spirit, where conſequently it muſt not be that good of peace, which is a felicity but no vertue, (no effect or fruit of Gods ſanctifying Spirit) but the peaceable-mindedneſs, deſire and purſuit of peace, called in other places διώκειν εἰρήνην, purſuing peace, and εἰρηνοποιὸν having peace, Rom. 13. 18. Accordingly the peace of God, Col. 3. 15. is (not Gods peace or reconciliation toward us, but) that peaceableneſſe which God hath commanded and bequeathed to us. And accordingly there it follows εἰς ὃ καὶ ἐκλήθητε, to which ye are called, which determins it to be a duty of ours. And then 'tis not improbable, but this may be the notion of εἰρήνη τοῦ Θεοῦ, the peace of God, or, as the Kings MS. reads, Χριστοῦ of Chriſt, in this place alſo. That the Apoſtle is exhorting them to peace and unity, is apparent ch. 3. where the dogs that rend, the evil workers that defile, the conciſion, that (under pretence of kindneſſe to the Moſaical Law) cut and tear all to pieces, and are to be look'd to, and avoided in that Church, are certainly the Gnoſtick hereticks v. 2. Againſt theſe he ſets himſelf in the remainder of that chapter, and concludes ver. 15. As many therefore as are perfect, let us be of this mind, and εἴ τι ἑτέρως φρονεῖτε, if in any thing ye be otherwiſe minded, that is, if in any particular there be any difference of opinion in any among you, God ſhall reveale even this unto you: that is, there is no reaſon that ſuch a difference ſhould breed any diviſion, deſtroy that unity and peace which is to be preſerved among you; for, though at preſent ye doe not, yet upon your prayers to God, and applying your ſelves to uſe of this means, no doubt ye ſhall receive inſtructions from him by the Apoſtles, &c. in all that is neceſſary for you: πλὴν εἰς ὃ ἐφθάσαμεν, &c. v. 16. But, or, In the mean, as farre as we are advanced, ſome before other, let not that hinder our unity and peace, let us (all, both thoſe that are foremoſt, and that are not ſo forward) walk by the ſame rule, and mind the ſame thing: All for peace and unity ſtill, and ſo on to the end, in adviſe to adhere to thoſe that continue in the doctrine he had taught them, and avoid all hereticks. And then begins this chapter. Wherefore my brethren, &c. ſo ſtand in the Lord, that is, according to theſe former directions, ſtand, in oppoſition to apoſtatizing, or falling off, and ſo ſtand, preſerve this peace, all this while exhorted to, and v. 2. I beſeech, or exhort, Euodias and Syntyches τὸ αὐτὸ φρονεῖν ἐν Κυρίῳ, to mind the ſame thing in the Lord, that is, to preſerve this peace of God, to live in the unity of the Goſpel. And then the exhortation, v. 4, 5, 6. belonging to that great Chriſtian duty of conſtancy, and rejoicing in prayer to God, inſtead of ſolicitude (here, as Mat. 10. 19 ſeaſonably forbidden) in reſpect of the preſent preſſures, (and all this inforced with the mention of the near approach of Chriſt's coming to deſtroy the perſecuters, and reſcue the faithfull) is directly deſigned to fortifie them againſt the Gnoſtick compliances, and ſo is not aliene from this matter. After all which follows this of ἡ εἰρήνη τοῦ Θεοῦ, that if they take this courſe preſcribed, this peace of God by Chriſt commanded, (and to which the Apoſtle had all this while ſo ſolicitouſly exhorted them) would guard and fortifie their hearts (the principles of action and practice) and (νοήματα) their underſtandings, which were the parts ſubject to errors, in Chriſt Jeſus, preſerve them in the right way againſt all the errors and temptations of thoſe times. The only remaining difficulty is, what is meant by this Epithet, added to the peace of God, ὑπερέχουσα πάντα νοῦν, that ſurpaſſeth all underſtanding; which will alſo be intelligible by what hath been premiſed. For as they that did τὸ ἑτέρως φρονεῖν, c. 2. 15. that is, differed ſomewhat in opinion from others, were obliged v. 16. not to diſturb the peace of the Church for that, but to expect till God ſhould farther reveal or inſtruct them, (which concludes, that Peace was more excellent and valuable then that exact knowledg or underſtanding of all things, which might be revealed, and much more than the pretended knowledg and underſtanding of the Gnoſticks) ſo it is moſt fitly here ſaid, that this love and care of preſerving that peace, preſcribed by God and Chriſt, is to be preferred before any underſtanding that either ſome were thought to want, or others to abound in. As for the ordinary notion which is had of this phraſe, for quiet and ſerenity of mind, as a ſpecial mercy of God, though that may be thought agreeable enough to the not caring, &c. v. 6. yet firſt, it will be hard to find any place where that is the notion of the peace of God (though of peace and reſt it is.) As for that of my peace Joh. 14. 27. ſee that place. And then ſecondly, though the no-ſolicitude doe here come as an attendant on the precedent rejoicing in afflictions (and that a ſeaſonable means to keep from breaking the unity of the Church, and joyning with the heretical Gnoſticks) yet 'tis not neceſſary that this concluding form, The peace of God, &c. ſhould be reſtrained to this laſt particular of no-ſolicitude, which came in but incidentally, but may rather be applied to the grand matter of the Epiſtle, that of preſerving of peace in the Church.

V. 10. Flouriſhed again] That ἀνεθάλλειν which ſignifies to reflouriſh, or revive, may be here uſed Actively to make revive, or flouriſh again, may appear firſt by Analogie with other words of the ſame nature: ſo θριαμβεύειν to triumph, is uſed in the ſenſe of the conjugation Hiphil to make triumph, 2 Cor. 2. 14. So ἀνατέλλειν to ariſe, is Mat. 5. 45. to make ariſe; ſee more Note on Mar. 14. f. And thus is this word clearly uſed Ezech. 17. 24. ἀναθάλλω ξύλον ξηρὸν I make the drie tree to flouriſh. And ſo S. Chryſoſtome ſeems to underſtand, and uſe the word in this place, ὃ γάρ ἐστι μικρὸν τὸ μαρανθέντα ἀναθῆλαι, For it is no ſmall thing to make things that are withered grow green, and flouriſh again. c. Ἀνεθάλετε

Ib. Lacked opportunity] That ἠκαιρεῖσθε here ſignifies, as we have rendred it, not wanted opportunity, but ability, is the expreſſe affirmation of S. Chryſoſtome, οὐκ εἴχετε, ſaith he, ἐν χερσὶν, οὐδὲ ἐν ἀφθονίᾳ ἦτε. Τοῦτο γάρ ἐστιν, Ἠκαιρεῖσθε ὑμεῖς, Ye had not in your hands, or power, neither were you in plenty. For that is the meaning of this word. And this, ſaith he and Theophylact, ἀπὸ κοινῆς συνηθείας, taken from common uſe of ſpeech, as when we ſay, στενοχωρία μοι ἐπῆλθε, κακὸς καιρὸς νῦν ὄζει, ſome ſtreights have come on me, it is now an ill ſeaſon with me. So Gal. 6. 10. ὡς καιρὸν ἔχομεν, not, as we have opportunity, but, as we have ability, (all one with τὰ ἐνόντα δότε ἐλεημοσύνην Luk. 11. 41.) For indeed that is an opportunity, when the wants of others and our plenty meet together. Of this uſe of theſe words we have frequent example among Authors. So for the ſimple καιρὸς Nazianzen περὶ φιλοπλουτίας, Τί δὲ μὴ βοηθοῦμεν τῇ φύσει καιρὸν ἔχοντες; Why doe we not help our common nature, that is, other men, having ability? (for if we have not ability, the opportunity of anothers want layes no obligation upon us.) And accordingly it followes there, μὴ μοι γένοιτο πλουτεῖν τούτων ὑπερημένων, God forbid I ſhould have wealth and they want; where πλουτεῖν to have wealth is all one with καιρὸν ἔχειν, precedent. So Plutarch in the Apophthegmes of Kings, mentions it as a ſpeech of Philip, (on occaſion of being told that he could not encamp in ſuch a place, where he deſired, becauſe there was no food for the cattel) οὐδ' ἡμῖν ὁ βίος, εἰ μὴ πρὸς τὸν τῶν ὄνων καιρὸν ὀφείλομεν ζῆν; What a life is ours, if we muſt live according to the proviſion of the aſſes? ad id quod commodum eſt aſinis, ſaith Is. Caſaubon. So in Xenophon, οὐδ' ἢ καιρὸν πίμπλαθι to be filled above plenty. So thoſe that are well provided for he calls εὐκαιρεῖς. So Pindar in Olymp. Πλοῦτος ἀρεταῖς δεδαιδαλμένος φέρει τοῦτο καὶ τῶν καιρὸν, Riches embroydered or ſprinkled, variegated with vertues, give ability of many things. So in Polybius l. 10. ſpeaking of the King of Perſia his court d. Ἠκαιρεῖσθε Καιρὸν at Ecbatana, it demonſtrates, ſaith he, by the coſtlineſſe of it, τῳ μεγάλῳ τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς καταβαλλομένων ἐυκαιείας, the great plenty of them that firſt built it, and lib. 1. κατὰ τὰς τῶν βίων ἐυκαιείας, according to their ſubſtance, or abilities. And then if ἐυκαιεία ſignifie ability, or ſufficience, ἀκαιεία muſt needs be want of ability; and ſo the Syriack renders here, you were not ſufficient. See Andr. Downes on Saint Chryſoſtome on Gal. 6. p. 760. and on this place, where he confirms this notion of the word by authorities.

V. 18. An odour of a ſweet ſmell] There were two Altars in the Temple of the Jewes, θυμιατήριον the altar of incenſe, within the Temple, and θυσιαστήριον the altar of ſacrifice, without in the court. On theſe two were offered all things that were offered to God; and, under theſe two heads, of Incenſe and burnt-offering, are almes-deeds or works of charity here ſet down, as being the prime things now under the Goſpel, to obtain Gods favour and acceptation. 8. Omnia incenſa Dei ſunt.

The

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

a. Κολοσσαῖς

Colosse was a city in Phrygia, not farre from Laodicea and Hierapolis, in the Lydian or Proconsular Asia. To these S. Paul had not personally preached the Gospel, nor so much as been among them c. 2. 1. but had sent Epaphras his disciple to them, and he had converted them to the Faith, c. 1. 7. This Epaphras was at the writing of this Epistle (from Rome, about the year of Christ 59.) a fellow-prisoner of S. Paul there, Philem. 23. And by him (as an eye-witnesse and principal actor in it) S. Paul being advertised of the reception of Christianity among them, and the agreeablenesse of their actions to their faith, sends them this Epistle of consolation, to strengthen and confirm them: and the tenure and subject (and oft-times the expressions) of it, is muchwhat the same as that to the Ephesians had been, and we may thence conclude it to have been written neer upon the same time with that.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1. PAUL an Apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother,

2. To the saints and faithfull brethren in Christ which are at Colosse: Grace be unto you, and peace from God our father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

*to the God and father τῷ Θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ

3. We give thanks *to God and the Father of the Lord Jesus Christ, praying alwaies for you,]

3. We constantly render God thanks for you, that by his grace ye have embraced the Gospel of his son Jesus Christ, and in all our offices of devotion we remember you in our prayers;

†Hearing, or, Having heard Ἀκούσαντες

4. †Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints;]

4. To which we are the more incited by hearing the news as of your faith, so of your charity also and liberality extended to the Christians every where;

*of the Gospel of truth, τῆς ἀληθείας τοῦ εὐαγγελίου

5. For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word * of the truth of the Gospel:]

5. That being an effect of your Christian hope, which being fastened on a rich treasure in heaven, the reward of all your good works, makes you very liberal of your earthy treasure, and that is fully agreeable to the doctrine of the Gospel of Christ, Mat. 6. 20.

†also through all the world, or, through all the world it bears fruit, & increases,

6. Which is come unto you, as † it is in all the world, and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and * knew the grace of God in truth.]

6. Which Gospel as it hath been preached, and brings forth this fruit among you, and hath done so from the time of the first preaching of it, (see note on Heb. 13. d.) so all the world over, where it is preached and received into honest hearts, it brings forth the same fruit, and by doing so attracts multitudes to the profession.

*acknowledged the grace of God in the truth, even for the King's MS reads ἐν παντὶ τῷ κόσμῳ ὡς καρποφορούμενον καὶ αὐξανόμενον καθὼς- ἐπίγνωτε τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ.

7. As ye also learned of Epaphras our dear fellow-servant, who is for you a faithfull minister of Christ;]

7. This indeed was according to that doctrine preached to you by Epaphras, whom we sent to publish the Gospel unto you, and he hath faithfully discharged his duty toward you;

8. Who also declared unto us your love in the spirit.]

8. And hath given me an account of your ready receiving the faith, and the effect of that, your Christian charity.

†acknowledgment ἐπίγνωσιν *prudence σοφίᾳ

9. For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, doe not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might [be filled with the † knowledge of his will, in all wisdome and spiritual * understanding:]

9. abound to all perfection of divine knowledge both in understanding the mysteries of Christianity, and in ordering and regulating your lives according to the rules thereof.

†to the acknowledgments of God, εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν

10. That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitfull in every good work, and increasing † in the knowledge of God;]

10. That your behaviour may be such as is agreeable to the divine promises and precepts of the Gospel, perfectly such as God will accept of, upon all occasions bringing forth the fruit of Christian living, and by that means daily increasing in divine knowledge, which as it is it self the practice of all vertue, so doth it by daily action grow into a habit, every day more perfect and complete.

11. Strengthned with all might according to his glorious power, unto all patience, and long sufferance with joyfulnes:]

11. To which it is consequent, that through the grace and divine power of God ye ſhall be enabled to continue to the end, and bear whatever afflictions and perſecutions ye meet with in your Chriſtian courſe, not onely patiently, but cheerfully.

12. And even acknowledging it with thankſgiving as a ſpecial mercy and favour of Gods, that hath enabled us to bear perſecutions and afflictions, and ſo to have our part in that inheritance which is allowed Chriſtians under the Goſpel, that is, to be perſecuted here, and rewarded eternally.

12. Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath * made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the ſaints in light:]

* fitted us for the portion ἱκανώσαντι ἡμᾶς εἰς τὴν μερίδα

13. That God, I ſay, who hath reſcued you from a ſtate of ignorance and heatheniſme, and made you heires of everlaſting glory, to which he will bring you in the ſame method and manner as he hath brought his own deareſt ſon (who was firſt crucified, then glorified.)

13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the kingdome of † his dear ſon;]

† the ſon of his own love τοῦ υἱοῦ τῆς ἀγάπης αὐτοῦ

14. Through whom we have pardon of ſin, purchaſed by his death, and ſo are redeemed out of the power of Satan, and made capable of a reſurrection unto life.

14. In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveneſs of ſinnes;]

a. 15. In whom God, who is inviſible, is to be ſeen, and his will clearly declared by the Goſpel (ſo that he that ſeeth him, ſeeth the Father, Joh. 14 9.) and who being firſt raiſed out of the grave, and aſſumed to heaven, as the firſt begotten from the dead, v. 18. hath all power given unto him by right of inheritance, as dominion is the birthright of the firſt-born.

15. Who is the image of the inviſible God, the [a] firſt-born of * every creature.]

* the whole creation πάσης κτίσεως

b. 16. And this very agreeably, he being that eternall Word; by whom, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, were the heavens made; and all the creatures in the world, both thoſe which are to be ſeen, being corporeal, and thoſe which, being ſpiritual, as Angels, ſouls of men, cannot be ſeen, all theſe, I ſay, what degree ſoever they are of, they were all by him created, and therefore are in reaſon to ſerve him, as the Lord of all.

16. For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, viſible and inviſible, whether they be [b] thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him, and for him:]

17. And he hath an eternal being, before any thing now is created was, and as all was created by him, v. 16. ſo doe all owe their continuance and preſervation to him.

17. And he is before all things, and by him all things conſiſt.]

18. And another title he hath to us, beſide that of Creator, as he hath redeemed us, and purchaſed us to be a congregation called by his name, a Church of Chriſtians, and as by riſing from the dead he hath conquered death, and given us victory over it, that we may after him riſe alſo, and ſo by all titles he hath right of dominion over all.

18. And he is the head of the body, the Church: who is the beginning, the firſt-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the præeminence.]

19. For in the man Chriſt Jeſus it was thought fit that the whole divine nature ſhould reſide and inhabit, ch. 2. 9.

19. For † it pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell;]

† it ſeemed good that in him ἐν αὐτῷ κατοικῆσαι πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα

c. 20. And that having, by his ſufferings and ſatisfaction for our ſins, made peace between God and the world, he ſhould reconcile all mankind unto God, not onely the Jewes, among whom he was born, and who had formerly been his people, and had the promiſes of Chriſt made to them, but the very Gentiles alſo.

20. And (having made peace through the blood of his croſſe) by him to reconcile all things unto * himſelf, by him, I ſay, [c] whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.]

* him αὐτὸν

21. And you that were ſtrangers from the worſhip of the true God and had engaged your ſelves in idolatry, and all the wicked practices that attend that, he hath now brought back to his ſervice, uſed means by preaching of the Goſpel to reform you, to make you lay down your hoſtilities againſt God, the wickedneſſes of your lives;

21. And you that were ſometime alienated, and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled,]

d. 22. And to that end lai'd down his very life for you, by that means to preſent you to his father, as thoſe which, though ſinners, are yet reconciled unto him, and are now acceptable in his ſight, free from all charge of ſin from the accuſer of the brethren.

22. In the [d] body of his fleſh, through death, to preſent you holy and unblameable, and unreprovable in his ſight:]

23. Upon this condition onely, that having given up your names to him (received the faith) ye continue firm and conſtant to the end, and whatever perſecutions aſſault you, hold out by virtue of that hope, which the Goſpel hath furniſhed you with, that Goſpel, I mean, which is now made known and preached to all the heathen world, (ſee note on Rom. 8. d.) and of which I am by Chriſt conſtituted an Apoſtle, and publiſher of it.

23. If ye continue in the faith grounded and ſetled, and be not moved away from the hope of the Goſpel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature under heaven, whereof I Paul am made † a miniſter,]

† for a preacher and Apoſtle and miniſter, for the King's MS reads κήρυξ καὶ ἀπόστολος καὶ διάκονος

24. And though it coſt me dear, bring many perſecutions upon me, yet is not this matter of any thing but joy unto me, as knowing that what I ſuffer is but ſome ſmall proportion and remnant of thoſe ſufferings which Chriſt began on the croſſe for the Church his body, and doth now again, though he be in heaven, indure in the perſecuting of me an Apoſtle of his,

24. Who now rejoice in my ſufferings for you, and * fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh, for his bodies ſake, which is the Church,]

* by way of correſpondence fill up the remainders ἀνταναπληρῶ τὰ ὑστερήματα

25. And a miniſter of his Church appointed immediately by God, to bear his word, to preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles, and particularly to you (to whom by Epaphras I have done ſo, ver. 7.) and to leave no place, (whither I can come by my ſelf or others,) without preaching the Goſpel to them.

e. 25. Whereof I am made a miniſter according to the diſpenſation of God, which is given to me † for you, to * [e] fulfill the word of God;]

† toward you εἰς ὑμᾶς * to perform

26. That Goſpel, I mean, or revelation of the will of God, which was not revealed ſo clearly in former ages, but kept under ſhadowes and dark prefigurations, but now is freely preached to all that receive the faith of Chriſt:

26. Even the myſterie which hath been hid from ages, and from generations, but now is made manifeſt to his ſaints:]

27. God being willing to exhibit to ſuch, (and no longer to keep cloſe) this illuſtrious mercy of his to the Gentiles, ſo long concealed, viz. Chriſt preached, the Goſpel revealed to them, and in it hope of pardon and of bliſſe afforded them, upon reformation of their former lives, and receiving and practiſing the commands of Chriſt.

27. To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this myſterie among the Gentiles, which is Chriſt † in you, the hope of glory:]

† among you ἐν ὑμῖν

28. Whoſe doctrine we now publiſh to the world, his precepts of divine purity, and his glorious promiſes, firſt preaching the fundamental heads of the truth of Chriſt, and then ſuperſtructing all farther knowledge of Chriſtian duties, and this to Gentiles as well as Jewes, that by this means we may bring in ſervants to God, as many as poſſibly we can, to ſerve him in all that holineſſe of life that Chriſt Jeſus himſelf exemplified, and preſcribed.

28. Whom we preach, warning every man and teaching every man in all wiſdome, that we may preſent every man perfect in Chriſt Jeſus.]

29. Where-

† is wrought in me in power, ἐνεργεῖται ἐν ἐμοὶ δυνάμει

29. Whereunto I alſo labour, ſtriving according to his working, which † worketh in me mightily.]

29. Of which number I am one, who endure ſome travail and toil, and withall ſome perſecutions and afflictions (ſee 1 Theſſ. 2. note b.) according to the meaſure of that grace which he hath effectually beſtowed upon me to the end.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Πρωτότοκος

V. 15. Firſt-born] The word πρωτότοκος beſide the ordinary notion of firſt-born (which cannot ſo well here referre to Chriſt's eternal generation, becauſe of that which is added to it, the firſt-born of every creature, which only gives him a precedence before all other creatures, and doth not attribute eternity to him) is uſed ſometimes for a Lord, or perſon in power, who hath the privilege of the firſt-born, dominion over all his brethren: and according to this notion 'tis uſed κοινῶς in Scripture for a Prince, or prineipal perſon. So Pſ. 68. 27. David is called the firſt-born of the Kings of the earth, that is, the moſt glorious among them, and Job 18. 13. we have the firſt-born of death. And ſo among the Civilians, Hæres, heir, ſignifies dominus, Lord, Juſtinian. Inſtit. l. 2. tit. 19. de hæred. qualit. & diffe. §. ult. And thus may it fitly be a title of Chriſt incarnate, in reſpect of his power over his Church, the key of the houſe of David laid upon him. But it is poſſible it may peculiarly referre to his reſurrection, in which he was the firſt-born from the dead, v. 18. the firſt which from the grave was raiſed and exalted to heaven, and being ſo riſen, all power was given unto him in heaven and in earth.

b. Θρόνοι Κυριότητες Ἀρχαὶ Ἐξουσίαι

V. 16. Thrones] Theſe ſeverall titles here rehearſed may poſſibly be no more but the expreſſions of ſeverall degrees of dignity among men. So θρόνοι thrones may denote Kings, or Monarchs, and Princes; Κυριότητες, dominions (or Lordſhips) may be the Reguli, the honours (whether of Dukes or Earls) next under Princes; Ἀρχαὶ, the Prafects of Provinces and cities; and Ἐξουσίαι inferior magiſtrates: and if ſo, then may they be here ſet down to denote all ſorts and conditions of men in the Gentile world, by the chief dignities among them here on earth. But becauſe they may alſo ſignifie the ſeveral degrees of Angels, and becauſe there follows mention of Ὁρατὰ καὶ ἀόρατα, viſible and inviſible, and the Angels may moſt probably be contained by the latter of them, as this lower world of men by the former, and becauſe it is the creation that is here referred to, and the creating of the Angels, as well as men, &c. belongs truly to Chriſt as God, therefore it will be moſt reaſonable in this place to interpret it in the greater extent to comprehend Angels and men too, the higheſt and moſt eminent of both ſorts, thereby to ſet out the eternal Divinity and power of Chriſt, who is creatour of all, and conſequently before the moſt principal Angels, which were created before men: See v. 17. Of the great blaſphemies of the Gnoſticks and their followers the Valentinians in this matter, of Angels creating the world, &c. ſee Irenæus, and Note on 1. Tim. 1. d. And to that Theologie of theirs the Apoſtle may here referre.

c. Τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς

V. 20. Whether they be things in earth, or--] What is here meant by ὅτε τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ὅτε τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, whether the things on earth, or the things in the heavens, wil, I conceive, be beſt diſcerned, firſt by comparing this place of the reconciliation wrought by Chriſt with the parallel, Epheſ. 2. 14, 16. where it clearly ſignifies the compacting the Jewes and Gentiles into one Church; and ſo again Epheſ. 1. 10. the gathering in one all things, both which are in heaven, and on earth, doth ſignifie all men of all ſorts. Secondly, by remembring two obſervations, frequent in this Book. 1. That it is the manner of the Hebrew writers to expreſſe this inferiour world (for want of one word to ſignifie it) by theſe two, the heavens and the earth, and indeed any aggregate body or totum, by mentioning and enumerating its parts, as the natural day, by the evening and the morning, and ſo to ſet down ſo many daies, and ſo many nights, where the truth of the ſtory will not allow us to interpret it literally of ſo many nights diſtinctly, but of ſo many νυχθήμερα, or natural daies, of which any the leaſt part is computed for one. (See Note on Mat. 12. n. and on Epheſ. 5. h.) And not to multiply examples, but to confine the diſcourſe to this particular, thus very frequently the heavens and the earth are ſet to ſignifie the whole lower world, made up of the firmament of the aire, that expanſum which is called Heaven (as when we read, the fowls of the heaven) and of the terreſtrial globe of earth and water (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. e.) and then (conſequently to this) τὰ πάντα all things here, explained and interpreted by ὅτε τὰ ἐπὶ γῆς, ὅτε τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, whether the things on earth, or the things in heaven, and in the like phraſe v. 16. τὰ πάντα τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, all things that are in the heavens and on the earth, ſhall ſignifie no more then what is in other places expreſſed by ὁ κόσμος, the world, (as 2. Cor. 5. 19. in the very ſame matter that here is ſpoken of, God in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf) ἡ κτίσις the creation, πᾶσα κτίσις, the whole creation, or all creatures, the whole world of creation, or the whole world without reſtriction. Now what is meant by the whole world or the whole creation, will appear by another ſecond obſervation, which is taken notice of, and enlarged on, Note on Rom. 8. d. that κτίσις creation, and κόσμος world ſimply, and πᾶσα κτίσις the whole creation Rom. 8. 22. and here v. 23. ſignifies all the Gentile world, in oppoſition to the Jewiſh encloſure; not all the creatures abſolutely, but all men of all nations, particularly the Gentile Idolaters mentioned here in the next verſe, ὑμᾶς ποτε ὄντας ἀπηλλοτριωμένους, you that were formerly alienated, &c. And then the meaning of the place will be clearly this, that it pleaſed God by Chriſt to reconcile to himſelf (or, as it is poſſible, εἰς αὐτὸν, to him, may be read εἰς αὐτὸ, into one, or the ſame, and ſo be more perfectly parallel to ἀμφοτέρους ἐν ἑνὶ σώματι, both in, or into one body, Eph. 2. 16.) all the men of the world, the Gentiles and the Jewes both; the ſame thing which was meant by καταλλαγὴ κόσμου, Rom. 11. 15. the reconciling of the world (that is, the Gentiles in oppoſition to the Jewes, that there in the words immediately precedent are ſaid to be caſt off) and 2 Cor. 5. 19. by God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf. And though the word πάντα all things be here in the Neuter, yet will that be no objection againſt this, it being ordinary for the Neuter to be taken for the Maſculine, as when Chriſt is ſaid to have come σῶσαι τὸ ἀπολωλὸς, to ſave that which was loſt, that is, all the men that were loſt; and ſo Gal. 3. 22. that God hath ſhut up together πάντα ὑπὸ ἁμαρτίαν, all things, that is, all men, under ſin, and innumerable the like: and therefore that which v. 20. is πάντα all in the Neuter, is ὑμᾶς you men, you Gentiles, v. 21. and that joyned with the ἀποκατήλλαξεν, he hath reconciled there, as πάντα all with the ἀποκαταλλάξαι reconciling here. That I doe not conceive the τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς things in heaven to ſignifie Angels, the reaſon is clear, becauſe Chriſt οὐκ ἐπιλαμβάνεται ἀγγέλων, Heb. 2. 16. came not to take hold of, or reduce, or relieve, or conſequently to reconcile, the Angels, but onely mankind. And indeed the Angels, that are ἐν οὐρανοῖς in the heavens, never ſell, and ſo needed no reconciling. And though τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς the things in heaven may poſſibly ſignifie the Saints departed, which are now in Heaven, in reſpect of their ſouls, contrary to the Pſychopannychiſts, and were ſo at the Apoſtles writing this, and even at the time of Chriſts death, yet the Context ſeems not to have any particular aſpect on that matter, but onely to look upon Chriſt, and to ſet him up as the one univerſal redeemer and reconciler of all mankind, of the Gentiles as well as of the Jewes, and to ſhew what intereſt the Gentile world hath in his death and reſurrection: and therefore I preferre the interpretation firſt given, as being directly pertinent to this purpoſe, and agreeable to the conſequents. And that will more appear, if you look on the place forementioned, and parallel to this, Epheſ. 1. 10. where this reconciling of all things in heaven and on earth, expreſſed there by ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι gathering into one, is called v. 9. μυστήριον τοῦ θελήματος αὐτοῦ κατὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν αὐτοῦ, the myſterie of his will according to his good pleaſure, noting it to be ſome act of free undeſerved mercy, imputable to nothing but Gods meer grace (and ſuch moſt notoriouſly was the calling of the Gentile Idolaters) and that a myſterie, ſuch as no man ever dream'd of or hoped for before; and what that myſterie was, is in the remainder of that Epiſtle largely ſhewn, eſpecially c. 2. 14, 16, 17. and under the name of the myſterie, c. 3. 3, 5. viz. the bringing in the Gentiles into the Church, preaching ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν among the Gentiles, (c. 3. 8.) the unſearchable riches of Chriſt. And thus, I conceive, the phraſe is to be underſtood, Epheſ. 3. 15. where of Chriſt 'tis ſaid, that, ἐξ οὗ πᾶσα πατριὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς ὀνομάζεται, the whole family in heaven and on earth is named by, or from, him, that is, ſurely, all the world, Gentiles as well as Jewes, are now vouchſafed by him to be called by his name, that is, to be Chriſtians, called and received into his family.

V. 22. Body of his fleſh] The body of his fleſh ſignifies no more than his fleſh, according to the Hebrew notion of בָּשָׂר, which as it ſignifies body, ſo it is oft applied to things which have no body, and ſignifies eſſence or beeing.

V. 25. Fulfill the word] πληρῶσαι τὸν λόγον, to fulfill his word, is a phraſe which we meet with 1 Mac. 2. 55. ſpoken of Joſhuah, that for fulfilling the word he was made a Judge in Iſrael: where, as the word ſignifies the will and pleaſure of God revealed to him, ſo πληρῶσαι to fulfill it is to perform it in a very eminent manner. But in this place ὁ λόγος being by the Context confined to another notion, the preaching or publiſhing the Goſpel of Chriſt peculiarly, πληρῶν τὸν λόγον Θεοῦ, to fulfill the word of God, will be, to fulfill that preaching, that is, to proceed as farre in the preaching of it as by all his diligence and care, by himſelf and others he could doe, and ſo belongs to the preaching it to theſe Coloſſians, to whom, being out of his way, he yet had ſent Epaphras v. 7. Thus we have a like phraſe Rom. 15. 19. πεπληρωκέναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, to fill up the preaching, or Goſpel, of Chriſt, that is, to preach it from city to city, from Jeruſalem as far as to Illyricum.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. II.

1. For I am willing ye ſhould be advertiſed how earneſtly I contend for you in deſire to come to viſit you, and in prayer and zeal and ſolicitude for you, and for thoſe of Laodicea, whoſe converſion wrought by Epaphras, who was ſent by me, I look upon with much comfort, though I never ſaw any of them (as not being able to goe to either of thoſe cities either in my firſt or ſecond paſſage through Phrygia (of which Laodicea is the Metropolis, and Coloſſe another city) Act. 16. 6. and 18. 23.)

1. FOR I would that ye knew what great conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not ſeen my face in the fleſh;]

2. That they may receive the joy and true comfort, which the doctrine of Chriſt truly taught and practiſed will yield every one, that being firſt united together in the Chriſtian charity, they may be filled with all graces in all abundance, and come to know the bottome of this great ſecret or myſterie of God, viz. of the Goſpel, or Chriſtianity, that is, of the courſe which hath more obſcurely been taken by God the Father under the Old Teſtament, and more clearly now by God in Chriſt under the New, to bring ſinners to ſalvation;

2. That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, * and unto all riches of the † full aſſurance of underſtanding, to the acknowledgment of the myſterie of God, * and of the Father, and of Chriſt;]

5. For though I am not perſonally preſent among you, yet by the advertiſements I received from Epaphras I underſtand how all things goe with you, and ſo am in heart or ſpirit preſent with you, (as when Eliſha's heart is ſaid to have gone with his ſervant, when he knew what he did, 2 Kin. 5. 26.) and rejoice much to ſee the regularity of Eccleſiaſtical affairs among you, and your conſtancy in the truth, in deſpight of all that have tried to lead you out of the way.

5. For though I be abſent in fleſh, yet I am with you in the ſpirit, joying and beholding your order, and the ſtedfaſtneſſe of your faith in Chriſt.]

6. And therefore all that I have to adde is onely this, that as you have received commands from Chriſt for the regulating of your lives, ſo ye be carefull to doe accordingly;

6. As ye have therefore received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him,]

7. As having not only received the faith at firſt, but having been farther inſtructed and improved in it, as when walls are ſuperſtructed on a foundation, yea and confirmed in it, and therefore goe on according to theſe beginnings, and abound in all Chriſtian practices, and let that be your way of returning thanks to God for his great mercies of revealing the Goſpel to you.

7. Rooted and built up in him, and ſtabliſhed in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thankſgiving.]

a. b. 8. And take care that no body plunder you, rob you, cheat you of all that you have, your principles of Chriſtian knowledge, by that vain, empty, frothy, pretended knowledge and wiſdome which the Gnoſticks talk of, 1 Tim. 1. 4. and 6. 20. taken out of the heathenish Pythagorean Philoſophy, together with the obſervances of the Moſaical Law, and very diſtant and contrary to Chriſtian divinity.

c. 9. For the whole will of God is by Chriſt really made known to us, as his Divinity really dwels in him; and therefore there is little need of the additions of the Gnoſticks, which they borrow out of the heathen and Jewiſh theologie, to ſupply the defects of the Evangelical doctrine.

And by him you have knowledge ſufficient to ſatisfie and complete you, without ſuch ſupplies as theſe from the doctrines and divinity of the Gnoſticks, about their Æones, (ſee 1 Tim. 1. note d.) look'd on by them as divine immortal powers, of which, whatſoever they are (if they be not idol-things) be they Angels of a ſuperiour or ſecond degree, Chriſt is the head, and they which have Chriſt need not trouble themſelves with theſe acceſſions.

11. In whom alſo ye are circumciſed with the circumciſion made without hands, in putting off the body of the ſins of the fleſh, by the circumciſion of Chriſt,]

11. And as you need not take in theſe fragments of heathen theologie into the Chriſtian, ſo is there as little need of the Judaical obſervations, circumciſion, &c. which are urged by the Gnoſticks alſo, Chriſt having in his Goſpel helped you to the true gainfull circumciſion, not that outward, the cutting off the fore-skin with a knife, but the inward, ſpiritual, the putting off, throwing away all thoſe carnal ſins which the Gnoſticks again doe ſo abound in, and this is the true Chriſtian circumciſion.

12. Buried with him in baptiſme, wherein alſo ye are riſen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raiſed him from the dead.]

12. And to all this you are engaged (and have undertaken it) in your baptiſme, whereof one part, referring to the burial of Chriſt, denotes not only your dying to your ſins, forſaking the impurities of your heathen lives, but alſo the abrogation of, and liberty from, the Moſaical performances, Epheſ. 2. 15. and your laying all down in the grave, to be buried with Chriſt, never to live or have power in or over you again; and another part (that of coming out of the water) referring to the reſurrection of Chriſt, denotes your vow and engagement to riſe to all Evangelical performances, and to all purity of life, by the virtue of your faith in that God, whoſe power and ſufficience to make good all his promiſes to you is demonſtrated by his raiſing up Jeſus from the dead.

13. And you being dead in your ſins, and the uncircumciſion of the fleſh, hath he quickend together with him, having forgiven you all treſpaſſes:]

13. And you being heathens and uncircumciſed (and ſo without requiring thoſe legal performances of you) hath he received into covenant, taken you out of your heathen, dark, dead condition, and having pardoned you all your paſt idolatries and provocations, he hath called you into the free eſtate of the Goſpel, requiring none of thoſe legal yokes of you, which the Judaizing Gnoſticks lay upon you:

*Having by his doctrines blotted out the handwriting againſt us

14. * Blotting out the d handwriting of ordinances that was againſt us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his croſſe:] d

14. Having by that proclamation of pardon to all penitent believers, Gentiles as well as Jewes, (which is a doctrine of Chriſt's now peculiarly revealed in the Goſpel) blotted out that bill which the Jewes were bound by, having as it were ſigned it with our own hands againſt our ſelves (by profeſſing to expect juſtification by the Law) a bill indeed contrary to our peace, deſtructive to us, and having taken it away, cancelled it, and that (as bonds are wont to be cancelled) by ſtriking a nail through it, viz. nailing it to his croſſe, that is, cancelling it by his death, undergoing a vile death for us, and obtaining pardon of ſins for us by that means.

23. Which obſervances are indeed (as it was before intimated v. 4, and 8.) ſet off by ſome ſpecious fair ſhews, as that they are voluntary ſervices or freewill-offerings to God, that there is great humility in them (as in that of worſhipping Angels, v. 18.) that they are a great auſterity and puniſhing of the body, that they are quite contrary to the placing any honour in the ſatisfying the deſires of the fleſh though it be by conjugal enjoyments (but for all this, are but ſpecious, and not real ſervices, have nothing of true worſhip in them.) i

a. Συλᾶν. V. 8. Spoile] Συλᾶν is to ſtrip or rob, as the pillagers in warre are wont to doe; ἀνδύειν ὅπλων ἢ κείμηλον, to ſtrip one, as he lies, of his armour, ſaith Phavorinus, and agreeably to this, ἁρπαζειν, αἰχμαλωτίζειν, to carry away captive. Hence συλαγωγῖν is both ἀπογυμνῶν to deveſt, to ſtrip, and being here applied to the Gnoſticks it belongs to their divinity, which mixes all the heathen gods (under the title of αἰῶνες, a word corrupted from the Hebrew חיות living creatures, which is ſet to ſignifie Angels, Ezr. 1. 5. See Note on 1 Tim. 1. d.) with Chriſt, and makes uſe of all the Theologie of Orpheus and Heſiod and Pythagoras, which is called ἀπέραντοι γενεαλογίαι endleſſe genealogies, 1 Tim. 1. 4. ματαιολογία idle ſpeaking, ver. 6. and here Philoſophy and vain deceit, and alſo by bringing others to them συλαγωγῆ, either carries them captive to their own heathenish errors, or elſe robs them, deſpoils them, of all their Chriſtian ornaments and weapons, leaving hem naked, as it were, of all that rich proviſion which Chriſt had laid in for them, depriving them of all the advantages of the Goſpel. But that of carrying captive ſeems rather to be the notion of it.

b. Στοιχεῖα. Ib. Rudiments] Στοιχεῖα ſignifies elements, rudiments, firſt principles, the letters of the Alphabet, among Grammarians; the firſt principles, or elements, of which the body is compounded; among the Naturaliſts. And ſo they may fitly ſignifie all imperfect lower ſorts of doctrines or precepts, in oppoſition to that which is more perfect. Thus Heb. 5. 12. the higher Chriſtian knowledg is expreſs'd by στερεὰ τροφὴ ſolid food, and all the inferior ordinary doctrines thereof but as milk for Children or babes to feed on, thoſe lower doctrines there (ſet down c. 6. 1. of Repentance and Faith, &c.) are called στοιχεῖα τ ἀρχῆς τ λογίων τῦ Θεῦ, the elements of the beginning of the Oracles of God. Now as Chriſtian religion is the true manly knowledg and wiſdome, ſo are there two ſorts of elements, imperfect childiſh beginnings of knowledg, the one among the Jews, the other among the Gentiles. Among the Jews, the rites and ceremonies preſcribed them are fitly called Elements, or beginnings, being a παιδαγωγία τῦ νόμ, a pedagogie of the Law, a way to bring up, and diſcipline children, by thoſe groſſer means, as they were able to bear it, to initiate them to ſome kind of piety and vertue; and to them that have received the faith, the Apoſtle calls them ἀσθενῆ καὶ πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα, weak and beggerly elements Gal. 4. 9. and ſuch as were fit onely for νήπιοι babes to be ſubjected to, v. 3. Among the Gentiles, the Philoſophers and the Magi had ſome waies of wiſdome and of Religion alſo, wherein they exerciſed their diſciples, many Abſtinencies and waies of purgations, Sacrifices, and ceremonies of worſhip to their Damons, eſpecially the Pythagoreans, who abſtained from Wine, and Fleſh, and Venery, &c. So ſaith Porphyry in his book. Περὶ Ἀποχῆς, and ſo Clemens Alex. Strom. 3. Διὰ φθορτίδος δὴ τοῖς Μάγοις οἶνος τε ἀμῦ καὶ ἐμψύχων καὶ ἀφροδισίων ἀπέχεσθαι, Their Magi teach them to abſtain from wine, and things that have life in them, and the uſe of venery: and he adds, Λατρεύουσι Ἀγγέλοις καὶ δαίμοσιν, they worſhip Angels and Dæmons. Now which of theſe are here referred to, is the only queſtion. And that may beſt be reſolved by conſidering the addition of τῷ κόσμῳ of the world which is joyned to it. That word doth once ſignifie the ſervice of the Jewiſh Temple, Eccleſ. 50. 21. The people beſought the moſt high God ἕως τελεσθῇ κόσμῳ Κυρίε, καὶ τ λειτυργίαν αὐτῦ ἐτελείωσε, till the worſhip of the Lord were finiſhed, and they had perform'd their office: where κόσμῳ and λειτυργία are uſed in the ſame ſenſe, for the worſhip or ſervice of the Temple. And if this were the notion of τῷ κόσμῳ, it would confine it to the Jewiſh ceremonies: but the ordinary notion of κόσμῳ for the world, is that which is generally uſed in the New Teſtament, and ſo muſt denote the men of the world, all ſorts both of Jewes and Gentiles, as they are oppoſed to Chriſt: and ſo the Elements of the world will be thoſe imperfect waies of piety and vertue which either the Jewes or Gentiles adhered to before Chriſt, or before receiving the faith of Chriſt. And ſo it muſt ſignifie here, the Gentile doctrines eſpecially, noted by Philoſophy at the beginning of the verſe, and the worſhipping of Angels ver. 18. (ſee note h.) but withall the Jewiſh abſtinencies and obſervations, ver. 14, 16. For it is certain that the Gnoſticks divinity, which through this whole chapter is peculiarly noted, was a compoſition of Judaiſme and Heatheniſm both; and thoſe doctrines of theirs, which they laboured to impoſe on Chriſtians, are here expreſs'd by the elements of the world, and ſo ver. 20. (ſee Note i.) though Gal. 4. 3, and 9. where the matter confines it to the Moſaical Law, it fitly belongs to that only.

c. Σωματικῶς. V. 9. Bodily] Σωματικῶς may denote, not corporeity, but eſſence, according to the notion of גשם, often mentioned (ſee cap. 1 Note d.) for eſſence, as well as body; ſo v. 11. σῶμα ἁμαρτιῶν τῆς σαρκὸς, the body of the ſins of the fleſh, that is, the ſins of the fleſh. Or elſe it may be taken in oppoſition to ſhadows or dark reſemblances, Gods will being in Chriſt (not in ſhadows, as among the Jewes, but) plainly and ſubſtantially revealed, for the practice of inward purity, and not for the obſervation of thoſe ſhadows thereof which had been among the Jewes. And thus the 17th verſe ſeems to interpret it, the ſabbaths, &c. though they were, as commemorations inſtituted for the Jewes, by ſtrength of that inſtitution to be obſerved by them, yet had they alſo a farther aſpect, to ſomewhat under the New Teſtament, and as ſuch, are ſaid to be a ſhadow of things to come, the body, or reality, whereof is of Chriſt: Where the Chriſtian doctrine is affirmed to be that ſubſtantial divinity of which that which was under the Law was a ſhadow. But this cannot well be otherwiſe applied to the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelling in Chriſt (which is the primary ſenſe, in which that other is contained, of the manifeſtation of divine knowledge in the Goſpel) but as the word ſhadow is a general word to ſignifie any image, eſpecially a dark or imperfect one. Thus every body naturally caſts its ſhadow, which as it is the dark image of the body, viz. of ſome lineaments of it, ſo is it farre from the ſubſtance of it. Thus the Ghoſts, that is, the ſpecies or images of men, but not their bodies, are call'd their umbræ, ſhadows. And according to this notion of the word Shadow, I ſuppoſe the word bodily may here be interpreted in oppoſition to it, that as on the earth here below the ſun caſts its beams, and ſo dwells here in, or by its beams, or irradiations, but the body of the ſun is in heaven, and ſo, though here be ſome light below, yet there only the fulneſs of light is; ſo here God was in Moſes and the Prophets (and in other wiſe, holy men, to whom he revealed his will) in ſome degree, in ſome raies, beams, images of his perfections, and more then ſo, God is ſaid to dwell in his ſaints (which differs from being in them, only by permanence or continuance) but ſtill he is or dwels in them, onely in thoſe images of him, ſhadows, or raies, not as the Sun doth in the heaven, where the body of it is, in a fulneſs, ſo as he cannot be more in any other; but in Chriſt he dwels in fulneſs, ſo as nothing could be added to it, and ſo in him bodily, that is, as the Sun dwels in the firmament, where the body of it is. The whole divine nature is not onely in part, but fully, without abſence of any part of it, in Chriſt; and that not by a ſpecies, or ſhadow, or image onely, but really and ſubſtantially: and ſo conſequently (which is the thing which is here here deſigned to be proved by it) the will of God muſt be ſuppoſed to be ſo revealed in Chriſt or by Chriſt, that there can be no need of addition from the heathen philoſophy, or from the Jewiſh law, which the Gnoſticks would needs have added to it. And that is the full ſenſe of theſe words.

d. Χειρόγραφον

V. 4. Handwriting] Χειρόγραφον is a bill or writing under a mans hand, whereby he binds himſelf to ſome payment of money or duty, a band or obligation, and which ſtands in force againſt him, to bring any forfeiture or penalty upon him, upon non-performance of the condition to which he is bound; that which the Rabbins call שטר חוב שטר cautio debitoris, an obligation, ſcriptura, vel literæ quibus conſtituta poteſtas quam alius alii tradit, ſaith * Elias Levita, a writing in which is contained a power which one gives another over him. Thus is the Law of Moſes, as it requires abſtinence from meats, obſervation of daies, v. 16. and ſo laies obligation on a Jew, that others are not bound to, and binds him to forfeiture of all his hopes, and alſo to puniſhment if he doe not perform them. In which caſe this band or bill is here ſuppoſed to be brought againſt him ſigned by himſelf, and ſtands in force againſt him. Now two waies there are to cancel any writing, the one by blotting or croſſing it with a pen, the other by ſtriking a nail through it. The firſt is done by Chriſts doctrines, (requiring now the inward purity, in ſtead of thoſe external obſervances (and that is the meaning of δόγματα doctrines here (as Theophylact acknowledgeth, rendring it by τῇ πίστει by Faith, and τοῖς τῆ πίστεως δόγμασι doctrines of Faith, and Epheſ. 2. 15. (a place parallel to this,) it will more appear, by looking on the place) and the ſecond is done by Chriſts death, expreſſed in that to the Epheſians by ἐν Χριστῷ, but here by προσηλώσας τῷ σταυρῷ, nailing it to his croſſe.

e. Μέρος

V. 16. In reſpect] The meaning of μέρος here, which Joſ. Scaliger and Iſa. Caſaubon Ep. 24. have pitched on, is, that by it is noted חלק, פרק a chapter, or tract of the Talmudiſts upon that ſubject. For the leſſer parts of the Talmud are called פרקים diviſions or parts. Among their writings there is now one called מסכה יום טוב the tract of a good day, that is, a feaſt, & in it many chapters or פרקים, μέρη or ſections. From thence is the mention of Ἀρχιφερεχίται in Juſtinian. Novel. de Heb. 146. By which it appears that among the Expoſitors of the Law there were ſome called φερεχοί, as it were μεισταὶ, that expounded their heads of doctrine ſeverally, & the chief of them Ἀρχιφερεχίται. And ſo the meaning of the place will be, Let no man paſſe ſentence on you by what you doe in eating or drinking, by that ſection of the Rabbins about Feaſts, New moons, Sabbaths, that is, by your obſerving or not obſerving of thoſe things; which were required indeed by the Jewes, but meerly as ſhadows and types of that ὁλόκληρον καὶ ἀδιάλειπτον ἑορτὴν, entire and continual feaſt, that a Chriſtians life ought to be now under the New Teſtament. See Origen. Cont. Celſ. l. 8. p. 404. That μέρει ſhould be miſtaken for ἡμέρᾳ a day, is a conjecture of ſome, which it is ſufficient to have named, having no authority of any MS. to countenance it.

f. Καταβραβδέτω

V. 18. Beguile] Καταβραβδέτω, κατακεινέτω, ſaith Phavorinus, the word ſignifies to condemn, βραβευτὴς & κριτὴς being all one (onely the former peculiar to the ἀγῶνες or Grecian games, the other common to all judicatures) and proportionably the notion of the κατὰ in Compoſition being the ſame too: and ſo the word will have the ſame ſignificancy here that κρινέτω v. 16. of judging or condemning.

Κρίνειν

g. Θέλω

Ib. Voluntary humility] The notion of the word θέλω in the Greek tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, for taking delight in any thing, hath been mentioned in Note on Mat. 27. g. and may be judged of by theſe examples not recited there, Pſal. 1. 2. ἐν τῷ νόμῳ κυρίου θέλημα αὐτοῦ, his delight is in the Law of the Lord; πρόθελός μου, Pſal. 41. 12. thou favoureſt, or loveſt, or delighteſt in me. And ſo being here joyned with ἐν ταπεινοφροσύνῃ in humility, it is moſt reaſonably to be taken and rendered, delighting in humility, or, as S. Hierome explains it, ſuperbus ficta humilitate, proud of a feigned humility; but yet ſo, that ἐν ταπεινοφροσύνῃ in humility may be joyned with μηδεὶς καταβραβδέτω, let no man condemn you, ver. 16. ſo that the conſtruction and full ſenſe will run thus, Let no man pleaſe himſelf, and condemn, or judge, you, in point of humility and worſhip of Angels.

h. Ἐμβατεύων

Ib. Intruding] The word ἐμβατεύων is explained by ἐπιβαίνων, τὰ ἔνδον ἐξερευνῶν ἢ σκοπῶν, to enter into, to ſearch and ſpie what is within, and again ἐξετάζων to enquire, in Phavorinus; by ζητῶν to ſeek and goe as far as one can, ἐπιβαθμῶν in Heſychius. It ſignifies to ſeek, or ſearch, or prie into that which is ſecret, and hardly to be diſcovered, and ſo belonging here to the doctrine concerning Angels, it is fitly applied, becauſe no man hath ever ſeen them nor can ſpeak upon knowledge concerning thoſe points, when Angels are preſent, what they can doe, what they have done, what uſe hath been continually made of them by God, what hath been wrought by their miniſtery, &c. Now of the Gnoſticks it is known how great a part of their Theologie was made up of conceits concerning the Angels, of which as they had much from the Theologi Poetæ, the fictions of the heathens, ſo had they therein gratified the Judaizers alſo, who affirming that the Law was given by Angels, were very favourable to the worſhip of them, (ſee Note on 1 Tim. 1. d.) This ſort of men are ſaid to have continued long in Piſidia and Phrygia, & therefore to have been forbidden by Canon in the Council of Laodicea, the chief city of Phrygia. Among them there ſtill are Oratories remaining, wherein they were wont to pray to Angels. And the hereſie of theſe Angelitæ or Angelici was, under a ſhew of humility, that God was to be looked on with reverence, as inviſible and inacceſſible, and to be ſued to by the interceſſion and mediation of Angels, firſt the lower, then the higher, till at laſt the requeſt was preſented unto God himſelf. And this of the Mediatorſhip of Angels was among the Platoniſts a ſpecial part of doctrine. Πᾶν τὸ δαιμόνιον, ſaith Plato in Sympoſ. μεταξύ ἐστι θεοῦ καὶ θνητοῦ, ἑρμηνεῦον καὶ διαπορθμεῦον θεοῖς τὰ παρ' ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἀνθρώποις τὰ παρὰ θεῶν· τῶν μὲν τὰς δεήσεις καὶ θυσίας, τῶν δὲ τὰς ἐπιτάξεις τε καὶ ἀμοιβὰς τῶν θυσιῶν, Every damon, or Angel, is betwixt God and man, declaring and delivering to God the things of men, and to men the things of God; the praiers and ſacrifices of the one, and the commands and returnes to their ſacrifices from the other. And again, Θεὸς ἀνθρώπῳ οὐ μίγνυται, ἀλλὰ διὰ τούτου πᾶσα ἡ ὁμιλία καὶ ἡ διάλεκτος θεοῖς πρὸς ἀνθρώπους, καὶ ἐγρηγορόσιν καὶ καθεύδουσιν, God converſeth not with man, but all the converſation & diſcourſe betwixt God & man is by Angels, both in time of waking and ſleep. And this & the like being the doctrine of thoſe Philoſophers may well be referred to v. 8. under the ſtile of Philoſophy & vain deceit.

Φιλοσοφία

i. Ἐθελοθρησκεία

V. 23. Will-worſhip] The word ἐθελοθρησκία, voluntary worſhip, is not elſewhere uſed in the New Teſtament, and being not at all to be found among the Greek tranſlators, or Apocryphal writers of the Old, and by other later Writers taken particularly from this one place, it will be worthy our inquiry how 'tis uſed here, whether in an ill or a good ſenſe, and that will be done beſt by a full view of the whole place. The occaſion of the Apoſtles diſcourſe here is, the dogmatizing of ſome, ver. 20. that is, teaching ſome things to be forbidden by God, which were not now forbidden by him (nor by any under God which had authority to command) and ſo by their ἐντάλματα, commands, or precepts, teaching for doctrines the commandements of men, (their own heretical phanſies) Mat. 15. 9. The matter of theſe dogmata is here ſet down, Μὴ ἅψῃ, μὴ γεύσῃ, μὴ θίγῃς, touch not, taſt not, καὶ ἅπτη come not neer. The word ἅπτεσθαι to touch, as it is here diſtinguiſh'd from γεύεσθαι to taſt, ſeems to referre to the uſe of women, ſo as we have μὴ ἅπτεσθαι γυναικὸς not to touch a woman 1 Cor. 7. 1. contrary to which is the ἴδιος ἑκάστος ἑαυτῆ γυναῖκα ἐχέτω, Let every man have his own wife, ver. 2. For this we know, that the Gnoſticks, here oppoſed by S. Paul (as there alſo among the Corinthians) did forbid marriage, as a deteſtable, abominable thing, διαβάλλοντες γάμον, τεκνογονίαν, calumniating, or accuſing, marriage, getting of children, &c. ſaith the Author of the Conſtitutions l. 6. 16. See Note on 1 Tim. 4. b. And this they ſeem to have had from the Pythagoreans and the Magi, (who taught their diſciples ἀπέχεσθαι ἀφροδισίων to abſtain from venery, ſaith Clemens, Strom. l. 3.) but made a worſe uſe of it then they appear to have done. In the next place, the μὴ γεύσῃ taſt not, belongs to abſtinencies from meats, of which ſome there were among the Pythagoreans, ἀπ' ἐμψύχων, from all living creatures, (ſee Porphyry περὶ ἀποχῆς) and ſome among the Jewes from unclean, forbidden meats. And accordingly this is another of the Gnoſticks doctrines (annex'd to the former of forbidden marriage) 1 Tim. 4. 3. ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων to abſtain from meats, according to that of the Author of the Conſtitutions, lib. 6. 8. τινὰ τῶν βρωμάτων βδελύσσεσθαι, they abominate ſome ſorts of meats, and φαυλίζουσι they ſpeak evil of them, c. 26. As for the μὴ θίγῃς, which is ordinarily rendred handle not, and may ſo be applied to ſome Jewiſh rites of not touching any thing that was legally unclean, I ſuppoſe, it may better be rendred, come not near. Thus the word is uſed Exod. 19. 12. of the mount, which they were not to goe up to, or touch, that is, approach near it: and ſo it is uſed in the ſame matter, Heb. 12. 20. κἂν θὴρ θίγῃ τοῦ ὄρους, if it approach the mountain it ſhall be ſtoned. And in this notion, I conceive, it belongs to both the former interdicts, which are back'd with this, as with an anathema or deep cenſure, making it an abominable thing to marry, or eat thoſe meats. For therein did their dogmatizing conſiſt, in making marriage and meats βδέλυκτα deteſtable things, bitterly judging all that approach'd them: and ſo by the Canons of the Apoſtles, it appears the hereticks of the firſt times did, making marriage the work of the Devil, and the eating forbidden meats, a βδέλυγμα, an abomination. And ſo here v. 17. Let no man judge you in meat, &c. that is, condemn your liberty, as an abominable, damning thing, placing all religion in ſuch obſervances. Of theſe Abſtinencies thus impoſed on Chriſtians by theſe dogmatizing Gnoſticks, the Apoſtle v. 22. makes his obſervation, Ἅ ἐστι πάντα εἰς φθορὰν τῇ ἀποχρήσει, Which are all, &c. Theſe words I conceive are ordinarily miſunderſtood. For firſt, ἀποχρήσεις ſignifies not uſe ſimply but abuſe; then φθορὰ is ſet in the Epiſtles to denote abominable, unnatural uncleanneſs (ſee Rom. 8. Note i. and 2 Pet. 1. b. and 2. b.) and ſo the ſenſe will be, that theſe doctrines of theirs, borrowed from others, Pythagoreans and Jewes, are abuſed and made worſe by them, even to the bringing in all unnaturall villany, ſet down Rom. 1. whilſt they deteſt and abominate marriage. As for that which follows, κατὰ τὰ ἐντάλματα καὶ διδασκαλίας τῶν ἀνθρώπων, according to the commandments and doctrines of men, that is ſurely to be connected with δογματίζεσθε ver. 20. thus, why doe ye ſubject your ſelves to thoſe ordinances of abſtinencies, which are farre from being impoſed by God, fetch'd out of the Philoſophy of the heathen, and rites of the Jewes, aboliſhed by Chriſt, and yet moſt ſeverely impoſed on you by theſe hereticks? Having ſet down theſe abſtinencies, thus impoſed and abuſed by hereticks, he then concludes with a brief character of the abſtinencies themſelves, as they were by them pretended to be, in their plea for them. Ἅπινά (or, in two words, Ἅ πινα) ἐστι λόγον ἔχοντα σοφίας ἐν ἐθελοθρησκείᾳ, &c. Which things have in them ſome notion, or appearance, of wiſdome, that is, of extraordinary perfection (from whence they call'd themſelves Gnoſticks) or piety (which in the Scripture-ſtyle is called wiſdome,) viz. in will-worſhip, and humility, and ſeverity toward the body: that is, firſt, in performing ſome acts of voluntary, uncommanded perfection; ſecondly, in ſhewing a greater humility than others pretend to, in that of worſhipping of Angels, ver. 18. (ſee Note g.) and thirdly, in auſterities and ſeverities toward the body, abſtaining from ſatisfactions, which others uſe, (ſo ἀφειδία ſignifies) ἐν μὴ ἐν τιμῇ τινι πρὸς πλησμονὴν σαρκὸς, and not in any honour to the ſatisfying of the fleſh. Theſe words have ſome difficulty in them, (but ſuch as hath no influence on the enquiry in hand concerning the notion of Will-worſhip:) that which others have ſaid from S. Jerome may well be admitted, that the honour here is the ſupplying of wants, as Mat. 15. 6. and 1 Tim. 5. 17. the word is uſed, and then (as an explication of the auſterity precedent) οὐκ ἐν τιμῇ will be, not in the adminiſtring of fewel, or ſupply, ad ſaturitatem carnis explendam, to the filling the ſaturity of the fleſh. But 'tis poſſible, τιμὴ may here be taken in a peculiar ſenſe, ſo as marriage is ſaid to be τίμιος honourable in all men Heb. 13. 4. in oppoſition there to theſe Gnoſticks practices, πορνεία fornication, as it contains all unlawfull, unnatural luſts, which are accordingly called πάθη ἀτιμίας Rom. 1. 26. affections of diſhonour, and ἀτιμάζεσθαι τὰ σώματα αὐτῶν, diſhonouring their bodies, ver. 24. In this ſenſe I ſuppoſe it evidently to be taken 1 Theſſ. 4. 4. that every one know to poſſeſſe his veſſel, that is, his body, ἐν ἁγιασμῷ καὶ τιμῇ, in purification and honour, that is, in a virginal or conjugal purity, μὴ ἐν πάθει ἀτιμίας, not in paſſion of diſhonour, or diſhonourable paſſion, ſo as the Gentiles which know not God, v. 5. Where I ſuppoſe conjugal chaſtity, under the name of τιμὴ honour, to be propoſed by the Apoſtle in oppoſition to all the Gnoſtick practices which there follow, whereas marriage was deteſted and accuſed by theſe, as a work of the Devil: And then in that notion τιμὴ may poſſibly be taken here, for the lawfull, honorable uſe of marriage, πρὸς πλησμονὴν σαρκὸς, for the ſatisfying the deſires of the fleſh, that is, for the avoiding of fornication, or καῦσις uſtion, and all villany, in which caſe the Apoſtle preſcribes marriage, 1 Cor. 7. 2, and 9. And ſo this laſt part of the character of theſe abſtinences will alſo be here fitly added, to ſhew the wickedneſs of theſe fair pretences of theſe Gnoſticks, in that they brought them to all diſhonourable luſts, by forbidding them the uſe of lawful marriage, and allowing no honourable means of ſatisfying thoſe deſires which are implanted by nature in them. The verſe being thus rendred, it is already viſible that there is no ill, but a good character ſet on ἐθελοθρησκεία, will-worſhip. For firſt, it is here joyned with two things which are confeſſedly good, 1. humility, 2. ſeverity and auſterity to, or mortifying of, the body; the firſt a known moral and Chriſtian vertue, the ſecond an act of ſelf-denyal, which, as ſuch, cannot be unacceptable to Chriſt, and as a ſpecies of revenge 2 Cor. 7. 11. will be numbred among the effects of ſorrow according to God. Secondly, theſe doctrines are ſaid, in reſpect of will-worſhip diſcernible in them, to have λόγον σοφίας, rationem ſapientiæ, ſomewhat of piety in them; which ſomewhat, if it be real, then will it be the ſame that is 1 Tim. 4. 8. ſaid of bodily exerciſe, abſtinence, continence, &c. that it is εἰς ὀλίγον ὠφέλιμος, a little profitable, or profitable for a little. But if λόγος ſignifie ſpecies, onely a ſhew of wiſdome or piety, yet ſtill the argument will be of force. For can any thing be ſaid to have ſo much as a ſhew of piety in will-worſhip, if will-worſhip, which is thus pretended, paſſe confeſſedly for fooliſh or impious? And accordingly the Greek Fathers that interpret λόγον for a ſhew onely, render will-worſhip by piety, onely they adde, that this dogmatizer is not truly ſo, but but pretends to be ſo; Δοκεῖ ἐυλαβὴς τις εἶναι καὶ μέτριος, καὶ τῷ σώματι καταφρονῶν, ὡς ἔστι δῆλον, He appears pious and moderate, and to deſpiſe the body, and then all the fault is that he is not truly what he appears; and Oecumenius, ὑποκρινόμενος ἐυλάβειαν ἐν τῇ θρησκείᾳ, he pretends piety and devotion in worſhip, where it appears what they meant by ἐθελοθρησκία, viz. ἐυλάβεια piety (the thing ſo commended in Simeon, Luk. 2. 25. and preſcribed, Heb. 12. 28.) and religion or worſhip, which cauſed the Interpreter of Clemens Alexandrinus to render ἐν ἐθελοθρησκίᾳ in religione, in religion. And accordingly Heſychius expounds it by ἐθελοσέβεια voluntary worſhip, or piety voluntarily performed, the very notion of the נדבה the free-will-offerings among the Jewes, rendred by the Septuagint ἑκούσια voluntary oblations, which were ſo farre from being ill becauſe not commanded, that they were farre the more acceptable for being free. Ἃ γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν ἐντολὴν γίνεται πολὺν ἔχει τὸν μισθὸν καὶ τοῦτο, ἃ δὲ ὑπὸ τὴν ἐντολὴν τάξει ἐ ποιοῦσιν, for thoſe that are done above the command have a plentifull reward in this very reſpect, but thoſe that are according to command, not ſo great. And ſo ſaith Socrates of Eccleſiaſtical rites, ἐπεὶ δὲ ἄδηλος ἡμῖν περὶ τούτου ἔγγραφον ἔχει παράγγελμα, δῆλον ὡς καὶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο τῇ ἑκάστου γνώμῃ καὶ προαιρέσει ἐπέτρεψαν οἱ Ἀπόστολοι, ἵνα ἕκαστος μὴ φόβῳ μηδὲ ἐξ ἀνάγκης τὸ ἀγαθὸν κατεργάζοιτο, ſeeing there is of this no written command, 'tis manifeſt that the Apoſtles left this to mens choice, that every one might doe good not of fear or neceſſity. 'Tis true indeed, where the matter of the worſhip is unlawfull, there the will-worſhip muſt needs be ſo; and therefore here ver. 18. when he ſpeaks of worſhipping of Angels, there the ὁ θέλων he that takes pleaſure in this ſort of humility and worſhip, is under an ill character: which notwithſtanding, the voluntary worſhip, where the matter is perfectly lawfull, not forbidden, nay approved by a general though not commanded by a particular) precept, is farre from having any tincture of ill in it. And therefore when the word ἐθελοπερισσοθρησκία, voluntary abundant worſhip, is by Epiphanius uſed of the Phariſees, it is not by him taken in any ill ſenſe, but onely that it was the denotation of their name, which, though they might out of ſome vanity aſſume it to themſelves, yet had no ill in it, but was rather a title of honour, ἀφωρισμένοι τῷ Θεῷ, ſeparate to God, and their Sect by S. Paul ſtyled ἀκριβεστάτη αἵρεσις τῆς θρησκείας the ſtricteſt ſect of religion. For ſo indeed it appears that the original of theſe Phariſees was the חסידים Aſidei, ſo call'd for their exceſſe of piety and charity, their voluntary performances above what the Law required, ἑκουσιαζόμενοι τῷ νόμῳ, volunteers to the law, that to the precepts of the Law ſuperadded ſome uncommanded acts of piety, 1 Mac. 2. 42. and ſo differed from the Karei, who did only that which was preſcribed by the Law. And conſequently though the Phariſees pride and boaſting be cenſured by Chriſt, and though their forming theſe voluntary acts of devotion into precepts, and entring them into books, and ſeparating themſelves from all that did not perform their ſevere preſcriptions, rendred them Phariſees, divided even from the Haſidai themſelves, and then this became a fault, and ſo is looked upon in them; yet the voluntarineſs and uncommandedneſs of their piety was not amiſſe, and being the ſame in the Aſidei and in them, (and in the former of theſe being ſeparated from dogmatizing and cenſoriouſneſs, &c.) it is alwaies looked on as commendable, and the more abundant, ſtill the more rewardable. Of this ſort as the free-will-offerings among the Jewes are a known example (of which it is clear, firſt, that they were a part of the worſhip and ſervice of God, when they were performed; ſecondly, that they were not under any particular command of Gods in the Law, but were left to every man's liberty, and ſo were ſpontaneous, not neceſſary; and thirdly, that there is a law, Lev. 22. whereby he that offers them is forbid to offer them maimed or blemiſh'd ver. 20. by which it appears that they were voluntary, and yet allowed by God, and accepted) ſo many other there were in the Old Teſtament; Abels oblation, which was not by precept from God, ſay the Fathers generally And even of Sacrifices in general 'tis obſervable what the antient Author of the Conſtitutions affirms, l. 6. c. 18. that before the golden calf, and their other Idolatries, Sacrifices were not commanded, or impoſed on the Jewes, but onely left to their own choiſe, ἐὰν πιοῦς, if they would doe them, they ſhould be accepted, &c. and upon thoſe provocations of theirs impoſed, ὅπως πιζόμενοι καὶ ὑπὸ κλοιὸν ἀγχόμενοι τῆς πολυθέου πλάνης ἐκῶσι, that being ſtreightned and collar'd up (κλοιὸς, δεσμὸς ὑπερεχόντων, ſaith Heſychius) they might keep from idolatry. Such again was the celebration of Purim, the feaſts of the fourth, and fifth, and ſeventh, and tenth month, the feaſt of the dedication of the Altar, inſtituted by the Macsabees, and yet obſerved by Chriſt himſelf. So Davids deſigne of building the Temple, which though not commanded by God, yet the Prophet Nathan affirms of it, Thou didſt well that it was in thine heart, 1 Kin. 8. 18. So likewiſe the abſtinences & auſterities of the Rechabites, in Jeremy's time, which are ſo commended by God, and yet were ὑπέρμαχα τοῦ νόμου over & above the proportion that was required in the Law. And ſo in the New, Pauls refuſing to receive hire from the Corinthians for all his labour among them, which matter is ſet down at large by him, 1 Cor. 9. The preaching of the Goſpel was committed to him as a truſt, and was under precept, & therefore that was no freewill-offering of his; that is his meaning when he ſaith, εἰ γὰρ ἑκὼν τοῦτο πράσσω, μισθὸν ἔχω, εἰ δὲ ἄκων, οἰκονομίαν πεπίστευμαι, If I doe this as a volunteer, that is, If I did preach the Goſpel without any command (and ſo neceſſity) to doe ſo, if I did it of my ſelf freely, this would be rewardable in me; that is, the very preaching would, without any other more honorable circumſtance to enhaunſe it, be matter of greater reward to me then it can now 'tis commanded: but if involuntary, that is, † if my preaching be an act of obedience to a plain command, and ſo neceſſary, v. 16. (and woe to me, if I doe it not) and not voluntary in me, then all that can be ſaid of me is, that being truſted with a ſtewardſhip, I doe diſcharge it; and ſo * there is nothing of excellence in this, no thing of contention toward that which is heroical or high. Upon which it follows, Τί οὖν μοί ἐστιν ὁ μισθός; What reward then ſhall be to me? that is, what in this whole matter ſhall bring in any extraordinary reward to me? To which he anſwers, ἵνα εὐαγγελιζόμενος ἀδάπανον θήσω τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, that preaching the Goſpel, I doe it freely, without making it chargeable to the auditors, εἰς τὸ μὴ καταχρήσασθαι τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ μου, ſo that I make not uſe of my power, or liberty, which I have in the Goſpel, that is, of the power of receiving maintenance from others (ſuch as Phœbe and the like, referred to ver. 5.) without putting my ſelf to bodily labour, ver. 6. or by any other ſuch means, perfectly juſtifiable for me to uſe, v. 7, 12. The doing of this thus was that which would yield him the extraordinary reward. And although this was not obſerved by Cephas and other Apoſtles, ver. 5. yet ſure Cephas is not conceived to have ſinned thereby, but 'tis poſitively ſaid that 'tis lawfull for all, ver. 7, 11, 14. for Paul as for Cephas and others, though only Paul would not uſe it, ver. 12. and accordingly both there, ver. 15. and after, 2 Cor. 11. 8, 9, 10. he diſtinctly counts, and calls it matter of boaſting, and free-will-offering of his; and ſo 'twas eſteemed by S. Chryſoſtome, τὸ μὲν ἔστιν ἐπίταγμα, τὸ δὲ τῆς ἐμῆς προαιρέσεως κατόρθωμα, one w us a precept, the other a vertuous action of his choice, ἃ μὲν γὰρ ὑπὲρ τὴν τῷ ἐντολῷ γίνεται, πολὺν ἔχει τὸν μισθὸν καὶ τοῦτο, for what is done above the command, hath proportionably a plentifull reward. And again of the word necessity, that it refers to a command, ὡς ἀντιδιαστολὴ τῆς ἐλευθερίας τῆς ἐν τῷ λαμβάνειν, in opposition to the freedome in receiving (that is, the power to receive v. 12.) forementioned. So again Theophylact, τὸ εὐαγγελίζεσθαι ὀφὴ ταγμά ἐστι, καὶ χρέος, καὶ ἐὰν πληρῶ τοῦτο, ἁδὲν καλόν ἐστι μοι, &c. Preaching the Gospel is a command to me, and so a debt, and if I doe it, there is no great matter of vertue in it: Τὸ δὲ ἀδαπάνως κηρύσσειν, περιαίρετός φιλοτιμία, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καύχημά ἐστι, But to preach without charging them is the honour of my will, and in that respect there is place of rejoicing, or I may glory or rejoice in it. So again he might have abstained from going up to Jerusalem, Act. 21. a Prophet told him that bands expected him there v. 11. in which case to flie was justifiable by Christs saying, Mat. 10. 23. yet Paul would needs goe up, v. 13. Of such sort of performances as these is that of S. Hierome ad Demetriad. Vende omnia, & da pauperibus; non cogo, non impero, sed propono palmam, præmia ostendo, Sell all, and give to the poor; I constrain not, I command not, but I propose a crown, I shew thee a reward. Tuum est eligere, si volueris in agone coronari, It belongs to thee to choose, if thou meanest to be crowned. And in Epist. ad Pammach. Non tibi imponitur necessitas, ut voluntas præmium consequatur, There is no necessity imposed on thee, that the will may obtain reward. And adverss. Jovinian. Ideo plus amat virgines Christus, quia sponte tribuunt quod sibi non fuerat imperatum, Christ therefore doth more value virgins, because they give that freely which was not commanded them. And adverss. Helvid. Virgo majoris est meriti dum id contemnit quod si fecerit non delinquit, The Virgin is more rewardable, because she contemns that which if she indulged her self she offends not. And so S. Chrysostome on Rom. 8. Οἱ πνευματικοὶ πάντα πράττουσι ὀφὴ συμίᾳ καὶ πόθῳ, καὶ τοῦτο δηλοῦσι τῷ καὶ ὑπερβαίνειν τὰ ὀφὴ τάγματα, The spiritual doe all with appetite and delight, and demonstrate it in exceeding, or going farther than is commanded. And Theophylact, ὑπερβαίνουσι πολλοὶ πολλὰ τῶν ὀφὴ ταγμάτων, many Christians exceed many of the precepts. And Gregory the Great, on Job, l. 26. c. 34. Quidam præcepta legis perfectione virtutum transcendunt, Some men doe transcend precepts (particular precepts) of the Law by perfection of vertues. And so Maimonides the sober Jewish Doctor, Ei datur præmium qui quid injussus facit, (More Nev. l. 3. c. 17. in Buxtorfes rendring) Reward is given to him who doth any thing when he is not commanded to doe it. His words in the Originall Arabick, sound thus, [and they teach, that although he be not enjoyned by command, yet they give him a reward.] He grants indeed, that he that being commanded doth a thing, hath the greater reward, according to the saying that he alludes to out of the Talmud גדול המצויה ועשה &c. Greater is he that being commanded doth a thing, then he that doth it uncommanded; and so the same Maimonides applies it, in his Yad. tr. Talmud Torah c. 1. to prove that a woman that learneth the Law, hath not so great a reward as a man, because she is not commanded to doe it: But still some reward there is of that uncommanded performance, though not so great. And Greg. Nazianzen hath an expresse saying to this purpose, σιλλ. ά. In our law, saith he, some things are commanded, and lay a necessity upon us, and the not observing them brings danger: Others have no necessity, but choice, which bring honour and rewards to those that doe them, but no danger to them who observe them not. And so 'tis apparent by S. Paul, not only in the matter of Cœlibacy, 1 Cor. 7. 15. but also in his exhortation to the Corinthians, that they would equal the Macedonians in their liberality to the poor Jewes; where he professes not to give them precept, v. 8. but γνώμην, his advice or opinion only. In this matter there is an observable mistake, which the Reader is lyable to in our Anglicane Councels, p. 449. Canonibus sub Eadgaro, Can. 60. where, among other particulars, we finde these words, pe læpað, &c. We teach that all priests shall blot out all superstitions of the Gentiles, and we forbid, pilpeop þunga, which word, from the sound of it (wilweorthunga) is there translated in Latine into fictas ad libitum adorationes, and in the margine a reference is made to ἐθελοθρησκία will-worship, Col. 2. But there is a mistake in that translation, which will be evident to any, by putting these two things together, 1. by comparing with this place an ancient Saxon penitential, which repeats those very Canons, where an ancient hand hath expounded those words, by fontis veneratio, the worship of wells, or well-worship, (the probability of which interpretation will be the greater, not only by observing that the Saxon word pil signifies a well or fountain, as frequently as it doth voluntatem, will, but also because in this present Canon he speaks of heathen worships of stones and trees, to which the rendring this of wells or fountains will be most agreeable) 2dly, by adding to this another Canon in that Penitential, l. 7. c. 22. where there is a prohibition against vowing or bringing almes or offerings to any well, or stone, or tree, or to any other creature, but only, in Gods name, to Gods Church, and when we consider how ordinary it was in former times to worship and bring offerings to wells and fountains, the reasonableness of such prohibitions will be acknowledged. Of which kind are divers injunctions to be seen, particularly in the office of Lincolne, of Oliver Sutton, against the worshipping of St Edwards well without S. Clements at Oxford, and S. Laurences well at Petroburg. So in a Saxon Homily of Bishop Lupus, speaking of vicious men, by the assault of tribulations brought to some sense of their estate, he saith that they suddainly, by the seduction of the Devil, vow their almes oðpontu pylla, oðpontu stane, &c. fol. 6. either to well or stone. And in another De Baptismo, fol. 20. he warnes them against Luxury, Adultery, Witchcraft, &c. and then addes nepeopðian ge pillaþ, &c. and worship not wells nor trees, &c. for all these are idle phantasmes of the Devil. But this by the way to prevent mistakings.

CHAP. III.

1. If therefore ye believe the resurrection of Christ and the advantages which come to you by it (among which is that Christian liberty from those abolished Judaical observations, c. 2. 21.) and if ye be after the example of Christ, truly risen also, become Christians indeed, there are then other cares much more material for you to be concerned in, the study and practice of a divine celestial life, such (for kind, though not degree) as Christ now lives, being by his resurrection placed next in glory to his father in heaven.

1. IF ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.]

2. Let this celestial purity be the copie for you to transcribe, and not these terrestrial grosser observances.

2. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth.]

3. For

3. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Chriſt in God.] 3. For ye by your baptiſme have vowed to put off your former life, and the life which now remains for you to live, is that which Chriſt lives in heaven; a life of purity here, and of glory hereafter.

4. When Chriſt who is our life ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in glory.] 4. And if you live that firſt pure Chriſtian life after your divine pattern, then this ye may be ſure of, that when Chriſt comes to judge the world, all that ſhall be found ſo like unto him ſhall by him be received into the glory which he himſelf enjoyes.

5. Mortifie therefore your members which are upon the earth, fornication, uncleanneſs, * inordinate affection, evil concupiſcence, and † covetouſneſs, which is idolatry:] 5. This may therefore engage you to ſubdue and bring down all thoſe vitious affections that are in your members; and that ſavour and deſire nothing but earthly things, I mean adultery, fornication, and all ſorts of unnatural filthineſs, ſuch as is ſo ordinary among idol-worſhippers, the fouleſt parts of it admitted into their religions. See note on Rom. 1. i. and on 1. Cor. 5. i.

* among ἐν οἷς

8. But now you alſo put off all theſe, anger, wrath, malice, † blaſphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.] 8. But now that you are Chriſtians, ye are obliged to put off all, not only theſe forenamed, but of the other ſort of affections, all ſuddain inflammation of anger, all riſing of it to any height, all continuance of it upon you, till it be improved into malice; and for the tongue, let not that be guilty of any unſavoury, unclean, or reproachfull diſcourſe.

10. And have put on the new man, which is renewed † a in knowledge, after the image of him that created him.] 10. Quite contrary to that ſtate of renovation which ye have undertaken, and which conſiſts in the practice of all Chriſtian vertues, after the image of God, who is all truth. a.

11. Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumciſion nor uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Chriſt is all, and in all.] 11. With whom as there is no partiality or difference put between men, but all of all ſorts, even the worſt ſorts, are accepted by Chriſt, ſo ought it be with us, toward all men, of what quality ſoever, we muſt ſhew all manner of fidelity, without any falſneſs or injuſtice (ver. 9.) toward them.

12. Put on therefore (as the elect of God, holy and beloved) bowels of * mercy, kindneſs, humbleneſs of mind, meekneſs, long-ſuffering,] 12. See therefore that ye practiſe (as becomes thoſe who are prized and valued by God, that have the gifts of his Spirit poured out for the converting and ſanctifying of you, and thereby are obliged to all that is moſt excellent) the higheſt degrees of Chriſtian kindneſs and liberality, that ye think very meanly of your ſelves, be very mild, hard to be provoked with injuries, never thinking of revenge, Shewing that readineſſe to be reconciled to them that have wronged you, that ye have found, and which it extremely concerns you to find in Chriſt toward you.

14. And above all theſe things put on charity, which is the b bond of perfectneſs.] 14. And over all put on that excellent Chriſtian grace of charity, that love of others, founded in Chriſt's love to you, and to all others, even his enemies, which will keep you united one to another in an indiſſoluble bond, much more perfectly than any other obligation can doe, or, which is the obligation to all mercifulneſs, whether in giving or forgiving. b.

15. And let the c peace of God † rule in your hearts, to the which alſo ye are called in one body, and be ye thankfull.] 15. And let Chriſtian peace and union (ſee Phil. 4. note b.) be the moderator and guide in all your actions, and doe all that may tend to that end, it being the prime thing to which your Chriſtianity obliges you, and your being fellow-members of Chriſt with all others: To which ye may alſo take in that obligation of gratitude to God, who hath been thus merciſull to you, and ſolemnly expects this return from you, to be to others as he hath been to you. c.

16. Let the word of God dwell in you richly in all wiſdome, teaching and admoniſhing one another in pſalms and hymns and ſpiritual ſongs, ſinging with grace in your hearts to the Lord.] 16. Let the doctrine of the Goſpel continue and abide in you, and bring forth abundant fruit in all actions of ſpiritual wiſdome, that is, piety. Of this ſort is the adviſing and admoniſhing of others in all things wherein ye can be helpfull unto them; and ſuch is ſinging, in a pious Chriſtian manner, (ſee Epheſ. 5. c) that is, bleſſing and praiſing God (ſee Mat. 14. c.) heartily and affectionately, in all the ſeverall waies uſual to that purpoſe (ſee Epheſ. 5. 19.)

17. And whatſoever ye doe in word or deed, doe all in the name of the Lord Jeſus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.] 17. And whatſoever ye doe or ſpeak, let it be with acknowledgment of the great mercies of Chriſt to you, that hath enabled you to doe whatever it is, and for this mercy reached out in him, let God the Father have the honour and thanks.

18. Wives, ſubmit your ſelves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.] 18. Let the wives pay fitting ſubjection to their husbands, and count it their Chriſtian duty to doe ſo.

19. Husbands love your wives, and be not bitter againſt them.] 19. And upon the ſame account let the husbands be kind to their wives, and not provoke them by unkind behaviour.

20. Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well-pleaſing unto the Lord.] 20. So again children are by their Chriſtianity ſo far from being ſet free from their obedience to their parents in any matter, that they are by that very relation obliged to it.

21. Fathers, d * provoke not your children to anger, leſt they be diſcouraged.] 21. The parents on the other ſide are taught their duty toward their children, not to rate or brawle with them, nor to reprove them cauſleſly, leſt that be a diſcouragement to them. d.

* give not ill words to your children

22. Servants, of what ſort ſoever, muſt pay obedience to thoſe which, according to the lawes of men, have the rule over them, and not pretend any liberty from Chriſt to doe otherwiſe, and their obedience muſt be performed ſincerely for conſcience ſake to God, and not only in thoſe things whereto the maſters eye can reach.

22. Servants, obey in all things your maſters according to the fleſh: not with eye ſervice as men-pleaſers, but in ſingleneſs of heart, fearing God.]

23. And in all your ſervices doe heartily and willingly what is required of you, without complaining or murmuring, knowing that your obedience to your maſters is a duty to God:

23. And whatſoever ye doe, doe it heartily, as † to the Lord, and not unto men:]

24. Knowing that of the Lord ye ſhall receive the reward of the inheritance, for ye ſerve the Lord Chriſt.]

25. As on the other ſide, he that doth any thing amiſſe againſt the law of Chriſt, whether ſervant toward maſter, or maſter toward ſervant, ſhall not eſcape puniſhment by being a Chriſtian, God ſhall deal with him according to the rules of juſtice, whatſoever he is, and neither favour the ſervants pretenſions againſt the maſter, nor the maſters againſt the ſervants.

25. But he that doth wrong, ſhall receive for the wrong that he hath done; and there is no reſpect of perſons.]

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν

V. 10. In knowledge] What εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν ſignifies here is ſomewhat uncertain. If the Preposition εἰς be taken by an Hebraiſme for ἐν in or by, then it denotes the means of working our renovation, the knowledge of the Goſpel, in which our pattern is ſet, according to which we are to form our lives for the future; and this is generally expreſſed by ἐπίγνωσις ἀληθείας the acknowledgment of the truth, 1 Tim. 2. 4. Tit. 1. 1. Heb. 10 26. But it is poſſible alſo that εἰς being taken in the proper notion of it, ἐπίγνωσις may be ſet in oppoſition, or by way of ſuperaddition, to γνῶσις knowledge, which the Gnoſticks boaſted of, and from whence they had their name, and with it joyned all vitious corrupt practices; whereupon he requires his Coloſſians to forſake thoſe ſins, and to be renewed to that which the Gnoſticks have not attained to, εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν to acknowledgment, or diſcerning, that is, the experimental, practical knowledge of Gods goodneſſe to us in regenerating (which is more then the firſt creating) us after his own image, to live according to the divine pattern which he hath ſet us.

b. Σύνδεσμος τελειότητος

V. 14. Bond of perfectneſſe] Σύνδεσμος τελειότητος, bond of perfectneſs, may be, by an hypallage, the moſt perfect bond. But it may be alſo bond of perfectneſs in that notion that perfect Mat. 5. 48. is all one with merciful Lu. 6. 36. for ſo the Chriſtian charity, that is a tranſcript of Chriſts love to us, is a conſpiration or meeting together (ſo σύνδεσμος may ſignifie, ſee Note on Act. 8. e.) of all mercifulneſs, or elſe an obligation to it.

c. Βραβεῖον

V. 15. Peace of God rule——] Βραβεῖον as it is an agoniſtical word for the ἐπινίκιος ἁμοιβὴ the reward of the Conqueror, hath been already ſpoken of. Hence the βραβευταὶ are the διοικηταὶ ἀγῶνος, they that adjudge and give this reward to thoſe to whom it belongs, the rulers or adminiſtrators of the combat, and they that decide all controverſies about it. Hence is the word uſed for διαλλακτὴς, ſaith Phavorinus, an umpire, or daies-man, that reconciles doubts or differences between any; and accordingly βραβεύετω, ſaith he, (referring, as I conceive, to this place) μεσιτευέτω, μεσιτέτω, διωκέτω. and ſo here, let the peace of God, that peaceable-mindedneſs that Chriſt commandeth you, Mat. 5. be the umpire to compoſe all differences between you and other men.

d. Ἐρεθισμα

V. 21. Provoke] Ἐρέθισμα is ὕβρεις, contumely, ſaith Phavorinus, and ἐρεθίζειν κακολογίαν ὑλοῖ παρ' Ὁμήρῳ it ſignifies evil ſpeaking in Homer, & πᾶς ἐρεθισμὸς ἐν χαλεποῖς μύθοις γίνεται δουῶν, it conſiſts in hard or bitter words. The word ſignifies contumelious, harſh language; and that is moſt likely to be the meaning here, becauſe of the mention of the ἀθυμῶσιν, that is here added, ſuch words in parents being apt to diſcourage children.

a. τὴν ἐκ Λαοδικείας

But if ἡ Λαοδικείας without ἐκ be the truer reading, then it muſt be rendred that of Laodicea, noting again ſome Epiſtle ſent to them, and in their poſſeſſion, according to that of the Civil law, L. ſi Epiſtolam, D. de acquir. Rer. domin. Literæ ejus ſunt cujus tabellario ſunt traditæ, multo magis ubi ſunt redditæ, An Epiſtle is his to whoſe meſſenger 'tis delivered, eſpecially when 'tis received by him. And ſo which way ſoever it is, it referres to ſome Epiſtle ſent to the Laodiceans, which Tertullian againſt Marcion ſeems to affirm of that Epiſtle which is now inſcribed to the Epheſians, that a copie of it was written to the Laodiceans, which, if it were done by S. Paul, is yet very reaſonable to imagine to be ſent from Epheſus to them. For Epheſus being the chief Metropolis of Aſia, and Laodicea being a Church within that circuit, as appears Rev. 1. 11. as the Epiſtle written to the Corinthians belonged to all the Churches of Achaia 2 Cor. 1. 1. and ſo no doubt was copied out and communicated to them, and as the letter from the Council of Jeruſalem to the Church of Antioch did belong alſo to all Syria and Cilicia, and was by Paul communicated to all the Churches thereof, Act. 16. 4. and as the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians are ſaid to belong alſo to Philippi, another Metropolis of Macedonia (and thereupon Polycarpe in his Epiſtle to the Philippians, mentions ἐπιστολαὶ Epiſtles in the Plural, which Paul had ſent to them, whereas there is but one now known to be inſcribed to the Philippians) and laſtly, as here the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians is expreſly directed to be communicated to the Laodiceans, and this to be ſent from Laodicea to Coloſſe ; ſo there is no difficulty to conceive that the Epiſtle to the Epheſians was by them communicated (as by Paul meant) to the Laodiceans alſo, and ſo may fitly be called ἡ Λαοδικείας, the Epiſtle of Laodicea, or which the Church of Laodicea had received.

b. Ἐπαφρᾶ τε Ἀρχίππῳ

V. 17. Archippus] It is the opinion of ſome that Epaphras was at this time Biſhop of Coloſſæ, but impriſoned at Rome with Paul, and that Archippus did now in his abſence ſupply his place. That Epaphras was about this time priſoner at Rome is concluded probably by Philem. 23 where he calls him Συναιχμάλωτον his fellow-priſoner, (for that that Epiſtle to Philemon and this were written from Rome about the ſame time will be conjectured by the naming Timothy at the beginning, and all the ſame perſons, (ſave onely Juſtus) as Epaphras, Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas, Lucas, at the end of both of them) but that he was then Biſhop of Coloſſæ appeareth not, onely he is here ſaid ver. 12. to be ἐξ ὑμῶν δοῦλος Χριστοῦ, one of them, or that came from them, a ſervant of Chriſt, that heartily prayed for, and had great kindneſs toward them. But all this may well belong to him as the perſon who, by Commiſſion from Paul, had preached the Goſpel to them, and ſo being their ſpiritual father might be allowed to love them paſſionately, and to be very ſolicitous of their proſpering. And then it will be more probable that Archippus ſhould be their Biſhop, of whom it is here affirmed, that he had received διακονίαν ἐν Κυρίῳ, a Miniſtry in the Lord: where it is certain that the διακονία miniſtry ſignifies an office in the Church, which he is to take care that he perform. And it is no way neceſſary, that it ſhould denote the inferior office of Deacon, (or if it did, that would not ſufficiently qualifie him to ſupply the Biſhops or Rulers place, whoſe attendant the Deacon was) but in a greater latitude the Epiſcopal function, which being an authority and preſidency over the flock, is yet, like that of a Paſtor, a laborious one, to attend and wait on them, as Chriſt, who being the Lord (Κύριος) of his diſciples, was yet as the ὁ διακονῶν he that miniſtred unto them, waſhing their feet, &c. and ſo καλὸν ἔργον, a good work, 1 Tim. 3. 1. that is, an office of task and miniſtry.

The

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

THat the Epiſtles to the Theſſalonians, though placed laſt of all thoſe which were written to whole Churches, were firſt in order of writing, hath been ſaid Note b. on the Inſcription of the Epiſtle to the Romans. And the time and place of writing this are perhaps diſcoverable, by comparing one paſſage 1 Theſſ. 3. 6. with Act. 18. 5. He had ſent Timothy from Athens to encourage and confirm them, c. 3. 1, 2. and that with ſome impatience to hear of them, v. 5. [And when Timothy now came to us from you, and told us the good newes of your faith and love, v. 6. we were comforted, &c.] Now the ſtory of this we have diſtinctly in the Acts; Paul had preached at Theſſalonica Act. 17. 2. and ſome of them, that is, of the Jewes in the Synagogue there, v. 1. and many others of the Gentile inhabitants v. 4. (referred to 1 Theſſ. 1. 10.) were perſwaded, that is, received the faith, v. 4. But upon a perſecution raiſed by others of the Jewes, and their Proſelytes, he, and Silas, (and Timotheus, it ſeems, v. 14.) were driven thence, and came to Beræa; and being followed thither by thoſe perſecuters, Paul went to the ſea, and from thence to Athens, v. 14, 15. and Silas and Timotheus, which are ſaid to be left at Beræa, c. 17. 14. are warned to make all haſte to him, v. 15. and at Athens Paul expects them v. 16. and though it be not mentioned in the ſtory, yet it is to be ſuppoſed that they came thither to him, and from thence were diſpatch'd to Theſſalonica. Paul being content to ſtay at Athens alone, out of his earneſt deſire to confirm them by this diſpatch, and to hear from them, which is the ſumme of ch. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. From Theſſalonica they return to him and find him at Corinth Act. 18. 5 (for that is the meaning of ἀπὸ Μακεδονίας there, from Macedonia, of which Theſſalonica was a Metropolis) and after this return of Timotheus it is that S. Paul writes this Epiſtle, for elſe he could not mention it, as he doth ch. 3. 6. And conſequently the place from whence this (and ſo alſo the other Epiſtle) was written to them, may moſt probably ſeem to be Corinth, where he is ſaid to have ſtayed a year and ſix months Act. 18. 11. Or if the ſubſcription be authentick which dates it from Athens, it muſt be at ſome other time of his being at Athens, and not at that, Act. 17. (before his coming to Corinth) Paul being gone from thence before Timotheus came to him. And this gives us an evidence by the way that Silas and Silvanus are all one; he that under the name of Silas is joyned with Paul, Act. 17. 4. and with Timotheus v. 15. being under the name of Silvanus joyned with Paul and Timotheus in the inſcription of this Epiſtle, Paul and Silvanus and Timotheus, &c. ch. 1. 1. By this alſo the time of the writing this is concluſible, viz. about his firſt preaching at Corinth, which is placed by Chronologers in the fiftieth year of Chriſt, at the time of the expulſion of the Jewes from Rome by Claudius (Act. 18. 2.) that is, in the ninth of his reign, as Oroſius concludes out of Joſephus. This being thus farre cleared, we cannot but diſcern the occaſion of writing this Epiſtle, viz. the perſecutions of thoſe that received the faith, and of Paul that preach'd it among them, which was brought upon them by the Jewes (and their Proſelytes) that believed not, in Theſſalonica, and through all Macedonia. He had, it ſeems, at the firſt preaching the Goſpel unto them, told them what they were to expect, very ſharp perſecutions (ch. 3. 4.) from the Jewes, and Judaizers their Proſelytes, exaſperated by them, but withall, he had adverriſed them what fate ſhould ſhortly befall theſe obdurate Jewes and their adherents, viz. that Chriſt ſhould act revenge upon them (in an eminent manner) from heaven, by that power by which he roſe from the dead, and then deliver them from the oppreſſions they were under, and all that their enemies malice or their own fears could repreſent unto them, c. 1. 10. and c. 2. 15, 16. and c. 5. 1. And this was the occaſion of all that he after ſaith, 2 Theſſ. 2. of the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the day of Chriſt, v. 1, 2, &c. of which ſaith he, v. 5. he had told them when he was with them. All which was exactly fulfilled in the perſecutions brought on the Chriſtians by the Jewes and Gnoſticks, and the deſtructions that ſoon after attended upon them. And this was by him very fitly inſiſted on about this time, Simon Magus having already (ſoon after the beginning of Claudius's reign, as Euſebius ſets it, l. 2. c. 12.) ſet himſelf up at Rome (and a ſtatue erected to him) as the ſupreme God, and ſo being already capable of the titles of ἀντικείμενος, and ὑπεραιρόμενος, &c. he that ſets himſelf up above all that is called God. But being by the preaching of Peter (mentioned by * Euſebius, † St. Jerome, and * Oroſius) put to ſhame, and his power extinguiſh'd there at that time, (ἡ τῶ Σίμωνος ἀπάτη ὑπὸ Πέτρου κηρύγματι καταλυθεῖσα δύναμις, ſaith Euſebius) it was ſome time before he got up again, and yet longer before theſe Gnoſticks his followers found it ſeaſonable to break out in profeſs'd hoſtility againſt the Orthodox Chriſtians, which is called the Revealing of this man of ſin, 2 Theſſ. 2. 3. What is ſaid in theſe Epiſtles on this ſubject, was fitly deſigned to confirm the believers in Macedonia, that the perſecutions which were thus ſtirred up among them, and the baits of carnality and worldly advantages offered them, might not delude or gain in upon them.

CHAP. I.

1. Paul the Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, and thoſe two, Silvanus and Timotheus, which came along with me, as companions and partners of my labours in Macedonia,

1. PAUL and Silvanus and Timotheus unto the Church of the Theſſalonians, which is in God the Father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; Grace be unto you, and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.]

to that Aſſembly of Chriſtians that reſide in and appertain to Theſſalonica, that Metropolis of Macedonia, which, by the grace of God and Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt preached by me, have been called and converted to the faith; we moſt kindly ſalute you, and wiſh all divine mercy and proſperity to you.

2. We give thanks to God alwaies for you all, making mention of you in our prayers,

3. Bleſſing God for that obedience which your faith, that induſtry which your love, that indurance and conſtancy which your hope in Chriſt hath wrought in you, ſuch as is acquired of you, and will be acceptable in the ſight of God:

3. Remembring without ceaſing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the ſight of God and our father:]

4. Knowing, my beloved brethren, the ſpeciall favour of God in decreeing to beſtow the Goſpel on you, to reveal Chriſt to you, being Gentiles, above that which you had reaſon to expect or hope.

4. Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God.]

5. In conſequence to which it was that I was appointed by God in a viſion, Act. 16. 9. to come and preach unto you, and accordingly I did, Act. 17. 1. and that with miracles and extraordinary gifts, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 2. a.) and matter of abundant conviction, as you know how we behaved our ſelves toward you, that we might work, and gain you to Chriſt.

5. * For our Goſpel came not unto you in word onely, but alſo in power and in the Holy Ghoſt, and in much † aſſurance, as ye know what manner of men we * were among you for your ſake.]

* that On

6. And ye very cheerfully and readily received us, being content to ſuffer as the Apoſtles and Chriſt had done before you, embracing the Goſpel, though accompanied with perſecution, with moſt Chriſtian joy.

6. And ye became † followers of us and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghoſt:]

† or imitators μιμηταὶ

7. And this in ſo eminent a manner, that your example had an happy influence, raiſed an emulation in all the Chriſtians of the other cities of Macedonia, and alſo of Greece; as Corinth, and Athens.

7. So that ye were enſamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.]

8. For from the plantation and good ſucceſs of the Goſpel among you it was, that many others in thoſe places were inclined to receive the faith, and ſo your converſion being ſo eminently taken notice of, I need ſay no more in praiſe or congratulation of it.

8. For from you ſounded out the word of the Lord, not onely in Macedonia and Achaia, but alſo in every place your faith to Godward * is ſpread abroad, ſo that we need not to ſpeak any thing.]

* hath gone forth ἐξελήλυθεν

9. Every man's mouth being full of it, how readily we were entertained by you, and how really and effectually ye converted from heatheniſme to Chriſtianity,

9. For they themſelves † ſhew of us, what manner of entring in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from Idols, to ſerve the living and true God,]

10. In full belief in Chriſt, and aſſurance of hope that Chriſt, that was by God's infinite power raiſed from the dead, will protect and deliver his faithfull ſervants from that vengeance which will finally and eternally involve all others: An eſſay of which vengeance and deliverance he will ere long ſhew on the perſecutors, and the believers which are now perſecuted by them.

10. And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raiſed from the dead, even Jeſus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.]

CHAP. II.

1. For ye, brethren, without my affirming it, know
a. ſufficiently that our coming and preaching was farre from being deceitfull, or to any treacherous aime of advantage or gain upon you.

1. FOR your ſelves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not * a in vain.]

* vain

2. But having had diſcouragements ſufficient at
b. Philippi, moſt reproachfully handled there, we yet took courage to proceed (ſee note on Joh. 7. a) and came to your city, and preached the Goſpel there, though we were very much oppoſed there alſo.

2. But even after that we had ſuffered before, and were ſhamefully intreated, as ye know, at Philippi, we were bold in our God to ſpeak unto you the Goſpel of God with much b contention.]

3. For my preaching the
c. Goſpel unto you was not to ſeduce any, nor to corrupt any, (as the Gnoſticks doe their converts) nor out of any wily worldly end or deſigne, to raiſe ſeditions, &c. as many of their falſe Chriſts had done:

3. For our † exhortation was not of c deceit, nor of uncleanneſs, nor in guile:]

† pleading παράκλησις

4. But as God was pleaſed to chooſe me to be an Apoſtle, to think me meet for ſo great a truſt, ſo have I endevoured to approve my ſelf to God in the diſcharge of it, not mentioning thoſe things to you which you were likely to be moſt pleaſed with (for I knew that the Goſpel, which coſt me ſo many perſecutions, would coſt you ſo too, and that, requiring all purity, it hath nothing in it gratefull to fleſh and blood) but thoſe which are moſt likely to approve us all to God, which approveth nothing but purity and ſincerity.

4. But as we * were allowed of God to be put in truſt with the Goſpel, even ſo we ſpeak, not as pleaſing men, but God, which trieth our hearts.]

* have been approv'd by God δεδοκιμάσμεθα ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ

5. For I believe no man
d. ever accuſed me of flattering
e. you with pleaſing doctrines (as the Gnoſticks doe) or of indulging to you any kind of inordinate luſt or filthineſs v. 3. (ſee note on Rom. 1. i.) This you know, and God is witneſs that I was farre from being guilty of it.

5. For neither at any time * d uſed we flattering words, as ye know, † nor a e cloak of covetouſneſs; God is witneſſe.]

* were we ſpoken of for flattering † nor accuſed of inordinate deſire

6. Neither did we deſire to
f. appear before you or others as perſons of any great authority, which yet we had, and might have exerciſed as Apoſtles of Chriſt.

6. Nor of men ſought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have * been f burthenſome as the Apoſtles of Chriſt.]

7. But

† her own children

7. But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth † her children:] 7. But I have still dealt with you in all mildness & tenderness imaginable, the same which is discernable in a nurse to a child, of which, by feeding and making much of him, she becomes extremely fond.

* being in love ἱμειρόμενοι † are willing

8. So * being g affectionately desirous of you, we † were willing to have imparted unto you, not the Gospel of God onely, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.] 8. In like manner I confesse my self to have an huge tenderness and fondness of love toward you, so that now having done you that greatest good, preached the Gospel to you, and nourish'd you up in the faith, I have nothing too dear for you, not my life it self, (which is frequently called the soul in these books, see note on ch. 5. f.) if it may stand you in any stead. g.

* toil and labour κόπον καὶ μόχθον

9. For ye remember, brethren, our * labour and travell: for labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the Gospel of God.] 9. An evidence of which I then gave you, and ye cannot but remember it, how that, beside the sufferings which I bare (see note b.) I always laboured in my trade extremely hard, that so I might preach the Gospel to you, and yet not put you to charges.

10. Ye are witnesses and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved our selves among you that believe:] 10. You, I say, know and can witness, and I doubt not of God's testimony, how I and the rest of us, Silvanus and Timothy, have behaved our selves toward you that have received the faith, in the performance of all duties toward God and man, so as we cannot be blamed or charged by any:

11. As you know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged every one of you, (as a father doth his children)] 11. Dealing with you as a father doth with his own children, every one of you single, as if every one of you were my child, calling upon you to doe your duty, and cheering you up to persevere against all discouragements,

12. That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdome and glory.] 12. And conjuring you by all the obligations imaginable, that your conversation should be some way proportionable to what God hath done for you in calling you to the honour and privilege of being Christians here, and, if you continue constant in the faith, glorified Saints in heaven.

* is accomplished among you

13. For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, † because when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but (as it is in truth) the word of God, which * h effectually worketh also in you that believe.] 13. And herein we have matter of continual joy and thanksgiving to God on your behalf, that when we thus preached the Gospel to you ye received it readily, not as any doctrine of ours, but as the Gospel of Christ sent by God from heaven, and which being thus embraced and believed by you, hath also attained that end, that perfection, that accomplishment among you, which every where belongs to it, viz. to bring on them that embrace it the honour of being persecuted for it, and glorifying God by that means, and withall to give them strength to enable them to bear it Christianly. h.

14. For ye, brethren, became followers of the Churches of God which in Judea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own i countrey-men, even as they have of the Jewes,] 14. For as it fell out with the Churches of Christ in Judea, all that believed and held fast to Christ have still been persecuted by the unbelieving Jewes, so hath it fallen out to you, your own countrey-men, the unbelieving Jewes among you, have in like manner persecuted you, as the Jewish unbelievers have persecuted the Christian Jewes. i.

15. Who both killed the Lord Jesus and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men,] 15. And this which I say of the Jewes in Judea was practised by them on Christ himself, and before him on the prophets sent unto them, Mat. 23. 37. and now is accordingly fallen on us: It being reasonable that they which have cast off obedience to God should persecute all men that come to tell them of their duty.

† hath come hastily upon them to the end, ἐφθασεν εἰς τέλος

16. Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles, that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath † is come upon them to the uttermost.] 16. And this generally is the ground of their quarrel to us, that, in spight of their prohibition, we preach to the Gentiles, use means that they might repent of their Idolatries, &c. by which, and the former things, the Jewes doe so fill up the measure of their sins, that the wrath of God, to the utter destruction of them, is now come out upon them, already denounced, and within a very little while most certain to overtake them.

* for some time, for a space, πρὸς καιρὸν ὥρας

† in person προσώπῳ

17. But we, brethren, being taken from you * for a short time † in presence, not in heart, endevoured the more abundantly to see your face with great desire.] 17. And being detained from coming to you personally, ever since I was first with you, and driven suddenly from you, Act. 17. 5, 10. we are nevertheless very kind to you, and heartily desire and wish for an opportunity of visiting you.

18. Wherefore we would have come unto you, (even I Paul) once and again, but Satan hindred us.] 18. And accordingly I Paul had once or twice a full resolution to visit you, but by some difficulty or other from time to time interposed by the instruments of Satan, the obstructors and persecutors of the Gospel, I was kept from coming unto you.

19. For what is our hope, our joy, our k crown of rejoicing? are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?] 19. For what greater matter of hope of a reward from God at the day of doom, and consequently of present rejoicing, can I have? what greater ornament of which I could boast, then the good successe of the Gospel which I have preached among you? k.

20. For ye are our glory and joy.] 20. For you are a prime congregation of Christians (as Philippi another, Phil. 4.1.) wholly converted by me, and observable for very great proficiency in the faith, and endurance of persecutions for it, and therefore I cannot but rejoice, and even boast of you.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Καινὴ

V. 1. In vain] The word κενὸς empty, idle, vain, is known to be proportionable to the Hebrew רִיק, which (in the third Commandement and many other places) being rendred vain doth yet signifie false, viz. empty or void of truth. And so here being applied to S. Pauls εἴσοδον entrance unto them, that is, his first preaching the Gospel to them, it doth not signifie the uneffectualnesse of it, or want of successe among them, for that he had spoken of c. 1. 9. but, as the consequents here manifest, the fallaciousnesse or treacherousnesse of his aime in coming, which that it was not imputable to him he here proves v. 2. by remembring them of the entertainment which he found at Philippi, very farre from such as would encourage a worldly designer from going any farther, nothing but persecution and tribulations: and then ver. 3. he expressly addes to this matter, ἡ παράκλησις ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐκ πλάνης, Our exhortation was not out of deceit, or that I might deceive.

b. Ἀγών — V. 2. Contention] The word ἀγὼν, strife or contention, may be taken in an Active or in a Passive sense, that is, either for labour, or sufferance, both in an high degree. In the former sense it is, when Christ commands us ἀγωνίζεσθε, to strive to enter in at the straight gate, that is, to be very diligent and industrious. In the latter it is Heb. 12. 1. being joyned with ὑπομονὴ sufferance, and persevering, and afflictions, mentioned before c. 11. and after v. 2, &c. so Phil. 1. 30. and Col. 1. 29. where ἀγωνιζόμενος striving, is bearing, suffering afflictions, and so more fit to be joyned with κοπῷ toyling, or suffering hardship, there; for so κόπος signifies, the toile, or pains, in bearing, as μόχθος in doing ver. 9. So 1 Tim. 4. 10. where we ordinarily read ὀνειδιζόμεθα suffer reproaches, the Kings MS reads ἀγωνιζόμεθα we combat, that is, suffer persecutions, (which is joyned with κοπιῶμεν also) which they that doe, doe it in hope, and trust in the living God, which can and will reward all their sufferings. And this is agreeable to the nature of the agones, combats, or games, among the Grecians, whereof the Poet saith, it is made up of doing and suffering both. And so we have ἄθλησιν παθημάτων combat of sufferings Heb. 10. 32. and of the women Phil. 4. 3. αἵτινες ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ συνήθλησάν μοι, which combated, or contended, that is, suffered persecutions, together with me in the Gospel. And so here it is to be taken in this latter sense, though that also added to the former, endurance and diligence both great industry and labour in preaching the Gospel to them, and withall great persecution for so doing. For so it is in the beginning of the verse, προπαθόντες καὶ ὑβρισθέντες, sufferings and contumelious reproachfull usage, such are scourgings, &c. and thus Phil. 1. 30. τὸν αὐτὸν ἀγῶνα, the same combat, is the enduring persecution, expressed by συναθλοῦντες τῇ πίστει ver. 27. the word used in the agones. So 2 Tim. 4. 7. the fight, or combat, seems to referre to that which he had then lately past through at Rome, before Nero's tribunal, v. 16, 17.

Κόπος Μόχθος

Multa tulit fecitque——

c. Πλάνη — V. 3. Deceit] That πλάνη, which signifies deceit, errour, is used not only Passively for being deceived by others, but especially Actively for deceiving and seducing others, will appear at large, Note on Jude f. And so also that in the Epistles it referres especially to these grand seducers that were then a-foot, so rise in the Churches, the Gnosticks, whose heresie being accompanied with so much uncleanness and carnality, wheresoever the πλάνη or seduction is joyned with words that expresse or intimate that, there is great reason thus to interpret it. Thus Theophylacts gloss intimates, οὐκ ἀκάθαρτόν τι διδάσκω, saith he, διὰ τὰ τῶν μάγων καὶ γοήτων, I teach not any impurity, such as are the doctrines or practices of the Magi and Sorcerers. And accordingly here ἀκαθαρσία uncleanness (and that word signifies all manner of unnatural lusts) being subjoyned to πλάνη deceit, or seduction, it must be thought to referre to these practices of those seducing hereticks, to whom S. Paul desireth to oppose his own dealing among them, at once vindicating his own simplicity and uprightness, and accusing them for the contrary. He came meerly to convert them from all the villanies that they, while they were Idolaters, had lived in, and doing so, suffered great hardship of persecutions; but they (which took sure care not to be persecuted) infused into them all false heretical doctrines and corrupt practices, uncleanness and villany. They slily stole in ἐν δόλῳ in cunning, but he παῤῥησιάζόμεθα v. 2. took all boldnesse and confidence to preach publickly the Gospel unto them.

d. Λόγος — V. 5. Used we flattering——] Λόγος signifies talk, discourse of men, and so ἐν λόγῳ εἶναι to be on the tongues of men, and ἐν λόγῳ κολακείας γενέσθαι, to be talked of for flattery, to be accused by men for this fault.

Λόγος

Ib. Cloke of covetousnesse] Πρόφασις signifies not only an occasion and pretence, but also an accusation, or charge, against any. So saith Phavorinus, Πρόφασις, αἰτία; ἀφορμὴ, 'tis a charge, an occasion, against any; and again, Περιτεινόμενος ἐν προφάσει λόγου ὅτι κατηγορία τινὸς, a long specious oration in accusation of any man: & therefore the rendring Προφασίζω by λατινισὶ ἐκκύσω, may be a false print for ἀκκύσω accuso; for that will best agree with Περιβάλλομαι, ὑπολογίζομαι, ὑπονοῶ, words that note accusing and suspecting, that went before. And so again, πρόφασις ἢ ἀληθὴς ἢ ψευδὴς αἰτία, it is either a true or false accusation. So προφασιστικοὶ λόγοι עלילות דברים are clancular depravings of men's reputations, raising suspicions of them: so Dan. 6. 4. ἐζήτουν πρόφασιν εὑρεῖν κατὰ τοῦ Δανιὴλ, they sought some occasion, that is, accusation, against Daniel. As for the πλεονεξία that is joyned with it, that signifies sometimes unnatural lusts and filthiness, as hath been formerly shewed, Note on Rom. 1. h. and so it seems to signifie here and to answer ἀκαθαρσία uncleanness, v. 3. so notorious among the Gnosticks, which were the pest of Christianity at that time.

e. Πρόφασις — Πλεονεξία

V. 6. Burthensome] Βάρος weight is here taken for the censures of the Church, the exercise of that Apostolical authority and severity; so 2 Cor. 10. 10 ἐπιστολαὶ βαρεῖαι letters that had a great deale of weight, that is, severity, threatning of censures, &c. and so ἐν βάρει εἶναι to light heavy upon them, to use severity toward them (which some desired to seem to doe out of vanity and ambition:) and is here set opposite to the ἐγενήθημεν ἤπιοι, we became gentle, the tender usage of a nurse v. 7. and the spirit of meekness, 1 Cor. 4. 21.

f. Βάρος

V. 8. Affectionately desirous] Theophylact is so peremptory for another reading in this place, ὁμειρόμενοι, in stead of ἱμειρόμενοι, that I cannot but set it down, Ὁμειρόμενοι ὑμῶν, saith he, τουτέστι περισκελεμένοι ὑμῖν, καὶ ἐχόμενοι ὑμῶν, παρὰ τὸ ὁμοῦ καὶ τὸ εἴρω τὸ συμπλέκω. The phrase ὁμειρόμενοι ὑμῶν, signifies bound, or close, or near, to you, from the word ὁμοῦ together and εἴρω which signifies to bind together; adding that some have read it ἱμειρόμενοι for ἐπιθυμοῦντες desiring, οὐκ ἔστι δὲ but that it is not so. If his meaning be that ἱμειρόμενοι doth not so signifie, I suppose his authority will not prevaile against the known use of the word, and the expres Glossarie of Hesychius, Ἱμείρεται, ἐρᾷ, ἐπιθυμεῖ, ποθεῖ, it signifies to love, to desire. But if his meaning be that ἱμειρόμενοι is not the right reading, then unless we know what copies he had to authorize that confidence, there will be no reason to consent to it, and yet as little cause to make a controversie of it, the sense being either way the same, the word ὁμοίεγνται rendred by Hesychius just as ἱμείεγνται is: for so in him all that we find of that word is, Ὁμειρόμενοι ὁμοίεγνται, ἐπιθυμοῦσιν, it signifies to desire, as the other before had done.

g. Ἱμειρόμενοι

V. 13. Effectually worketh] That ἐνεργεῖται is to be rendred in a Passive not Active sense, and that it signifies τελειοῦται to be perfected, or accomplished, hath been largely shewn, Note on Gal. 5. b. But to what the accomplishment of the word, or Gospel, here referres particularly, must be concluded from v. 14. There the proof is set down of that which is here affirmed, and that with the particle For, ὑμεῖς γὰρ For you, &c. and therefore in all reason that must interpret this. Now that which is there mention'd is the Thessalonians suffering persecution after the manner that other Christians had done before them, which as it is an evidence of their constancy in the faith, so is that of their proficiency to the highest degree of perfection which this life is capable of. And besides, it being foretold by Christ, that they which will receive the faith, and live according ding to his prescriptions, shall suffer persecutions, their sufferings are a completion of that word of his.

h. Ἐνεργεῖται

i. Συμφυλέτης

V. 14. Countrey-men] Συμφυλέτ) men of the same tribe, or race, or countrey, with the Thessalonian Christians, to whom he writes, may not be resolved to be the heathen inhabitants of that city or country, but the unconverted Jewes which were dispersed there. For at the Apostles coming to that city, Act. 17. the first thing we read of there, is a synagogue of the Jewes, v. 1. thither Paul went unto them, that is, to the Jewes, and preached Christ unto them, and some of them received the faith, and of devout Greeks, or Gentile Proselytes, a great multitude, &c. v. 4. And immediatly the unbelieving Jews, making use of the officers of the courts of the city, raised a tumult against them, v. 5. and the Apostle and Silas escaping, they seised upon Jason and other brethren, that is, Christians, that had received the faith, and haled them to the magistrates of the city, and accused them for doing contrary to Cæsars orders, v. 7. And so the persecution thus early begun at Thessalonica, was evidently by the Jewes which received not the faith, against the Jewes and Proselytes which received it: and these Jewes of Thessalonica were so zealous in the matter, that as soon as they heard of the receiving the faith at Berœa, they went thither, and solicited the multitude there against them, v. 13. And so there is no question but the ἴδιοι συμφυλέται their countreymen, that are here spoken of, are the Jewish inhabitants of Macedonia, and particularly of Thessalonica; and accordingly that they may not think it strange, that they should thus be used by those of their own nation, he gives them the example of the unbelieving Jewes in Judæa that had persecuted the Christians there, as before they had crucified Christ himself, &c. v. 15. And their special quarrel to the Apostles was, that they preached to the Gentiles, v. 16. for which and all other their obstinacy he foretels the wrath of God upon them, and their utter destruction approaching v. 16. That in this persecution at Thessalonica some were dead, and others so evill handled that there was need of this Epistle to comfort them for those that were fallen, and confirm them, by foretelling them the approach of Christs coming to relieve the constant sufferers, and to destroy the persecutors, and those that cowardly fell off to them, will appear, c. 4. 13. and 5. 1. &c.

k. Στέφανος

V. 19. Crown] A crown was an attire or dressing for the head, and so is mentioned Ezech. 16. 12. together with jewels on the forehead, and ear-rings in the eare, and so Ezech. 23. 42. bracelets upon their hands, and crowns upon their heads: not that this was an Ensign of Majesty peculiar to Kings, but the name of an ornament worn by others, both men, as the Sabeans, Ezech. 23. 42. and women, as in that description of the Jewish nation by a woman c. 16. So the Misna makes mention of Crowns that Bridegroomes and Brides were wont to wear. The Bridegroomes was of Gold, or gilt, or painted, or of Roses or Myrtle, or Olives, and so the Brides also, Gemara Hierosol. ad tit. Sota c. 9. But these interdicted by the Jewes about the time of Vespasian, saith the Misna tit. Sota, c. 9. Of these there is also frequent mention among the heathens, στέφος γαμήλιον a nuptial crown, in Bions Epitaph of Adonis, & in Libanius Declam. 8. speaking of nuptial rites οὐκ ἐστεφανούμην; was I not crowned? But as of all other ornaments so of this it must be observed that they were either of every days use (unlesse days of fasting and mourning) or for extraordinary or festival days (in like manner as there was an every days anointing unlesse upon days of humiliation) Mat. 6. and the oile of gladnesse or festival oile, Psal. 45. 7) and the latter of these is in those places of Ezechiel called a beautiful crown, and here στέφανος καυχήσεως a crown of boasting, that is, either of rejoycing or festivity, as rejoycing and boasting is all one, (such we know, was the nuptial crown, wherewith his mother is said to have crowned Solomon in the day of the gladnesse of his heart, Cant. 3. 11.) or of boasting, as that sounds literally, such as are the special kinds of ornament, wherein one is set out most pompously and magnificently, so as vain-glorious persons adorn themselves.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

1. WHerefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone;]

1. And therefore being no longer able to bear the want and desire of seeing or hearing of you, I resolved to deprive my self of Timothies company, and to stay alone at Athens a City in Greece,

2. And sent Timotheus our brother and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the Gospel of Christ, [to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith;]

2. To settle you in the doctrine of the Gospel, which we had planted among you, and to comfort you against all the tribulations which were befallen you for the profession of the faith of Christ;

3. That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for your selves know that we are appointed thereunto.]

3. To keep you from being discouraged or falling off by reason of these afflictions, by putting you in mind of what I am sure you know already, that this is to be looked for by all true believers, the Gospel being the covenant of the Crosse, and so nothing in it strange, that God should determine to permit, and not to restrain the malice of wicked men, but leave Christians to be exercised by them.

4. For verily when we were with you we told you before, that we should suffer tribulation, even as it came to passe, and ye know.]

4. For of this at our first preaching the Gospel to you we advertised you, that afflictions are the Christians portion: And it hath accordingly come to passe, and so you have the experimental knowledge of it.

† not forbearing any longer μηκέτι στέγων

5. For this cause † when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter have [a] tempted you, and our labour be in vain.]

5. And therefore the occasion of our late sending of Timothy was to see whether you continued constant, or whether the devil and the world bringing persecutions upon you for the faith, had wrought upon you by those temptations, and so all our labour in planting the faith were cast away and lost upon you.

6. But now when Timothy came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us as we also to see you:]

6. And now he at his return telling us that joyfull news of your constancy in the faith, and of your love to God casting out all fear of persecution, and that your kindnesse to me continues, and that you are as desirous to see me, as I to visit you:

[a] or, your, for the King's MS. reads ἡμῶν

7. Therefore brethren we were comforted over you in all [a] our affliction and distresse by your faith.]

7. This was matter of extream joy to us in the midst of our afflictions, afflictions, or in the midſt of yours, that though the Goſpel had brought perſecution and diſtreſſe upon you, yet you continue faithfull and conſtant in deſpight of all.

b. 8. For whatſoever befall us, we have matter of exceeding joy, Joh. 14. 19. ſuch as if a man ſhould return to life again, ſee Pſal. 22. v. 26.

8. For now we [b] live, if ye ſtand faſt in the Lord.]

9. For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your ſakes before God,

10. once more be able to viſit you, and complete or fill up thoſe things which are neceſſary to your faith (ſee Mar. 12. 6.) and perſeverance in it.

10. Night and day praying exceedingly, that we might [ſee your face, & might perfect that which is lacking in your faith?]

11. give us a ſpeedy journey

11. Now God himſelf and our father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt [† direct our way] unto you.

† make ſtraight κατευθύναι

12. And the Lord make you to increaſe and abound in love one towards another, and towards all men, even as we doe towards you:

13. Which is the ſure means of obtaining that grace from God which may preſerve you pure and holy, ſo as may be acceptable before him, who is both our God and our father, at that great day now approaching to the deſtruction of the obdurate unbelievers, and reſcue of the faithfull, which is one coming of Chriſt with his Angels (ſee Jud. 4.) and ſo in like manner at the dreadfull day of doome.

13. To the end he may eſtabliſh your hearts unblameable in holineſſe before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt with all his * Saints.]

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Πειράζειν

V. 5. Tempted] It is ordinary in the Scripture-dialect for Verbs to ſignifie, beſide the action or paſſion noted by them, the effect which is conſequent thereto. Of Paſſives it hath been noted at large, Note on Mat. 11. b. And of Actives there want not examples, eſpecially in this one word πειράζειν which now we ſpeak of. For to tempt doth ordinarily ſignifie no more then to offer temptations, to propoſe, or ſuggeſt, thoſe objects, which if the man reſiſt and reject, are matter of vertue in him: but having tempted here, ſignifies evidently, having brought them unto ſinne, that is, wrought upon them, corrupted them by temptations; for otherwiſe his labour in preaching the Goſpel to them would not become vain by that means. So when God is ſaid to give men to Chriſt, Joh. 6. 37. the meaning is, that by Gods preventing and preparing grace, they do effectually come to Chriſt, receive and embrace the Goſpel.

V. 8. Live] To live, beſide the literal notation of it, ſignifies alſo to be cheerfull, or merry, to rejoyce. So Pſal. 22. 26. your heart ſhall live for ever, which is a conſequent of eating and being ſatisfied, & praiſing God. So Joh. 14. 19. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo. In the firſt place it is literally taken for Chriſts reſurrection, but in the ſecond for their rejoycing, ſuch as was cauſed by the recovery of a friend from death to life, (& theſe joyned by the figure ἀνταπόδοσις obſerved on Mat. 8. Note k) And this is ordinary in all languages, Hebrew, Greek and Latine. And ſo here it is evidently uſed, we live, if, &c. that is, it is matter of infinite joy to us; and accordingly it follows, as an expreſſion of exultancy, For what thanksgiving can we return for all the joy, &c. b. ζῆν

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IV.

1. Now, my brethren, by all the kindneſſe which you bear to us, we intreat you, and by all the obligations that the Chriſtian faith lays upon you, and the care of your own eternal welfare, we adviſe you, in the preſence of God, that ye walk exactly by the rule that is ſet you, and daily improve and grow in that piety which is already in you,

1. Furthermore then we beſeech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jeſus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk, and to pleaſe God,

† here the Kings Mr. adds καθὼς καὶ περιπατεῖτε even as ye alſo walk

† ſo ye would abound more and more.]

2. According to the ſtrict commands to this purpoſe which we gave you in our firſt preaching to you.

2. For ye know what commandments we gave you, by the Lord Jeſus.]

3. For this is punctually required of you by Chriſt under the Goſpel, that ye ſhould preſerve your ſelves in chaſtity or perfect purity from the ſinnes of the fleſh, of what kind ſoever:

3. For this is the will of God, even your * ſanctification, that ye ſhould abſtain from fornication:]

*purification ἁγιασμὸς

a. 4. Every one by ſtudy, and by exerciſe or practice, to learn and enable himſelf moſt ſtrictly to preſerve himſelf in perfect chaſtity, in a married or ſingle life;

4. That every one of you ſhould know how to poſſeſſe [a] his veſſell in ſanctification and honour;]

5. Not in any vile unnatural practices, as for want of knowledge of the true God the Gentiles doe.

5. Not in the † luſt of concupiſcence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:]

† paſſion of luſt πάθει ἐπιθυμίας

b. 6. Not to yield to irregular inordinate luſt, to commit filthyneſſe with his fellow Chriſtian in thoſe things that are not to be mentioned plainly; for as theſe are the ſins that on Sodom, on the nations, and in all times on thoſe Gentiles God hath puniſhed ſeverely with utter exciſion, ſo is the like ſtill to be expected on all that are guilty of ſuch villanies, as I have formerly aſſured and warned you.

6. * That no man [b] goe beyond and defraud his brother in any matter, becauſe that the Lord is the avenger of all ſuch, as we alſo have forewarned you and teſtified.]

*Not to exceed or be inordinate in a matter with his brother

7. And accordingly you muſt reſolve that Chriſtianity is far from giving liberty for unnatural uncleanneſſe, it is on the contrary an obligation to all the purity imaginable.

7. For God hath not called us unto uncleanneſſe, but unto holineſſe.]

8. And he that deſpiſeth theſe commands of ours in this

8. He therefore that deſpiſeth, deſpiſeth not man, but God, who hath alſo given unto us his holy Spirit.]

this matter, given by me from Christ, ver. 2. as speciall parts of the Christian faith, and indulgeth to those contrary sins, he despiseth the commands, and provoketh the displeasure and wrath of God, and sinneth against that sanctifying Spirit which God giveth to believers.

9. But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you: for ye your selves are † [c] taught of God to love one another.]

† the taught of God to the loving of one another

9. And as to that of purity from all the impure infusions of the Gnostick heretick, so for charity and peaceableness: (out of which they are as likely to seduce you, and infuse malice and bitterness against all orthodox Christians) this I need not inlarge on by Epistle, there being nothing to which the Christian faith more engages you then this, and your having received the faith makes it superfluous for me to exhort you to it; this is an inseparable effect of that, and that which hath been actually impressed on you. c

10. And indeed ye doe it towards all the brethren, which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more;]

10. And accordingly your practice hath been toward all your fellow Christians in Macedonia, there hath been unity and peace in all those Churches: Onely I exhort you to increase every day more and more in this grace,

11. And that ye *study to be quiet, and to doe your own business, and to work with your own hands (as we commanded you,)]

*contend φιλοτιμεῖσθαι

11. And to be as earnest to exceed all others in quietness and peaceableness, as the most ambitious are to get the greatest honours, or the most factious to contend and make debate, and not to meddle with other mens matters, but every man to follow diligently the business of his calling, as when I was with you I commanded you,

12. That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing.].

12. That by spending your time in honest labour, you may both preserve your reputation entire among the Gentiles, (who will have an ill opinion of Christianity, if it make men idle) and that you may earn so much by your labour, as may supply all your wants and necessities.

13. But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them that [d] are asleep, that ye sorrow not even as † others which have no hope.]

† the rest οἱ λοιποὶ

13. As for the state of the dead (those especially that have fallen under the persecutions brought upon you by the unbelieving Jews (see note on c. 2. i.) for your receiving and maintaining the Faith) wherein by your excesse of sorrow it seems you want advice, I must exhort you to moderate that passion, and not to behave your selves as they that believe not any resurrection or reward for their sufferings in an other life. d

14. For if we believe that Jesus dyed and rose again, even so them also which sleep * in Jesus will God bring with him.

* through διὰ

15. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep.]

14, 15. For upon our belief of Christ's death and resurrection depends also the raising of their bodies that dye for the testimony, or by occasion of the faith of Christ, and that so certainly and speedily, that they that doe not dye at all shall at the day of judgement have no advantage of them whose bodies have lain in the graves so many years, the rising of the one being in the same twinkling of an eye, 1 Cor. 15. 52. with the change of the other who are found alive.

16. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first:]

16. For this shall be the method of it, Christ shall come from heaven, and the Archangel that hath other Angels under him shall call them, to be ready at the presence of the Judge, summon all the world to appear before him, assembling them as with a shout, or a voice, or a trumpet, every of them used to call assemblies together, and to summon them to appear before tribunals, (see Psal. 47. 5, 8. Jer. 4. 5. and 6. 1.) And then first all the bodies of all pious men that ever were in the world shall rise out of their graves;

17. Then we which are alive, and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the aire: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.]

17. And in the very moment that that is done, all that are alive on earth, as we now are, shall be carried by the Angels into the clouds, there to meet Christ, and appear before him to eternal blisse, shall never part from Christ again, but enjoy his presence for ever.

18. Wherefore comfort one another with these words.]

18. This consideration is certainly sufficient to yield you matter of comfort and support in the death of any that is neareſt to you, and to assure you, that Christ's promise of delivering the persecuted is no whit lesse performed to them that die under the persecutions, then to them that live to see their persecutors destroyed, which shall now ere long come to passe. See ch. 2. 16.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ

V. 4. His vessel] It is the conceit of a learned man that σκεῦος ἑαυτοῦ, his own vessel, here signifies his lawful or proper wife: But there is no example nor analogie for this interpretation, unlesse that the wife is elsewhere called the weaker vessel, 1 Pet. 3. 7. But that supposes the man to be a vessel too, and concludes no peculiarity of that title to the woman, but onely that she is the weaker. The wives are indeed by some called ἄρουρα ὑμῶν your fields, in Demetrius Cydonius, by others ναστὸς ὑμῶν your dwelling, in Euthymius Zygabenus; but no where σκεῦος vessel. And indeed the Context doth otherwise incline it to denote the mans own body. For that which is opposed, v. 5. to this possessing his own vessel with chastity and honour, is πάθος ἐπιθυμίας, the passion of lust, that is, inordinate lust, as the Gentiles, &c. Now those Gentile impious unnatural practices were not peculiarly opposed to conjugal chastity, but simply to chastity or purity, whether in marriage or out of marriage. And to that best agrees the notion of his own vessel, as it signifies his own flesh, his own body. Now the word σκεῦος signifying simply an utensil, or instrument of use, (see Mat. 21. Note b.) the body being the great utensil or instrument of the mind, is fitly so called. Thus Barnabas in his Epistle calls the body of Christ σκεῦος τοῦ πνεύματος, the vessel, or utensil, of the Spirit; and so the Jewes call the body כְּלִי an instrument, and the Greek σκεῦος is very near that, onely the first σ abundant. This possessing, or (as κτᾶσθαι signifies sometimes in the idiome of these Writers) preserving or keeping (Luk. 21. 19.) the body in purity and honour, is the perfect chastity either in cœlibacy or the conjugal state, in opposition to all those unnatural lusts which are called πάθη ἀτιμίας Rom. 1. 26. dishonourable affections, the basest, vilest submissions imaginable; and the same is here called πάθος ἐπιθυμίας, which makes it not improbable that that should be read ἀτιμίας also, but however it signifies the same thing, inordinate desires, or lusts. And to this also agrees that which follows v. 6. See Note b.

V 6. Goe beyond] Ὑπερβαίνειν is a general word to signifie transgressing of the due limits in any thing; b. Ὑπερβαίνειν ὑπερβαίνειν ὁρκίσια, to goe beyond the bounds, παράβασις ὅρκων transgressing of oaths and obligations, saith Hesychius; and when the close of Hesiods ἔργα καὶ ἡμ. is,

——ὑπερβασίας ἀλεύεινων, that is, saith Proclus, ἐκκλίνειν τὰς παραβάσεις τῆ ὀρθῆ καὶ καλῆ σκοπῆ. to avoid all deviations from the right and good mark, and so in Phocylides,

——μὴ γὰρ ὑπερβῆς,

and

——ὑπερβασίη δ' ἀλεγεινῆ, mischievous transgressing. This being applied to matters of uncleanness (as appears v. 7. and by the modest, civil expression of ἐν τῷ πράγματι, in a matter, and by the addition of πλεονεκτεῖν, which hath formerly been explained to belong to inordinacy, or unnatural lusts) will be concluded most probably to signifie those filthinesses which exceed the bounds and law of nature. Hence perhaps it is that Hesychius hath rendred Ὑπερβασις, ὕβεις, contumely, in that notion of the word wherein Clemens in his Pædagogus l. 2. cites it, ἀδ' ἐπ' ἄρρενα & ὕβειν, &c. that dishonourable, villanous practice here mentioned, v. 5. And thus we find ἀνδροβασία used by Epiphanius of the Gnosticks, πᾶν εἶδος ἀνδροβασιῶν καὶ λαγνειῶν ὁμιλιῶν πρὸς γυναῖκας, &c. And to this purpose it may perhaps be farther observable that the Hebrew בא or בוא from whence is the Greek βαῶ or βάω (the old word from whence the rest of the tenses of βαίνω come) doth in the Old Testament signifie the husbands companying with the wife, and is rendred going in unto her, and accordingly βαίνειν and ὑπερβαίνειν are by humane Authors used in that sense, applied to other creatures. Aristot. Hist. Animal. l. 5. cap. 14. speaking of an Elephant, Βαίνει πάντε ἐτῶν ἢ ἐξ ὧν, and in Homer, Odyss. Ψ. and ἀναβαίνουσιν ὅτε τὰς μητέρας οἱ ἵπποι, Arist. Histor. Animal. l. 6. c. 12. And to the same sense βαλδίζειν and in Cicero the Latine batuere. Another ordinary notion there is, wherein these two words ὑπερβαίνειν and πλεονεκτεῖν, which are here used together, doe agree, viz. to denote superiority or being in a more eminent degree. So saith Chrysostome of the Bishops superiority above Presbyters in the point of Ordination, Τῇ χειροτονίᾳ μόνῃ ὑπερβεβήκασι, καὶ τούτῳ μόνον δοκοῦσι πλεονεκτεῖν, In this they exceed, or have more power. But this notion being by the Context rendred unappliable to this place, will onely signifie, that these two words being of the same importance in other things, may probably be so in this matter also, wherein πλεονεξία is so visibly used in these Sacred writings for unnatural, unclean excesses. See Ephes. 5. 5. Theophylact, though he acknowledge the phrase to belong to matters of uncleanness, and so interprets ἐν τῷ πράγματι, ἐν μίξει, yet thinks it belongs peculiarly to μοιχεία adultery, which, saith he, is here fitly called πλεονεξία and παράβασις (I suppose it should be read ὑπέρβασις, that it may be answerable to ὑπερβαίνειν) because God, saith he, hath allowed every man his wife, καὶ ὅρους τέθεικε τῇ φύσει, and defined bounds to nature, τοῦτῳ μίξιν τοῦ πρὸς μίαν γυναῖκα ἐκείνῳ, that he should content himself with that one woman, and he that doth not, he may properly be said to exceed, and to desire inordinately, καὶ πάντα καὶ ἀδελφῷ, and this peculiarly against, or to the wronging of his brother. But the sin here mentioned being a specification of what was meant by πάθος ἐπιθυμίας, and an instance of the practice of the heathens that knew not God, v. 5. and presently attended with Gods being an avenger of all such things, v. 6. it will not so reasonably be restrained to adultery, but be taken for those foul sins for which the Gentiles mysteries were so famous, and for which Gods judgments remarkably fell upon them, and must in like manner be expected to fall on Christians that are guilty of them. To these S. Chrysostome applies the phrase, Tom. 11. p. 24. l. 13. πᾶν γὰρ ὑπερβαῖνον τὸν παρὰ Θεοῦ πεπηγότας νόμους, τῶν ἀλλοκότων ἐπιθυμεῖ καὶ ἃ νενομισμένων, He that exceeds the laws set by God, desires strange and not regular things. I shall here adde, how the Bishops of our Church in the daies of Henry 8. thought fit to interpret or paraphrase this place, in the book named A necessary Doctrine and erudition for any Christen man, in the discourse of Matrimony, where falling on mention of this text of Scripture, they thus expresse this part of it, that no man should craftily compass and circumvent his brother to obtain his fleshly lusts: where it is evident what they understood by the whole phrase, particularly by ἐν τῷ πράγματι, to obtain his fleshly lusts, agreeably to what we have here noted.

V. 9. Taught of God] The word Θεοδίδακτος is all one with διδακτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ the taught of God Joh. 6. 45. of which see there Note d. Yet some difference there is. There Θεὸς is peculiarly God the Father, as appears v. 37. 39, 44, 65. and so the taught of God are the followers, disciples of him, who as being first such, (having that honest heart which hath alwaies been taught them by God, and by his preventing grace wrought in them, and accepted by him) doe, when Christ is revealed to them, constantly receive and entertain him: But here Θεὸς, God, seems rather to signifie Christ speaking of that which was not in them till they were Christians, viz. brotherly love, at least was taught them and required of them most eminently by Christianity. (Thus in the Epistle of Pope Gregory the ninth to the University of Paris about Aristotles works, nec Philosophos se ostentent, sed satagant fieri Theodidacti; Let them not boast that they are Philosophers, but let them be content that they are, or endeavour to be, Gods scholars, that is, Christians, instructed by the tractates of holy Fathers, as there it follows.) And therefore the εἰς τὸ ἀγαπᾶν for the loving of one another, may either be a notation of the End, or onely of the Effect, and it is uncertain which. The word εἰς will bear either. If it be the End, then the sense is, that to this especially is their Christianity designed, that they love one another, their being Christians obliges them expresly to that, and makes his exhortation to it unnecessary. Thus S. Chrysostome applies the words of the Prophet, they shall be all taught of God, to the perspicuity and plainness of the Evangelical precepts, * Σαφῆ καὶ δῆλα τὰ παρ' ἑαυτῶν κατέστησαν ἅπασιν, ὥστε κοινοὶ τῶν οἰκουμένης ὄντες διδάσκαλοι, ἵνα ἕκαστος καὶ δι' ἑαυτοῦ μανθάνειν δύνηται ἐκ τῆς ἀναγνώσεως μόνης τὰ λεγόμενα, καὶ τοῦτο προσαναφωνῶν ὁ προφήτης ἔλεγεν, Ἐσονται πάντες διδακτοὶ Θεοῦ, καὶ ὁ μὴ ἔτι ἕκαστος τὸν πλησίον ἑαυτοῦ, &c. The Apostles, as common Doctors of the world, proposed to all things perspicuous and manifest of themselves, that every one might by bare reading learn them, and to this the Prophet agrees, saying, They shall be all taught of God, and shall not say every one to his neighbour, &c. If it be the Effect, then the meaning is, that by there having been thus formed by the Christian faith, they doe already (see ver. 18.) perform this, and therefore need no exhorting to it.

V. 13. Are asleep] That κοιμᾶσθαι to sleep signifies to die, to depart out of this world, (according to the Scripture-style) there is no question. Onely two things are here to be observed: first, that the word which is in the ordinary reading κεκοιμημένων in the præter tense, those that have fallen asleep, is in the Kings MS. κοιμωμένων, they that sleep, in the present, to note simply those that die, not onely those that are already dead, but that die daily; remembring withall, that κοιμᾶσθαι to sleep is the word which is proper to expresse the death of the righteous, whose death is but a repose of their bodies in their graves, or dormitories, and a rest of their souls in Gods hands: secondly, that the men here peculiarly spoken of are those that die in the cause, or for the faith of Christ. That sure is expres'd by κοιμηθέντας διὰ τῦ Ἰησῦ, those that sleep through Jesus, that is, by occasion of him, or for Christianity sake. And so signifies those that have been persecuted, and died either by the hands of the persecutors, or before the time comes of Christs destroying the persecutors, and releasing the persecuted by that means. And the considering of this will give us the occasion of this discourse, and of that concerning the times and seasons following it ch. 5. 1. That the Christians at Thessalonica were sorely persecuted by the unbelieving Jewes, and haled and dragg'd to the Roman Officers, as disturbers of the civil peace, hath been evidenced, Note on ch. 2. h. Against these persecutions the Apostle designed to confirm and comfort them by this Epistle. And the direct way of doing it was to put them in mind of what he had told them when he was with them, that Gods judgments should shortly seize upon the unbelieving Jews, their persecutors, chap. 2. 16. and bring them relief by that means. Of this he speaks as of a thing known to them, ch. 5. 1. But yet one objection there was either expres'd by them, or foreseen and here answered by him, viz. that this deliverance being not yet come, some of the faithfull either were daily put to death by the Roman Officers upon the Jewes instigation (for the accusations brought against them were capital, Act. 17. 6, 7.) and so were not thus rescued, or else did daily die before this promised deliverance came. And to this the Apostle gives answer here, that they should not be discouraged or grieve for those which thus died, especially in the cause of Christ, because their souls being by death brought to their harbour and their crown the sooner, their bodies, which alone were supposed to be the sufferers, were no way losers by it, being sure to be raised by Christ, (whose resurrection converted his death into advantage to him) and that so speedily, at the sound of the dooms-day trumpet, that they which should then be found alive, which have never died, should have no advantage of them, but on the other side, they that were dead for the faith of Christ, should first be raised before they that were remaining alive should be caught up with Christ. And this was full matter of comfort to them, and answer to the objection. After which he fitly resumes the discourse of the times and seasons of the vengeance on the Jewes, and deliverance of the faithfull by that means, ch. 5. 1. And so this is a perspicuous account of the coming in of this discourse of the Resurrection in this place.

CHAP. V.

Paraphrase.

1. BUT of the [a] times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you ;]

1. But concerning that notable time or season of Christ's coming in judgment on the Jews and others, to destroy the obdurate and rescue the believers, I shall not need to say much to you ; a.

2. For your selves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.]

2. For this hath been oft told you, that as it is not now farre off, so when it comes it shall come on a suddain, Mat. 24. 27, and 42. Luk. 17. 27. (see 2 Pet. 3. 10.) and this not onely in Judæa, but in other places where the obdurate Jews and Gnosticks shall be (see Mat. 24. 28.) and continue to persecute the Christians.

3. For when they shall say, Peace and safety ; then suddain destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape.]

3. For as in the still and quiet part of the night, when men are fast asleep, the thief comes, v. 4. and Joel 2. 9. and by the windows enters into, and rifles the house ; so when they are most secure, persecuting the Christians in the bitterest manner without all fear, then shall this ruine come upon them on the suddain, as pangs and throes of child-birth doe on a woman (for suddainness and for sharpness much like them) and there shal be no more possibility for them to escape, then there is for a woman in that condition to escape those pains.

4. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.]

4. But ye, my brethren, are not so ill instructed, nor are your actions and lives such, as that this danger should thus surprize you unawares.

5. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day : we are not of the night, nor of darkness.]

5. Your profession engages you to such practices, wherein if you live constant, none of these evils can befall you.

6. Therefore let us not sleep as doe others, but let us watch and be sober.]

6. And this is an obligation on you, that ye be not by company and enticement of others drawn to any of their evil waies.

7. For they that sleep, sleep in the night, and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.]

7. For it is negligence and voluptuousnesse that is likely to betray men to this destruction that comes as a thief in the night, these being those deeds of darkness which are to be thus punished.

8. But let us who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breast-plate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of salvation.]

8. But we Christians let us keep out of all these : and to secure us from the temptations that may invite us to them, let our constant adherence to Christ, and that love of him that casts out fear of persecution, supply the place of a breast-plate to us ; and the stedfast assurance and confidence of our present rescue and deliverance (if we adhere to Christ) and especially of our eternal reward from Christ, let that supply the place of an helmet (to secure our heads) to confirm us in the truth against all heretical corruptions that may solicite our judgments.

9. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ,]

9. For of this be sure, that this great judgment which is now a coming, is not designed by God against the pure constant Christians, but upon their enemies and persecutors, nor for such as we are to be destroyed, but to be delivered by that means.

10. Who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should [b] live together with him.]

10. For he that died on purpose to bring us to good life, to redeem us from all iniquity, will certainly preserve and secure those that are thus redeemed, that live those lives which he requires, and adhere constant to his commandements ; and therefore for us, without the help of our worldly providences, he will certainly secure us, preserve these lives of ours so long as he sees that best for us, and that most remarkably at this time in destroying the persecutors, & rescuing the persecuted, and in another world preserving us to eternal life. b.

11. Wherefore comfort your selves together, and edifie one another, even as also ye doe.]

11. And therefore continue, I pray, to encourage & confirm one another, as already ye doe in this matter.

c. 12. One thing it is needfull for me here to interpoſe, that ye pay all due reſpects to the Biſhops of your ſeveral Churches, that belong to this Metropolis, and ſo all others through all Macedonia, and all others that are employed for your ſpiritual good,

12. And we beſeech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and c are over you in the Lord, and admoniſh you,]

13. And to pay them as great a reſpect as is poſſible, for the pains that they have taken among you. And then to that I muſt adde this exhortation, that one with another ye live in perfect unity and peace.

13. And to eſteem them * very highly in love for their works ſake. And be at peace among your ſelves.] * more then abundantly ὑπερ-ἐκ περισσοῦ

d. 14. And for the preſerving your Churches from the inrodes of ſchiſmaticks and hereticks, the Gnoſticks of whom you are in greateſt danger, firſt, be carefull when you ſee any man forſake his ſtation, grow idle, forſake his work, to proceed with ſuch a man according to Chriſt's rule Mat. 18. 15. and ſo firſt to admoniſh him of his fault, and never leave till ye have reduced him (for this idleneſſe is an ill ſymptome) ſecondly, be as carefull to encourage the fearfull, that may be in danger to be wrought on by the ſharpneſſe of perſecutions; thirdly, thoſe that are ready to fall hold up as well as you can; and fourthly, thoſe that are fallen, deal as gently with them as is poſſible, that ye may reſtore them, Gal. 6. 1.

14. Now we exhort you, brethren, warn † them that are d unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, ſupport the weak, be patient toward all men.] † the irregular

15. And be ſure that they that are injured or perſecuted doe not think of avenging themſelves, Rom. 12. 19. but doe as much good both to your fellow-Chriſtians and to your enemies, and all without exception, as is poſſible.

15. See that none render evil for evil unto any man, but ever follow that which is good, both among your ſelves and to all men.]

16. Rejoice in time of perſecution, in adverſity as well as proſperity, Phil. 4. 5.

16. Rejoice evermore.]

17. Not omitting the frequent conſtant times of prayer as oft as they return, (as continual ſorrow, Rom. 9. 2. is not that which is never diſcontinued in the act, but that which hath conſtant frequent returns to him, though ſometimes intermitted.)

17. Pray without ceaſing.]

18. And in adverſity as well as proſperity continue your acknowledgments of God's goodneſſe to you, Job 1. 21. For this is the condition of the Evangelical covenant, which is the covenant of ſufferings, that we ſhould rejoice in them, Mat. 5. 12. and give God thanks for them, 1 Pet. 3. 15. and 4. 16.

18. In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Chriſt Jeſus *concerning you.] * toward us

19. The gifts of tongues, healing, &c. which were given in form of fire, muſt be uſed accordingly, not quenched with neglect, vanity, wicked life, but preſerved by prayer, thankſgiving, and holy life; and when ye ſee gifts in others, by which they appear to be true teachers, ye muſt not have the ſame averſion to them, that ye would to falſe prophets.

19. Quench not the Spirit.]

20. And for that faculty of interpreting ſcripture, ye ought to ſet a ſpecial value upon it, 1 Cor. 14. 5.

20. Deſpiſe not propheſyings.]

21. Trie all thoſe who pretend to extraordinary gifts, and examine whether they have them or no, by that gift of diſcerning of ſpirits, and make uſe of thoſe who approve themſelves to have what they profeſſe.

21. Prove all things, hold faſt that which is good.]

e. 22. There is no ſin ſo ſmall, but ye ought carefully to abſtain from it.

22. Abſtain from † all e appearance of evil.] † every ſort of evil

f. 23. And that God which is the author of all good things, and particularly of that peaceableneſſe recommended to you, v. 13. and appointed to be ſecured by the following means, work all kind of purity in you, that of the fleſh and ſpirit. And I heartily pray that all and every part of you may be kept immaculate, that whenſoever Chriſt comes, either in his ſignal puniſhments here forementioned, or in that judgment after death, ye may be approved and rewarded by him.

23. And the very God of peace ſanctifie you wholly: and I pray God * your f whole ſpirit and ſoul and body be preſerved blameleſſe unto the coming of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.] * the whole of you, the ſpirit

24. And I doubt not but that Chriſt who hath called you to the knowledge of his truth, afforded you ſuch privileges and advantages, advanced you thus farre, will farther enable you to perſevere ſpotleſſe unto the end.

24. Faithfull is he that calleth you, who alſo will doe it.]

25. Brethren, pray for us.

See Rom. 16. note c.

26. Greet all the brethren with an holy kiſſe.]

27. I require you with all the weight of adjuration, that this Epiſtle be read and divulged to all the Chriſtians of your Church, and ſo likewiſe to all the Churches under the Metropolis of Theſſalonica, and to all the Churches of all Macedonia. See note on Phil. 1. a.

27. I charge you by the Lord, that this Epiſtle be read unto all the holy brethren.]

28. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you. Amen.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Χρόνοι καὶ καιροὶ

Ἡμέρα Κυρίου

V. 1. Times and ſeaſon] What χρόνοι and καιροὶ, times and ſeaſons, here ſignifie, appears ſufficiently by v. 2. where in another phraſe the ſame thing is expreſſed by ἡμέρα Κυρίου ὡς κλέπτης ἔρχεται, the day of Chriſt cometh; which is without queſtion the ſame which is ſo oft called the coming of Chriſt, for the deſtroying the enemies of Chriſtianity, (which he ſhould do καιροῖς ἰδίοις in the proper ſeaſons, 1 Tim. 6. 15.) & the day approaching, and day in all languages ſignifies judgment (ſo 1 Cor. 3. 13. the day ſhall declare, that is, the judgment that ſhall ſit upon them; and ſo diem dicere, is to call a man into any court of judicature, and a dayes-man among us is a judge) and ſo the word καιρὸς ſeaſon is uſed Rom. 13. 11. εἰδότες τὸν καιρὸν knowing the ſeaſon, and that ſeaſon expreſſed in the end of the verſe, as ὥρα here, by ἡμέρα ἤγγικεν the approaching of the day. So Mat. 16. 3. σημεῖα καιρῶν, the ſignes of the times, were the ſignes of that approaching deſtruction, and accordingly Luk. 12. 56. it is called καιρὸς οὗτος this time or ſeaſon. And to this matter (plainly ſet down before, c. 2. 16. the full vials of Gods wrath falling on the perſecuting Jewes,) the reſt of this diſcourſe to

v. 12. doth evidently belong, and the suddainesse and unexpectednesse of it (and the surprize of all carnal men, which joyned with the persecutors or went on in unchristian sinnes) described, as it is frequently in the Gospel, Mat. 24. Luk. 19. and in the Epistles, Rom. 13. 2 Pet. 3. and elsewhere. And that it cannot belong to the last coming of Christ to judgement or finall doom, appears both from hence that that was the subject of the former discourse, cap. 4. 13, &c. and this as a distinct matter is entred upon with a Περὶ δὲ, &c. But concerning the times and seasons; and secondly by the end to which this discourse is here designed by the Apostle, viz. to comfort the Christians that were under persecution, and give them patience and constancy, for which this was a fit consideration, that this judgment of God would come suddenly, and when it was least expected, and so would surprize them if they were not watchfull: And this but a transcript of Christs words on this matter, Mar. 13. 32. (and the very word καιρὸς season there made use of v. 33.) and more punctually under the phrase of the thief in the night, Mat. 24. 43. All which belonged peculiarly to this doom upon the Jewes, and not to the general judgment, which it is to us certain that those that then lived were not concern'd in, but only in this other. And if it be here questioned how this destruction of the Jews should concern the Christians in Macedonia, and so be matter of such particular advertisement to the Thessalonians, I answer that the Jewes being at this time dispersed into several parts much farther from Judea then Macedonia, did likewise whersoever they were, oppose the Apostles preaching to the Gentiles, and not onely so, but persecuted those that received the faith with all bitternesse: and how peculiarly this was observable at Thessalonica, see Note on c. 2. i. The Jewes were the fountains of persecutions, saith Tertullian: and as they prosecuted the Christians before the heathen powers, so all the false-hearted, temporizing, carnal Christians, that were not willing to bear persecutions, complyed and joyned with them against the pure and Orthodox, and all that did so, being engaged in the same course, were involved also in the same destruction; and so the Jewes and Gnosticks, which at this time were the cockle among the wheat in every Christian plantation, overran all the Churches of Asia, &c. as appears by the Apostles (and Christs Rev. c. 2, 3.) Epistles to them, and infested this plantation in the Churches of Macedonia also (as oft appeared in the Epistle to the Philippians, another Church of Macedonia.) It was most fit then for the Apostle to forewarn them of their dangers which were likely to assault their constancy; and to fortifie them against timidity on one side, and the carnal baites on the other (as he doth in the former part of this Epistle,) by this assurance that Gods judgments would suddainly surprize these enemies of his, and nothing but constancy and purity be likely to preserve any from that heavy destruction.

b. ὅτι ἀπαρ. ἔρχ. V. 10. Live together with him] To live together with Christ, though it comprehend under it, yet must not necessarily be confined to, the future immortal life, but may belong first and literally to preservation and deliverance here; so as σώζεσθαι, which is ordinarily rendred, to be saved, doth (v. 3. 8, 9. and oft elsewhere) denote deliverance out of calamities and destructions here, which is also attended constantly (and when the temporal is not had, supplied) with eternal life. Thus doth the matter here in hand incline to interpret it; being the description of that coming of Christ for the destroying of the enemies of Christianity, which is designed as a means of preserving the constant Christians, and giving them quiet halcyonian days after the storms wherein they had been tossed. And so to live is to live prosperously and cheerfully in the profession of Christianity here, together with an assurance of living and reigning with him eternally. And according to this must the phrase, whether we sleep or wake, be interpreted, not so as sleeping signifies death, and waking being not yet dead but alive (though that sense will have truth in it also applyable to the notion of life for eternal life) but as may best agree with the contexture of this Chapter. Here this calamity approaching the Jewes and Gnosticks is said to come as a thief in the night, v. 2. Upon which he tels the pious Christians that they are in no danger of receiving hurt from this, v. 4. they are not in darknesse, that this day or judgment should thus surprize them, and so again v. 5. on which he builds his exhortation v. 6. wherefore let us not sleep, but watch and be sober, in the figurative notion of sleep for sin, and watching for carefulnesse and constancy; and v. 7. the ground of that figurative notion of sleep is set down, because as sleep is a night-work, so drunkennesse is a night-work, and so every sin, and therefore that visitation that comes as a thief in the night is likely to surprize them, and none else. And on the contrary the sober, pure, constant Christian, he is sure to escape; which he farther proves v. 9. by Christs dying to that end to bring us to that purity and consequently being risen again, and coming to doe vital acts (such is executing vengeance on enemies) he will be sure to preserve those which are thus qualified, and that whether they wake or sleep. That cannot now be in that figurative sense formerly used for piety and sin, for they that thus sleep shall not thus live; but (as by the figure ἀνταναάκλασις, noted on Mat. 8. k. it is ordinary) in the vulgar ordinary sense of waking and sleeping, the one noting solitude, the other security: and so the sense will be most currant, that without their special care and solicitude (referring all to God, and so laying them down to sleep, and taking their rest) they shall be secured by Christ, and live when others that were more solicitous for their safety, the Gnosticks, were destroyed with the Jewes. Ἀνταναάκλασις

c. Προϊσταμένους V. 12. Are over you] Προϊσταμένους ὑμῶν, those that are set, or rule, over you, are sure the Bishops of several Churches, called in the first times Προεστῶτες Prefects, and Presidents in the Latine Church. As for that objection which may arise here from the plural number, which argues that they were more then one, the account is to be the same that was given for ἐπισκόποις more Bishops then one Phil. 1. 1. because first, as Philippi was a Metropolis of Macedonia, and contained many Churches and consequently Bishops under it, so was Thessalonica here also, and all the Churches that were under it were written to also in this Epistle inscribed to the Metropolitan Church. Secondly, it hath been before observed (Note on Phil. 1. a.) that Thessalonica and Philippi being both Churches of Macedonia, these Epistles were written to both, and indeed to all the Christian Churches of Macedonia (as the Epistle to the Corinthians belonged also to the Saints or Christians of all Achaia.) And there being many Bishops constituted in that whole countrey, they are all here contained under these phrases κοπιῶντες ἐν ὑμῖν, they that labour among you, that is, labour in the word and doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. and προϊσταμένους those that are set over you, and νουθετοῦντας they that exhort you, it being the Bishops office to doe all these. Κοπιῶντες

d. Ἄτακτ. V. 14. Unruly] Ἄτακτοι irregular is a military word, and signifies disbanded Souldiers, that have left their employment or service or obedience to their commanders, and so may here be set to expresse those that live not in obedience to the Apostles rules, or to the commands of their superiors the Bishops in their Churches, who are here first admonished according to Christs directions, Mat. 18. 15. and so again a second time, 2 Thess. 3. 12. and if they reform not are then to be censured and excommunicate, 2 Thess. 3. 6. But Ἄτακτοι the Context in that place ſeems to refer to one particular kind of irregularity (contrary to the expreſſe orders of the Apoſtle there, v. 10.) viz. living idlely, giving over the workes and duties of their callings, v. 11. which beſide the diſobedience to his orders, was literally alſo a forſaking their colours, leaving that rank wherein they were placed by God; and ſo there v. 7. Ἀτακτῶν is ſet oppoſite to laboring, v. 8.

e. Εἴδους

V. 22. Appearance] The word εἶδος, which is ordinarily rendred appearance, is known to ſignifie (as the Latine ſpecies among authors,) kind, or ſort. Thus they that interpret it otherwiſe, acknowledg the Syriack to render it. And ſo the meaning of the place will be, ἀπὸ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ, from all ſort, or the whole kind, of evil, from all that is truly ſo, be it never ſo ſmall, according to that of Rikbi in Pirche avoth c. 2. יהוי זהיר במצוה קלה כבחמורה be as carefull in the keeping a light, as an heavy commandment. Thus the place ſeems to be underſtood by Saint Baſil, who oppoſes πᾶν εἶδος πονηρὸν every kind of evill to τὸ δόκιμον, which will upon trial bear the touch, on the beginning of the Prov. Δόκιμος ταμίζιτης τὸ μὲν δόκιμον καθέξεται, ἀπὸ δὲ παντὸς εἴδους πονηροῦ ἀφέξεται, A good merchant will keep that which is good, unadulterate metal, but will abſtain from all king of evil, or adulterate; not from that which appears ill, if it be not, for to what purpoſe then is his skill or touchſtone? but from that which is ill, what ever it appear. So Theophylact, μὴ τόδε ἢ ἐκεῖνο, ἀλλ' ἁπλῶς παντὸς πειρήτου φεύγῃς, καὶ ἁμαρτήματος, fly from all ſimply, not from this or that, from every lying prophet and from every ſinne. So* Leontius de ſect. πρεξ. γ'. ſpeaking of the hereſie of the Manichees, which choſe the worſt things ἐξ ἑκάστης αἱρέσεως out of each hereſie, he addes, ἃ φεύγεται ἢ οὐδὲ εἰδωλολατρείας, ἃ παντὸς εἴδους κακοῦ, it abſtains not even from Idolatry, nor from any ſort (not ſhew or appearance, but kind or ſort) of evil.

f. Ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν

V. 23. Whole ſpirit and —] The ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν, the all, or whole of you, the intire or complete man is here divided into three parts, ſpirit, ſoul, and body. There ſeems to be a particular mention of each of theſe in the creation, Gen. 2. 7. Firſt עפר מן האדמה the duſt of the earth, that viſible maſſe, the fleſh or members, that is, the body: then ſecondly, נפש חיים the living ſoul, the animal or ſenſitive faculty, common to man with beaſts and other ſenſitive creatures, and that is Ψυχὴ the ſoul, which therefore in the New Teſtament ordinarily ſignifies the life, Luk. 12. 20. τὴν ψυχήν σου ἀπαιτοῦσι, they require thy ſoul, that is, thy life, from thee. So Matt. 10. 39. and 16. 25, 26. and elſewhere. See c. 2. 8. Thirdly, נשמת חיים the breath of life, the rational faculty capable of divine illumination, and ſo called πνεῦμα the ſpirit, or that which was at firſt breathed into man by God, and returns immortal into his hands again. And ſo this may be the full meaning of the words, your ſpirit, ſoul and body, that is, your rational, immortal ſpirit, your ſenſitive, mortal ſoul, and your body, the place of reſidence of both, which three make up the whole man, the ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν the whole of us; and ſo Marcus Eremita μετὰ τριμερῆ ὑπόστασιν σώματος, πνεύματος καὶ ψυχῆς, the three-parted hypoſtaſis of body, ſpirit, and ſoul. But there is another notion of the word ſoul, which may poſſibly make a change in this matter: For the Hebrew נפש ſoul, Gen. 23. 8. is by the Chaldee paraphaſe rendred רצוה the will, & ſo it muſt there ſignifie; for there Abraham communed with them, ſaying, If it be your ſoul (we render it mind) that is, your pleaſure, your election or choiſe, (that is an act of the Will) that I ſhould bury my dead out of my ſight, hear me, &c. So Pſ. 27. 12. the ſoul of my enemies, muſt ſignifie the pleaſure, and is rightly rendred the will of my enemies, ſo as they may deal with me as they pleaſe; and ſo the ſame phraſe is again uſed Pſal. 41. 2. So Deut. 21. 14. Thou ſhalt let her goe, לנפשה according to her ſoul, that is, her will, whither ſhe pleaſe, or chooſe to goe, that is, freely, the will being that free faculty which chuſes what it pleaſes, and accordingly the Septuagint read there ἐλευθέραν free to goe whither ſhe will. This Thalaſſius, Cent. 2. 27. calls ψυχὴν πρακτικὴν the practical ſoul, viz. the beginning of Action, for ſuch the Will is. And that this is the notion of the Ψυχὴ ſoul here, is the opinion of the moſt antient writers, Origen and Irenæus, as ſhall anon appear: And if it be ſo, then the word σῶμα body muſt be taken in a more comprehenſive latitude, ſo as to contain the ſenſes and ſenſitive appetites that are ſeated in the body, in the notion that the fleſh and the members are oppoſed to the ſpirit, and the mind Rom. 7. and Gal. 5. And then this will be the diviſion of the man, the fleſh, or body, or ſenſitive, carnal appetites on one ſide, and the Spirit, or upper ſoul, the rational propoſals on the other ſide, and the Will or choice, that freely inclines to one or the other of theſe as it pleaſeth. For the firſt of theſe three, the Fathers are wont to ſet τὰ πάθη the paſſions, ἐπιθυμίαν ſenſual deſire; τὸν δῆμον the common people of the ſoul in Maximus Tyrius, τὸ θῆλυ the woman-part in Philo, τὸν παῖδα τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν the child in us in Simplicius on Epictet. p. 70. and again p. 296. περιπόδιον ψυχῆς μέρος the lower foot-part of the ſoul, by which the ſoul communicates with the body, τὰ ἄλογα πάθη the unreaſonable affections generally among the Stoicks, and ἀλογία unreaſonableneſs, ἵππος the horſe in Socrates, θηρίον the beaſt in Plotinus, or ζωοειδὲς τὸ σῶμα the body enlivened, θηρία καὶ τετράποδα the beaſts and fourfooted creatures of the ſoul, which ſtill allure us to beſtial things; ἐκ ἀνθρώπου ἢ ἄνθρωπος, not of man as man (ſaith Nemeſius de Nat. Hom. c. 1.) ἀλλὰ ζώου μὲν πεφυγμένως, ἀνθρώπου δὲ ἐτυμένως, ἐπειδὴν καὶ ζῶον ὁ ἄνθρωπος, but of the living creature primarily, and conſequently of the man, in that man is a living creature. For the Spirit they ſet to ἡγεμονικὸν the leading faculty of the ſoul, τὸν νοῦν and νοεῖν the intellectual faculty, ἡνίοχον the rider of that horſe in Socrates, τὸν παιδαγωγὸν ῥυθμίζοντα καὶ μεταβάλλοντα τὰς ἀλόγους ἐν ἡμῖν ὀρέξεις, καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἀφέλιμον ἀποδυνοῦλα αὐτάς, the padagogue that modulates the irrational appetite, and ſets it right to that which is profitable; in Simplicius, τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν θεὸν the God in us; in Julian, κυριώτατον ψυχῆς εἶδος, καὶ ὡς ἄρα αὐτὸν δαίμονα ἑκάστῳ δοθέντα, οἰκεῖν τὰ ἐπ' ἄκρῳ τοῦ σώματι, πρὸς δὲ τὸν ἐν οὐρανῷ συγγένειαν ἀπὸ γῆς ἡμᾶς αἴροντα, Orat. 2. p. 127. the chief part of the ſoul, the dæmon that is given to every one, dwelling in the top of the body, and raiſing us from the earth to our kindred in heaven; the τὸ ἄρρεν the maſculine part in Philo, τὸν ἄνθρωπον the man in others, the inward man in Saint Paul, and τὸν νοῦν the mind, διάνοιαν the underſtanding Mar. 12. 30. and σύνεσιν in the ſame ſenſe v. 33. Betwixt theſe two then, as in the middle of them, is placed ψυχὴ, as that ſignifies the will, the elective faculty, called by the Ancients αὐτεξούσιον and ἀνθαίρετον, the will or choice. This Philoſophy concerning the parts and diviſion of man * Nemeſius cites from Plotinus, ἐκ τριῶν ἐστιν ἄνθρωπον συνεστᾶναι, σώματος καὶ ψυχῆς καὶ νοῦ, that the man is made up of three, body, ſoul, and mind; and he affirmes Apollinarius Biſhop of Laodicea to have followed him in it. The ſame we may ſee in Irenæus l. 5. c. 9. together with the notion of ὁλόκληρον ὑμῶν for the whole of you, which we have given. Sunt, ſaith he, tria ex quibus perfectus homo conſtat, Carne, animâ, ſpiritu. There are three things of which the entire, perfect man conſiſts, fleſh, ſoul, ſpirit. And again, anima eſt quidem inter hæc duo, aliquando ſubſequens ſpiritum elevatur ab eo, aliquando autem conſentiens carni decidit in terrenas concupiſcentias, The ſoul is betwixt the fleſh and ſpirit, and ſometimes following the ſpirit is elevated by it, ſometimes conſenting

to the flesh falls into earthly concupiscences. So Origen l. 1. sup. Epist. ad Rom. Triplex hominis portio, Corpus, seu caro, infima nostri pars, cui per genitalem culpam legem inscripsit peccati serpens ille veterator, quáque ad turpia provocamur, ac victi diabolo nectimur; Spiritus, quo divinæ Naturæ similitudinem exprimimus, in qua Conditor optimus de suæ mentis archetypo æternam istam honesti legem insculpsit digito, h. e. spiritu suo, hoc Deo conglutinamur, unúmque cum Deo reddimur; Porrò tertia, & inter ea media, Anima, quæ velut in factiosa republica non potest non alterutri partium accedere, hinc atque hinc sollicitatur, liberum habet utrò velit inclinare; si carni renuncians ad spiritûs partes sese induxerit, fiet & ipsa spiritalis, sin ad carnis cupiditates semet abjecerit, degenerabit & ipsa in corpus. There are three parts of a man, the Body, or flesh, the lowest part of a man, on which the Serpent by original sin inscribed the law of sin, and by which we are tempted to filthy things, and as oft as we are overcome by the temptation are joyned fast to the devil; the Spirit, by which we expresse the likenesse of the divine Nature in which God from the pattern of his own mind engraved the eternal law of honest, with his own hand or spirit, by this we are joyned fast to God, and are made one with him; then the Soul, which is the middle betwixt these two, which as in a factious commonwealth cannot but joyn with one or other of the former parties, being solicited this way and that, and having liberty to which it will joyn; If it renounce the flesh and joyn with the spirit, it will it self become spiritual, but if it cast it self down to the desires of the flesh, it will it self degenerate into the body. All most distinctly and largely to the same purpose, when the Soul or Will thus consents to the body or flesh, then lust is said to conceive & bring forth sin, Jam. 1. 15. Thus the flesh or lower soul, like the harlot, solicites the Will, the middle faculty of the man, to impure unlawfull embraces, δελεάζει, invites & attracts it with some pleasant baite; then when it hath obtained its consent, by this means it conceives sin, which, when by some degrees it is grown to perfection, proceeds from consent to act, from conception to birth, from act to delight, from delight to frequent iteration, thence to habit, from habit to obduration, and at last it self is able to bring forth again, it brings forth death: with which agrees that of the Poet, Ἔμβρυα συλλαβοῦσα. Δελεάζει.

Ἄτης ἄρουρα θάνατον ἐκκομίζεται, Æschyl. Ἑπτ. ἐπὶ Θηβ. That which is sin in the field, is death in the harvest. And ὕβρις γὰρ ἐξανθοῦσ' ἐκάρπωσεν στάχυν

Ἄτης, ὅθεν πανκλαυτὸν ἄθαμὰ θέρος,
Id. Πέρσαι, Lust blossomes and fructifies sin, from whence comes a lamentable harvest. So again when the Spirit gets the consent and the embraces, the fruits of the spirit follow also. And so * Thalassius having compared the Will, under the title of ψυχὴ πρακτική, the practical soul, or beginning of action, to a woman, addes, Ἡ ὁ νοῦς συγγινόμενος ἐκτίκτει τὰς ἀρετάς, with which when the mind joynes, it brings forth vertue. To this is referred the spirits lusting against the flesh, and the flesh against the spirit, and many the like passages of the New Testament; and in Julian Or. 4. p. 267. διπλῆ μαχομένη φύσις, εἰς ἣν κεκραμένη, ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος, τῆς μὲν θείας, τὸ δὲ σκοτεινῦ καὶ ζοφώδους, the double nature that is at strife, mingled together, viz. soul and body, one divine, the other dark and black, from whence, saith he, rises the μάχη καὶ στάσις the strife & dissension in man.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

a. ἀπὸ τῆς Θεσσαλονίκης

THis second Epiſtle ſeems to have been written not many months after the former, about the 51. of Chriſt, whilſt the Apoſtle yet remained at Corinth, or was removed to Athens perhaps. For having in the former expreſs'd his intentions and deſire to viſit them again in Macedonia, 1 Theſſ. 3. 10, 11. it no where appears that he did find an opportunity to doe ſo; and then it is not improbable, that being by the interveniency of affairs, and perhaps of dangers, hindred from making good his reſolution, he ſhould thus haſten to ſend this Epiſtle to ſupply that defect, to confirm their minds, and to correct an errour which he ſaw they were in concerning that coming of Chriſt, (mentioned in the former Epiſtle c. 2. 16. and 5. 3.) for the acting revenge upon his enemies the Jews, which they either from the words of his Epiſtle (ſee ch. 2. 2. note c.) or by ſome other means, had perſwaded themſelves would come more ſpeedily than in truth it was likely to come. The ill conſequence of this miſtake the Apoſtle foreſaw, viz. that if they depended on it as inſtant, ὡς ὅτι ἐνέστηκεν, and ſhould find their hopes of immediate deliverance, which was to attend it, fruſtrated, this would be ſure to ſhake their faith and their conſtancy. And therefore diſcerning their error, he thought it neceſſary to rectifie it, by mentioning to them ſome things which were neceſſarily to be precedent to it, and reminding them that this was exactly according to what he had told them when he was among them. And this is viſibly the ſumme of the two firſt chapters, the third being enlarged occaſionally to ſome particulars.

CHAP. I.

ſee 1 Theſſ. 1. 1.

1. PAUL and Silvanus and Timotheus unto the Church of the Theſſalonians, in God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

2. Grace be unto you and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3. We count our ſelves bound to give God eſpecial thanks for his mercy and grace afforded you, by the help of which it is that your adherence to the Chriſtian faith grows every day more conſtant, for all your perſecutions, ch. 2. 14. and ſo alſo your mutual love and charity, unity and amity one toward another, without any breach or ſchiſme among you.

3. We are bound to thank God alwaies for you, brethren, as it is meet, * becauſe that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth.] * that in

4. And accordingly we expreſſe our joy by boaſting of you to other Churches of Chriſtians, that you have with great patience endured ſore perſecutions, and yet continued firm and conſtant in all.

4. So that we our ſelves glory in you in the Churches of God for your patience and faith in all your perſecutions and tribulations that ye indure.]

5. Which is a notable means of evidencing the great juſtice of God's providence, and diſpenſations of the things of this world, when all the perſecutions that fall on you tend but to the trial and approving of your conſtancy and fidelity to Chriſt, and ſo to the making you capable of that glorious deliverance which Chriſt will ſhortly work for all that adhere to him, when the unfaithfull and cowardly are deſtroyed with the perſecutors. And indeed this is it for which they perſecute you, as they have done us, that we profeſſe to believe that Chriſt will ſhortly exerciſe this regal power of his for the deſtroying of his enemies, and reſcuing the perſecuted out of their calamities:

a. 5. Which is a manifeſt token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the a kingdome of God, for which ye alſo ſuffer:]

6. It being moſt juſt with God to puniſh your perſecutors, to deal with them as they have dealt with you;

6. Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompenſe tribulation to them that trouble you;]

b. 7. And to give you, in proportion to your ſufferings, a participation of eaſe and joy with the Apoſtles of Chriſt, at that glorious coming of his to the puniſhing of his enemies foretold Mat. 24. with thoſe notable meſſengers and miniſters and executioners of his power (ſee note on 2 Pet. 3. d.)

7. And to you who are troubled, reſt with us, when the Lord Jeſus ſhall be b revealed from heaven with his mighty Angels,]

8. In rendring a moſt ſevere vengeance to all the obdurate Jewes, and wicked carnal heretical Gnoſtick Chriſtians,

8. In flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,]

9. Which ſhall be finally deſtroyed by the judgment of God, at his powerfull appearance in vengeance againſt his crucifiers.

9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power,]

10. When

10. When he ſhall come to be glorified in his ſaints and to be admired in all them that believe, (becauſe our teſtimony among you was believed) in that day.]

10. At which time alſo he will ſhew miraculous acts of mercy to all pious faithfull Chriſtians, to deliver them (and ſo conſequently you, who have received the Goſpel preached by us) in the day of his vengeance on his enemies, ſee note on Heb. 10. a.

* make you worthy ἀξιώσῃ

11. Wherefore alſo we pray alwaies for you, that our God would * count you worthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleaſure of his goodneſſe, and the work of faith with power,]

11. To which purpoſe we pray for you continually, that God will by his grace enable you to walk worthy of that high calling or privilege, that of being Chriſtians, owned and vindicated by him, and powerfully accompliſh and complete in you all the good works and fruits of faith and patience, which may render you acceptable in his ſight,

12. That Chriſt may have the honour of your patience, and you be rewarded for it, according to the great mercy and goodneſſe of God in Chriſt Jeſus.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Daniels Oni

V. 5. Kingdome of God] That the kingdome of God ſignifies the ſtate of the Goſpel or Chriſtian profeſſion, appears oft in the Goſpels, eſpecially in the parables of Chriſt; when the kingdome of God is likened to a net, to a pearl, &c. and to that the addition of ὑπὲρ ἧς πάσχετε for which ye ſuffer, may here ſeem to incline it, but the καταξιωθῆναι that goes before is not well appliable to that. For that ſignifying to be vouchſafed, or thought worthy, to have their parts in it, or to have it beſtowed upon them, it muſt referre to ſomewhat yet future, which through the mercy of God ſhould be beſtowed upon them; and then that, whatſoever it is being hoped for and depended on by them, it may well be ſaid that they ſuffer for that, that is, either for the profeſſing that hope of theirs, whereby the malice of others is provoked againſt them, or at leaſt in hope or intuition of it. Two other notions therefore there are of the kingdome of God: firſt, that of reigning with Chriſt in endleſs bliſs in another world; and ſecondly, the exerciſe of Chriſts regal power, which was then ſo oft foretold to be approaching, in deſtroying his enemies, and preſerving his faithfull ſubjects, according to that double office of a King, Rom. 13. of avenging of offenders, and rewarding them that doe good. Of this ſee Note on Mat. 3. c. And that this is the notion of it in this place appears very probable by that which follows, where it is ſaid, that it is juſt with God to repay tribulation to their perſecutors, and to the perſecuted ἄνεσιν releaſe, refreſhment from the perſecutions under which they had been. This was it that the Apoſtles had foretold them in their preachings (ſee Note a. on the title of the Epiſtle to the Romans) and the benefits and fruits which they had been promiſed upon their perſeverance in the faith through all their perſecutions, not excluding their eternal reward (but ſuppoſing that for the future, and in caſe they did not outlive the preſent diſtreſſes, 1 Theſ. 4. 13.) but withall giving them into the bargain this aſſurance of an eminent deliverance here, halcyonian daies of reſt to the Church upon the deſtruction of their perſecutors, according as it fell out in Veſpaſians daies, after the deſtruction of the Jewes. And this the Apoſtles profeſſed to expect, and ſo did the Orthodox Chriſtians generally: and as S. Stephen was ſtoned for that expectation Act. 6. 14. ſo were the Apoſtles and their followers perſecuted alſo; and ſo it was literally ὑπὲρ ἧς πάσχετε, for this avowed expectation of this kingdome thus underſtood, they ſuffered perſecution.

Ανεσις

b. Αποκαλυψις Χριστου

V. 7. Revealed] Ἀποκάλυψις Χριστοῦ the revelation of Chriſt, as the coming of Chriſt, is a phraſe of a doubtfull ſignification, ſometimes ſignifying the coming to the final doom, but ſometimes alſo that coming that was deſcribed Mat. 24. and was to be within that generation. And ſo ſure it ſignifies in ſeveral places of S. Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 7, 13. and chap. 4. 13. and the ζωτηρία ἑτοίμην ἀποκαλυφθῆναι ἐν ἐσχάτῳ καιρῷ, the deliverance ready to be revealed in the laſt time, ch. 1. 5. the deſtruction of the Jewes being the time of the deliverance and eſcaping to the Chriſtians that were perſecuted by them, (ſee Rom. 13. 11.) So again 1 Pet. 5. 1. where S. Peter ſaying of himſelf that he was a witneſs of the ſufferings of Chriſt, addeth he was alſo τῆς μελλούσης ἀποκαλύπτεσθαι δόξης κοινωνὸς, partaker of the glory that ſhould be revealed, that is, preſent at the transfiguration, where by Moſes and Elias were repreſented and declared the glorious conſequents of his crucifixion, that is, the deſtruction of his crucifiers, and deliverance of his faithfull diſciples; ſee Note on Mat. 17. a. Luk. 9. b. and 2 Pet. 1. 16. And ſo here it moſt probably ſignifies, where the vengeance on the oppreſſors that is, the crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecutors of Chriſtians, is deſcribed, and an appendix of that reſt and releaſe to the oppreſſed, which is that ζωτηρία deliverance, ſo oft promiſed to them that perſevere and endure and outlaſt thoſe perſecutions, and that ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ v. 10. in that day, which is the notation of that time of vengeance upon the Jewes; ſee Heb. 10. a. As for the mentions, firſt, of the Angels, ſecondly, of the flame of fire, thirdly, of the everlaſting deſtruction, which may here ſeem to interpret this revelation of Chriſt, ſo as to ſignifie the day of the general doom; It is evident firſt, that the Angels being miniſters of God in executing his judgments on nations, this remarkable vengeance on the Jewes may well here, and is elſewhere fitly expreſs'd by his coming, or revealing himſelf with, or by, his Angels. So Mat. 16. 27. and elſewhere often. See Note on Jude g. Then ſecondly, for the πῦρ φλογὸς, fire of flame, or flaming fire, that is ordinarily the expreſſion of the appearance of Angels (he maketh his miniſters a flaming fire, ſaith the Pſalmiſt) and ſo adds little to the former. And ſecondly Gods judgments, if they be deſtructive, are ordinarily in prophetick phraſe expreſs'd by flaming fire; ſee Mat. 3. 12. Thirdly, for the ὀλεθρῳ αἰωνίῳ, that ſignifies an utter deſtruction: when of the chaffe it is ſaid, Mat. 3. 12. that it ſhall be burnt with unquenchable fire, it referrs to the cuſtome of winnowing, where the fire being ſet to the chaffe, and aſſiſted with the wind, never goes out, till it have burnt up all. Mean while not excluding the eternal torments of hell fire, which expect all impenitent ſinners that thus fall, but looking particularly on the viſible deſtruction and vengeance which ſeiſeth on whole nations or multitudes at once in this life. And that this is the meaning of the ὀλεθρῳ αἰωνίῳ everlaſting deſtruction here, appears by all that here follows in this chapter, the time aſſign'd for it, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐνδοξασθῆναι, &c. when Chriſt ſhall come (the ordinary expreſſion of this his vengeance on his crucifiers) to be glorified in his ſaints, and to be admired among all believers in that day; which that it belongs to ſomewhat then approaching, and wherein thoſe Theſſalonians were then concerned (not to the general judgement, yet future) is evident by his prayer for them, that they may have their part in that great favour of God, v. 11. and that the name of the Lord Jesus may be glorified ἐν ὑμῖν among them to whom he writes, ἐν ὑμῖν ἐν αὐτῷ and that they may be glorified in, or through, him, by this remarkable deliverance, which should shortly befall them which were now persecuted.

μετ' Ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ

ch. 1. 5, &c. (and mentioned to you by me 1 Thess. 5. 1.) for the destroying and cutting off the crucifiers of Christ and persecutors of Christians (see note on Mat. 24. b.) the thing which is justly looked on by you as the period of your miseries and persecutions, so universally caused by them, and which consequently will be attended with the plentifull coming in of disciples to the Christian profession, and with a greater liberty of publick assembling for the worship of Christ than our persecutions and dispersions will now afford us, (see note on Rev. 1. d.) concerning this matter, I say, I beseech you,

c. 2. That ye be not removed out of the truth (which ye have already been taught, and believed from Christ and us) either by the pretended or misunderstood revelations or inspirations of some, or by any thing said to you by me when I was with you by word of mouth, or by that which I wrote to you in the former Epistle, ch. 5. 2. as if it were our affirmation, that this now were the period of time wherein the day of the Lord, his coming to judge and destroy the Jewes, were instantly a coming 3 I foresee the danger of this mistake to you, that if you believe this and find your selves confuted by the event, it will be matter of great trouble to you, and may possibly shake your constancy, and tempt you to disbelieve our Gospel, and forsake your profession.

2. That ye be not soon shaken * in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter, as from us, as that the day of Christ [c] is at hand.] * from your opinion ἀπὸ τοῦ νοὸς

d. e. 3. And therefore let not this cheat by any artifice be put upon you, being of so dangerous importance, if you believe it to be taught by us; but resolve on this, that before that come, first there must be, according to Christs prediction, a great departure or defection from the faith to the heresie of the Gnosticks, (or perhaps this may be the meaning of the departure, that in the order and method of things foretold by Christ, one thing must solemnly precede, the Christians breaking off their compliance with the impenitent Jews, leaving them as obdurate, and departing avowedly to the Gentiles, Mat. 24. 13) and secondly, Simon Magus, that wicked Impostor, and accursed person owned to ruine, together with his followers the Gnosticks, shall shew themselves in their colours, having for some space concealed their malice;

3. Let no man deceive you by any means; for † that day shall not come except there come a [d] falling away first, and that [e] man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition,] † the departure must needs come first

5. If you remember, this very thing I foretold you, when I was among you preaching the Gospel, and therefore in any reason I must not now be interpreted to any contrary sense, v. 2.

h. 6. And now you cannot but discern what 'tis which makes some stop in this businesse, their season of shewing themselves and making open profession of all hostility and hatred against the Orthodox Christians is not yet come. The peculiar season will be when the Apostles have given over preaching to the Jewes, as hopelesse and refractary, and so goe to the Gentiles, Mat. 24. 13. and consequently break off that more tender complyance with the Jewes; For as long as that holds the Jewes will not be so sharp against the Christians, and consequently 'twill not be yet so fit a season for the Gnosticks to discover their venome against them.

6. And now ye know what [h] withholdeth, that † he might be revealed * in his time.] † that he be revealed, εἰς τὸ ἀποκαλυφθῆναι * in his own season, ἐν τῷ ἑαυτοῦ καιρῷ

i. 7. And therefore though this sort of men be already formed into a sect, under their ringleaders Simon and Carpocrates, &c. yet at this time 'tis carried more closely, they are not broken out into such open renouncing of, and opposition to Christ and Christians, they have no occasion as yet to side with the Jewes against the Christians, nor shew of quarrel whereupon to exasperate the Jewes against them, because the Christians walk warily and doe nothing contrary to the Mosaical Law, which is the thing which holds them from breaking out, v. 6. But as soon as ever that which withholdeth is removed, that is, as soon as the Apostles depart v. 3. go profes's'dly to the Gentiles, give over the Jewes, and permit not Christians to Judaize, but call them off from observing the Law,

7. For the [i] mysterie of iniquity † doth already work, * onely he who now letteth will let, untill he be taken out of the way:] † is already acted ἤδη ἐνεργεῖται * only there is that withholdeth as yet, μόνον ὁ κατέχων ἄρτι

k. 8. Then immediately shall this sect of Gnosticks shew it self, joyn with and stirre up the Jewes, and bring heavy persecutions upon the Christians, and (having this opportunity to calumniate them to the Jewes) behave themselves as their professed opposers. And Simon Magus shall set himself forth in the head of them; whom, as a professt enemy of Christ, Christ shall destroy by extraordinary means by the preaching and miracles of S. Peter: and for all the Apostatizing Gnosticks that adhered to him, they shall be involved in the destruction of the unbelieving Jewes, with whom they have joyned against the Christians.

8. And then shall * [k] that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume † with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy * with the brightnesse of his coming,] * the wicked one † by the breath of his own mouth τῷ πνεύματι τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ * by the appearing of his own presence ἐπιφανείᾳ τῆς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ

9. Even him whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signes, and lying wonders,]

10. And by baits of lust, &c. they work upon the generality of wicked carnal Christians, and this as a punishment for their not being brought to sincere repentance and true faith by the Gospel, but preferring the satisfaction of their own humors, and passions, and prejudices, Joh. 8. 45. before the doctrine of Christ, when it came with the greatest conviction, and evidence, and authority among them, Tit. 2. 11.

10. And with all deceivableness of unrighteousnes, in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.]

11. And this is the cause why God suffers meer Magicians to deceive them by false miracles, and by that means to bring them to believe all kind of falsnesse, false gods, false waies of

11. And for this cause God shall send them † strong delusions, that they should believe a lie:] † deceitful working ἐνέργειαν πλάνης of worship, deceitfull, cheating, false miracles to get autority to those and all manner of heathen, licentious, vicious practices, the consequents of those errors, and the most contrary to Evangelical truth:

That so filling up the measure of their obdurations, they may fall under condemnation, or be judged and discerned to be what they are, impenitent infidels, and accordingly remarkably punished.

† that he ὅτι 13. But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, † because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth,] 13. The more of truth there is in all this, the more are we bound to blesse and praise God for his goodnesse to you, brethren, that he hath been so favourable to you above others, as to appoint the Gospel to be preached to you, and you to be called to the faith of Christ so early (so these being Jewes at Thessalonica are said to have believed before others, Ephes. 1. 12.) and so to be taken out of that wicked generation by the preaching of the Gospel, and that grace which is annex'd to it, and by your receiving of the truth (by which means you are safe both from the Apostasie v. 3. and the delusions v. 10. and from the destruction that shall shortly come upon the Jewes and Gnosticks, v. 1, 8, & 12.)

14. Whereunto he called you by our Gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.] 14. Unto which honour and advantages God hath by our preaching advanced you, that thereby ye might have your parts in all the glorious effects of Christ's power in his servants, and over his enemies.

15. Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our Epistle.] 15. To conclude therefore, Doe you, brethren, take care to retain constantly all the doctrine which I have (both at my being with you for the preaching of the Gospel to you, and since in mine Epistle) delivered to you, all such, I mean, as I have truely told or written to you, not such as are unduly put upon you under that pretence, v. 2.

16. Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace.] 16. And I beseech that Lord and Saviour of ours Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who out of his meer love to us hath thus given us his Son, and through him afforded us matter of endlesse comfort, even the hope of eternal joyes to reward our temporary sufferings, and revealed this to us in the preaching of the Gospel (see note on Heb. 13. c.)

17. Comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work.] 17. That he will now in your tribulations and persecutions refresh and cheer you up, and confirme you to persevere stedfast and constant in the profession of the truth, and in all Christian practices.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Ὑπὲρ V. 1. By] The Preposition ὑπὲρ is oft taken in the notion of περὶ, of, or about, or concerning, or for, as that denotes the matter of the ensuing discourse, as when we say in English, Now, for such a matter, or point, or question, which is the form of entring upon any discourse. And thus it seems to be understood here, making the coming of Christ, &c. the things which he proceeds to discourse of, which having been touched upon in the former Epistle c. 5. 1. (and, it seems, that which was said in that Epistle, misunderstood by them in some circumstances) he proceeds, as in a known matter, to speak of it, and so ὑπὲρ will be best rendred, concerning.

b. Παρουσία τῦ Κυρίε Ib. Coming of our Lord] Παρουσία τῦ Κυρίε, the coming of the Lord, hath been at large explained, Note on Mat. 24. b. to signifie the coming of Christ as a Judge to destroy the Jewes, (as Psal. 96. 13. For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth, and as Psal. 97. 5. the hills melted like wax at the presence of the Lord, the very παρουσία τῦ Κυρίε here,) and by that means to rescue those that were persecuted by them: and this is by Saint James c. 5. 7, 8. called by this title, παρουσία τῦ Κυρίε, the coming of the Lord, and that then ἐγγίζει, approaching, and farther expressed v. 9. by the Judge standing before the doores; and so there is little reason to doubt but that it so signifies here. 'Tis true indeed that 1 Thes. 4. 15. παρουσία τῦ Κυρίε, the coming of the Lord, is used for the final day of doom; but the phrase here appears not to referre to that place: for after the description of that to the end of that fourth Chapter, the Apostle c. 5. begins περὶ δὲ τῶν χρόνων καὶ τῶν καιρῶν but concerning the times and seasons, as of somewhat which was then approaching, and presumed to be sufficiently known among them, and on that subject he tels them, that they know that the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night. Now to this coming of the day of the Lord it is that the Apostle here refers, in this second Epistle (that which he had said of it in the first Epistle, and particularly the αἰφνίδιος ὄλεθρος suddain destruction v. 3. being misinterpreted by some of them, and changed into ἐνέστηκεν ἡ ἡμέρα τῦ Χριστῦ the day of Christ is instantly approaching) as may appear by the end of the second verse, where the very phrase is used, the day of the Lord, which therefore is to be taken for the interpretation of παρουσία Χριστῦ, the coming of Christ v. 1. the one as well as the other ordinarily denoting this judgement of Christs upon the Jewes (see Note on Rom. 13. d.) And then the ὁπσωαγωγὴ ἡμῶν ἐπ' αὐτὸν Χριστὸν, our assembling to him, must be proportionably explained to signifie that greater liberty of the Christians to assemble to the service of Christ, the freedom of Ecclesiasticall assemblies, which was a consequent of that great judgement on the persecutors in the times of Vespasian and Titus. See Note on Rev. 1. b. and c. 5. 10. and c. 7. 15. Thus is the phrase used 2 Mac. 2. 7. where God's gathering his people again together, an effect of his receiving them into mercy; is his giving them the liberty of the Temple and his service there. And so ὁπσωαγωγὴ ἑαυτῶν, the assembling of themselves, Heb. 10. 25. is their meeting together in the publicke service of Christ. And this, as it was an happy consequent of this deliverance, so was it to be used as a solemne means of expressing their gratitude to Christ, who had thus delivered them, and so was peculiarly a gathering together εἰς αὐτὸν to him. Επισυναγωγὴ ἐπ' αὐτὸν

c. Ἐνέστηκεν V. 2. Is at hand] The word ἐνέστηκεν here notes the immediate approach of this day, or the instant coming of it. So ἐνεστῶτα, the things just at hand, Rom. 8. 38. and 1 Cor. 3. 22. are set opposite to τὰ μέλλοντα, the things to come, which were future, but after some time, not so immediately to come to passe. And this being the direct and exact notion of the word, is a key to the whole matter. For that this day was ἐγγίζει, drawing neer, had been oft affirmed by the Apostle, and as Lactantius saith (see Note on title of the Epistle to the Rom. a) commonly foretold by Peter and him in all their preachings, and 1 Thes. 5. 1. he had farther given them warning, that it would come as a thief in the night, that is, on a suddain, unobservably, or unexpectedly. This it seems was mistaken by them, and the suddainnesse and unobservableness of it when it should come, interpreted by some to denote the immediate, instant approach of it, at that time wherein he spake. This error of theirs they founded on three things: first, on the Revelations which some had received in this matter, and which were understood to this sense; which is the meaning of διὰ πνεύματος, by διὰ Πνεύμα-

ſpirit, the ſpirit of prophecy, either truly ſuch, or pretended to be ſuch; ſecondly, on the diſcourſes and affirmations of S. Paul when he was among them, which διὰ λόγου is the meaning of διὰ λόγου by word of mouth; thirdly, on the words of his former Epiſtle, where he had ἐπιστολῆς said c. 5. 2. that it cometh as a thief in the night, and that when they ſaid, Peace and ſafety, τότε αἰφνίδιος ἀν- then a ſpeedy deſtruction invadeth ἐφίσταται ὄλεθρος, them; which laſt they interpreted, as if he had ſaid, ὅτι ἐνέστηκεν, that it were now inſtant, or preſent at hand, and ſo founded their doctrine upon Saint Paul: which ὡς δι' ἡμῶν is the meaning of ὡς δι' ἡμῶν, as if we had thus taught, either by word of mouth, or by that Epiſtle, or by both, that this day of the Lord was now inſtantly a coming: where, as the miſtake was no more then by interpreting ἐφίσταται by ἐνέστηκε, the approach when they ſaid, Peace, that is, when they leaſt look'd for it, by the being now immediately at hand, ſo it was an error of ill conſequence, and directly contrary to what the Apoſtle had taught them, when he was with them, v. 5. and therefore their embracing it was juſtly branded by him σαλευθῆναι ἀπὸ τοῦ νοός with the title of ταχέως σαλευθῆναι being ſuddainly ſhaken from the ſenſe, or underſtanding, or notion of that coming, which he had imparted to them. And beſides it was a miſtake that he foreſaw would ſhrewdly diſturb them, when looking for it according to that belief, they ſhould find themſelves defeated, and ſo be tempted to call the Apoſtle truth in queſtion from whom they took themſelves to have it. And as this would be apt to give them doubts of the truth of the whole Goſpel, which they had believed on the ſame authority, ſo would the ſharpneſs of the preſent perſecutions be in danger to ſhake them quite out of their conſtancy, when they found themſelves thus deluded in their expectation of relief; and this is the meaning of θροεῖσθαι θροεῖσθε, being troubled. And accordingly we finde in S. Peter 2 Epiſt. c. 3. v. 4. that many thinking Chriſts promiſe broken concerning this his coming went over to the Gnoſticks, joyned with them in infidelity and carnality, walking after their own luſts, and ſaying, Where is the promiſe of his coming?

V. 3. Falling away] That ἀποστασία in its natural ſignification imports no more then abſceſſion or departure, d. ἀποστασία is clear by the Verb ἀφίστημι, from which it immediately comes. So Act. 15. 38. when 'tis ſaid of John τὸν ἀποστάντα ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀπὸ Παμφυλίας, ſure it ſignifies no more then that he had departed from them, not from the faith of Chriſt in our modern notion of Apoſtaſie; and in that place the Kings MS. reads ἀποστήσαντα, which is a Verb made from ἀποστάτης Apoſtate, and yet there ſignifies no more then leaving, or forſaking their company, not the faith of Chriſt at that time. Thus the word is uſed diſtinctly in this matter of Moſes's Law, Act. 21. 21. ἀποστασίαν διδάσκεις ἀπὸ Μωσέως, thou ἀποστασία ἀπὸ Μωσέως teacheſt the Jewes in Aſia &c. to forſake the Moſaical Law. And therefore it is poſſible that the word ἀποστασία here may ſignifie either, firſt, this departing of the Apoſtles from the Jewes, leaving them and departing to the Gentiles, which was indeed a great provocation to the Jewes to perſecute them moſt bitterly, and ſo might be made uſe of by the Gnoſticks as the opportunity moſt fit to exaſperate the Jewes againſt them; or elſe ſecondly, the departing of the believing Jewes from the Moſaicall obſervances, Circumciſion, &c. and this alſo ſharpned the perſecutors againſt them. And ſo Saint Luke uſes the word ἀποστὰς, Act. 19. 9. of Paul, when the Jews were hardned and diſobedient, and ſpake evill of that way before the multitude, ἀποστὰς ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀφώρισε τοὺς μαθητὰς, he departed from them, and ſeparated the diſciples, that is, he (and the Chriſtian believers) forſook and ſeparated from them, and betook himſelf to the Gentiles of Aſia; and ſo at other times he did, Act. 13. 46. and finally, Act. 28. 28. And to this the Apoſtle ſeems to exhort the Hebrew believers, Heb. 13. 13. Let us therefore come forth to Chriſt without the camp, make an expreſſe ſeparation from the unbelieving Jewes, bearing Chriſts reproach, that is, although we be perſecuted by them for doing ſo. But beſides theſe, there is the ordinary vulgar notion of Apoſtaſie, which may very probably be meant here, a notable diſcernable apoſtatizing of Chriſtians to that abominable impiety of the Gnoſticks, of which Saint Paul 1 Tim. 4. 1. affirmes ἀποστήσονταί τινες τῆς πίστεως, ἀποστήσονταί τινες προσέχοντες πλάνοις πνεύμασι, ſome ſhall apoſtatize from the faith, giving ear to deceitfull ſpirits; and this, ſaith he there, the ſpirit ſaith expreſly, that is, Chriſt hath diſtinctly foretold, Mat. 24. 10. And then ſhall many be ſcandalized, that is, fall off from the faith, and falſe prophets ſhall ariſe and deceive many, v. 11. and the love of many ſhall grow cold, v. 12. contrary to the enduring to the end. And this there as the immediate forerunner of that great day; for, as it there followes v. 14 Then ſhall the end come. And againſt this the Apoſtle warns them to take heed Heb. 3. 12. leſt there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God; and they that did ſo, he ſaith they doe ὑποστέλλειν εἰς ἀπώλειαν, draw back, ὑποστέλλειν or fall off, unto perdition, Heb. 39. 22. And (beſides that by theſe warnings and intimations (ſee Heb. 12. 15.) it appears that many did, according to Chriſts prediction, fall off) it is farther moſt certainly known that Samaria, which was the firſt-fruits, as it were, unto Chriſt, after his aſcenſion, and embraced the faith univerſally, Act. 8. 12, 14. did alſo, by the ſubtlety of Simon Magus and the Gnoſticks, fall off from their firſt faith to that abominable Hereſie. And ſo this may very fitly be here referred to by the Apoſtle, as that which muſt neceſſarily come to paſſe before the coming of this day.

ib. Man of ſin] Ἄνθρωπος ἁμαρτίας, the man of ſin, e. Ἄνθρωπος ἁμαρτίας is here the denotation of a very wicked ſort of people: and though it be in the Singular number, muſt not yet, in any reaſon, be confined to a ſingle perſon, but to ſome one or more ring-leaders, and their followers. Thus we know Χριστὸς Chriſt ſignifies him as he is the Χριστὸς head of his Church, and is ſometimes uſed to ſignifie the whole ſociety of Chriſtians (ſee Note on Gal. 3. d.) And ſo Ἀντίχριστος Antichriſt is ſure no ſingle perſon, Ἀντίχριστος conſidered alone, but in conjunction with his followers. And in this latitude proper names of perſons are prophetically uſed to ſignifie people, Jezebel for this Ἰεζάβελ hereſie of Gnoſticks, the whole ſet of them, (ſee Note on Rev. 2. n.) and many the like. And accordingly here it cannot be ſtrange that the ἄνθρωπος ἁμαρτίας, the man of ſin, ſhould ſignifie more then one ſingle perſon, viz. Simon and the Gnoſticks. So likewiſe for all that follow, υἱὸς ἀπωλείας the ſon of perdition (one fit Υἱὸς ἀπωλείας. and ſure to be deſtroyed, as בן מות the ſon of death, one that ſhall ſurely die, 2 Sam. 12. 5.) ὁ ἀντικείμενος Ἀντικείμενος he that oppoſeth himſelf, (a circumlocution of Antichriſt) and ὁ ἄνομος the wicked one, v. 8. All which Ἄνομος are here ſet to denote that impious ſect under him, which is known by the antients by the title of πρωτότοκος τοῦ Σατανᾶ, the firſt-born of Satan, that accurſed Simon the Magician. That 'twas ſome Magician is clear by what is ſaid of him v. 9. of the working of Satan evidenced in him, ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει, καὶ σημείοις, καὶ τέρασι ψεύδους &c. v. 10. in all power, and ſignes, and lying wonders: and accordingly ſaith Theophylact, Ἄνθρωπός ἐστιν ἔχων Σατανᾶν ἐν ἑαυτῷ δι' αὐτοῦ ἐνεργοῦντα, 'tis a man that hath Satan in him working by him, (which one beſide many other circumſtances ſufficiently prove that it was not Caius, or any other of the Roman Emperors, as ſome have conceived.) And that it was particularly Simon Magus appears by Euſebius l. 2. c. 12. who at the beginning of Claudius's reigne mentions his coming to Rome, and there deſcribes him διὰ τῆς ὑπ' ἐνεργούντων δαιμόνων τέχνης δυνάμεις μαγικὰς ποιήσαντα ποιήσαντα, (words directly parallel to this ninth verſe) doing ſuch miracles there by the helpe of the devils, that he was taken for a god, and accordingly had a ſtatue erected betwixt the two bridges built on Tiber, with this inſcription, Simoni Deo Sancto; and, ſaith he, almoſt all the Samaritans, and ſome of other nations, confeſſed him πρῶτον θεὸν, the firſt, or principal God, and accordingly worſhipped him θυμάμασι καὶ θυσίαις καὶ σπονδαῖς, with all ſorts of ſacrifices, and with him alſo Helena (which went about with him, but had before been a proſtitute ſtrumpet in Tyrus) calling her τὴν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ πρώτην ἔννοιαν, that firſt cogitation that proceeded from him, a kind of Pallas out of Jupiters head. Of him we may read at large in Irenæus, and by both ſee how truly not only that title belongs to him (given to him by Euſebius) that he was πάσης ἀρχηγὸς αἱρέσεως the ring-leader of all the hereſie that crept into the Church, and ſo of the Apoſtaſie here ſpoken of among the Samaritans, and of all the doctrines and practices of the Gnoſticks quickly following in the Church, but alſo how perfectly appliable to him is that which is here added, that he exalted himſelf above all that is called God, or worſhip, &c. For before his Baptiſme it is ſaid of him Act. 8. that he was by all the Samaritans cried up to be δύναμις θεοῦ μεγάλη (or, as the MSS. read, ἡ καλουμένη μεγάλη, the divine power, which is called great, that is, the Divine Majeſty, called diverſly by ſeveral nations, but by all acknowledged as the greateſt and ſupreme Deity) and after the feigned reception of the Faith and Baptiſme, he did not leſſen, but rather increaſe his pretenſions. And accordingly ſaith Irenæus l. 1. c. 20. Simon Magus intendit contendere adversùs Apoſtolos, uti & ipſe glorioſus videretur eſſe. A Claudio Cæſare ſtatuâ honoratus eſſe dicitur propter Magiam. Hic igitur à multis quaſi Deus glorificatus eſt, & docuit ſemetipſum eſſe qui apud Judæos quaſi Filius adparuerit, in Samaria autem quaſi Pater deſcenderit, & in reliquis Gentibus quaſi Spiritus S. adventaverit. Eſſe autem ſe ſublimiſſimam virtutem, hoc eſt, eum qui ſit ſuper omnia Pater, & ſuſtinere vocari ſe quodcunque eum vocant homines. Simon Magus ſet himſelf to contend againſt the Apoſtles, that he alſo might appear glorious. He was for his Magick honoured with a ſtatue by Claudius Cæſar. He was glorified by many as a God, and taught that himſelf was he that appeared as the Son among the Jewes, that in Samaria he deſcended as the Father, and in other nations came as the Holy Ghoſt. That he was the moſt ſublime virtue, that is, he which was the Father over all, and that he was content to be called by the higheſt titles that any man did call him. And ſo ſaith Tertull. de Anima, Simon (ſpeaking of Helena his prima ennoia by which he created the Angls and powers which made the world, and whom he called alſo the loſt ſheep, becauſe of her having been in a brothel-houſe) ſaith that ad hanc deſcendit Pater ſummus, to her deſcended the ſupreme Father, (calling himſelf by that title) and having carried her back to his palace, exinde ad hominum reſpexit ſalutem, from thenceforth had all care to the ſalvation of men. Again that ſtatue of his was made, ſaith Irenæus, ad figuram Jovis, after the figure of Jupiter, and Helena's after the figure of Minerva, and theſe, ſaith he, were worſhipped by men. And at laſt among the doctrines of his followers, Saturnilus and Menander, he ſets down, Judæorum Deum unum ex Angelis eſſe, c. 22. that the God of the Jewes was one of the ſeven Angels that made the world. Ipſum verò Simonem unum Patrem eſſe qui fecit Angelos, Archangelos, Virtutes, Poteſtates, But that Simon himſelf was the only Father that made the Angels, Archangels, Virtues, and Powers. So clearly making himſelf ſuperiour to the God of the Jews, and indeed creatour of him. So ſaith Juſtin Martyr ἀποκαλυφθῆναι Apol. 2. (ſee Note b. on Jude.) Now for the ἀποκαλυφθῆ, this mans and theſe Gnoſticks revealing themſelves, that ſignifies their putting off that diſguiſe of Chriſtianity under which they veiled themſelves a while, and ſetting up, he and his followers, profeſſedly againſt Chriſt and his Apoſtles. For Simon himſelf, that at firſt he was baptized and made a ſhew of being a Chriſtian, hath appeared Act. 8. but this without any ſincerity at that time, any γνησία μετάθεσις, genuine purpoſe of change, ſaith Cyril of Jeruſalem, Cat. 1. After this he went on in his way of deceiving the people by his ſorceries, as appears by his deſiring to buy the power of working miracles from the Apoſtles; and being denied that, ſoon after he ſet up and oppoſed himſelf againſt Chriſt, and accordingly is here called ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the adverſary, or, he that oppoſeth himſelf, and by S. John, ὁ Ἀντίχριστος the Antichriſt, which is the ſame. And about the time of erecting the ſtatue to him at Rome, being by the preaching of the Goſpel driven out of that city, it was ſome ſpace of yeares before he appeared there again in conteſtation with S. Peter; which may paſſe for his revealing of himſelf, that at the writing of this Epiſtle was yet future. And accordingly Theophylact, ſpeaking of the myſtery of iniquity, Ἀρχὴν ἔλαβε, ſaith he, καὶ ὁ Σίμων καὶ Νικόλαος καὶ οἱ αἱρεσιάρχαι τὰ τοῦ Ἀντιχρίστου ἐνήργουν, the myſtery of iniquity was already begun, for Simon and Nicolas leaders of hereſies did work the works of Antichriſt. As for the Gnoſticks, the followers of him, and other ſuch leaders, thus it was: The Jews perſecuting the Chriſtians, and thoſe perſecutions ſhaking the faith of many, and the Gnoſticks keeping themſelves ſafe from thoſe perſecutions, by forſwearing of Chriſt in time of danger from the Jewes (as they ſacrificed to Idols, to ſecure them from the Gentiles) and having other carnal baits, all manner of filthineſſe to invite carnal and fearfull perſons to their party, did ſoon draw all Samaria from Chriſt, and ſo, whereever Chriſtianity was planted in other parts, at Rome, in Aſia, &c. corrupted the believers every where, ſo that many were polluted, or infected by their poiſon, Heb. 12. 15 and at length joined with the Jewes in the greateſt bitterneſs of perſecuting the Orthodox Chriſtians, firſt ſecretly, ὡς κύνες λαθροδήκται, as dogs that bite and bark not, ſaith Ignatius, and then they were the myſtery here, but at laſt openly and avowedly, and that is the meaning of ἡ ἀποκάλυψις the revealing this myſtery. And this avow'd oppoſing and perſecuting the Chriſtians was to be a forerunner of that day of the Lord, and till that was come, the day was not yet inſtant, though neer at hand.

ὁ Ἀντίχριστος

V. 4. Worſhipped] Σέβασμα in this place being joyned with λεγόμενον θεὸν called God, not to diſtinguiſh it from the former, but with an ἤ, or, to explicate the former, or to extend it farther then the former might be thought to extend, muſt ſignifie not the worſhip it ſelf, but that which is worſhipped, whatſoever that is. The nations and people of the world, all of them, acknowledged and worſhipped ſomewhat which they called God, or Numen, but all falſe and Idol-nothings, ſave only the one Creator of heaven and earth; yet on theſe they beſtowed thoſe magnificent titles of God, and Great power of God, and other the like: and to comprehend all thoſe titles by which all thoſe falſe Gods were known, this word Σέβασμα, worſhip, or deity, or (by repeating the word λεγόμενον) all that is called worſhip or deity, is here uſed. And ſo the word is uſed by the Author of the Book of Wiſdome, c. 14. 20. and rightly rendred, a God. So Act. 17. 23. ἀναθεωρῶν τὰ σεβάσματα ὑμῶν, beholding your worſhips, that is, their δαίμονες their idols, (ſo ſaith Theophylact, σεβάσματα, ἤτοι εἴδωλα, worſhips, that is, Idols) and demons, of which their city had and worſhipped ſo many. For ſo v. 16. it is ſaid of him that he did θεωρεῖν behold that their city was κατείδωλον full of Idols, or falſe gods, and v. 22. that he did θεωρεῖν behold again that they were δεισιδαιμονεστέρους δαιμονίοις worshippers of more Idols or Dæmons then any other city. So in Photius Ep. 162. Τὰ τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς θρησκείας ζεβάσματα, θεὸς, &c. not the worships, but the gods that are worship'd by the Grecians: and again, οἰκεῖον ἐλυσφήμησε σέβασμα he reproached his own God. And so 'tis truly here said of Simon Magus, that he did set himself up above all that is any where worshipped, true or false God, making himself the supreme Father of all, who had created the God of the Jewes, as appeared Note e.

g. Καθίσαι εἰς τὸν ναὸν Θεοῦ

Ib. Sitteth in the Temple of God] What καθίσαι εἰς τὸν ναὸν Θεοῦ ὡς Θεὸν, to sit on the Temple of God as God, signifies, cannot now be difficult after the consideration of the former passages Note e. and f. For being owned by all Samaria as the supreme God, and worship'd, as was said, θυμιάμασι, καὶ θυσίαις, καὶ σπονδαῖς, by incense and sacrifices, &c. it cannot be doubted but these were performed to him in those places which had been set apart to the worship of the true God; and so that is to sit or place himself in the Temple of God, ἀποδεικνύναι ἑαυτὸν ὅτι ἐστὶ θεὸς, vaunting, or declaring, himself that he is God, assuming those honours to himself. Thus saith Justin Martyr, Apol. 2. of some, that is, of him and Helena his strumpet, that they did λέγειν ἑαυτοὺς εἶναι θεὸς, affirm themselves to be gods. And so Irenæus, Docuit semetipsum, &c. He taught that he was God. See Note e. To this purpose it is that Justin Martyr affirms that Claudius erected him a statue at Rome on Tiber, betwixt the two Bridges, inscribed Simoni Deo Sancto, to Simon the holy God: Every such statue or image being, according to the Theologie of the Heathens, a kind of ναὸς or temple or chappel, where the God to whom the statue was consecrated was said to dwell. And although Petrus Ciaconius in Opusc. suspects this to be a mistake of Justin, because about that place in Rome An. Dom. MDLXXIV. a basis of a marble statue was digg'd up with this inscription Simoni Sanco Deo Fidio sacrum, &c. yet the autority of Justin, writing this so soon after to the Emperors of Rome, who could and would have discerned his falsity, if it had been such, will be abundantly sufficient to oppose to this conjecture, especially when Irenæus insisting on it soon after him, and Tertullian better acquainted with that city and story then to be thus imposed upon, have added their confirmations of it, and many writers of the Church of Rome after them continued the tradition unquestioned, till this conjecture set up against it.

h. Κατέχειν

V. 6. Withholdeth] κατέχειν here signifies to hinder, to restrain him that is there spoken of, that is, the ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the impious proud adversary, Simon Magus and his Gnosticks v. 11. from putting off their disguise, and revealing themselves in their colours, that is, cruell professed enemies to Christ and Christians: and Καιρὸς ἑαυτῷ by the addition here of ὃν τῷ ἑαυτοῦ καιρῷ in his own season, some conjecture may be made what the τὸ κατέχον that which hinders signifies. For it being thereby manifest that there was a season most proper for them thus to reveal themselves, the τὸ κατέχον must be the absence or not approach of that season. Now what the Gnosticks season of shewing or revealing themselves was, appears by what hath formerly been said, viz. the Christians separating from the Jews. Till they did this, the Gnosticks wanted a pretence to exasperate the Jews, but then having that advantage they shewed themselves in their colours; and so this is their season of revealing themselves. And the point of time when this season came was, when the Apostles departed professedly from the Jews (see Paraphrase on Rom. 7. 1.) and not only gave over tempering and complying with them, but preaching to them also, as contumacious and hopeless, with a Behold we turne to the Gentiles. For this made the Jews to become implacable to the Christians, to persecute them bitterly (see Eph. 3. 1, 13.) not only as contemners of Moses's Law, which interdicted that free commerce with the Gentiles, but as those that hated them, and thought them unworthy of the Gospel of Christ, Act. 13. 46. And from thence sprang the Apostasie of many weak Christians to this party, through this necessity of adhering to one side or other, either of persecuting with the Jews, or being persecuted with the Christians, the Apostle, Heb. 13. 13. calling the Christians to come from among them, to go out unto Christ without the Campe, bearing his reproach, that is, to leave off the Jewish ceremonies, ἐξερχώμεθα πρὸς αὐτὸν ἔξω τῆς παρεμβολῆς which now became obstructions and hindrances to the progress of the Christian faith, and to doe it though it brought all persecutions upon them. And accordingly all were now forced to make their choice and avow it, and so they did (to avoid the persecution from the Jews:) many profess'd themselves Jews, though they were not so by birth (nor circumcised many of them Gal. 6. 12. 13.) and then, having departed from the faith, soon proceeded to the greatest hatreds of them which did not, express'd the fiercest zeal against the Christians of any, according to Christs saying, that the Jewish Pharisaical Proselytes became doubly more the children of the devil then themselves (see Note on Mat. 23. e.) This then being the season of the Gnosticks breaking out against the Christians, the absence of that season must consequently be the Apostles & Orthodox Christians keeping faire with the Jews, and being not yet departed to the Gentiles, their observing some ceremonies in compliance with, and in hope of gaining the Jews. This we know they did for some time, upon a double consideration: first, On hope of doing good upon the Jews by that means, (so Paul circumcised Timothy, Act. 16. 3. and so he purified himself Act. 21. 26.) and secondly, to avoid the persecutions of the Jews, which it seems S. Peter did, Gal. 2. 12. fearing those of the circumcision. And as yet the Apostles, it seems, had not given over these compliances when S. Paul wrote this. And this, as long as it lasted, kept it from being a fit season for the Gnosticks to shew themselves, and so in all probability is the τὸ κατέχον here, that which hindred, and the ὁ κατέχων, τὸ Κατέχον ordinarily rendred, he that hinders v. 7. (which is in all reason the same, the Gender making no difference in this matter, and if it did, yet the ὁ being appliable to the Law, ὁ νόμος, and not any necessary denotation of a person, and withall the Neuter as fit to interpret the Masculine, as the Masculine to interpret the Neuter) 'Tis true indeed, divers of the Antients expecting still some farther Antichrist continually, did phansie the Roman Empire to be the τὸ κατέχον, or that that hindered: But that was caused by looking for that as future which was some time past, and now out of their minds, and by the Apostles not mentioning what it was; which omission of his was occasioned by his having told them of it formerly, and supposing that they knew it sufficiently (καὶ νῦν οἴδατε, and now ye know, &c.) so that there was no need of repeating it, and it seems they had been, at his being among them, so fully instructed in it, that he tels them 1 Thes. 5. 1. that he need not write to them of this subject.

i. Ἀνομία Μυστήριον Ἐνεργεῖται

V. 7. Mystery of iniquity] It must here be explained 1. what ἀνομία iniquity, and 2. what μυστήριον mystery, and 3. what ἐνεργεῖται acted here signifie. For ἀνομία, that may signifie no more then some great enormous sin or conjuncture of sins; and so will very fitly be applied to this sect of the Gnosticks, who were the vilest sort of people in the world, in respect of their abominable Lusts, Perjuries, joining with Idols, &c. But the notion which seems to be most proper to this place is somewhat superadded to all this, viz. their malicious bitter persecuting of the Orthodox Christians. This is the notion of ἀνομία iniquity, Mat. 24. 12. upon the increasing of which many should be offended, v. 10. and their love of Christ, zeal to Christianity, should grow cold. And then it will be easie to conjecture what is the mystery of iniqnity, viz. this villany in both parts of it, the vile sins of these men, and their bitter hatred to Christians, both somewhat disguised and kept secret, not profes'd and avowed, (because it was not yet seasonable) but yet acted underhand more warily. And that is the meaning of ἐνεργεῖται agitur; for the word is generally used in a Passive sense (see Note, on Gal. 5. b.) and so signifies this, which is spoken of, to be already acted, ἀρχὴ ἔλαβε, hath received its beginning, saith Theophylact. And so in other the Epistles it is affirmed, that there were among them emulations, contentions, strifes, seditions, confusion, and every evil work, all this together with the unclean abominable sins, ἤδη, already, acted among them, but as yet more secretly and closely, only waiting their opportunity to break out, and shew themselves at a time of the best advantage, when that compliance of the Christians with the Jewes, the observation of the Mosaical rites (one of which was, that they that were Jews should not converse with those of another nation, Joh. 4. 9.) should be laid down, removed out of the way, the Apostles every where leaving the Jewes, and departing to the Gentiles, laying down the use of the Mosaical rites, and calling their disciples to come out from the Jewes, as they doe Act. 19. 9. Heb. 13. 10, 13. Gal. 2, and 3, and 4, and 5.

Ibh

k, ὁ ἄνομος the wicked

V. 8. That wicked] That ὁ ἄνομος the wicked here is the same with ὁ ἀντικείμενος the opposer v. 4. there is no question; and that this was Simon and his followers hath been shewed (Note e.) and clearly appears by the character v. 9. that his coming is κατ' ἐνέργειαν τοῦ Σατανᾶ, according to the working of Satan in all power, and signes, and lying wonders, that is, that they used sorcery, and did many strange things (such prodigies as the Devil could help him to act) by that means, and as it follows v. 10. succeeded very prosperously among many hypocritical, unsincere, carnal Christians, who were (by their indulgence of lusts, and promise of immunity from persecutions, and by the strangeness of their sorceries, Simon undertaking to flie in the aire, &c.) corrupted and seduced by them. And this is farther described in the destruction, that upon this revelation of themselves should soon involve him and his. The relations of which are punctual among the antients. Of Simon saith Arnobius adv. Gent. l. 2. Viderat currum Simonis Magi, & quadrigas igneas Petri ore diffiatas, & nominato Christo evanuisse. Viderant pondere præcipitatum suo, cruribus jacuisse præfractis: pòst deinde perlatum Brundam, cruciatibus & pudore defessum, ex altissimi culminis se rursum præcipitasse fastigio. The chariot and fiery horses of Simon, with which this magician undertook to fly in the aire, were blown away by Peters mouth, & vanish'd at the name of Christ, and so he fell down, and brake his legs, and after some time was brought to Brunda, and through the torments and the shame became weary of his life, and cast himself headlong from the top of an high place, and so perish'd. Many other testimonies of this are elsewhere mentioned, (see Note a. on 2 Tim. 3.) And for the Gnosticks, his followers, 'tis Eusebius's affirmation of them l. 3. c. κθ'. Λόγῳ δὲ τῷ παντὶ εἰς τὸ παντελὲς ἀπορριφῆναι, In a moment they were utterly destroyed, the αἰφνιδίῳ ὀλέθρῳ swift destruction, foretold 1 Thess. 5. 2. And two means are here mentioned by which this should be done, first, by the breath of Christs mouth, secondly, by the brightness of his coming: the former noting the power of the Gospel in the mouth of the Apostles Peter and Paul, who contended with him personally at Rome, and brought ruine and shame upon him; and the 2d noting the vengeance that befell the Jewes by the Roman armies, at which time the Gnosticks, that sided with them, were destroyed also (see Note on 2 Pet. 2. 9. and Jude 2.) And this seems to be so called 1 Tim. 6. 14. where he is charged to continue constant to Christ whatever combats he met with', μέχρι τῆς ἐπιφανείας untill the appearance of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was surely somewhat then approaching, that was likely to fall out in Timothy's life time, and which as he adds ver. 15. God, as the blessed and onely potentate, expressing his mercy and power together to all that adhere unto him, and as King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, subduing & bringing down the stoutest persecutors, should shew forth, καιροῖς ἰδίοις in those proper seasons, which he had appointed for it.

1.* FInally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord † may have free course, and be glorified even as it is * with you;]

1. And as I pray for your comfort and constancy, ch. 2. 17. so it becomes you to be constant in prayer for me and the rest of the Apostles and ministers of the Gospel, that our preaching may be successfull and prosperous, meeting with no such obstacles as may hinder the progresse of it, but may be every where received, and obeyed, and honoured by the good lives of the believers, as it hath among you;

2. And that we may be delivered from a † unreasonable and wicked men; for all men have not faith.]

2. And that we may be rescued out of the hands of these villanous hereticks the Gnosticks, that deal in all unnatural impieties, and are ready to oppose us wheresoever we come, & keep many from receiving the faith, and corrupt other hypocritical professors, and such there are in the world; all are not sincere.

2. ἀπὸ

*the evil one πονηροῦ

3. But the Lord is faithfull, who shall stablish you, and keep you from * evil.]

3. But for you, I trust in that God who hath promised to secure and defend you from being overcome with such temptations of these cunning diabolical hereticks.

4. And we have confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both doe and will doe the things which we command you.]

4. And through the grace of God watching over you, I am confident that ye will still continue to obey our advises to you, as hitherto ye have done.

†patience of ὑπομονὴν

5. And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the † patient waiting for Christ.]

5. To which confidence I shall joyn my prayer to that God, that he will direct you so to love him, as to endure any persecutions rather then deny the faith, to confesse Christ, whatsoever it cost you.

6. Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw your selves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us.]

6. Now I charge you by vertue of that Apostolical power given me by Christ, that if you observe any man to cast off obedience to those rules which we gave at our being with you, that is, to forsake his work, the businesses of his calling (see 1 Thess. 5. note d.) then (after a first admonishing of him 1 Thess. 5. 14. and a second here v. 12.) you proceed to the Censures of the Church against him, by that means to keep others from being corrupted by him, or doing as he doth, see v. 14.

7. For your selves know how ye ought to follow us; for we behaved not our selves disorderly among you.]

7. For you cannot but remember, how beside my admonitions to this purpose, I set you by my own example a pattern in this, by my not spending my time idly among you.

8. Being very careſull to put no man to any charges, nor to eat what we did not pay for, but earning our living by hard labour in our occupations.

8. Neither did we eat any mans bread for nought, but wrought with * labour and travel night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you.]

* wearineſs and toile κόπῳ καὶ μόχθῳ

9. Not becauſe we might not lawfully receive from you if we would, 1 Cor. 9. 4. but on purpoſe to give you a pattern, that you labour as we have done.

9. Not becauſe we have not power, but to make our ſelves an enſample unto you to follow us.]

b. 10. For when we were among you preaching Chriſt, it was our command to all, what the Jewes have thought fit to require of all men proverbially, that they muſt labour themſelves, and not expect to be maintained by others labours, being idle themſelves.

10. For even when we were with you this we commanded you, that b if any would not work, neither ſhould he eat.]

11. Some ſuch idle perſons we hear there are among you, that are diſobedient to our orders, and give over their work, and ſpend their time impertinently in things that they ſhould not meddle with.

11. For we hear that there are ſome which walk among you diſorderly, working not at all, but † are buſie-bodies.]

† buſie themſelves about that which belongs not to them περιεργαζομένους

12. And to theſe we again give warning now, (as before we did 1 Theſſ. 5. 14.) that they live and labour quietly, and ſo earn their living, (and if upon this ſecond admonition they reform not, let them be cenſured v. 6.)

12. Now them that are ſuch we command and exhort by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that with quietneſs they work, and eat their own bread.]

13. And as for you, brethren, be careful to doe as much good as you can, and be not idle.

13. But ye, brethren, be not * weary in well-doing.]

* ſluggiſh ἐγκακήσητε

14. And as before ver. 6. ſo now I ſay again, if upon this ſecond admonition given by this Epiſtle v. 12. any man ſtill continue refractary in this matter, let him be cenſured and branded by you, and dealt with as an excommunicate perſon, that ſo by ſhaming ye may poſſibly reform him. See note on 1 Cor. 5. g.

14. And if any man obey not our word by this Epiſtle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be aſhamed:]

15. Yet meanwhile apply unto him your friendly Chriſtian admonitions, that thoſe, together with that ſhame, may work effectually upon him, which is your duty to endevour on every ſinner, and not to deal with him as men deal with their enemies, for how ill ſoever he is, you are to doe him all good imaginable; and therefore I preſcribe you that of withdrawing familiar commerce from him, as a method of all others moſt probable to doe him good, and then that may be a ſeaſon of advantage for your exhortations to work upon him.

15. Yet count him not as an enemy, but admoniſh him as a brother.]

16. Now † the Lord of peace himſelf give you peace alwaies, by all means. The Lord be with you all.

† the very Lord of peace αὐτὸς.

17. This concluſion wherein I ſalute you, I write with mine own hand, and ſo it is my cuſtome to doe in all my Epiſtles.

17. The ſalutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every Epiſtle; ſo I write.]

18. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ατοπος V. 2. Unreaſonable] That ἄτοποι abſurd men, with the addition of πονηροὶ wicked or villanous, ſignifie the Gnoſticks here (deſcribed ch. 2.) will appear firſt, by a place in Polycarpus's Epiſtle to the Philippians, p. 18. where citing the place 1 Cor. 3. 9. againſt μαλακοὶ and ἀρσενοκοῖται, thoſe that were guilty of effeminacy and unnatural luſts, he adds, ὅτι οἱ ποιοῦντες τὰ ἄτοπα, neither they that doe abſurd things, noting the ἄτοπα to be an expreſſion of thoſe filthy ſins againſt nature. Secondly, by the prayer which here follows v. 5. that God would direct their hearts to the love of God, & patience of Chriſt, that is, that conſtancy of love to God, which conſiſts in confeſſing him in time of perſecutions, the want of which is often noted in the Gnoſticks, and thoſe that were corrupted by their infuſions. See Note on 1 Joh. 2. a. And accordingly in that Epiſtle of Polycarpus p. 20. deſcribing Simon Magus the father of the Gnoſticks, he makes up his character of theſe 4. things, firſt, denying Chriſt to be come in the fleſh, ſecondly, not confeſſing the teſtimony of the croſſe, thirdly, converting the oracles of God to their own luſts, fourthly, denying the reſurrection and judgment to come. To which he ſets oppoſite the Chriſtians patient ſuffering for Chriſt, pag. 21. and loving him that died for them.

The

THE FIRST EPISTLE
PAUL THE APOSTLE
TIMOTHY.

1. THat Timothy first converted by Paul, (and therefore here called his own son in the faith, ver. 1, 2.) and that some time before his coming to Paul at Lystra, Act. 16. (as appears by the testimonial which he then had of the brethren v. 2.) and then after employed by him for the planting of the Gospel, Act. 16. 3, &c. was at length placed Bishop of Ephesus, the prime Metropolis of Asia, appears sufficiently in the records and writings of the ancient Church. So the anonymous Author of his life in Photius Num. 254. Ἀπόστολος Τιμόθεος κατὰ τὴν μεγάλην Παύλου χειροτονεῖται τῆς Ἐφεσίων μητροπόλεως ὑπέρτατος, καὶ ἐνθρονίζεται, The Apostle (so were others called beside the primary) Timothy is ordained and installed Bishop of the Metropolis of the Ephesians by S. Paul. So the Fathers of the Council of Chalcedon Act. 11. who from Timothy to their time reckon 27 Bishops of Ephesus. So Eusebius l. 3. c. 4. Τιμόθεος ὁ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ πρῶτος ἱστορεῖται πρῶτος ἐπισκοπῶν κληχέναι, Timothy is storied to have been the first Bishop of the province of Ephesus. And the same might be testified by innumerable more. S. Chrysostome may be taken for all, Hom. 15. in 1 Tim. 5. 19. Δῆλον ὅτι ἐκκλησίαν λοιπὸν ὁ ἐμπιστεύμενος ὁ Τιμόθεος, ἢ καὶ ἔθνος ὁλόκληρον τὸ τῆς Ἀσίας, It is manifest that Timothy was intrusted with a Church or rather with a whole nation, that of Asia. Now for the time when he was placed in this Bishoprick, as that will be usefull to direct us when this Epistle was written, so will that it self be concluded from this first Epistle ch. 1. 3. where S. Paul's exhorting him to abide at Ephesus, that he might admonish some not to teach other doctrine, &c. is an intimation of his leaving him Bishop resident there, and that, saith he, he did πορευόμενος εἰς Μακεδονίαν, going or when he went into Macedonia, that is, in that part of S. Pauls travail set down Act. 20. There v. 1. S. Paul went out from Ephesus, πορευθεὶς εἰς Μακεδονίαν, to go into Macedonia, at which time in all probability, (and by Analogie with the words 1 Tim. 1. 3.) he left Timothy Bishop there. 'Tis true that when S. Paul is in Macedonia Timothy is with him there, 2 Cor. 1. 1. and after he had wintered in Epirus, Tit. 3. 12. and spent three months in Greece, Act. 20. 2, 3. and returned back into Macedonia, then Timothy is with him, Act. 20. 4. and goes straight to Troas v. 5. All which might well be after the leaving him at Ephesus, either on occasion of the businesse of that Church, about which he might go to consult S. Paul being so neer, or in obedience to some summons of S. Paul (such as after, we see he had to a longer journey, even to come to Rome to him, 2 Tim. 4. 9.) After this coming to Troas, Act. 20. 6. (although I suppose he was with him among the rest of the Bishops of Asia at Miletus v. 17. yet) there is no farther mention of Timothy in the book of the Acts. Supposing then that this of Act. 20. 1. was the point of time to which S. Paul referres, when he speaks of his being left to reside at Ephesus, and supposing again that he could not write to him at any part of the time when he was with him, and yet the whole contexture of the Epistle rendring it probable, that it was written (by way of directions) soon after his leaving him there, and that whilst it was yet uncertain to S. Paul whether he should come to Ephesus again, c. 3. 14, 15. (which also may be the reason that there are no salutations in the close, because of his coming newly from thence, and his thoughts to be there again speedily) it will be from these premises reasonable to conclude that either it was written on the way as he went from Ephesus toward Macedonia Act. 20. 1. at Troas perhaps where he stayed a while (see Note a. on Title of 2 Cor.) or at his very first coming to Macedonia, or in Epirus or in Greece: but the former of them, as neerest to his coming from Ephesus, is the most probable. That it was before his coming to Miletus, Act. 20. 17. may thus appear: 1 Tim. 3. 14. He tells Timothy that he hopes shortly to come to him, (to Ephesus that chief Metropolis of Asia) but at his being at Miletus he tells them that he knows, that they shall see his face no more, Act. 20. 25, 38. and therefore that his being at Miletus must needs be after the writing this Epistle: his meeting them at Miletus, being to supply the place of his coming to Ephesus, which had formerly been designed by him, but now put off through hast to get to Jerusalem by Pentecost, Act. 20. 16. As for the subscription of the Epistle, that it was from Laodicea in Phrygia Pacatiana, 'tis Cujacius's observation that that could not be antient, there being no distinction between Pacatiana and Salutaris till the time of Constantine; and it is farther evident by Col. 2. 1. that Paul had not at the writing of that Epistle to the Colossians been at all at Laodicea, and yet that that was long after the writing of this Epistle, that being set by Chronologers An. Chr. 59. Soon after this, as S. Paul tells the Ephesians and Asiaticks, Act. 20. 29. that after his departure grievous wolves should enter in among them, so he here saith, he left Timothy at Ephesus to fortifie the Church against them; and who those wolves are appears by their Fables and Genealogies here ch. 1. 4. which are the known character of the Gnosticks then, and the Valentinians afterward; and so is the swerving from charity, good conscience, and faith unfeigned, &c. ver. 5, 6. Besides this suppressing of hereticks, another special use there was of leaving Timothy at Ephesus, that, as Metropolitan of Asia, he might ordain Bishops and Deacons in all the other cities where they were wanting, as is said of Titus in Crete. And accordingly this Epistle brings him particular directions to that purpose, ch. 3. Which is a proof that this Epistle was written to him soon after his fixing there, to furnish him for the discharge of this office. Mean while this is evident, that the Gnosticks were now scattered in Asia, and so characterised by him ch. 4. and ch. 6. and there distinctly specified (more than in any other place of the New Testament) under the title of ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις c. 6. 20. science falsly so named, that is, the men that assumed falsly to themselves the name of Gnosticks or knowing men. And against some doctrines and practices of theirs he here arms him.

CHAP. I.

1. I Paul that (Act. 13. 7.) was sent out and constituted an Apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the designation of him, who being God incarnate is both our Saviour and Lord, to rescue us from the power of sin, and to rule and reign in our hearts, even he on whom all our trust and expectation and hope of good is founded and built;

PAUL an Apostle of Jesus Christ * by the commandment of God our Saviour and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope,] * according to the appointment, κατ' ἐπιταγὴν

2. Unto Timothy, my own son in the faith, Grace, mercy and peace from God our father, and Jesus Christ our Lord.]

2. To my dearly beloved Timothy whom I first converted, and so begat to Christianity, I send my heartiest wish of all good from God our carefull and loving father, and Christ Jesus to whom he hath committed all power in his Church unto the worlds end.

3. This Epistle I now send thee for thy directions, in pursuance of that Commission which I gave thee when I constituted and appointed thee to reside as Bishop at Ephesus, at the time when I went thence to go to Macedonia Act. 20. 1. that presiding and governing the Church there, thou mightest suppresse the seeds of the Gnostick heresie sowed there, and keep men within the form of sound doctrine, that which in all Churches was delivered by us,

3. † As I besought thee to * abide still at Ephesus when I † went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine,] † Even as Καθὼς * continue at παρεμεῖναι † was going πορευόμενος

4. And warn thy flock not to heed those fabulous pedegrees of the gods, which under the name of Æones the Gnosticks (see note on Col. 2. 2.) talk so much of, and so bring in many perplext disputes, rather than instruct men in the way of salvation under the Gospel, or of Christian doctrine in matters belonging to God.

a. 4. Neither give heed to fables and endlesse [a] genealogies, which * minister questions, rather than † edifying which is in faith; so doe.] * yield παρέχειν † the edification of God which is in faith οἰκοδομίαν θεοῦ τὴν ἐν πίστει, or the dispensation of God, for the King's Ms. and an Antient one in Magdalen College ox. read οἰκονομίαν

5. The substance and perfection, or else the designe and aime of Christian duty being charity, whose genealogie is this, faith unfeigned begets a good conscience, that is, abstaining from all sin, that purity of heart, that love of all men:

4. Now the end of the commandment is charity, out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned:]

6. Which some aiming not at, have gone out of the way to a divinity made up of empty words, for so was the Gnosticks, see v. 4.

6. From which some having swerved have * turned aside unto vain jangling,] * been turned aside to vain discourses, ἐξεκλίθησαν εἰς ματαιολογίαν

7. Joyning Judaisme to Christianity, & undertaking to expound the Law, and to find those mysteries in it which are the foundations of their impure doctrines, but observe no part of the Law, nor at all apply it to the ruling of their lives.

7. † Desiring to be teachers of the Law, * understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.] † who will be doctors of the law, θέλοντες εἶναι νομοδιδάσκαλοι * not thinking either μηδὲ νοοῦντες

8. Which is consequently a grievous abuse of the Law, whose whole goodness consists in this, that a man order his actions so by it, as to abstain from the sins that it forbids, and doe the good which it requires;

8. But we know that the Law is good, if a man use it lawfully;]

9. It being certain that as good men will perform their duty without any law, so the Law of Moses, as all other lawes, was given to the sons of those excellent Patriarchs, because it was foreseen they would not alwaies continue so good, and so was on this very designe to keep in order such men as these, to restrain such impure Gnosticks as these from the sins they are guilty of, (and not to stand them in any stead, except they live according to it.) Accordingly you know that Moses's Law is very severe against the rebellious and contumacious, against blasphemers and seditious, such as Corah Num. 16. 8. called Sinners there, (and to such are the Gnosticks compared Jude 11.) to the impure, and such as contemn all that is holy, such as Esau, to whom the Gnosticks are compared Heb. 12. 16. against parricides and murtherers,

9. Knowing this, that the Law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawlesse and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murtherers of fathers and murtherers of mothers, for manslayers,]

10. Against fornicators, and those of the foulest sort of those, Lev. 18. 22. against those that steal and sell servants, Exod. 21. 16. Deut. 24. 7. against false and perjurious persons, and generally all those sins and sinners that now the Gospel of Christ makes to be such, and these hereticks are noted for,

10. For whoremongers, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for menstealers, for lyers, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing which is contrary to † sound doctrine,] † wholesome ὑγιαινούσῃ

b. 11. According to the Gospel of Christ or of God, when he dwelt among us, appeared here on the earth, for the preaching of which I have been constituted an Apostle.

11. According to * the [b] glorious Gospel of the blessed God, which was committed to my trust.] * the Gospel of the glory

12. And I account it a great mercy of Christ, both that he hath given me abilities, and that he hath vouchsafed to make use of me for so great a work, thinking me a fit person to be so intrusted, and setting me apart to doe him service in the Church,

12. And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithfull, † putting me into the ministery,] † appointing me for διακονίαν αὐτοῦ

13. Having been so hugely unfit and unworthy of such an honour by my former behaviour whilst I was a Jew, blaspheming the name of Christ, persecuting the Christians, and using them most despitefully. Notwithstanding all which God was mercifull to me, looked on it but as an act of blind zeal in me, and therefore laid it not so to my charge as to deliver me up to my self, but recalled me mightily in the midst of my carreer.

13. Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and * injurious; but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief.] * a contumelious person, ὑβριστὴν

14. Since which time he hath most plentifully poured out on me the gifts of the Holy Ghost, and proportionably to them, a lively faith toward Jesus Christ, and an earnest zeal for his Gospel, which hath been wrought in me by his grace.

14. And the grace of our Lord † was exceeding abundant, with faith, and love which is in Christ Jesus.] † hath superabounded, ὑπερεπλεόνασεν

c. 15. O 'tis a truth of an huge price, and fit to be the onely tradition or Cabala among us Christians, in stead of all the Jewish secrets and mysteries that are talked of by these hereticks,

15. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all [c] acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief.]

ticks, that Christ Jesus came a Saviour into the world on purpose to rescue out of their evil courses, and to obtain pardon and salvation upon their reformation, for the greatest sinners in the world, of which number I have reason to look on my self as the principal of all others.

16. Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew forth all long-suffering for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe in him to life everlasting.]

16. But being such God hath dealt most mercifully with me, called me from heaven whilst I was persecuting him, that I might be a prime object of his patience and longanimity, and in order of time the first that was so miraculously called, that so the wickedest of the Gentiles may in me have an example of hope of mercy, if they shall come in unto Christ.

17. Now unto the King [d] * eternal, immortal, invisible, the onely wise God,] be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

* of ages, or Angels

17. Now to the great ruler and wise disposer of all ages of the world, Governour and commander of Angels, the one true God, whose attributes are to be incorruptible, invisible, and wise beyond all imagination, so as none partakes with him, and from whom all the wisdome of all others doth proceed,

d.

18. This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the [e] prophecies which went before on thee, that thou † by them mightst [f] warre a good warfare,]

† according to them in times

18. Now to thee, O Timothy, thou who wert first converted by me, I give this commission, as a trust I commit to thee (agreeable to the revelations which were made of thee, that, though young, thou shouldst be ordained a Bishop in the Church ch. 4. 14. though we find no mention of this in the Acts, as we doe of Saul and Barnabas, Act. 13. 2.) that according to that appointment of God, thou shouldst carefully discharge that Episcopal office committed to thee,

e. f.

19. * Holding faith and a good conscience, which some having put away, concerning faith have made shipwrack ;]

* Having ἔχων

19. Holding fast and continuing constant in the true faith, and discharge of a good conscience; not as some, which falling into impure lives, have afterward fallen into foule errors in point of faith.

20. Of whom is Hymenæus and Alexander, whom I have delivered unto Satan, that they may † learn not to blaspheme.]

† be disciplin'd παιδευθῶσιν

20. Such are in thy Church of Ephesus, Hymenæus, 2 Tim. 2. 17. and Alexander, 2 Tim. 4. 14. whom by the Censures of the Church I delivered into Satans power, to chasten and afflict them; that they may reform, and recover from that very ill course in which they are both for faith and manners.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. γενεαλογίαις

V. 4. Genealogies] Most of the divinity of the Gnosticks (made up out of the Greek poets, Antiphanes, Hesiod, Philistion, &c.) consisted of ζυζυγίαι and συναλογίαι, conjunctions, & then from them Genealogies, how one thing joyns with another and begets a third (out of Night and Silence come forth Chaos, &c.) and applies all the Theologie and Genealogies of the Gods in Orpheus, &c. to the αἰῶνες, as they called the Angels, (see Note d.) In reference and opposition to which it is, that the Apostle here v. 5. sets down a true Christian genealogie of that excellent grace of Charity, so much wanting in those hereticks, accordingly as it is produced in a Christian, and that, saith he, is the special genealogie, with the study of which we Christians (especially they that call themselves Gnosticks) need to trouble our selves. See Tit. 3. 9.

b. δόξη

V. 11. Glorious Gospel] Δόξη here seems to referre to the schechina among the Jewes, which we have often spoke of, noting the presence or appearance of God, of Christ on the earth among us. See Note on Mat. 3. k. and 16. n.

c. Ἀποδοχὴ

V. 15. Acceptation] What is the importance of ἀποδοχὴ here, must be learn'd from the use of קבל among the Jewes, especially in the Chaldee idiome, where it signifies to receive any thing for undoubted, and with an honourable respect, the same that they expresse also by שמע to hear, that is, obey, and believe with the exhibition of honour; see Paulus Fagius on the Chaldee Paraphrase, Gen. 25. 15. Thus when 2 Kin. 14. 11. the Hebrew reads שמע, and the Greek ἤκουσεν heard, the Chaldee Paraphrase reads קבל received; by which appears what is the meaning of δέχεσθαι προφήτην, to receive a prophet, Mat. 10. 41. (which in like manner Luke expresses by ἀκούειν to hear, in opposition to ἀθετεῖν to neglect, Luk. 10. 16.) to wit, to believe and honour him. So 1 Cor. 2. 14. ὁ δέχεται τὰ τοῦ πνεύματος, receives not the things of the spirit, that is, neither believes nor values them, but as it follows, they are foolishnesse unto him. So Joh. 1. 12. λαμβάνειν to receive is explained by πιστεύειν to believe in the end of the verse, and so παραλαμβάνειν v. 11. where the Syriack hath קבל in both places. Hence are the Cabala of the Jewes, their receivings, that is, traditions (as to give Eph. 4. 8. is all one with to receive, Psal. 68. 18. and as in the Greek λῆμμα and δῶρον receipt and gift are all one) which they esteem so undoubted and honourable. For as the office of the Doctor is מסר to deliver, so of the Disciple קבל to receive, as in the beginning of Pirche Aboth, Moses קבל received the Law from Mount Sinai, ומסרה and delivered it to Joshuah. And as from the former of these words is the Hebrews קבלה Cabala, their doctrine received, and had in so much reverence, so from the second is their מסורת their doctrine delivered by hand from their antecessors, and without writing transmitted to posterity, the first expressed in the New Testament often by παράδοσις, the second by παράδοσις. So that this is the full sense of this place, If there be any undoubted dogma worthy of belief, any true Cabala, this certainly is it, that Christ came into the world to save sinners.

Παράδοσις

d. Αἰῶνες

V. 17. Eternal] The αἰῶνες here of which God is said to be the King, may possibly signifie the several ages of the world, and no more, that being the ordinary notation of αἰὼν age. But it is also known what notion of αἰῶνες there was among the hereticks of those first times, set down at large by Irenæus in his discovery of the Valentinians, where there is a great deal of phantastical unintelligible stuffe about the Æones. And therefore considering that the Gnosticks heresie was now abroad in the Church of Ephesus, named distinctly in the close of this Epistle c. 6. 20. and referr'd to in a great part of this Chapter v. 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10. and because the Valentinians were but the progeny of these, saith Irenæus, and took their doctrines from them, and because it hath been already shewn (Note on Col. 2. a. and h.) that these were the titles of the Angels who were in Ezechiel called חיות living creatures (and from thence these αἰῶνες formed by them;) it is therefore not improbable that the Apostle might referre to this Theologie of theirs here, as he had done before v. 4. by their genealogies. And then this will be the meaning of the βασιλεὺς τῶν αἰώνων, the King, or Ruler, or supreme Commander, (as of the whole world, so particularly) of the Angels, his constant subjects and servants, and executioners of his will, those to which under the name of αἰῶνες, the Gnosticks sticks attribute so much. To the same purpose is added the incorruptible, invisible, onely wise God (in opposition to Simon Magus, whom they taught to be the supreme God, being but a corruptible, visible man, that by his sorcery got the reputation of wisdom among them.) And the giving glory and praise to him is an antient form of Confession of faith, which was wont to be done by way of Doxologie, and so is here set as a short Creed, against the Gnosticks, so as the Doxologie in that form which is now continued in the Church was framed against other hereticks.

Βασιλεὺς τῶν αἰώνων

c. Προφητείας

V. 13. Prophecies] That the Apostles received frequent revelations, and never more distinctly and frequently than to this matter of designing Bishops and Governours of the Church, may appear by many places. Thus concerning Paul and Barnabas the text is distinct, Act. 13. 2. The holy Spirit said, Separate to me Paul and Barnabas for the work to which I have called them; and so here of Timothy, and c. 4. 14. for that by prophecy here is meant such revelation, may appear by comparing 1 Cor. 14. 25. with v. 30. for there what is προφητεύειν to propheſie in the former place, (and v. 31.) is ἀποκαλυφθῆναι αὐτῷ to receive a revelation in the latter. To this sense Saint Chrysostome and Theophylact are clear, Τὸ τῆς διδασκαλίας καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα μέγα ὄν, τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ δόσεως ἤδη, ὥστε τὸν ἄξιον δέξασθαι, διὰ τοῦτο παλαιὸν ἀπὸ τῆς προφητείας ἐγίνοντο οἱ ἱερεῖς, τουτέστιν ὑπὸ Πνεύματος ἁγίου· ἔπρεπε δὲ καὶ τὸν Τιμόθεον ἡρῆσθαι τῷ ἱερωσύνῃ, The dignity of being a Doctor and a Priest being a great one, wants God's suffrage that a worthy person may receive it, thereupon the Priests were made antiently by prophecie, that is, by the Holy Ghost. Thus Timothy was chosen to the Priesthood, that is, his Episcopacy. And so generally 'tis said of the Bishops of Asia, that the Holy Ghost had set them over the flock, Act. 20. 28. Thus saith Clemens Romanus of the Apostles, that at their first preaching in every region and city, καθίστανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν, δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους, They constituted their first fruits, making trial and judgment of them by the spirit, into Bishops & Deacons: and again, προέγνωσιν γὰρ πλήρεις τελείαν κατέσησαν τὰς προειρημένας, having received perfect foreknowledg, that is, revelation or prophecy, they constituted the forementioned Bishops and Deacons, and not onely so for the present, but for the next course or succession; for so saith he, μεταξὺ ἐπινομὴν δεδώκασιν ὅπως ἐὰν κοιμηθῶσι, διαδέξωνται ἕτεροι δεδοκιμασμένοι ἄνδρες τὴν λειτουργίαν αὐτῶν, Afterward they gave order that if those whom they had constituted should dye, other men that were approved (by the spirit also) should undertake their Ministery, or employment. So saith Clemens Alexandrinus of Saint John, that in Asia he constituted Bishops, sometimes (ὅλας ἐκκλησίας ἀρμόσων) made up whole Churches, ὅπου δὲ κλῆρον ἴδοι πνεύματι κληρούμενον τῶν ὑπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος σημαινομένων, sometimes ordained some certain persons, such as were signified to him by the Spirit. (See Act. 8. Note f.) That this should thus be done in the Apostles time, besides the will of God, there is this reason also discernible, because in the first preaching of the Faith to any City or Region, performed by the Apostles in their journeyes, as it was necessary that the Apostle before he went away from them should leave a Governour among them, so it was not possible in so short a stay as ordinarily was made after the conversion of some in a city, to discern by any humane meanes, who of those νεόφυτοι new converts would be fit for that imployment; and so this rendred it very necessary that the Apostles, either by the discerning spirit which they had extraordinarily bestowed on them, or by particular Revelation, should thus make designation of the persons. But after, when Churches were setled, and men had continued in the Faith so long as to give testimony of their sincerity and abilities to qualifie them for that office, there was not that need of Revelation in this matter, humane meanes being in some measure sufficient to direct in it. And accordingly by the qualifications which Saint Paul names to Timothy and Titus in their ordaining Bishops in every Church, it is evident that they made Bishops upon observation and experience of mens behaviour and abilities, and upon the testimonials of the brethren, (and therefore were forbid to make a novice Bishop, that is, one lately converted, 1 Tim. 3. 6. because of him they could not have this experience, or these testimonies) and were not afforded divine Revelation in it, or any thing proportionable to that.

Euseb. l. 3. c. 23.

Ib. Warre a good warfare] What is the meaning of the phrase στρατεύειν στρατείαν here must be fetch'd out of Num. 4. 3. where the Levites are said to goe לצבא into the army or host, which is rendred by the Septuagint λειτουργῆν to officiate; and so Num. 1. 50. λειτουργήσουσι καὶ παρεμβαλοῦσι, they shall minister and encamp: so generally under the Law the ministery of the priests is compared to a warfare, the Temple to a camp, the inferior officers to watchmen, and the like; so Exod. 38. 8. when the women brought their gifts after child-birth to the Tabernacle, they are expressed by הצבאות אשר צבאו the warriers that warred in the dore of the tabernacle. And therefore it is that 2 Sam. 6. 2. where there is speech of the bringing back of the Arke, it is called the Arke of the Lord, whose name is the Lord of hosts, who dwelleth between the Cherubims, that is, the Lord of the Arke or Tabernacle (the Temple being not then built) dwelling in it, between the Cherubims: and that perhaps is the reason why in Zacharies prophecie, which concerns the rebuilding of the Temple, he is so oft intitled the Lord of hosts, as the title most agreeable to stirre them up to that work: so when Psal. 103. the Angels are called his host, 'tis because they minister unto him, and, as it follows, doe his will; and so the Sun and Moon are called the host of God, as those that minister unto him. Thus when Isa. 40. 2. it is said, Their warfare is accomplished (where the Old Latine reads corruptly malitia for militia) it belongs clearly to the cessation of the Levitical Priesthood; and so Dan. 8. 13. the Sanctuary and the host shall be trodden down; and so Isa. 24. 21. In that day God will visit the host of the most High, the Temple in the like manner. Thus in the New Testament the weapons of our warfare 2 Cor. 10. 4. the instruments of the exercise of our Apostleship, the Censures of the Church, &c. and 2 Tim. 2. 3. καλὸς στρατιώτης, a good Souldier of Christ, that is, minister, and v. 4. I have fought a good fight, executed the office of my Apostleship as I ought to doe. And just so here, στρατεύειν καλὴν στρατείαν, to discharge the office of Evangelist first, then Bishop, as he ought.

CHAP. II.

8. 1. In the first place therefore I advise thee, and all the Bishops under thy Metropolis, that you have constant publick offices of devotion, consisting first, of supplications for the averting of all hurtfull things, sins and dangers; secondly, of prayers for the obtaining of all good things which you want; thirdly, of intercessions for others; and fourthly, of thanksgiving for mercies already received; and all these not only for your selves, but, in a greater diffusion of your charity, for all mankind,

1. I Exhort therefore, that first of all [a] supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men,

2. For

2. For Kings, and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godlinesse and * honesty.]

2. For the Emperors and rulers of Provinces under them, to whom we owe all our peaceable living in any place, in the exercise of religion and vertuous life, and therefore ought in reason to pray and give thanks for them.

* gravity, σεμνότητι

3. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour,]

3. For this God under the Gospel approves of, and requires at our hands,

4. † Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.]

4. In proportion to the example which he hath given us in himself, who earnestly desires the good of all mankind, and useth all powerfull means to bring them to reform their former wicked lives, and now to entertain the Gospel.

† Who wills that all men should escape, or be saved, Os θέλειτας ἀνθρώπους σωθῆναι * one also Mediator of God and men, εἷς καὶ μεσίτης θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων † a testimony in the proper season, μαρτύριον ἰδίοις καιροῖς * Or, with which I was intrusted for the King's MS. reads ἐπιστεύθην † or, the Spirit, for the King's MS. reads πνεύματι * pure † disputing διαλογισμοῦ * modesty αἰδοῖ

5. For there is one God, * and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;]

5. For it is but one God that is Creator of all, (who consequently designes and wills the good of all) and so likewise but one Mediator and peace-maker between God and man, even he that hath taken our common nature upon him, and in it died for all those whose nature he assumed, even Jesus Christ;

6. Who gave himself a ransome for all † to be testified in due time.]

6. Who died to redeem all men, and rescue them out of their evil waies, laying down his life, pouring out his blood in our stead, and thereby gave also a testimony of the truth of his doctrine, thus sealed with his blood, in the time appointed by God, and foretold by the prophets, as the season for the working this great work.

7. * Whereunto I am ordained a preacher and an Apostle, (I speak the truth in Christ and lie not,) a teacher of the Gentiles in † faith and verity.]

7. Which doctrine of his hath been intrusted to me to divulge and preach unto all men, Gentiles as well as Jewes (Christ knows that I speak the truth, whose commission it were very unsafe for me to feigne) that I might be the Apostle and Bishop of the Gentiles, to make known and administer the Gospel of Christ among them faithfully and truly, without concealing or adding any thing.

8. I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up * b holy hands, without wrath and † doubting.]

b

8. These directions then I give to all both men and women: first to men, that as the Jewes wash'd their hands before they lifted them up at the altar, Exod. 40. 32. Psal. 26. 6. so should all Christians pray, not onely in Jerusalem, but any where else, with innocent hearts, without any anger or malice (see note on Mat. 15. e.) quarrels or dissensions, preserving the bond of peace, (the one lip Zeph. 3. 9.) among all.

9. In like manner also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with * shamefastnesse and sobriety; not with broidered haire, or gold, or pearls, or costly array:]

9. The second direction I give for women, that they come to the assemblies, and sobriety the greatest ornament that they are capable of, and not setting themselves out vainly and with ostentation, in curious dressings of hair, in embroidery, or jewels, or other waies of sumptuous attire.

10. But (which becometh women professing godlinesse) with good works.]

10. But in stead of them to adde to modesty and sobriety v. 9. the richer embroidery and jewels of all good works, charity to others, which becomes Christian professors infinitely better than those other waies of expense upon fine clothes, &c.

* quietnesse ἡσυχίᾳ

11. Let the woman learn in * silence with all subjection.]

11. And of the woman I farther command, that she be content to learn, and to exercise obedience and subjection to those who are placed over her, both in the Church and at home.

† husband ἀνδρὸς * quietnesse ἡσυχίᾳ

12. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the † man, but to be in * silence.]

12. And that she neither undertake to teach in the Church, nor at home to have any authority over her husband, but to be obedient and meek and still in both those capacities.

13. For Adam was first formed, then Eve.]

13. According to the type which God gave in this matter in the first creation, forming Adam the man first, then the woman out of him, to denote her subordination to and dependence on him.

14. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.]

14. And there is little reason that this course, which was then setled, should since be changed; certainly no reason to be fetched from Adam's sin and fall, for the guilt of that lay especially upon the woman, for before Adam was deceived, (or Adam being not deceived,) the woman being first cheated her self by the serpent, was the cause and beginning of sin and ruine on all mankind.

† by the * purity ἁγνείᾳ

15. Notwithstanding she shall be c saved † in child-bearing d if they continue in faith and charity, and * holiness with sobriety.]

c, d

15. But by means of the seed of the woman, the Messias which should be born from her posterity, she had a promise of redemption, and so all others of her sex, upon condition of their perseverance in the faith, and love and obedience to Christ, and performance of those great Christian duties of chastity and modest behaviour, which I now require of them.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. V. 1. Supplications, prayers——] Of these four sorts of prayer 'tis affirmed by S. Chrysostome, that they were in his time all used in the Church, ὃν καθημερινῇ λαβεῖᾳ in the daily service, καὶ τοῦτο, saith he, ἴσασιν οἱ μύσται, πῶς καὶ ἐφ' ἑκάστῳ ἡμέραν γίνεται καὶ ὁ ἑσπερινὸς καὶ ὁ ὀρθρινός, and this is sufficiently known to all the Priests, or those that officiate morning and evening. And so it appears by the Liturgies. The word δεήσεις referring to the larger or lesser Collecta, that in the Letany for deliverance from all the evils there named, and the other after, in which the phrase τῷ Κυρίῳ δεηθῶμεν we humbly beseech thee O Father, is used, which is for the averting of evils. The second to the prayers for mercy and other wants. The third to the ἐντεύξεις, wherein the word ἐκκλησίαν, Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's Church, for Kings, &c. is inserted. And the fourth to the solemn thanksgiving for all men, and to the hymnes sung to the praise of God. And it may be observed, that the direction here of praying for Kings, &c. is agreeable to that of the Hebrews; R. Chaninah in Pirche Aboth c. 3. §. 2. חוי מתפלל בשלומה של מלכות שאלמלא מוראה איש את רעהו חיים בלעו Pray for the peace of the kingdome, for unlesse there be fear, men will devour one another alive. And so when Petronius came to set up Caligula's image in the Temple, they that would die rather than that should be done, being asked then whether they would wage warre with the Emperour, answered, No, but on the other side twice a day they offered sacrifice for the safety of the Emperour: see Josephus, and Jer. 29. 7. Accordingly was the Christians practice, as long as the Emperours continued heathen, praying in their Liturgies ὑπὲρ Βασιλέων for Kings, after, when they were Christian, δεόμεθα ὑπὲρ τῶν εὐσεβεστάτων καὶ φυλακτῶν βασιλέων, We pray thee for our most pious Kings, defenders of God, or of the faith of Christ, as it is in S. Chrysostomes Liturgie, and that ὑπὲρ κράτους, νίκης, διαμονῆς, εἰρήνης, ὑγείας, σωτηρίας αὐτῶν, for their power, victory, continuance, peace, health, safety. The very things which they prayed for for them when they were yet Gentiles, saith Tertull. in Apol. Sine monitore precamur pro omnibus Imperatoribus, vitam illis prolixam, imperium securum, domum tutam, exercitus fortes, senatum fidelem, populum probum, orbem quietum, We pray for a long life to our Emperors, a secure empire, a safe house, valiant armies, a faithfull senate, a good people, a quiet world. This was after done for Arrian and heretical Kings, as Constantius. b. Οὕτω χεῖρας νίπτειν. Hist. 70. interpret. p. 890. D.

V. 8. Holy hands] The ceremony of washing was among the Jewes constantly used before prayers: so Aristeus, Ἔθος ὂν τοῖς πᾶσι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, χερνιψαμένοις (I suppose it should be νιψαμένοις) τῇ θαλάσσῃ τὰς χεῖρας, ὡς ἂν ἤυξαντο πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, It is the custome for all the Jewes to wash their hands whensoever they pray to God: and so among the Mahometans. So Abul Faraii De moribus Arab. Fundamenta legis sunt 1. Munditiei cura, 2. Oratio, The foundations of the law are 1. Cleanneſſe, 2. Prayer. Others, as Al Gazal, that mention the fundamenta legis, leave out Mundities, Cleanneſs, and comprehend it in Oratio, Prayer, according to that saying of Mahomet (in Ebnol Athir) Non accipit Deus preces abſque mundatione, God receives not prayers without cleansing, or washing; and, Orationis clavis eſt mundities, Cleanneſſe is the key of Prayer, saith Al Gazal; and Mahomet again, Fundata eſt Religio in munditie, Religion is founded in cleanneſſe. This significant rite the Apostle here applies to the thing signified by it, cleanneſſe of the heart and actions, and makes that necessary to the offering up any acceptable service unto God. Of this Al Gazal an Arabick writer makes three degrees. 1. the cleansing the members of the body from unlawful actions, 2. the cleansing of the heart from all manners that are worthy of dispraise, all vices worthy of hatred, 3. the cleansing of the secret (that is, the inward) affections of the heart from every thing beside God, that they may be at full leisure to meditate of, or pray to him. See Mr Pocock's Notes on Abul Faraii p. 302. and Miscell. Notes c. 9. p. 388.

c. Σωθήσεται διὰ τεκνογονίας

V. 15. Saved in child-bearing] Some difficulty there is what is here meant by σωθήσεται διὰ τεκνογονίας, she shall be saved by child-bearing. A first notion that may be thought to belong to it, is, that as σώζεσθαι to be saved signifies oft to escape, noting some temporal deliverance (of which see Note on Luk. 13. b.) so διὰ may note by, that is, through, not as a means or condition, but as the term out of, or through, which the deliverance is wrought, as σώζεσθαι δι' ὕδατος being saved through the water 1 Pet. 3. 10. and διὰ πυρὸς through the fire 1 Cor. 3. 15. is being delivered out of the water and fire; and then the meaning of it will be, that she shall passe, though with some difficulty, safe through child-bearing; and this as a moderation of that curse inflicted upon woman kind upon Eves sin, that she should bring forth children in sorrow, or with sore travail at their birth. But this doth not seem probable to be the meaning of the place, because that which follows, if they continue in the faith, &c. v. 15. is not a condition of that deliverance from the peril of child-birth, that being common to believers and pagans, faithful & unfaithful. And indeed the curse being but this, that in sorrow she should bring forth, Gen. 3. 16. there hath since been no change in that matter, no promise upon any condition, that that punishment should be moderated. A second interpretation then there is, by observing the importance of the word τεκνογονεῖν (which is rendred child-bearing) c. 5. 14. where of the younger widow 'tis said let her marry, and τεκνογονεῖν, where it is thought to signifie, not onely or peculiarly bringing forth, but also breeding and brixging up children. And then that may be conceived the meaning of it here, and so the phrase will be, she shall be saved διὰ τεκνογονίας by bearing, and bringing up, or breeding, her children in the fear and nurture of the Lord, to which the next words are applied also, ἐὰν μείνωσιν, if they, that is, the children, abide in the faith, &c. But against this there are two exceptions also: 1. that τεκνογονεῖν in that c. 5. doth no way appear to signifie any more then bringing forth the children: for that other part of breeding or bringing up may well be contained under ruling the household (which there follows) of which the children are a part, and then there is no example that the word should signifie in that larger sense, and consequently no reason that it should be so interpreted here: 2dly, there is as little reason to apply the following words to the children, if they, that is, if the children, shall continue, &c. for beside that there is no other mention of the children precedent, save what is in that Compound word; and again, if τέκνα children be understood, then that plural Neuter must have a Verb singular to joyn with it, according to rules of Grammar and use of these Books, and so it would be μείνῃ, not μείνωσιν: besides these, I say, there will be little reason that the childrens continuing in the faith should be the condition of the salvation of the mother, when she is before presumed to have done her part in the breeding of them. The difficulties thus discernible against either of these interpretations make it not unreasonable to pitch upon a third interpretation, so as τεκνογονία shall signifie the womans bearing of the promised seed, which was the means foretold for the bruising the serpents head, and so for the rescuing the woman from that eternal punishment which was justly deserved by her sin. This is no new interpretation, but so ancient as to be mentioned by Theophylact, though not accepted by him, and this perfectly agrees with every circumstance in the Context. For thus it will connect with what went before; the woman, that is, Eve, v. 12. being deceived was in the transgression, that is, was first guilty of eating the forbidden fruit, but rescued from the punishment by the promised seed, that is, by her child-bearing, by the Messias, which was to be born of a woman, and so to redeem that nature which he assumed; but this not absolutely, but on condition of faith, and charity, and holiness, and sobriety, and continuing in all these: and this advantage belonging not only to the first, woman Eve, but to all her posterity, in respect of whom it is that the number is changed from the Singular to the Plural, She, as the representative of all women, had the promise made to her, Gen. 3. 15. but the condition must be performed by all others as well as her, or else the benefit will not redound to them. And this is the most literal importance of the διὰ also, being saved by this, as by a means of all womens and mens redemption and salvation.

d. ἐὰν μείνωσιν

Ib. If they continue] The changing of the number here from Σωθήσεται she shall be saved to ἐὰν μείνωσιν if they abide, hath had an account given of it already, Note c. to which it may farther be added, that this is but agreeable to the former discourse v. 9, 11. In v. 9. it is in the plural, that the women adorn themselves, but v. 11. in the singular, Let the woman learn in silence, & v. 12. But I suffer not a woman, &c. where it is certain that the women in one place are all one with the woman in the other places. And so it is here also.

CHAP. III.

Paraphrase.

*faithfull πιστὸς

1. THis is a * true saying, if a man desire the office of a Bishop, he desireth a [a] good work.]

1. Now to proceed to other directions necessary for thee, thou art to consider this great and weighty truth, that the Episcopal office, whensoever any man is a candidate or suiter for it, is an honourable (though never so dangerous and burthensome a) function, (see Jam. 3. 1.) and consequently that thou must be very carefull in the choice of the person whom thou, as Metropolitan of Ephesus, admittest to this dignity. a.

†sober, temperate νηφάλιον, σώφρονα *comely

2. A Bishop then must be blameless, the [b] husband of one wife, † vigilant, sober, [c] * of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach,]

2. And therefore these enquiries thou must make of any whom thou meanest to ordain, and receive the testimony of the Church concerning him (see note on Act. 6. b.) And therein let these qualifications be observed: 1. that he be a person not scandalous for any sin since his conversion, 2. that he have not put away his wife (so as is ordinary both among Jewes and heathens, but forbidden by Christ, except for fornication) and married another, 3. that he be sober and intent to his businesse, 4. moderate in all his actions, as that is opposed to distemper or giddinesse, 5. of a grave composed behaviour, humanity and modesty together, 6. apt to entertain strangers, 7. one that is able and ready to communicate to others the knowledge which himself hath, b. c.

3. Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre, but * patient, † not a brawler, not covetous,]

3. 8. A temperate person, in opposition to excessive drinking, 9. one that uses no violence, 10. that uses no sordid course for gain, 11. of a mild and peaceable disposition, (see note on 2 Cor. 10. a.) 12. neither apt to be angry and quarrel, nor 13. inslaved to the love of wealth,

4. One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity,]

4. 14. That by ruling his own family well, and keeping his children in obedience to discipline, and in all probity of manners, shews that he is fit to be a Governour,

5. (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the Church of God?)]

5. (For sure he that cannot rule so much a lesse province, will be unfit to be made a Governour of the Church of God.)

6. Not a [d] novice, lest being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil.]

6. 15. Not one that is but newly planted or instructed in the faith, lest so great a dignity so suddainly bestowed on him may tempt him to pride and vanity, and so bring the same ruine upon him that fell upon the devil, who was tempted in like manner by that glorious condition wherein he was created, and for his pride was cast out of heaven into the torments of hell, 2. Pet. 2. 4. d.

7. Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without, lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil.]

7. To these qualifications must be farther added, 16. that he be a person of a good reputation, under no reproach for his former life among unbelievers; for if he be, there will be danger that he be contumeliously used by them, and this the devill will make use of to insnare others, to give them aversions to the doctrine of such a man who is under so much scandal for his former life: see Theophylact.

8. Likewise must the Deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, nor greedy of filthy lucre,]

8. And as for the choosing of the Bishop all this care must be taken, so for the Deacons, that must every where be constituted to attend the Bishop, they also must be chosen grave, sober persons, not cunning and deceitfull, not given to excesse of drinking wine or strong drink, those which use not any sordid course for gain;

9. Holding the mysterie of the faith in a pure conscience.]

9. But such as being orthodox in point of faith, live pure and Christian lives according to the doctrine and directions thereof.

10. And let these also first be proved, and then let them use the office of a Deacon, being found blameless.]

10. And before any be thus assumed into holy Orders, let them be well known, and by testimony approved for sufficiency, piety, and good behaviour, and then being found blameless, persons of good report among all, let them then be assumed into Orders.

*The women in like manner, γυναῖκας ὡσαύτως

11. * Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithfull in all things.]

11. So likewise the women that have any office in the Church (see note on Tit. 2. b.) must be of a grave behaviour, not given to slander and calumniate, not given to any excesse, trusty in all that is committed to them.

12. Let the Deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.]

12. And as of the Bishops, so of the Deacons, let them be those that have not put away former wives upon dislikes, and married others (see note b.) but those which either have not married, or lived constantly with their first wives, and duly brought up their children, and governed their families.

† authority παῤῥησίαν

13. For they that have used the office of a Deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree, and great † boldnesse in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

13. For though the office of a Deacon be an inferior degree, yet it is a step to the higher, and they that behave themselves well in it, are fit to be assumed to an higher imployment, that of rulers or Bishops, that greater dignity in the Church of God, (see note on Joh. 7. a.)

14. These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly.]

14. These brief directions I now give thee, for the necessity of thy present employment, hoping to come quickly to thee my self, and furnish thee with all farther instructions.

15. But if I tarry long, that thou maist know how thou oughtest to behave thy self in the [e] house of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.]

15. But if it shall fall out that I cannot come, that then by these thou maist for the main be provided and instructed how to discharge the office committed to thee, being an office of stewardship or prefecture in Gods family, the Church, not of Idol false, but of the one true God, the pillar and basis which holds up the truth, sustains and keeps it from sinking. e.

*confessedly, ὁμολογουμένως † manifested by ἐφανερώθη ἐν *by in † among ἐν * in or with ἐν

16. And * without controversie great is the mystery of [f] godlinesse, God was † manifest in the flesh, justified * in the spirit, seen of Angels, preached † unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up * into glory.]

16. The truth, I mean, of Gods œconomy at this time, which is most precious and valuable, and tends mightily to the begetting of all piety and vertue in our hearts. And it consists of these so many degrees. 1. That God himself took on him our flesh, and here on earth visibly appeared among us in an humane shape, and did thereby make known his will unto us: and that this might be done more convincingly, 2dly, the Spirit descended on him at his baptisme, and gave testimony of him, Mat. 3. 17. and by leading him into the wilderneſſe to be tempted by the devill, convinced him that he was the son of God, Mat. 4. and by the power of God upon him he wrought many great and unheard of miracles, (and so his Apostles after him) which testified the truth of all he said: and 3dly, in these and in the discharge of his designed f.

designed office of revealing Gods will unto men, he was beheld and confess'd and adored by Angels themselves, good and bad; fourthly, he was by his Apostles preached and proclaimed not only to the Jewes, but Gentiles; fifthly, he was received and believed on by many of all nations through the world; and sixthly, he was visibly and with a glorious appearance of Angels taken up into heaven, there to reign for ever in the glory of God the Father, and to exercise power in his Church, and by converting of some, and destroying of others, to propagate his Gospell over the world.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Καλὸν ἔργον

V. 1. A Good work] Καλὸν ἔργον here signifies honestum opus, a work of some vertue and excellence in it self, as being that which is the consecrating a mans life, at least the greatest part of it, to the service of God, to which therefore an immarcessible crown of glory is proposed by Saint Peter as the reward, 1 Pet. 5. 4. where, as the great reward in heaven, Mat. 5. is an argument that the vertue to which it is assigned is a very eminent vertue, very acceptable in the sight of God: so is this an evidence that the good work here is look'd on as an eminent state of piety, so far from being censurable in him that desires it as he ought to doe, in order to the glory of God, or the love of our brethren, or the just provision for their spiritual wants, that it is very commendable in him, and the desire of it is an act of Christian piety in the more perfect degree, as the designing this without putting the flock to any charge is yet more excellent in Saint Paul, 1 Cor. 9. 18. And this may be farther evident by the fault of those who forsake this or any other Ecclesiastical office and return to the world, ad seculum, again; such was Demas who had been a fellow-labourer of S. Paul's, Philem. 24. Col. 4. 14. but after forsook him, 2 Tim. 4. 10. ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα. ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα, having loved this present age, or world: not that this crime was that love of the world, which 1 John 2. 15. is a crime in any Christian, but that he betook himself to his own worldly secular affaires again, forsaking the attendance on the service of God in his Church; as he that marries a wife is said to be solicitous for the things of this world, how he may please his wife: which love of the world, though it be not in it self a fault (for then marriage could not be faultless) yet if it be the taking one off from Ecclesiastical employments which hath devoted himself to them, will be a fault in him; and that was Demas's crime, not, as 'tis thought, forsaking of Christianity. And that was charged on some others, though Timothy stuck close to him, Phil. 2. 21. All seek τὰ ἑαυτῶν, &c. betake themselves to the care of their own secular affairs, not to the affairs of Christ, in attending on the Gospell, ver. 22. And the criminousnesse of this arising from hence, that he forsakes that which is more excellent for that which is lesse so, though it be not otherwise unlawfull, Ecclesiastical for Secular employments, is an evidence that the Ecclesiastical employment is καλὸν ἔργον in this notion, a good, that is excellent, work, a state (if lived in as it ought) of some perfection.

b. Μιᾶς γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ

V. 2. Husband of one wife] What is the meaning of μιᾶς γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ the husband of one wife both here and v. 12. and Tit. 1. 6. and of ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband c. 5. 9. will not be easily resolved. For if it should be interpreted as an interdict of choosing to the office of Bishop or Deacon any who had lived in Polygamie, that is, had had more wives at once, though that might have some colour of sense in it from the practice of the Jewes, as far as concerned the man (who among them was permitted Polygamie) yet this is not appliable to the widow or woman c. 5. 9. for never among Jewes (or even Turks) was it permitted that the woman should have more then one husband at once; and the reason is clear, because the multitude of husbands did not help forward, but rather hinder propagation, for which it was that the multitude of wives was permitted. Onely among the Barbarians there is mention of the πολυάνδρῳ, a people so called, because the wife among them had many husbands; and among the Medes that dwelt in the Mountains, 'tis said that a woman was married to five husbands at once. But there is no probability that this should be referred to, or looked upon in this place. Then for the other interpretation, that here the Digamist, or he that hath had two wives successively one after another, should be made uncapable of holy Orders, or be under some reproach for so doing, and his having married but once should be as necessary to a Bishop or Deacon, as sobriety, &c. this is a little strange, it being ordinary for the wife to die soon after marriage, and without children, and in that case, the second marriage tending as much to the ends of Matrimony (comfort of life, propagation, remedy of lust) as the former can be supposed to doe. And besides, this prohibition being not to be found in the lawes of any nation, and being grounded on no other text but this (of the meaning of which the question now is) will no farther be concluded hence, then the words of this place do inforce it. A third sense the phrase is capable of, which seems much fitter for the matter in hand, that he be said here to be, or to have been, the husband of more wives then one, who married after divorce, that is, who having put away his wife on any cause whatsoever, even for that of fornication, which the Law of Christ allows, doth marry another. This he that had done was by the words of Christ, especially as they are set down Mar. 10. 11. Luk. 16. 18. and by a speech of Saint Paul's 1 Cor. 7. 39. under such prejudices, that we cannot wonder that here he is not thought fit to be received into holy Orders and so the woman also. They that marry after Divorces, are in the first Canon of the Council of Laodicea expressed by οἱ ἐλευθέρως καὶ νομίμως συναφθέντες δευτέροις γάμοις, freely and legally coupled in second marriages. And the like mention we finde of them Concil. Neocæsar. can. 52. where such a δίγαμος is supposed αἰτῶν μετάνοιαν to entreat absolution. And Concil. Ancyr. can. 39. Διγάμων ὅρος, the term of abstension, or separation, which belongs to the Digamist, (in this notion of it) is mentioned as a known and vulgar thing. And Concil. primi Niceni Can. 8. the Novatians error appears to have been, their refusing to communicate with these Digamists upon their repentance, in like manner as with those that had fallen in time of persecution; which signifies these two to be look'd on as crimes of high importance in a Christian, for which the Censures of the Church fell heavy on them, though upon Repentance the Catholicks admitted them to Communion again. And thus also in * Athenagoras, we Christians, saith he, are commanded either to remain every man as we are, ἢ ἑφ' ἑνὶ γάμῳ, or to content our selves with one marriage (which is no where commanded in that other sense of marrying after the death of the first, and therefore must be understood of this other sort, after Divorce.) For the second marriages, saith he, are εὐπρεπὴς μοιχεία, a comely kinde of adultery: Adultery, saith he, from Christ's words, for he that puts away his wife, and marries again, committeth adultery (which proof of his restraines his words to those second marriages which are after Divorces;) but that a well-favoured, fashionable, comely one, because the Imperial lawes say nothing against such marriages after Divorces allowed by them. And again, saith he, 'Tis the Law of Christ that no man shall put away her ἣν ἔπαυσέ τις τῷ παρθενίαν whom he hath deflowred, or made no virgin, and marry again. This seems to be Theophylacts understanding of it; for as on this place he saith it was opposed to the practice of the Jews, among whom, saith he, ἐφείτο πολυγαμία, polygamie was permitted, or, as other Copies read, ἐφείτο πολυτεκνία, multitude of children was desired, in which respect their divorces were permitted: so on Tit. 1. 6. he applies it to him who had so little kindness πρὸς τὴν ἀπολωλεκυῖαν, that he marries another, and after expressly to the Ἕλλην, who, saith he, doth that which is not ἀνέγκλητον unblameable, εἰ καὶ τοῖς ἔξω νόμοις δοκεῖ, though it be approved by the Laws of them which are not Christians: where if ἀπολωλεκυῖα be thought to signifie the dead wife, then it will be unappliable to the practice of the Jewes; for all others, as well as they, married second wives after the death of the former; and therefore it must probably signifie her that is departed by divorce, and then that which followeth of the digamist will also concurre with it, to interpret his sense to this purpose. For of such marriages after divorces we know the practice and allowance of the Græcians and Romans, as well as Jewes, and of the Imperiall Laws. And so before him Theodoret, If any man having put away his former wife shall marry another, he were worthy of reprehension; and therefore a Bishop, that must be ἀνέγκλητος, must not be such an one. So Chrysostome also, from whom Theophylact had his sense and words. So Plutarch in his Ῥωμαϊκ. making mention of a law prohibiting to marry second marriages on festival dayes, saith that it was brought up, because either widows married which might doe well to do it in secret, or those whose husbands were living, and then they ought to be ashamed to think of any other husband. So Valer. Max. l. 2. c. 1. cals the experience of many marriages, legitimæ cujusdam intemperantiæ signum, a sign of intemperance, but such as the law of Heathen men permits. So in * Ærodius, among the Presbyters that were brought as witnesses against Marcellinus, one being found to have married again after Divorce, placuit reprobari, he was rejected, saith he: whence it appears that such marriages were not only allowed by the Imperial laws, but that they were practised also among Christians: which farther appears by Marculfus Formul. l. 2. c. 30. Dum inter illum & illam non charitas secundùm Deum, sed discordia regnat, & ad hoc pariter conversare minimè possunt, placuit utriusque voluntate ut se à consortio separare deberent, quod ità & fecerunt, Seeing between him and her Christian charity doth not reign, but discord, and so they cannot converse together, it is agreed by the consens of both parties, that they should separate from one anothers companies, which accordingly they did. This, it seems, was a formula used among Christians, as there was another to the same purpose, Leg. Rom. c. 19. and Novel. Instit. 117. And this being allowed by the secular Imperial laws, and accordingly practised, the Council of Carthage thought fit to make a Canon to reform it (Can. sec. Zonaram 116.) and to reduce it to Christs and Saint Pauls institution, and therefore appointed that the Emperor should be desired to make an Imperial law against it. * Saint Hierome mentions some that being divorced this day, married the next, and addes, Uterque reprehendendus maritus, & cui tam citò displicuit, & cui tam citò placuit, both husbands were to be blamed, he that was so soon displeased with his wife, and he that so soon liked and married her. And so * Innocentius of those who after a divorce marry anew, in utraque parte adulteros esse, they are on both sides adulterers, and to be excommunicate. To this belongs that of * Justin Martyr, Οἱ νόμῳ ἀνθρωπίνῳ δευτερογαμίας ποιούμενοι, ἁμαρτωλοὶ παρὰ τῷ ἡμετέρῳ διδασκάλῳ εἰσὶ, they that by mans law make second marriages, are sinners in the account of Christ our Master. He that would see more to this purpose for the confirming of this interpretation, may consult Zonaras's scholia on that Canon, and Rodolphus Fornerius Rerum Quotid. l. 6. c. 23. and Burchard l. 9. c. 72. and the Notes on Cod. Can. Eccl. Universa. And that this custome was also among women, who thus divorced themselves from their husbands, will appear by Justinians Novell. 117. which will therefore be appliable to the prohibition of the widows being chosen which was not ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband also.

V. 6. Novice] Νεόφυτος signifies not in respect of age, for Timothy himself was such; but in respect of receiving the faith, by analogie with the use of the word φυτεύω to plant, for to instruct in Christianity, to teach the faith, as when Saint Paul saith that he hath planted; and so saith Theophylact, 'tis all one with νεοβάπτιστος newly baptized, lately received into the Church. d.

Νεόφυτος

V. 15. House of God] What οἶκος θεοῦ the house of God here signifies, is evident by the Context. The whole discourse here is to give Timothy directions for the choosing and constituting Bishops and Deacons in his Province, that is, over all Asia, of which Ephesus, where Timothy was placed by S. Paul, was the chief Metropolis. This then being the Province wherein he was to ordain, must needs be the οἶκος θεοῦ house of God, wherein he is here directed how he should behave himself, being by S. Paul set there as the οἰκονόμος, or steward in an house, who having, under the Master, chief power in the family, to him it belongs to entertain or remove servants and officers out of it. But this not so to restrain the phrase to that one Province, but that both the universal and every other particular Church of Christ is capable of that title, as truly and properly as that of Ephesus or Asia at that time. For indeed the phrase is derived from the Temple, which, as the special place of Gods presentiating and exhibiting himself, is called Gods house, where he dwells, and delights, and meets the pious votary, receives his addresses, entertains and treats him, as in his own house, and answers the petitions which he came to offer there, and where his Angels, which are his attendants and court, as it were, are peculiarly present, 1 Cor. 11. 10. As when the Angels appeared to Jacob at Luz, he presently calls it Beth El, the house of God, saying, surely God is in this place, this is no other then the house of God, &c. Proportionably to this the whole family of God, as that comprehends the whole corporation or community of all the Christians alive, is fitly styled οἶκος θεοῦ, this great house of God; and in like manner, every lesser society of Christians among whom God is pleased to dwell also, and rule by his οἰκονόμος, or steward. And such is every Bishop in every particular Church. Of this house of God, in this sense, two titles are here set down, fitly belonging both to the whole, and to each branch, but especially verified at that time wherein the words were delivered, that first age of the Apostles preaching and planting of the faith. The first title is, ἐκκλησία θεοῦ ζῶντος, the Church of the living God, in opposition to the false, dead, liveless gods, whose pictures were adored in their heathen Temples. Those were ἐκκλησίαι places of meeting and assembling, but only for the worship of Idols, empty nothings. But the house of God, where Timothy was set the œconomus, or steward, at Ephesus, contrary to Diana's Temple there, was the Church of the living God; and so was every such regular assembly of Christians under a Bishop (such as Timothy was) an œconomus set over them by Christ. Such again every larger circuit under the Metropolitan, who as Timothy again, had χειροτονίαν καὶ χεῖρον ordination and jurisdiction over the whole Province. And such all the particular Churches of the whole world considered together, e.

designed office of revealing Gods will unto men, he was beheld and confess'd and adored by Angels themselves, good and bad; fourthly, he was by his Apostles preached and proclaimed not only to the Jewes, but Gentiles; fifthly, he was received and believed on by many of all nations through the world; and sixthly, he was visibly and with a glorious appearance of Angels taken up into heaven, there to reign for ever in the glory of God the Father, and to exercise power in his Church, and by converting of some, and destroying of others, to propagate his Gospell over the world.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Καλὸν ἔργον

V. 1. A Good work] Καλὸν ἔργον here signifies honestum opus, a work of some vertue and excellence in it self, as being that which is the consecrating a mans life, at least the greatest part of it, to the service of God, to which therefore an immarcessible crown of glory is proposed by Saint Peter as the reward, 1 Pet. 5. 4. where, as the great reward in heaven, Mat. 5. is an argument that the vertue to which it is assigned is a very eminent vertue, very acceptable in the sight of God: so is this an evidence that the good work here is look'd on as an eminent state of piety, so far from being censurable in him that desires it as he ought to doe, in order to the glory of God, or the love of our brethren, or the just provision for their spiritual wants, that it is very commendable in him, and the desire of it is an act of Christian piety in the more perfect degree, as the designing this without putting the flock to any charge is yet more excellent in Saint Paul, 1 Cor. 9. 18. And this may be farther evident by the fault of those who forsake this or any other Ecclesiastical office and return to the world, ad seculum, again; such was Demas who had been a fellow-labourer of S. Paul's, Philem. 24. Col. 4. 14. but after forsook him, 2 Tim. 4. 10. ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα, having loved this present age, or world: not that this crime was that love of the world, which 1 John 2. 15. is a crime in any Christian, but that he betook himself to his own worldly secular affaires again, forsaking the attendance on the service of God in his Church; as he that marries a wife is said to be solicitous for the things of this world, how he may please his wife: which love of the world, though it be not in it self a fault (for then marriage could not be faultless) yet if it be the taking one off from Ecclesiastical emploiments which hath devoted himself to them, will be a fault in him; and that was Demas's crime, not, as 'tis thought, forsaking of Christianity. And that was charged on some others, though Timothy stuck close to him, Phil. 2. 21. All seek τὰ ἑαυτῶν, &c. betake themselves to the care of their own secular affairs, not to the affairs of Christ, in attending on the Gospell, ver. 22. And the criminousnesse of this arising from hence, that he forsakes that which is more excellent for that which is lesse so, though it be not otherwise unlawfull, Ecclesiastical for Secular emploiments, is an evidence that the Ecclesiastical emploiment is καλὸν ἔργον in this notion, a good, that is excellent, work, a state (if lived in as it ought) of some perfection.

Ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα.

b. Μιᾶς γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ

V. 2. Husband of one wife] What is the meaning of μιᾶς γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ the husband of one wife both here and v. 12. and Tit. 1. 6. and of ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband c. 5. 9. will not be easily resolved. For if it should be interpreted as an interdict of choosing to the office of Bishop or Deacon any who had lived in Polygamie, that is, had had more wives at once, though that might have some colour of sense in it from the practice of the Jewes, as far as concerned the man (who among them was permitted Polygamie) yet this is not appliable to the widow or woman c. 5. 9. for never among Jewes (or even Turks) was it permitted that the woman shou'd have more then one husband at once; and the reason is clear, because the multitude of husbands did not help forward, but rather hinder propagation, for which it was that the multitude of wives was permitted. Onely among the Barbarians there is mention of the πολύανδροι, a people so called, because the wife among them had many husbands; and among the Medes that dwelt in the Mountains, 'tis said that a woman was married to five husbands at once. But there is no probability that this should be referred to, or looked upon in this place. Then for the other interpretation, that here the Digamist, or he that hath had two wives successively one after another, should be made uncapable of holy Orders, or be under some reproach for so doing, and his having married but once should be as necessary to a Bishop or Deacon, as sobriety, &c. this is a little strange, it being ordinary for the wife to die soon after marriage, and without children, and in that case, the second marriage tending as much to the ends of Matrimony (comfort of life, propagation, remedy of lust) as the former can be supposed to doe. And besides, this prohibition being not to be found in the lawes of any nation, and being grounded on no other text but this (of the meaning of which the question now is) will no farther be concluded hence, then the words of this place do inforce it. A third sense the phrase is capable of, which seems much fitter for the matter in hand, that he be said here to be, or to have been, the husband of more wives then one, who married after divorce, that is, who having put away his wife on any cause whatsoever, even for that of fornication, which the Law of Christ allows, doth marry another. This he that had done was by the words of Christ, especially as they are set down Mar. 10. 11. Luk. 16. 18. and by a speech of Saint Paul's 1 Cor. 7. 39. under such prejudices, that we cannot wonder that here he is not thought fit to be received into holy Orders and so the woman also. They that marry after Divorces, are in the first Canon of the Council of Laodicea expressed by οἱ ἀλόγως καὶ νομίμως συναφθέντες δευτέροις γάμοις, freely and legally coupled in second marriages. And the like mention we finde of them Concil. Neocaesar. can. 52. where such a δίγαμος is supposed αὐτῶν μετάνοιαν to entreat absolution. And Concil. Ancyr. can. 39. Διγάμων ὅρος, the term of abstension, or separation, which belongs to the Digamist, (in this notion of it) is mentioned as a known and vulgar thing. And Concil. primi Niceni Can. 8. the Novatians error appears to have been, their refusing to communicate with these Digamists upon their repentance, in like manner as with those that had fallen in time of persecution; which signifies these two to be look'd on as crimes of high importance in a Christian, for which the Censures of the Church fell heavy on them, though upon Repentance the Catholicks admitted them to Communion again. And thus also in * Athenagoras, we Christians, saith he, are commanded either to remain every man as we are, ἢ ἐφ' ἑνὶ γάμῳ, or to content our selves with one marriage (which is no where commanded in that other sense of marrying after the death of the first, and therefore must be understood of this other sort, after Divorce.) For the second marriages, saith he, are εὐπρεπὴς μοιχεία, a comely kinde of adultery: Adultery, saith he, from Christ's words, for he that puts away his wife, and marries again, committeth adultery (which proof of his restraines his words to those second marriages which are after Divorces;) but that a well-favoured, fashionable, comely one, because the Imperial lawes say nothing against such marriages after Divorces allowed by them. And again, saith he, 'Tis the Law of Christ that no man shall put away her ἣν ἔπαυσέ τις τῷ παρθενίαν whom he hath defloured, or made no virgin, and marry again. This seems to be Theophylacts understanding of it; for as on this place he saith it was opposed to the practice of the Jews, among whom, saith he, ἐφεῖτο πολυγαμία, polygamie was permitted, or, as other Copies read, ἐφεῖτο πολυπαιδία, multitude of children was desired, in which respect their divorces were permitted: so on Tit. 1. 6. he applies it to him who had so little kindness πρὸς τὴν ἀπολυθεῖσαν, that he marries another, and after expressly to the δίγαμος, who, saith he, doth that which is not ἀνέγκλητον unblameable, εἰ καὶ τοῖς ἔξω νόμοις δοκεῖ, though it be approved by the Laws of them which are not Christians: where if ἀπολυθεῖσα be thought to signifie the dead wife, then it will be unappliable to the practice of the Jewes; for all others, as well as they, married second wives after the death of the former; and therefore it must probably signifie her that is departed by divorce, and then that which followeth of the digamist will also concurre with it, to interpret his sense to this purpose. For of such marriages after divorces we know the practice and allowance of the Græcians and Romans, as well as Jewes, and of the Imperiall Laws. And so before him Theodoret, If any man having put away his former wife shall marry another, he were worthy of reprehension; and therefore a Bishop, that must be ἀνέγκλητος, must not be such an one. So Chrysostome also, from whom Theophylact had his sense and words. So Plutarch in his Ῥωμαϊκ. making mention of a law prohibiting to marry second marriages on festival dayes, saith that it was brought up, because either widows married which might doe well to do it in secret, or those whose husbands were living, and then they ought to be ashamed to think of any other husband. So Valer. Max. l. 2. c. 1. cals the experience of many marriages, legitimæ cujusdam intemperantiæ signum, a sign of intemperance, but such as the law of Heathen men permits. So in * Ærodius, among the Presbyters that were brought as witnesses against Marcellinus, one being found to have married again after Divorce, placuit reprobari, he was rejected, saith he: whence it appears that such marriages were not only allowed by the Imperial laws, but that they were practised also among Christians: which farther appears by Marculfus Formul. l. 2. c. 30. Dum inter illum & illam non charitas secundùm Deum, sed discordia regnat, & ad hoc pariter conversare minimè possunt, placuit utriusque voluntate ut se à consortio separare deberent, quod ità & fecerunt, Seeing between him and her Christian charity doth not reign, but discord, and so they cannot converse together, it is agreed by the consent of both parties, that they should separate from one anothers companies, which accordingly they did. This, it seems, was a formula used among Christians, as there was another to the same purpose, Leg. Rom. c. 19. and Novel. Instit. 117. And this being allowed by the secular Imperial laws, and accordingly practised, the Council of Carthage thought fit to make a Canon to reform it (Can. sec. Zonaram 116.) and to reduce it to Christs and Saint Pauls institution, and therefore appointed that the Emperor should be desired to make an Imperial law against it. * Saint Hierome mentions some that being divorced this day, married the next, and addes, Uterque reprehendendus maritus, & cui tam citò displicuit, & cui tam citò placuit, both husbands were to be blamed, he that was so soon displeased with his wife, and he that so soon liked and married her. And so * Innocentius of those who after a divorce marry anew, in utraque parte adulteros esse, they are on both sides adulterers, and to be excommunicate. To this belongs that of * Justin Martyr, Οἱ νόμῳ ἀνθρωπίνῳ διγαμίαν ποιούμενοι, ἁμαρτωλοὶ παρὰ τῷ ἡμετέρῳ διδασκάλῳ εἰσὶν, they that by mans law make second marriages, are sinners in the account of Christ our Master. He that would see more to this purpose for the confirming of this interpretation, may consult Zonaras's scholia on that Canon, and Rodolphus Fornerius Rerum Quotid. l. 6. c. 23. and Burchard l. 9. c. 72. and the Notes on Cod. Can. Eccl. Universa. And that this custome was also among women, who thus divorced themselves from their husbands, will appear by Justinians Novell. 117. which will therefore be appliable to the prohibition of the widows being chosen which was not ἑνὸς ἀνδρὸς γυνὴ the wife of one husband also.

Ib. Of good behaviour] Κόσμιος, εὐτακτος, well ordered or composed, saith Phavorinus; and so c. 2. 9. κατασταλὴ κόσμιος such an habit, or attire, as argues gravity of manners and mind.

ther, under the supreme head, Christ Jesus, dispensing them all by himself, and administring them severally not by any one œconomus, but by the several Bishops, as inferior heads of unity to the several bodies, so constituted by the several Apostles in their plantations, each of them having an αὐτονομία, a several distinct commission from Christ immediately, and subordinate to none but the supreme donour, or Plenipotentiary. The second title is, that it is στύλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα τῆς ἀληθείας, the pillar of truth, and the basis of that pillar. The houses anciently were built on pillars, Judg. 16. 26. where we find the pillars whereupon the house standeth, and v. 29. the two middle pillars, whereon the house stood, and on which it was born up, and upon the removing of which the house fell; and so when the Psalmist describes the land by this similitude of an house, he supposeth it set on pillars, and the feebleness of those pillars, when they want bearing up, are an evidence of the weakness of the earth, The earth is weak, and the inhabitants thereof, I bear up the pillars of it, Psal. 75. 4. Now of a pillar it is known, that it receives the usefulness from the basis on which it stands, which being so set that it cannot sinke, the pillar being firmly fastened on that, and standing upright, it is able to bear a vast weight of building laid upon it. And so these two, though several in themselves, yet joyning together, and consolidated into one, they doe as one, not severally, support what is laid upon them. A like expression we find in the Jewish writers, from whence it seems to be imitated; as when Maimonides in his first volume lib. המדע begins his first Hilchot, called יסודי התורה ועמוד החכמות, thus, יסוד היסודות the foundation of foundations and the pillar of wisdome, is to know there is a first being, &c. which phrase, though it differ from this in speaking of a first, absolutely first foundation, whereas this speaks indefinitely of a foundation, yet it agrees with it in this, that foundation and pillar are joyned together, to signifie not severall, but one and the same title. It is therefore necessary so to render these words, στύλος καὶ ἑδραίωμα, pillar and ground, that they be not distinct titles of the house of God, a pillar one, and a basis another, but (by the figure of ἓν διὰ δυοῖν, one described by two) a pillar upon its basis, which firmly sustains that which is built and erected upon it. And so is the house of God, (the Church, both Universall of Christ, and, under him, of all the Apostles, and each particular, of each single Apostles plantation) this pillar erected firmly upon the basis to sustain, to uphold the truth of Christ, which being by Christ and his Apostles erected, as a roof upon a pillar, is sustained and upheld by it. If the truth of the Gospel had been scatterd abroad by preaching to single men, and those men never compacted together into a society under the Government of Bishops, or Stewards, &c. such as Timothy was, to whom was delivered by Saint Paul that παραθήκη 1 Tim. 5. 20. a depositum, or body of sound doctrine, to be kept as a standard in the Church, by which all other doctrines were to be measured, and judged; if, I say, such a summary of faith had not been deliver'd to all Christians that came in, in any place, to the Apostles preaching, and if there had not been some Steward to keep it, then had there wanted an eminent means to sustain and uphold this truth of the Gospel, thus preach'd unto men. But by the gathering of single converted Christians into assemblies or Churches, and designing Governors in those Churches, and entrusting this depositum or form of wholsome doctrine to their keeping, it comes to passe that the Christian truth is sustain'd and held up, and so this house of God is affirmed to be the pillar and basis of truth, or that pillar on a basis by which truth is supported. According to which it is that Christ is said to have given not only Apostles, and Prophets, and Evangelists, but also Pastors, and Teachers, that is, the Bishops in the Church (known indifferently by those two titles) εἰς καταρτισμὸν τῶν ἁγίων, for the compacting of the Saints into a Church, εἰς οἰκοδομὴν, for the building up of the body of Christ, confirming, and continuing them in all truth, Eph. 4. 12. that we should be no longer like children carryed about with every wind of doctrine, &c. v. 14. And so again when Heresies came into the Church in the first Ages, 'tis every where apparent by Ignatius's Epistles, that the only way of avoiding of error and danger was to adhere to the Bishop in communion and doctrine, and whosoever departed from him, and that form of wholsome words kept by him, ὑγιαίνειν) was supposed to be corrupted, and immers'd in that sink of corruption which was then among the Gnosticks, the pests of that age of the Church. To which purpose these sayings of that divine Martyr are expresse, Μηδεὶς χωρὶς τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τι πρασσέτω τῶν ἀνηκόντων εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, Let no man doe ought of those things which belong to the Church without the Bishop; and ὁ λάθρᾳ ἐπισκόπου τι πράσσων, τῷ διαβόλῳ λατρεύει, he that doth any thing without the privity of the Bishop, worships the devill, Epist. ad Smyrn. And this is his meaning of ἐντὸς θυσιαστηρίου ἦτε, being within the altar, preserving communion with and dependance on the Bishop, who sat in that part of the Church which was called the θυσιαστήριον, or altar, which he that did not, ὑστερεῖ τοῦ ἄρτου τοῦ Θεοῦ, falls short of the bread of God, Ep. ad Ephes. from thence concluding, Σπουδάσωμεν οὖν μὴ ἀντιτάσσεσθαι τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ ἵνα ὦμεν Θεῷ ὑποτασσόμενοι, Let us take care not to resist or oppose the Bishop, that we may be subject to God: Πάντα γὰρ ὃν πέμπει ὁ οἰκοδεσπότης εἰς ἰδίαν οἰκονομίαν οὕτως δεῖ ἡμᾶς αὐτὸν δέχεσθαι ὡς αὐτὸν τὸν πέμψαντα. Ἤδη οὖν ἔστι τὸν ἐπίσκοπον δεῖ ὡς αὐτὸν Κύριον προσβλέπειν, For every one whom the Master of the house sends to his own stewardship, him must we receive as him that sent him: we must therefore look to the Bishop, as the Lord himself. And in the Epistle to the Magnesians, Πρέπον ἐστὶν οὐ μόνον καλεῖσθαι Χριστιανούς, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἶναι, ὥσπερ καί τινες ἐπίσκοπον μὲν καλοῦσι, χωρὶς δὲ αὐτοῦ πάντα πράσσουσι, We ought not only to be called Christians, but also to be such, as some call, or acknowledge the Bishop, but doe all without him. And again, μηδὲ πρόσχητε εὐλόγοις τισὶ δόξαις ἰδιαζούσαις ὑμῶν, not to think it reasonable to entertain any private opinions of our own: for, as he addes, they that did so were sure to be seduced in such times, being once grown wiser then their teachers. So in Ep. ad Philadel. Ὅσοι Θεοῦ εἰσὶν καὶ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, οὗτοι μετὰ τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου εἰσίν, As many as are of God and of Jesus Christ, these are with the Bishop, ἓν θυσιαστήριον, ὡς εἷς ἐπίσκοπος, ἵνα ὃ ἐὰν πράσσητε κατὰ Θεὸν πράσσητε, There is one altar as one Bishop, that whatever ye doe, ye may doe according to God. And speaking of seduced Hereticks, he mentions their only way of repentance, ἐὰν μετανοήσωσιν εἰς ἑνότητα Θεοῦ, καὶ συνέδριον τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, if they repent and return to the unity of God, and the councell of the Bishop. And so every where in all those Epistles to the same purpose, to signifie that that form of doctrine, deposited with, and kept by the Bishop in the Church, is the only sure means to support and preserve the truth. Which how little it belongs to those Congregations or Churches which have either cast out that Apostolical form of sound words, or by degrees received in many corruptions and falsities, either against the will of their Governours, or by connivence or assistance of them, doth easily appear by what hath here been said, because as the good husbandman sowes seed in his field, so the enemy may scatter darnell, and the field bring forth the fruits of one as well as the other.

V. 6. Godlinesse] The notion of piety in this place is observable for Christian religion, doctrine of Christ, whether as that which is it self the true way of serving and worshipping of God, so as will be acceptable unto him (and so is εὐσέβεια piety) or that which prescribes, and f. Εὐσέβεια and delivers the most exact and perfect way of serving God, and so by a Metonymie is called piety. That it signifies so here, appears by the parts of this mysterie, as they are here set down; God, that is, Christ incarnate, manifested in the flesh, &c. the several articles of our faith from the Birth to the Assumption of Christ, which all together are called μυστήριον εὐσεβείας, the mysterie of piety; the parts of our religion, into which all Christians are initiated or entred; the foundation on which all our Christian practice is built, God being so desirous that men should live according to that Law of his revealed by Christ, that to preach it to us, and inforce it on our practice, he was himself pleased to assume, and manifest himself in our flesh, and to testifie the truth of this, the Spirit of God came down visibly upon Christ, and the voice from heaven, This is my beloved son, Mat. 3. 17. and so in the several particulars here mentioned, as branches of our initiation into Christian religion, grounds of our believing, and practising the Christian doctrine. Thus c. 6. 5. where speaking of the wicked Hereticks of those times, the Gnosticks, he mentions it as a piece of their doctrine, that εὐσέβεια is πορισμὸς, piety (that is, the Christian religion, the being of that profession) is gain, matter of secular advantage. Thus again c. 6. 3. 'tis called more expresly ἡ καθ' εὐσέβειαν διδασκαλία, the doctrine which is according to piety. So Tit. 1. 1. the truth which is according to piety is set to denote the Gospel. Agreeable to which it is that mercifulnesse and spotlesse purity are called θρησκεία καθαρὰ pure worship, &c. Jam. 1. 27. that is, prime special branches of the true religion. In other places 'tis true that εὐσέβεια piety is taken in a narrower sense for that vertue particularly of worshipping God aright, as Tit. 2. 12. in distinction from the duties toward others and our selves, 1 Tim. 6. 11, 2 Pet. 1. 6. and in one place 1 Tim. 5. 4. for the return of gratitude in children to their parents, which is a kind of piety also, as the love of our countrey, honouring of magistrates, that are a sort of gods as well as parents to us, is ordinarily called piety.

CHAP. IV. Paraphrase.

1. NOW the Spirit speaketh expresly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils;]

1. But there are risen up some among you which oppose this Christian doctrine, mentioned in the close of the third chapter, deny this form of Evangelical truth, viz. the Gnosticks that deny Christ to be come really in the flesh, 2 Joh. 7. And there is no wonder in this, for Christ expresly foretold it Mat. 24. 11. that before the time of the Jewes ruine, before that notable coming of Christ (see notes on Mat. 24. b. c. d. Act. 2. b.) some shall forsake the faith, and follow erroneous seducing teachers (see note on Luke 9. c.) though the doctrines which they teach are most unclean, polluted, deviliſh doctrines. See 2 Pet. 3. note a.

† polluted being received θλιμμένοις λαμβανόμενον

* suggest these things to the brethren τοῦτο ὑποτιθέμενος τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς

† we have hoped ἠλπικαμεν

2. * Speaking lies with hypocrisie, having their [a] conscience † seared with an hot iron,] 2. Which they set off through the faire pretences of a.

greater perfection and depth of knowledge, which these liars make shew of among the people, men that have their consciences stigmatized with the marks and brands of their ill works, notorious to all for infamous persons.

3. [b] Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created * to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.] 3. Part of the character of these men is, to interdict marriages, and speak against b.

them as unlawfull, and so likewise to command abstinences from some sorts of meats, from which the Jewes abstain, but by the liberty allowed by Christ are perfectly lawfull for all Christians, so they be taken with thanksgiving and acknowledgment of the donour.

4. For every creature of God is good, and nothing † to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving:] 4. For indeed all the creatures in the world, being created for the use of man, may lawfully be used and eaten by a Christian, if it be done with faith and acknowledgment of the donour (see Mat. 14. c.)

5. For it is sanctified by the [c] word of God and prayer.] 5. For there are but two things necessary to make any thing lawfull for our use: First, God's permission of freedome allowed us by him, and that we have in this matter by the expresse words of Christ that tells us, that which goes in (that is, meats, &c.) is not that which defiles a man; and secondly, prayer, which blesseth our meat to us, being, beside the calling for God's blessing upon it, an acknowledgment of God from whom it comes, and who hath allowed it for food for us. c.

6. If thou * put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, ‖ nourished up in the words of faith, and of good doctrine, † whereunto thou hast attained,] 6. Such admonitions as these, which may help secure them from the infusions of these men, thou art frequently and timely to give the Christians under thee notice of, and by so doing thou shalt approve thy self faithfull in the discharge of thy office of Bishop, whose duty this is, thus to ruminate and chew over and over again, and so to feed continually on the doctrines of Christ, and by instructing others to make returns for all the good instructions thou hast thy self received and imbraced obediently.

7. But * refuse profane and old-wives fables, and exercise thy self rather unto godliness.] 7. But especially be sure that in stead of their doctrines of abstinences from marriage and from meats, quite contrary to the Gospel, which sets an honourable character upon marriage, and takes away difference of meats, and in stead of idle ridiculous grounds, upon which they found these abstinences, thou doe by diligent search into the doctrine of the Gospel, pursue that perfection of Christian knowledge, which, though thou art young, may fit thee for the discharge of that venerable office.

8. For bodily exercise † [d] profiteth little; but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.] 8. For though abstinence from daily meats, and wines, d.

and from marriage, be, as an act of self-denial and exercise, acceptable to God; yet if this be not observed with due limits, if meats be abstained from as unlawful, and marriage in like manner as abominable and detestable, (as by the Gnosticks, who yet indulged to all villany, it was) then there is no good, but hurt in them, Col. 2. 22. And indeed considered at the best Col. 2. 23. the profit of them is but little in comparison to that of piety, which is of the greatest value imaginable, will help us to all advantages that we can wish. If we would have a comfortable life here, this is promised to them that seek the kingdome of God and his righteousnesse, Mat. 6. 33. and so for many particular Christian duties they have promise of present beatitude, * and whatsoever in any singular case may seem to be wanting to the felicity and prosperity of the pious man here, it is sure to be made up abundantly in another life.

9. This is a faithfull saying and worthy of all acceptation.

10. For therefore we both labour and * suffer reproach, because † we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.] 9, 10. And to this purpose it is to be observed as a most certain and considerable truth, that to all truly pious persons there is so great assurance of an eternal reward, that this our hope in God is the onely ground of our suffering patiently any thing that falls upon us, being confident that this God, as he desireth the eternal welfare of all, so hath promised to save all that shall believe and obey him, and so consequently is the most assured Saviour of them that doe so.

11. These things doe thou put those in mind of that have received them already, confirm them that they may continue in them (and not be depraved by the Gnostick hereticks which teach the contrary, as in those former particulars ver. 3, 8. so in this last of suffering persecutions for the Gospel) and teach them to those that have not as yet received them.

11. These things * command and teach.] * exhort παραγγέλλε

12. And though thou art a young man in years, yet let the gravity of thy life supply the want of the years that are wont to be required of thy office, and let thy discourse and all thy demeanour and course of actions be exemplary to all the Christians under thy jurisdiction, both in respect of constant love and adherence to God, and of profession of the faith, and of purity or chastity, three main particulars wherein these heretical Gnosticks do endeavour to corrupt others.

12. Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers in word, in conversation in charity, † in spirit, in faith, in purity.] † the words ἐν πνεύματι are not found in the King's Ms.

13. Betwixt this and the time of my coming to thee, see thou be diligent in performing thy office in the several parts of it, expounding the Scriptures, confirming believers, and admonishing them of any fault or danger, and instructing the ignorant or unbelievers.

13. Till I come, give attendance to [e] reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.]

14. Make use of those gifts which in order to thy function were given thee (according to the revelation from the Spirit concerning thee ch. 1. 18.) at thy ordination (see note on ch. 5. f.) when besides me 2 Tim. 1. 6. some others also of the Apostles, one or more, laid hands on thee (see note on Act. 11. b.)

14. Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecie, with the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery.]

15. [f] * Meditate upon these things, †give thy self wholly to them, that thy profiting may appear to all. * Exercise thy self in these things † spend thy time in them, ἐν τούτοις ἴσθι

16. Take heed unto thy self, and unto thy doctrine, continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thy self, and them that hear thee.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Κεκαυτηριασμένων τὴν συνείδησιν

V. 2. Conscience seared] The meaning of this phrase κεκαυτηριασμένοι τὴν συνείδησιν is, I conceive, not rightly apprehended, when it is thought to signifie an insensate conscience, as if the resemblance were here to flesh, when it is seared or cauterized. Hesychius and Phavorinus have both taken notice of the phrase, and rendred it to another sense. Κεκαυτηριασμένοι (it should be κεκαυστηριασμένοι) βεβασανισμένοι, μὴ ἔχοντες τὴν συνείδησιν ὑγιῆ, saith Hesychius, the phrase denotes those that being brought to the test, are found faulty, have not a good conscience. The meaning of this must be collected from the office of the βασανισταὶ, explorers, or examiners, or triers, by which he explains it, and of them saith he, Βασανιστὴς, ὁ διαπτὴς, ἢ παρὰ τῶν ἀνδραπόδων τὴν ἀλήθειαν πιθανόμενος, One set to examine slaves to find out the truth. And when any upon such examination is found faulty, he is wont to be branded for a cheat or rascal, and that branding or stigmatizing is here the thing referred to; and so κεκαυτηριασμένοι τὴν συνείδησιν are men of a prostituted, branded, stigmatized conscience, infamous villains. And so saith Phavorinus also, Κεκαυτηριασμένος τὴν συνείδησιν, τετέσι, μὴ ἔχων ὑγιῆ (referring, no doubt, to this place) it signifies having not a sound, or whole, conscience.

b. Κωλυόντων γαμεῖν

V. 3. Forbidding to marry] Many hereticks there were in the antient Church, which prohibited marriage, and taught abstinence from meats, as necessary, having much of their doctrine from the Pythagorean Philosophers. Such were the Encratitæ, Montanists, and Marcionites. But these came after the Apostles times, and are not so probably spoken of here as those which were present then in the Church. And such, saith Ignatius, there were in the Apostles times, Ep. ad Philad. and such, saith Irenæus, was Saturninus l. 1. c. 22. who with Simon Magus was the father of the Gnosticks. Of him Theodoret saith that he was the first that among Christians affirmed marriage to be the work of the Devil, and commanded to abstain from the flesh of beasts. And indeed that this was generally the doctrine of the Gnosticks appears from Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 3. where speaking of them he saith, they doe εὐφήμως δι' ἐγκρατείας ἀσεβεῖν, εἰς τε τὴν κτίσιν καὶ τὸν δημιουργὸν, διδάσκοντες μὴ δεῖν παιδοποιΐαν, μηδὲ ἀντεισάγειν τῷ κόσμῳ δυσυχήσοντας ἑτέρους, μηδὲ διαχρῆσθαι τῷ δεδωκότι βρώσει, Under a pretence of continence they committed all villany against the creation and the Creator, teaching that men ought not to receive marriage, nor get children, nor bring into the world such as would be miserable, nor furnish death with food or nourishment, that is, people the world with men, whom death will consequently feed on. And again, Εἰσὶν οἱ πορνείαν ἀντικρὺς τὸν γάμον λέγουσι, καὶ ὑπὸ διαβόλου ταῦτα παραδίδοσθαι δογματίζουσιν, There are that affirm and teach for doctrine, all marriage to be fornication, that is, utterly unlawfull, and that it is brought in and delivered by the devil, p. 446. So Irenæus l. 1. c. 22. Nubere & generare à Satana dicunt esse. The Gnosticks affirm marriage and generating to be from the devil. So the Author of the Constitutions l. 4 8 τὸν γάμον ἀθετοῦσι, they contemn marriage, and set it at nought, ἀγαμίαν διδάσκουσι, teach not to marry at all. l. 6. 10. and for meats, τινὰ τῶν βρωμάτων βδελύσσονται, they abominate some kinds of meats, l. 6. 8. and c. 26. βρώματά τινα φαυλίζουσι, they affirm some meats to be ill, (see Col. 2. Note i.)

c. Λόγος Θεοῦ

V. 5. Word of God] The word of God in this place, by which meats are said to be sanctified, that is, rescued and freed from all uncleanness or pollution, so that they may lawfully be used & enjoyed, is certainly that word of truth now revealed in the Gospel, which frees the Christian from those observances. For this onely can satisfie conscience, that it is lawful to doe so, and consequently that it may be done with faith or assurance that they doe not sinne. And as this secures us in general that no meat is now unlawful to a Christian under the Gospel; so to make it in the particular lawful to each one, the addition of prayer is the onely requisite, meaning by that the prayer of faith, coming to God with the assurance it is lawful, and acknowledging it to be received of him, and praying for his blessing upon it.

d. πρὸς ὀλίγον

V. 8. Profiteth little] Πρὸς ὀλίγον is not to be taken in a sense wherein little signifies nothing at all, but as when it is set in comparison and opposition to some greater matter, as here in opposition to πρὸς πάντα for all things, as in that speech of Plato's, Σωκράτη ἐμοὶ ὀλίγον φροντιστέον, ἀληθείας δὲ πολύ, Socrates is a little to be considered, but truth much.

e. Ἀνάγνωσις

V. 13. Reading] Ἀνάγνωσις Reading, is the rendring of the Hebrew מקרא set opposite to the διατάξεις or traditions (which the Rabbines call the oral word) & in the holy Scripture so called, because none but that was suffered to be read in the Church, but this not simply read, but expounded also. See Note on 1 Cor. i. c.

V. 15. Medi-

f. μελέτα

V. 15. Meditate] The word μελετᾶν is Agonistical, saith Peter Faber, and belongs to the παγγυμνασία and παγκρατίου, in which the young men are exercised in Ephebæo, and from thence 'tis applyed to exercises in the Schools, Declamations, &c. So Hesychius, Μελετᾷ, ἀσκεῖ, ὅθεν μελέται, γυμνάζεται· μελέτη γὰρ ἄσκησις, it signifies to exercise, as well as to take care or meditate; and so the relation which here it hath to proficiency doth inferre.

CHAP. V.

Paraphrase.

a. *exhort παρακάλει

1. Rebuke not an Elder, but * intreat him as a father, and the younger men as brethren;]

1. Deal not rigidly with a Bishop of the Church, (see note on Act. 11. b.) have that respect to his office, that whenever there is need of thy exhortation, thou doe it as to a father of the Church, with all humble respect to him: And for any inferior officers in the Church, let thy rebukes and corrections be fraternal, and full of kindnesse and friendlinesse to them.

2. The elder women as mothers, the younger as sisters, with all purity.]

2. Behave thy self toward women, the antienter sort, or widows of the Church, with great respect, the younger with modesty and civility, abstaining from any behaviour toward them that may savour any thing of wantonnesse or turpitude.

a. 3. Honour [a] widows that are widows indeed.]

3. Let those widows which have neither husbands nor children be respected and relieved (see note d.) by you, that is, by the Church out of their stock which is intrusted to your disposing.

4. But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to shew piety † at home, and to requite their parents; for that is good and acceptable before God.]

† toward their own family τὸν ἴδιον οἶκον

4. But if any widow which is a Christian be not perfectly destitute, but have children or grandchildren, let them relieve and take care for her, as a part of their family, v. 16. this being due by way of gratitude (see note on c. 3. f.) to the parents which have done so much for them, and so consequently that, which as God approves of, so he requires at their hands.

* But she † left quite alone μεμονωμένη

5. * Now she that is a widow indeed, and † desolate, trusteth in God, and continueth in supplications and prayers night and day.]

5. But the widow that is truly so, and is fit to receive relief from the Church, is she that is wholly destitute, hath none of her children to relieve her, no body but God to hope in or rely on, and so continues hoping and praying at set constant times continually, without any other cares to distract, or businesse to employ her.

* licentiously σπαταλῶσα

6. But she that liveth * in pleasure, is dead while she liveth.]

6. But she that abstaines from marrying, not in order to piety, but that she may live the more at her own disposal, she is not to be counted a widow or vitall member of the Church, but a kind of carcasse or piece of noisomnesse in it.

7. And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.]

7. Give these rules, that none but blameless persons may be taken in, and those that have need of it.

b. 8. But if any [b] provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse then an infidel.]

8. But if any man or woman doe not maintain those that belong to them, especially those of their family, (as their parents clearly are, having a right to live in their house, and a propriety to be maintained by them (or that they take care for and relieve them) supposing they are able to doe it) that man or woman doth quite contrary to the commands of Christ, and indeed performs not that duty to parents that even infidels think themselves obliged to doe.

9. Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one † man,]

9. Let none be listed as a widow into the number of those that are to be maintained by the Church (see note on Tit. 2. a.) under the age of sixty, nor any that have parted with their husbands, and marryed again (see note on c. 3. b.)

* Which hath had testimony of her good works, ἐν ἔργοις καλοῖς μαρτυρούμενη

10. * Well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the Saints feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.]

10. And let them be such as have by their acts of duty and charity approved themselves to those among whom they have lived in all things of which their condition hath been capable; such are good carefull education of their children, hospitality, friendlinesse and humility, and submission to the meanest offices for the relief of those that stand in need, care for all that are in any distresse, and in brief seeking occasions for all works of charity, and not onely embracing them when they have been offered.

* grow weary ot

c. 11. But the younger widows refuse, for when they * have begun to [c] wax wanton against Christ they will marry;]

11. But receive not into the Church-offices those widows that are under that age, for there will be danger of such, that they will be weary of their employment in the Church, of living in that pious strict condition, ver. 6. and then they will relieve themselves by marrying;

† violated ἠθέτησαν

12. Having condemnation, because they have † cast off their first faith:]

12. Which is a great and a punishable crime in them, viz. that of violating their promise made unto the Church (a kind of conjugal tie) that they would attend it alone, and not forsake it, which when they doe, and return again to the world, what is it but a giving the Church a bill of divorce, and marrying another husband?

* being idle they learn to goe about to houses, and being not only idle, but tatlers also and busie-bodies, to speak things that are not fit ἅμα δὲ καὶ περιερχόμεναι τὰς οἰκίας, οὐ μόνον δὲ ἀργαὶ ἀλλὰ καὶ λαλίστραι καὶ περίεργοι.

13. And withall * they learn to be idle, wandring about from house to house; and not onely idle, but tatlers also and busie-bodies, speaking things which they ought not.]

13. And such young widows being unfit for such a recesse and vacancy, have nothing to doe with their time, but spend it in going about from house to house, in asking questions; and not onely so, but fall into tatling and loose discourse, into censuring and medling with other folks matters, entertaining themselves and others with unseemly discourse, either calumniating or talking wantonly.

14. I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, give no occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully.]

14. My direction therefore is, that the younger women, widows or others, that have not attained to this gravity of mind and command over themselves, doe in that case betake themselves to a married life, and serve God in that, bearing and bringing up children (see note on c. 2. d.) guiding domestick affairs, that so they may not doe any thing which may give advantage to those that are willing to take it, to accuse or find fault, or bring reproach upon such loose professors, and the Church for their sakes.

15. For some are already turned aside after Satan.]

15. For some such you know there are which have forsaken the Christian path, and betaken themselves to the Gnosticks, bitter enemies to Christians, and these would be glad to have somewhat to say against you.

16. If any Chriſtian hath any helpleſſe widow of his family (ſee v. 8.) let him undertake the care and charge of them, and not caſt them upon the Church to provide for them, leſt if they doe, there be not in the ſtock of the Church ſufficient to provide for all that are truly helpleſſe.

16. If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the Church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.]

d. 17. Let the Biſhops that have diſcharged that function well, receive for their reward twice as much as others have, eſpecially thoſe that preach the Goſpel to whom it was news, and alſo continue to inſtruct congregations of Chriſtians in ſetled Churches, ſee Act. 11. b.

17. Let the Elders that rule well be † counted worthy of d double honour, eſpecially they who * labour in the word and doctrine.]

† be allowed, enjoy, b rewarded with διπλῆς δόσεως

* labour hard κοπιῶντες

18. For this is agreeable to that ſignificative ceremony of the Law, which allows the beaſt that is uſed to goe over the corn, and tread out the grain out of the ſtraw, (after the manner that threſhing doth,) to feed all the time that he doth the work, and ſo to have a certain reward in a liberal manner for all his labour.

18. For the Scripture ſaith, Thou ſhalt not muzzle the oxe that treadeth out the corn; and, The labourer is worthy of his reward.]

e. 19. Admit not any complaint againſt a Biſhop of any Church under thy Metropolis (ſee Act. 11. b.) unleſſe it be teſtified by two or three at leaſt.

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. Χῆραι

V. 3. Widows] There were two ſorts of χῆραι or lone perſons, which we render widows, in the antient Church. Firſt, thoſe that were taken in to ſerve and officiate there as diaconiſſæ (and thoſe were eſpecially, though not onely, choſen of virgins, ἀπαρθένοι that alwaies continued ſuch, as by a place of Ignatius may be collected;) theſe were a kind of imitation of thoſe which in Chriſts and the Apoſtles times voluntarily had devoted themſelves to the ſervice of God, and to miniſtering to, that is, providing for, the neceſſities of Chriſt and the Apoſtles and Saints, out of their own ſubſtance, ἐξ ὑπαρχόντων αὐταῖς, Luk. 8. 3. Such was Joanna a married woman, and Suſanna and others there. Such was Phœbe, ἀδελφὴν ἡμῶν, ἥτις διάκονον τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῆς ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς Rom. 16. 1. our ſiſter, that is, a believer, and ſhe a Deaconeſſe of the Church in Cenchrea, which is moſt probably the γυνὴ ἀδελφὴ 1 Cor. 9. 5. the Chriſtian woman that went along with Paul and Barnabas. For before there was any ſtock in the hands of the Church to make proviſion for either the Apoſtles or any other, there could no other courſe be taken but this, to have them ſupplied by ſuch perſons which did ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων αὐταῖς out of their own poſſeſſions liberally impart to them. But when afterward the faithful had brought their poſſeſſions, and laid them at the Apoſtles feet, and when in ſtead of that greater liberality, yet by the help of the offertory at the Sacrament, wealth came into the hands of the Church, (and thereby, ſaith Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2. πρεσβύτης πᾶσιν ὁ τῶν κληρικῶν ἐγένετο, the Prefect became the guardian to provide for all that were in want) then this office was inſtituted in the Church, firſt of men-deacons Act. 6. and after of women alſo, which were more uſefull for œconomical ſervices, and theſe were called πρεσβύτιδες Tit. 2. 3. elder women, and afterward Diaconiſſæ, Deaconeſſes, and might be admitted into the Church at fourty years old. See Can. 5. of the Council of Chalcedon. The ſecond ſort of widows were thoſe who being childleſſe and helpleſſe were to be fed and maintained by the Church, and theſe are particularly ſpoken of in this place, and thoſe many of them formerly married, and therefore were not to be received in till ſixty years old, v. 9. for ſo Zonaras on the Council of Chalcedon gives the reaſon, becauſe, ſaith he, the widow which hath had an husband is not, at the ſame age, ſo likely to continue unmarried, as ſhe that hath lived a virgin to that age, διὰ γὰρ τὸ μὴ γνωσθῆναι, &c. μᾶλλον ἂν εἴη πρὸς τὸ πάθος ὁ σωφρονιστής. And in caſe ſhe marry, that ſhe is to be removed out of this liſt ſeems clear; both firſt, becauſe in that caſe the husband muſt provide for her, and ſecondly by what is here ſaid ver. 11. of the care in not admitting such as are young and likely to marry. This relief which is here spoken of for widows being designed on purpose to give them the more leisure and vacancy for acts and exercises of piety, v. 5. waiting on God, continuing in prayer and supplication night and day, which is not supposable of married women, which have so many other affairs belonging to them, v. 14. to bring forth and bring up children, to manage the household and the like.

b. V. 8. Provide] Προνοεῖν to provide here doth not signifie laying up by way of carefull, thoughtfull providence before-hand, but onely taking care of for the present as we are able, relieving, maintaining, giving to them that want. So saith Hesychius, Προνοεῖ, ὀπαδεῖται· Πρόνοια, ὀπαδεία, φροντὶς, to take care for. So children that are exposed by their parents are ἀπρονόητοι in Harmenopulus, unprovided, destitute. So when Alexander Aphrodisæus saith, πᾶν τὸ προνοεῖν πρός ἀγαθόν τι τῷ προνουμένῳ θεωροῦσιν, ἐπορ. λυσ. βιβλ. α'. ζητ. ιδ'. he is said to provide for any who allows him any good thing. And Ammonius in his Scholia on the τ' φωνὰ, having resolved that one of Gods acts is προνοητικὴ τῶν καταδεεστέρων, providing for those that want, applies that of the Poet to it, Θεοὶ δωτῆρες, &c. Gods giving them what they want, making his providence and giving to be all one, and so προνοῶν here is interpreted by ἐπαρκῶν, v. 16. which is the sons duty to the aged helplesse parent, and he that doth it not was infamous among heathens; and accordingly Theophrastus in his Characters among the vilest actions, whoring, gaming, stealing, &c. placeth τὸν μητέρα μὴ τρέφειν, neglecting to feed the mother, and elsewhere, next after frequent worshipping of God, he placeth γονῆς γηροτροφῶν καλῶς, duly feeding the aged parents: and therefore John being by Christ commanded to be a son to Mary, presently takes her home to his house, Joh. 19. 27. As among the Samians the mothers of those which were slain in the wars were given to the richer citizens to be maintained by them; and the form of speech was like Christs to John, Σοὶ ταύτην δίδωμι τὴν μητέρα I give thee this mother. Thus in Hierocles speaking of marriage and children, παιδοποιὰς καὶ γηροβοσκὰς--γεννῶμεν, saith he, we beget helpers and feeders of our age: and as he adds, when the fathers dye, their children must in their stead performe this office to the Grandfather; so Aristoxenus in his Pythagorean Sentences, lib. 4. the children must think all they have to be their parents, and consequently must provide for them to the utmost of their power. See Stobæus, Ser. 77.

c. V. 11. Wax wanton] Καταστρηνιᾶσιν, as (without the preposition) στρηνιᾶσιν, is ὑβρίζειν, βαρέως φέρειν, and so στρηνιᾶν, τρυφᾶν in Phrynichus, and ἀτακτεῖν in Phavorinus, to grow stout or proud or disorderly, not willing to bear so much strictnesse, and so to put ones self out of the list or number of the Votaries; and here the widows that were ἐν κανόνι, as after-times called it, in the number of those that were to be maintained by the Church, and there to wait on the service of the Church, when they begin to be weary of that kind of life, then they are said καταστρηνιᾶσιν τῷ Χριστῷ, or στρηνιᾶσιν κατὰ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, to grow insolent and weary of Christ, that is, his service in the Church. Thus στρῆνος Rev. 18. 3. signifies irregular, disorderly behaviour, and στρηνιᾶσιν v. 7, 9. to live disorderly, enormously.

d. V. 17. Double honor] The διπλῆ τιμὴ double honour referres to the elder brothers portion, פי שנים double portion, Deut. 21. 17. and this going along with the power of ruling the family, Gen. 4. 7. (after the death of the father) is fitly accommodated to the office of Bishop in the Church; and so the electing of Barnabas and Paul to the Apostleship, Act. 13. 2. is expressed by ἀφορίσατε separate, the word used about the first born Exod. 13. 2. and so in Clem. Constit. l. 11. 28. διπλῆν αὐτοῖς ἀφορίζω μοῖραν, Let a doule portion be separated for them. Thus the double portion of the spirit of Elias resting on Elisæus, was the making him his successour in the office of Prophet, as the father above the ordinary sons of the prophets, to have rule over them. And so this verse is the setting down the reasonableness, that the Bishop that dischargeth his duty or prefecture well, should be looked upon in all respects as one that hath the primogeniture of maintainance (to which v. 18. referres) as well as dignity, especially if his pains be extraordinary, as it must be, if he both preach the Gospel where it was not before heard, (which is called λόγος the word, and εὐαγγελίζειν to preach, Rom. 15. 20. and κηρύσσειν to preach) and take pains in farther instructing the believers in the Churches, which is διδασκαλία, teaching or doctrine. For the word τιμὴ, that that signifies wages, reward of service, (appears among many others) by the third verse of this chapter, Honour widows, that is, relieve, maintain them. So Joh. 12. 26. where speaking of those that attend on and minister to Christ, he saith, τιμήσει αὐτὸν ὁ Πατὴρ, the Father shall honour, that is, reward him, or pay him his wages; but especially Mat. 15. where the command of Gods, of honouring the parents, ver. 6. is expressed v. 5. by giving them that by which they may be profited, that is, maintainance, &c. see Col. 2. Note i. So in Nicolaus Damascenus of the Thyni, Τῶν ξένων τοὺς μὲν ἐκουσίως ἐλθόντας σφόδρα τιμῶσι, They honour, that is, entertain, receive, strangers exceedingly. So Act. 28. 10. they of the Island honoured Paul with many honours, giving him provision for his journey. As for the ἀξιόω that is joyned to it, although that comes from ἄξιος worthy, yet it signifies, without any reference to that, simply to enjoy, to receive, to have, as might appear by many evidences among authors. One for all, that of Justin Martyr, or the author ἐπὶ τ. ἀγ. ᾧ ὑμνοστειάδ. where speaking of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, he saith of them, τ' αὐτῆς καὶ μιᾶς θεότητος ἠξιῶσθαι, (not they have been counted worthy, but) they have had (have been endued with) one and the same divinity.

c. V. 19. Against an Elder receive not an accusation] What is the meaning of κατηγορίαν παραδέχεσθαι to receive an accusation here, must be explained by the judicial proceedings among the Jewes, where before the giving of the sentence there were three parts, 1. מיבא ריב the admission of the cause, or suit, when the Judge doth not reject the complaint or accuser, and that is here κατηγορίαν παραδέχεσθαι, to admit an accusation, and is the meaning of Isa. 1. 23. neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them, the character of an unjust judge, that he admits not the widows complaint against the oppressor. After the complaint is admitted, then 2dly, there is מכונת ריב the confirmation of the suit or complaint, when the accuser confirms his suggestion by oath; for before that oath, one saying one thing, and the other the contrary, (which is called ἀντιλογία contradiction, Heb. 6. 16. and in * Lucian διαλέγεσθαι and ἀντιλέγειν, as parts of judicial proceedings) the Judge is uninclined to either side, but then comes in the oath, and is πέρας ἀντιλογίας the end of that affirming and denying (in the Author of that Epistle) takes away the æquilibrium that the Judge was in before, and by it he is now confirmed to the believing the one part against the other, whereupon the oath is said to be πρὸς βεβαίωσιν for confirmation in that place, Heb. 6. 16. as in the Romane law Ὅρκος ὀμοφώνως ἀμυσχέτησιν τίκτει, saith Psellus in Σωσφ. νομ. v. 12, 13. the oath coming in, parts the controversie, or doubt, and in Leg. Bajuvar. c. 12. tit. 15. 2. In his verò causis sacramenta præstentur, in quibus nullam probationem discussio judicantis invenerit (See Bignon. not. in Marculfi Form. l. 1. c. 38.)

then is the use of oaths when the discussion of the plea by the judge yields him no satisfactory proof. The 3d part is חקר ריב Job 29. 16. the searching out of the cause by arguments afterwards produced (causæ ratiocinii) and considered of by the Judge. The first of these onely it is that belongs to this place, the admission of the complaint, or accusation, which against a πρεσβύτερος or governor of the Church is not allowed under two or three witnesses, in respect of the gravity of his person and weight of his office or calling, who must not be defamed (as the being brought into the court is a kind of defamation) if there be not great cause for it.

f. Χεῖρας ἐπιτιθέναι

V. 22. Lay hands] That χεῖρας ἐπιτιθέναι laying on hands is a ceremony of prayer or benediction, is ordinarily known in the Old Testament, used first by the father to the children, in bestowing the blessing upon them, and with that succession to some part of the estate. So when Jacob blessed the children of Joseph, Gen. 48. 14. he laid his hands upon their heads, v. 15. And from thence it was among them accommodated to the communicating of power to others as assistants, or deriving it to them as successors. So when Moses assumed the seventy to assist him, Num. 11. 17. this, saith Maimonides, was done by his laying hands upon them, Sanhedr. c. 4. And when he left the world, and constituted Joshua his successor, God appointed him to take Joshua, and lay his hands upon him, Num. 27. 18. So Deut. 34. 9. Joshua was full of the spirit of wisdome, that is, was his successor in the Government, for Moses had laid his hands upon him. From these three uses of the ceremony, in Prayer, in paternal benediction, in creating of Officers, three sorts of things there are in the New Testament to which it is principally accommodated. In Prayer it is used either in curing diseases, or pardoning sins. Diseases, the corporal bands, Luk. 13. 16. were cured by imposition of hands, Act. 19. 17. and 28. 8 and so it was foretold Mar. 16. 18. they shall lay their hands on the sick, and they shall recover: And so Sins, the spiritual bands, were done away, or pardoned, by the same ceremony, laying on of hands, used in the absolution of penitents. Thus Heb. 6. 2. as the Baptismes are those used among the Jewes and Christians for the admission of Proselytes, so the imposition of hands doth probably denote the restoring of penitents that were lapsed after Baptisme, (see Note on Heb. 6. b.) From that of paternal benediction is that of laying on hands in blessing of infants, Mar. 10. 16. by that means signifying them to be fit to be received into the Church by Baptisme, as those that have title to this kingdome of heaven, the Church here, and, through the same mercy of God in Christ, heaven hereafter. This benediction and imposition of hands I suppose it is, that Clemens Alexandrinus referres to Pædag. l. 3. c. 11. in these words, Τίνι δὲ ὁ πρεσβύτερος ἐπιτίθησι χεῖρα; τίνα δὲ εὐλογήσει; On whom doth the Presbyter lay hands? whom shall he blesse? meaning most probably in that place the solemnity with which the Catechist dismissed those that were catechized, preparatory to their Baptisme: and so saith Eusebius of Constantine, de vita Constant. l. 4. that to prepare for his Baptisme, ἐξομολογούμενος τὰ διὰ χειροθεσίας εὐχῶν ἠξίωτο, he made profession, (that is, confess'd his sins, and profess'd the faith) and then was vouchsafed those prayers that are given by imposition of hands: to which purpose also the Author of the Constitutions called Apostolical, l. 7. c. 39. where having set down the severals in which the Catechumenus must be instructed, he adds, but let him that laies on hands adore God, &c. Secondly, that of confirming those of full age that had formerly been baptized. Such that of the Ephesian disciples seems to be, Act. 19. who being baptized, v. 5. Paul laid his hands on them, v. 6. To which in those times many extraordinary gifts were consequent, speaking with tongues, &c. as had formerly fallen out Act. 10. 44. Lastly, from that in creating successors, or assistants in power, came the use of imposition of hands in Ordination, whether of Bishops or Deacons, Act. 6. 6. and 8. 17. and 13. 3. 1 Tim. 4. 15. 2 Tim. 1. 6. To this last it is that this exhortation of Paul to Timothy is by many thought to referre; that he should be careful to have those whom he received into Orders, sufficiently approved to him. But the Context seems rather to referre it to that which was used in Absolution, that he should not make too much hast in receiving those that were under Censures, to Absolution; for that was the thing which would most probably make him partaker, or guilty of, their sins, which the Censures were designed to reform in them, but would not doe so, if before they had approved their repentance and reformation, they were received to the peace of the Church again. And thus it connects with the words foregoing v. 20. Those that offend rebuke before all, that the rest may have fear, and v. 21. I charge thee that thou observe these things without prejudging, doing nothing by favour or inclination, or partiality, whereon it follows, Lay hands suddainly on no man; and to that also belong the following rules, ver. 24. 25. (see Note h.) Thus in Victor about the Vandalick persecution, l. 2. Qui nobis pœnitentiæ manus collaturi sunt, & reconciliationis indulgentiam, obstrictos peccatorum vinculis soluturi, they that lay their hands of penance upon us, and conferre the indulgence of reconciliation, and loose us from the bands of sins; where it is clearly used in this sense. And in Can. 5. of the Council of Carthage, dist. 50. Presbyteris & Diaconis, si quando de gravi aliqua culpa convicti ministerio remoti fuissent, manus non imponerentur ut pœnitentibus, Priests and Deacons which had been convict of any grand fault, and so removed from their ministery, should not have hands laid on them as penitents. And in the third Council of Carthage (that in S. Augustines time) Can. 32. Cujuscunque autem pœnitentis publicum & vulgatissimum crimen est, quod universa Ecclesia noverit, ante Absidem manus ei imponatur, When the penitents sin is known to the whole Church, the Bishop is to lay his hands on him before the Absis, that is, the upper part of the Quire, where the Altar is. And Concil. Agath. Dist. 5. c. 63. Pœnitentes tempore quo pœnitentiam petant, impositionem manuum & cilicium super caput, sicut ubique constitutum est, consequantur, Let the penitents receive imposition of hands, and sackcloth upon their heads, as it is every where appointed. And so Hincmarus concerning the divorce of Thietberga, sacri Canones jubent ut pœnitentes tempore quo pœnitentiam petunt, imposituram manuum, & cilicium super capita à Sacerdote, sicut ubique vulgatum est, ante Absidem accipiant, The holy Canons command that the penitents when they demand repentance, that is, admission to penance and absolution, shall receive from the Bishop imposition of hands, and sackcloth upon their heads, as it is every where known, before the Absis, where the altar stands. So in Fulgentius Ep. 1. de conjug. Acceptâ manûs impositione, pœnitentiam, secundùm modum quem habet Christiana religio, peregit, He performed penance by imposition of hands, according to the manner observed in the Christian religion. So in Avitus Alcimus Ep. 24. Manûs impositionem adhibete converso ab hæresi, Use imposition of hands to him that is converted from heresie. And in the Author contra Prædestin. l. 3. Non ausi sunt Ecclesiarum Pontifices manum imponere pœnitenti, nisi confessionem voluntariam ostendenti, The Bishops of the Churches durst not lay hands on the penitent, but on his shewing his voluntary confession. And in the Chronicle of Jo. Gerundensis, speaking of the Arrians Synod of Toledo, one of the Canons is, De Romana religione ad nostram Catholicam fidem venientes non debere baptizari, sed tantummodo per manûs impositionem positionem, & Communionis perceptionem abluí. They that come from the Roman religion to our Catholick faith ought not to be baptized, but onely purged by imposition of hands and receiving the Communion. And this is the notion which S. Cyprian had of this place, and Pucianus in paræneſi ad pœnit. And though Theophylact ſeem to underſtand it of Ordination, yet what he addes in explication of the following words, neither partake of other mens ſins, μὴ κοινώνει τῶν μελλόντων, &c. Thou ſhalt be guilty both of his future ſins and even of his paſt, becauſe thou haſt neglected them, made darkneſs light, and not diſmiſſed him to the ſtate of mourning & compunction, ſeems to belong to abſolution.

g. Σεαυτὸν ἁγνὸν τήρει

Ib. Keep thy ſelf pure] What is the meaning of Σεαυτὸν ἁγνὸν τήρει, keep thy ſelf pure, will appear by the antient Gloſſary, Ἁγνὸς caſtus, it ſignifies that kind of purity which conſiſts in perfect chaſtity, free from all ſhew of impurity. So 2 Cor. 11. 2. ἁγνὴ παρθένον a pure chaſt virgin. So Tit. 2. 5. the widows or female officers of the Church muſt be ἁγναὶ pure or chaſt, and Timothy muſt behave himſelf toward the yonger women ἐν πάσῃ ἁγνείᾳ in all purity or chaſtity, c. 5. 2. and ſo the Hebrew טָהוֹר anſwerable to ἁγνὸς ſignifies. So that this precept and the other following of drink a little wine, though they come in here as in a parentheſis (the 24. and 25. being to be connected in ſenſe to the matter of Abſolution and Cenſures, ſee Note h.) yet they are added ſeaſonably and pertinently to the μηδὲ κοινώνει immediately precedent, after this manner, Thou art not to be over-favourable to offenders, to abſolve them too eaſily or ſpeedily. But above all thou muſt be ſure not to joyne with them in their courſe. And becauſe there be two chief heads of that falſe doctrine which is moſt frequent among you, (the hereſie of the Gnoſticks, from which eſpecially flow the faults to which the cenſures are moſt due) viz. forbidding of marriage (to which is conſequent all impure abominable living) and abſtinence from wine and meats—— c. 4. 3. I therefore now warn thee concerning theſe two. In the former reſpect, that abſtaining ſpontaneouſly from marriage, not as from a thing unlawfull, but onely denying thy ſelf that liberty which thou maieſt lawfully uſe, thou be ſure to preſerve perfect chaſtity, and not fall into the leaſt degree of Gnoſticiſme, for that is κοινωνεῖν ἁμαρτίαις ἀλλοτρίαις to commit thoſe ſins which thou art to cenſure in others. That is the meaning of κοινωνεῖν and συγκοινωνεῖν, to be guilty thy ſelf, not onely to be blameable for thy indulgence to others, and ſo for their commiſſion. So Eph. 5. 11. Μὴ συγκοινωνεῖτε have no fellowſhip with the unfruitfull works of darkneſs, that is, do not permit your ſelves to be drawn into their dark villanous myſteries, to commit thoſe heathen ſins which there are committed, but rather diſcover them, and bring them to light. And ſo Rev. 18. 4. Go out of her my people, that ye may not συγκοινωνεῖν communicate with, or partake of, her ſins, that is, be corrupted with, and drawn into the like commiſſions. And ſo here, 'twill be a caution to Timothy againſt the Gnoſtick practices (as elſewhere to avoid youthful luſts 2 Tim. 2. 22.) not to fall into thoſe guilts which he ought to deteſt and puniſh, but to keep himſelf perfectly pure from their practices. As for the ſecond thing, their abſtinences from meat and wine, this temper is to be obſerved; It is no doubt lawful for thoſe that can do it without any hurt to their bodies, to abſtain from meats which are moſt pleaſurable, and ſo from wine; and for thee to do thus, as long as thy health well permits, is both lawful and commendable (and the Gnoſticks hereſie conſiſts in this, that they impoſe ſuch abſtinences on all as neceſſary, and ſo διὰ βδελυρίαν, not δι' ἄσκησιν, as the Canons Apoſtolical ſtyle it, out of a deteſtation, and an opinion of the unlawfulneſs of meat, not for ſelf-denial, or auſterity:) but theſe creatures of God being created for the benefit and refreſhment of man, theſe thou mayeſt very ſafely make uſe of, and thy health of body being infirme, and ſubject to frequent diſeaſes, there is no reaſon thou ſhouldeſt never drink any wine, the continual uſe of water may be hurtfull to ſuch an habit of body as thine, and moderate taking of wine may be more proper, and then it is beſt to remit of that auſterity, which might otherwiſe be laudably continued, and tend to the preſerving of virginal chaſtity, but is not to be impoſed on thoſe whoſe health will not bear it. To this interpretation of the words agrees the diſcourſe of Cyrill of Jeruſalem, Catech. 4. Νηστεύοντες οὖν τὰ κρεῶν καὶ οἴνου ἀπεχόμεθα (ſo the Barocian MS. reads inſtead of νηστεύομεν ἀπεχόμεθα) οὐχ ὡς βδελύγματα μισοῦντες, ἀλλὰ τὴν ψυχὴν σωφρονοῦντες —— μὴ τοίνυν καταφρονεῖ τις ἐσθιόντων, καὶ διὰ τὸν τῶν σωμάτων ἀσθενείαν μεταλαμβανόντων, μηδὲ ἔλεγχε (ſo the Barocian, not ψέγε) τὸν ὀλίγῳ οἴνῳ χρωμένους διὰ τὸ στόμαχον καὶ τὰς πυκνὰς ἀσθενείας, (the Barocian addes καὶ μήπω αὐτὸς ὡς ἀκρατολὴς καλακόπης) μήτε ὡς ἀλλόδια μίσει τὰ κρέα· οἴδε γάρ τινας τούτου ὁ Ἀπόστολος, λέγων, κωλυόντων γαμεῖν, ἀπέχεσθαι βρωμάτων, &c. When we faſt, we abſtain from wine and fleſh, not hating them as unlawful, but expecting a reward:---deſpiſe not therefore thoſe that eat in reſpect of the weakneſſe of their body, nor find faults with thoſe that uſe a little wine for their ſtomach, and frequent infirmities, nor condemn them as ſinners, neither hate fleſh, as unlawful; for the Apoſtle knew ſome ſuch when he ſpeaks of forbidding to marry, and abſtaining from meats. Which being ſaid on this occaſion incidentally, he returnes again to the former matter, v. 24. But if both theſe, neither partake, &c. and keep thy ſelf pure, be interpreted to be an effect or conſequent of his laying on hands ſuddainly, then there is no ſuch occaſion of introducing that parentheſis, and therefore ſure that is not the meaning of it.

Γιγνὶ βεωμάτ. p. 93.

h. Τινῶν ἀμαρτίαι πρόδηλοι

V. 24. Some mens ſins are open before——] That theſe two laſt verſes of this chapter belong to the buſineſs of Church-Cenſures and Abſolution, may appear by the Context: v. 20. there is direction for the publick rebuking of offenders, whether by way of correption, or inflicting the Cenſures, and v. 21 there is a conjuration againſt prejudging on one ſide, and partiality or favour on the other, and v. 22. deliberation, and delay, and obſervation of the penitents behaviour is required, before he be abſolved, Lay hands ſuddainly on no man, that is, before the ſincerity of his reformation be approved to thee, according as in the Primitive Canons, they muſt exerciſe themſelves for ſome ſpace in good workes, before they are capable of Abſolution; and then ſome words coming between, as proper to Biſhop Timothies youth, that he be ſure that he fall not himſelf into thoſe ſinnes which he ſees committed by others, and ſo his office of juriſdiction become a ſnare to him, (and on occaſion of that, the 23d verſe being added by way of parentheſis) it followes very pertinently to that former matter, Some mens ſins are πρόδηλοι open beforehand, &c. that is, by not abſolving offenders over haſtily, by obſerving & waiting a while, thou wilt be more able to paſſe a right judgment. For the behaviour of ſome men under the Cenſures is ſo ill, that they deſerve to be farther cenſured rather than abſolved, and in that reſpect it is not good to be too haſty in abſolving. And the good works of ſome men doe approve & demonſtrate the ſincerity of their repentance, which yet they cannot doe, if they be abſolved preſently before they have ſo approved themſelves. And whether one way or other, mens works will manifeſt what they are; and though for a time they may be concealed, yet if the Biſhop make not overmuch haſt to abſolve, they will diſcover themſelves either by their good works to be ſincere, or by their ill to be unſincere. And ſo ſtill this is the rendring of a reaſon for the point in hand, that the Biſhop make not overmuch haſt to Abſolution.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

1. Those Christians that are bond-men to heathens must perform all service and obedience to them, which belongs to them by the law of servants among the heathens, that the profession of Christianity and the doctrine of the Gospell be not looked upon by the heathens as that which makes men worse livers then they were, neglecting their morall duties for being Christians.

1. LET as many * servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and † his doctrine be not blasphemed.]

* as are servants under yokes ὅσοι εἰσὶν ὑπὸ ζυγὸν δοῦλοι
† the doctrine be not evill spoken of

2. And those Christians that have Christian masters must not withdraw any of that obedience which is due to them, upon this plea, that they are Christians, and so their equals or brethren; but think themselves the more obliged to serve them, because the faith and love that constitutes men Christians, consists in helping to doe good, and that is all wherein their service consists, and consequently their performing due service to them is a very Christian thing, and that which Christianity doth not lesse, but more oblige them to. These are things of such a nature, so much required by Christian religion, and the contrary at this time so taught by the Gnostick hereticks, that it is necessary for thee to give these admonitions to all, to tell them what is their duty, and exhort them carefully to practise it.

* wicked opinions πονηραὶ ὑπόνοιαι

5. Disputings void of all solidity, empty and unprofitable, such as are proportionable to men whose very understandings are debauched and corrupted, and void of all truth, men that have taken up an opinion (that caused the discourse at this time) that Christian religion (see note on c. 3. f.) is an advantageous trade, a means of helping one to secular immunities and privileges, (as that a servant shall be free by that means:) such men as these are fit for Ecclesiastical censures or discipline to be past upon them.

5. † Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, * supposing that gain is godlinesse: from such withdraw thy self.]

† odde kind of disputings of men that have their understanding perverted παραδιατριβαὶ διεφθαρμένων ἀνθρώπων τὸν νοῦν
* thinking that piety

6. As for that opinion of theirs, that Christianity is an advantageous calling, though it be farre from true, nay impious, in that sense whereto they apply it, yet in this other 'tis most orthodox, that a Christian life with a competent sufficient subsistence is all the wealth in the world, and much better then a great deal more wealth.

6. But godlinesse with † contentment is great gain.]

is advantage νομιζόντων πορισμὸν εἶναι τὴν εὐσέβειαν † a competency μετ' αὐταρκείας

7. For for any thing above that competency or sufficiency for this life 'tis clear 'tis no way advantageous to us, for as we brought nothing with us into this world, so we cannot carry any out, and so that which we do not spend or use, is lost to us.

7. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is * certain we can carry nothing out.]

* manifest δῆλον

d. 8. And what that competency or sufficiency is, it is as clear, viz. food and rayment, which is all we stand in need of.

8. And having food and rayment, † let us be therewith [d] content.]

† we shall be sufficiently provided for with these

e. 9. Whereas on the other side, they that set their minds on the getting of riches, are thereby betraied into many temptations and snares to sin, into many desires and pursuits, which are both ridiculous and unprofitable of themselves, bring nothing of satisfaction with them, and besides bring great mischiefs upon them, many times most contrary to the designed advantages; and which finally bring ruine even in this world, (and that the Gnosticks will find) and eternall damnation in another.

9. But they that [e] will be rich, fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtfull lusts, which * drown men in destruction and perdition.]

* ingulph βυθίζουσι

10. For at this time 'tis evident what a deale of mischief hath been caused by the love of this worldly trash, for the preserving of which many have forsaken the orthodox faith and fallen off to the Gnostick heresie, and brought themselves to a sad and most wretched condition.

10. For the love of money is the root of all evill; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.]

11. But thou which art by God appointed to be a Governor in his Church must keep thy self exactly from all these, and endeavour earnestly the attaining and exercising all those vertues which are most contrary to the practice of these hereticks, viz. innocence, observation of the pure Christian doctrine (see note on c. 3. f.) perseverance in the faith, perfect charity to other men, a patient endurance of all the persecutions that light upon thee, moderation toward offenders (opposed to too great severity.)

11. But thou, O man of God, flee these things: and follow after righteousnesse, godlinesse, faith, love, patience, meeknesse.]

f. 12. Let Christianity be the race wherein you run, and in that so behave thy self that you may obtain the crown (see note on Phil. 3. c. and 2 Pet. 1. d.) to the obtaining of which thou art put into a course by God, and hast, as in one of the Grecian combates, quitted thy self very well before many spectators, suffered a great persecution for the faith of Christ (which many are witnesses of) and held out valiantly.

12. † Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternall life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.]

† Strive the good strife

13. And accordingly I now adjure thee by all that is pretious, as thou believest God to be able to raise thee from the dead, if thou shouldest perish in the combate, or as thou art a Christian, and thereby obliged to imitate Christ, who when he came before the Roman Procurator, held out constantly even to death.

13. I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession,]

14. That thou keep close to the Evangelicall rule, and continue constant without any blemish or blame, without any falling off in time of hazard (as some others are observed to doe) untill that coming of Christ (so often spoken of, and expected according to his promise) for the rescue of his faithfull servants, and destruction of the persecutors and the cowardly, (see note on 2 Thes. 2. k.)

14. That thou keep this commandement without spot, unrebukable, untill the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ,]

15. Which God shall declare in that season which he thinks most fit and opportune for it, and thereby expresse his omnipotence, such as no body can resist, be he never so great and mighty, to the advantage of all his faithfull servants;

16. Even that God who only is immortal in himself, and all immortality of others is derived from him, and therefore may safely be trusted with our safety, and who alone reigneth in heaven, and receiveth thither only whom he pleaseth, the great, unapproachable, invisible God, who is by all men to be acknowledged and praised for ever. Amen.

17. Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust † in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things * g to enjoy;]

† uncertainty of wealth ὅτι πλούτου ἀδηλότης

17. And as at all times, so especially in such a season as this, when persecutions reign already, and vengeances are approaching from God upon those that take most care to secure themselves, it will be a seasonable admonition from thee to all rich men, not to bear it high, to be proud or insolent upon that score, nor to depend or relie on their wealth, which they have upon such uncertainties, but to keep close and depend on God, who alone is able to preserve them, and will, if adhered to, make a cheerfull, plentifull provision for them; g

18. That they doe good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate,]

18. And to that end to be bountiful, to proportion their acts of charity to their wealth, to abound (not in possessions, but) in good deeds, to be alwaies a dispensing their wealth, liberal to all that want, see note on Act. 2. e.

20, 21. My dear son Timothy, be sure to hold fast that form of sound doctrine which is delivered to Christians from hand to hand, and give no entertainment to those heathenish empty discourses of Theology brought in by the hereticks, and the discourses of them that falsly call themselves Gnosticks or knowing men, v. 3, 4. (see note on 2 Pet. 1. c.) who pretending to more knowledg then ordinary, have quite forsaken the faith of Christ, and disseminated discourses by way of opposition and contradiction to the Christian doctrine. I heartily wish all happinesse to thee. i

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Μὴ καταφρονείτωσαν ὅτι ἀδελφοί

V. 2. Let them not despise them——] It is here somewhat uncertain to whom these words, ὅτι ἀδελφοί εἰσι, because they are brethren, and ὅτι πιστοὶ, &c. do belong, whether to the servants, that pretended themselves at liberty because they were Christians, or to the Masters, whom the servants would not obey, but despise, because those Masters were ἀδελφοὶ brethren, and so but equals, no better men then they. That the latter is it, is made probable by this, that in the beginning of the verse we read πιστὰς δεσπότας believing Masters, where the πιστοὶ, faithfull or believing, is directly applied to the Masters. But there is more reason to adhere to the former. 1. Because the probability for the latter is of no force, concluding only that the Masters here spoken of are Christians, which is granted also in the former interpretation, and not that the second πιστοὶ, &c. is not appliable to the servants; for it is certain that the servants here spoken of are supposed to be Christians also; for otherwise the Apostles exhortation could not here be given to them, or to Timothy concerning them, neither Paul nor Timothy having jurisdiction over those that were not Christians: 2ly, because the Libertine Christians plea against subjection to their Masters cannot be supposed to have been taken from the Christianity of their Masters; for 'tis evident by the first verse that they excepted against subjection, and pleaded exemption from obedience to Masters that were not Christians, viz. those which kept them under yoke, (as Christians were not allow'd to doe to Christians) that is, heathen Masters; but their plea against all subjection both to heathens v. 1. and to πιστοὶ δεσπόται believing Masters v. 2. was the same, only this that they were Christians, and therefore too good to serve Heathens, and again Christians, whose title ἀδελφοὶ brethren was a style of equality, and so an argument that they were free from serving their fellow-Christians: 3dly, because the direct rendring of the word being that which we have given in the margent, the ἀντιλαμβανόμενοι τῆς εὐεργεσίας with the particle ὅτι before it, being in all reason the Subject, and πιστοὶ καὶ ἀγαπητοὶ, faithfull and beloved, the Prædicate in the Proposition, the sense will be obvious, by applying it to the servants, (but not so by applying it to the Masters) thus, Let not the Christian servants despise their Christian Masters upon this score, that the servant by Christianity is made a brother, and equal to his Master, but the rather serve them upon this very score of being Christians, because they that help and assist in doing good, (as Christian servants of Christian Masters do assist their Masters in doing good, whereas it cannot fitly be said of the Masters, though Christians, that they thus help or aid their servants) are faithfull and beloved, that is, such as Christians ought to be, exercising fidelity and love to God, and to their Masters for Gods sake, who hath commanded obedience to them. And for these reasons this notion seems the most probable, by applying all these to the servants in the latter part of the verse, but to those as servants of the πιστοὶ δεσπόται, Christian Masters, in the former part of it. And if we consider the words in several, and then all of them together, this will be yet more evident. Πιστοὶ and ἀγαπητοὶ are the ordinary titles of Christians, proportionable to the two prime graces of a Christian, Faith and Love; and so ἀδελφοὶ, brethren, is a title also signifying the same thing, but withall noting an equality, such as is among brethren. The Gnosticks upon this ground taught liberty and manumission of servants from their Masters, by their being Christians, and so fellow-brethren, not servants of their fellow-Christians. To which argument of theirs taken from one title of Christians, the Apostle answers, and makes retortion, by mentioning those other titles of Christians also, which may very well be reconcilable with subjection, as πιστοὶ faithfull, which is an Epithet that belongs ordinarily to servants, noting fidelity, wich is the special thing required in them. And so also ἀγαπητοὶ beloved will be, which, as it is the title of Christians every where in the New Testament, so 'tis also a title of servants too, in that they assist their masters in doing good, which is but the work of a wife to a husband, of one friend or beloved to another. All this is said most clearly in reference to the Gnosticks, whose doctrine that was, and the seeds of it were visible in Asia (and affirmed to be so in one Church under Timothies care, that of Smyrna) in Polycarp's time, which caused Ignatius's admonition in his Epistle to him, that the men or maid servants should not be puff'd up,

Πιστοὶ Ἀγαπητοὶ

Ἀδελφοὶ

up, ἀλλ' εἰς δόξαν Θεῦ πλεῖον δουλεύτωσαν, but to the glory of God let them serve the more, as(here)become the better servants for being Christians, and μὴ αἱρέτως διὰ τὸ κοινὸν ἐλευθερῶδες,&c. Let them not desire, or pretend to, any common liberty upon the score of being Christians.

b. Ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι Ib. Partakers] Ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι is to help, either from one notion of ἀντὶ, contra, to take up at the other end, and so to bear part of a burthen, as the wife is the mans helper; or as ἀντὶ signifies vice, or pro, to bear any weight in anothers stead, ἀντιλαμβανόμενος, βοηθὸς an helper, saith Hesychius; and so here ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι τῆς εὐεργεσίας, to assist doing good (see Note on Mat. 6. m.)But when it is joyned with a Genitive of the person, it signifies somewhat more. See Note on Luk. 10. b.

c. Εὐεργεσία Ib. Benefit] The word εὐεργεσία is but once more used in the New Testament, Act. 4 9. and there 'tis taken Actively, doing good, not receiving it, beneficentia in the Active, not beneficium in the Passive sense, which, saith Aristotle, is εὐεργέτημα, as it is in the receiver. And thus εὐποιΐα is doing, not receiving, good, with which this holds analogie directly.

d. V. 8. Content] Ἀρκεσθησόμεθα τούτοις signifies we shall be satisfied with these So the Syriack renders it, Wherefore meat and cloathing are sufficient for us, ספקא(from ספק or שבע) both in sense and sound differing little from the Latine sufficio, only in the Latine termination.

e. Βουλόμενοι πλουτεῖν V. 9. Will be rich] That the βουλόμενοι πλουτεῖν they that will be rich, is part of the character of the Gnosticks in this place, & that they were a sort of Christians that made no use of their religion, but to their secular advantages, v. 5. and whensoever it was not reconcileable with thriving in the world, (brought persecution) made no scruple of renouncing their Christian profession, hath often been said, and may appear from one eminent place of Clemens Alexandrinus, who (opposing τὴν ἀληθῶς γνωστικὴν the true knower of mysteries, or searcher into profitable Cabala's, the Christian indeed to the Gnostick, or knower of mysteries here falsly so called v. 20.) hath these words, οἶδεν ἀνὴρ καὶ τὰς τυφώσεις τὰ αἰνίγματα τῶν ἡμερῶν τούτων τὸ τέταρτον, καὶ τὸ ἕκτον ἐπιφημίζον ἑκάστῃ ἡμέρᾳ, ἢ μὲν Ἑρμῆ, ἡ δ' Ἀφροδίτης· ἀνθ' ὧν ἀπέχεται τοῦ βίου φιλαργυρίας τε ὁμοῦ καὶ φιλοδοξίας· ἐξ ὧν αἱ πᾶσαι ἐκφύονται κακίαι, He knows the mysteries of the fastdaies, the fourth and sixth day of the week, one is named by the name of Mercury, the other of Venus, and accordingly he fasts or abstains in his conversation from love of money, and love of pleasures, from which all evil doth spring. Where, as love of pleasures, every where imputed to the Gnostick hereticks, is mentioned as one root of all villany, so is love of money taken notice of as the other (v.10.) and both in relation to the Gnosticks here, to whom the true Christian is opposed.

f. Ἀγωνίζου τὸν ἀγῶνα V. 12. Fight the good fight] This whole verse alludes to the exercises of the Grecians. In which as there were five sorts, Running, Wrestling, &c. formerly mentioned, so every of them is commonly styled ἀγὼν a combat or strife, and they which contended in each of them said, as here, ἀγωνίζεσθαι ἀγῶνα. The rendring of this fight a good fight may make it believed to belong peculiarly to that of Cuffing πυγμὴ, whence our Latine pugna fight comes. But the word is not here to be so restrained, but set more generally in some common word, as strife or combate, (as ἀγωνίζεσθαι εἰσελθεῖν, strive to enter in at the streight gate, and ἐπαγωνίζεσθαι Jude 3. to contend earnestly) and then 'twill by the consequents be applied to that of Racing, where the crown was set over the goale, that he that came formost, and so conquered, might catch it off and carry it away with him; for so ἐπιλαβοῦ lay hold, or apprehend, that follows here, and ver. 19. is the word that expresses the catching of the crown from the top of the goale, and eternal life is that crown; and the ἐνώπιον πολλῶν μαρτύρων, before many witnesses, denotes the many spectators that were wont to be at those games, called from thence πανηγύρεις, frequentiæ, and solemnities; and so καλεῖν may refer also to the κήρυξ, or præco, who proclaimed the laws and the prize or reward of the ἀγῶνες, and called the company together to contend for it. καλῆν

ἐπιλαβοῦ ἐνώπιον πολλῶν μαρτύρων

V. 17. To enjoy] Εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν, εἰς τρυφὴν, saith Phavorinus, a cheerful, comfortable condition, (agreeable to the πάντα all things, and πλουσίως richly, preceding:) and thus it is used, not only in an ill, but good sense, ἀπολαύω πλούτου, enjoying wealth, for εὐδαιμονῶ, being happy, and ἀπολαύω τιμῆς, enjoying honour, for εὐτυχῶ, that other kind of happinesse. g. εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν

V. 19. Foundation] The word θεμέλιος in this place seems to have a peculiar signification (different from that other of foundation so ordinary in other places) and coming from τίθημι, to lay up, as θησαυρὸς doth, it may possibly signifie no more then a treasure, somewhat laid up, and so both ἀποθησαυρίζον, laying up, going before, and εἰς τὸ μέλλον, for the future, or time to come, following it, would incline to render it. So Tobit 4. 9. in the same matter of alms-giving, θέμα γὰρ ἀγαθὸν θησαυρίζεις, for thou layest up for thy self a good treasure, a good laying up, against the day of necessity. Beyond this, it is the observation of a late Critick, Sam. Petit, that the word θεμέλιος may signifie in the same latitude that the Hebrew עקר (which is answerable to it) doth, that is, not only a foundation, but, as the Rabbines use the word, a bill of contract, a bond or obligation, that he receives that lends out any thing, upon which he may found a confidence of having it returned to him again. To this perhaps it may be appliable that the Hebrew מוסד, which is rendred θεμέλιος sometimes, is also rendred ζωθήκη, Isa. 30. 1. a compact. And then it will have this weight here, that the almes-giver by his liberality receives and layes up an obligation from God, that this mercy of his shall be rewarded. And to this notion of the word that of Prov. 19. 7. is very agreeable, He that hath pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given he will pay him again. In this sense, saith he, the word is again found 2 Tim. 2. 19. where Gods θεμέλιος is said to have a seal affixed to it, which seems to refer to a bill or bond: and because those seals had their inscriptions on both sides, agreeing to the conditions of the two persons contracting, accordingly it is there added, first on Gods part, The Lord knoweth them that are his, that is, God will be faithfull and constant in owning those that are his servants; then 2dly, on mans part, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity. So that Gods θεμέλιος there may very well signifie his χειρόγραφον, bill or bond, (and so here the word may signifie also) which being left with any man as a means to secure him, a depositum, a παρακαταθήκη, a pledge or pawn, may well be styled θεμέλιος, from τίθημι pono, somewhat delivered him as his security. h. θεμέλιος

V. 20. Oppositions of science] That the γνῶσις ψευδώνυμος, science falsly so called, is set down to denote the heretical crue of the Gnosticks, there can be no question, and is elsewhere largely shewed, Note on 2 Pet. 1. c. That the first author of these was Simon Magus, is also evident in Irenæus and others of the antients. Now it seems there were thus early discourses written by him or some of his, for the opposing the true Christian doctrine, and these are here called ἀντιθέσεις oppositions or contradictions: to which agrees that of Dionysius Areopagita περὶ θεῖ. ὀνομ. c. 6. where mentioning them, he styles them οἱ τῆς ἔξωθεν Σίμωνος ἀντιῤῥητικοὶ λόγοι, the contradictory discourses of the dotage of Simon, by the παραφοιὰ or dotage of Simon meaning the same that is here expres'd by the ψευδώνυμος γνῶσις, that is, those heretical, proud, but sottish followers of Simon. i. ἀντιθέσεις

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

THat this Epiſtle was ſent to Timothy from Rome there is no queſtion, and that whilſt he was in reſtraint and danger there. But whether this were at that firſt time of his being there, mention'd in the laſt of the Acts, An. Chr. 58. or whether immediately before his Martyrdome, which was ten years after, about the thirteenth or fourteenth of Nero, there is this reaſon to demurre, becauſe he tells him c. 4. 6. that he is (as the ordinary Engliſh reads) now ready to be offered, and that the time of his departure is at hand; which ſeems, with the Subſcription of the Epiſtle, to determine it to the latter. On the other ſide, ſome paſſages there are which incline it to the former; as when he ſaith c. 4. 16. that in his firſt defence though all forſooke him, yet the Lord ſtood with him, that the preaching might be fullfilled, and that all the Gentiles might hear, &c. which ſeems to referre it to his firſt being at Rome, after which time he proclaimed the Goſpel to the Gentiles in other regions. So ſaith Clemens in his Epiſtle to the Corinthians, p. 8. that he came εἰς τὸ τέρμα τῆς δύσεως, to ſome remote parts in the Weſt. So S. Jerome in Catal. that being diſmiſs'd by Nero, he preach'd the Goſpel of Chriſt in the Weſtern parts. So ſaith Euſebius l. 2. c. 21. Τότε μὲν οὖν ἀπολογησάμενον, αὖθις ὅτι τὸ κηρύγματος διακονίαν λόγου ἔχει σπουδὴν τὸν Ἀπόστολον, Then having made his defence, the report is that he did again betake himſelf to the office, or miniſtery, of preaching the Word. So when he remembers to Timothy his perſecutions at Antioch, Iconium and Lyſtra, c. 3. 11. and what Alexander at Epheſus had done to him, Act. 19. 33. it is not ſo probable that this ſhould be repeated by him 14. years after the fact, and juſt before his death, as at his firſt being at Rome, which was not above four years after the fact. So when he ſaith c. 4. 12. that he had ſent Tychicus to Epheſus, it is probable that that was at the writing of the Epiſtle to the Epheſians, which he ſent from Rome by Tychicus about this time of his firſt being there. And for the one argument on the other ſide, the approaching of his death, to that may be oppoſed what he adds c. 4. 17, 18. that he was delivered out of the mouth of the lion, that is, either from Nero under the title of the lion, or from his great danger, adding confidently for the future, that the Lord ſhall deliver him; which was literally true of this firſt, but cannot in the ſenſe of delivering him from his danger, (to which the 17th verſe belongs) be verified of his laſt danger, from which he was not delivered. And for the words ver. 6. I ſuppoſe they may thus beſt be rendred, Ἐγὼ γὰρ ἤδη σπένδομαι, for I am already poured out, (ſee Note on Phil. 2. e.) that is, my danger of death is already ſo great (to the eye of man) that I am as it were wine poured out upon the ſacrifice, to prepare it for offering up. To which he may fitly reſemble his being brought out to the barre, to be tried for his life. And when 'tis added, καὶ ὁ καιρὸς τῆς ἐμῆς ἀναλύσεως ἐφέστηκα, and the time of my departure hath been at hand, that may denote no more than an imminent danger of death, mentioned as now paſs'd, without any foretelling that he ſhould now inſtantly die. And in this ſenſe it will be reconcileable with the Lords having delivered him out of the mouth of the lion, v. 17. viz. this imminent, but now paſs'd, danger. And thus may the ſeventh verſe be interpreted alſo, I have fought a good fight (of afflictions) (ſee 1 Theſſ. 2 Note b.) run great hazards, and paſs'd Chriſtianly through them, I have run my race (ſo τελεῖν ſignifies, not to finiſh, but to perform; ſee Note on Act. 21. a.) I have kept the faith, not ſwerved from it, for all my danger; by δρόμος, race, not referring to the whole courſe of life, but to this one combat of afflictions at Rome, now freſh in his memory, and recited in that chapter, ver. 16, 17. That Timothy which is here appointed to come to him, chap. 4. 9. did accordingly come, is generally acknowledged, and that after his coming, the Epiſtles to the Philippians, Coloſſians and Philemon were written, as appears by the place, Rome, from whence they are all dated, and the joyning of Timothy's name in the front of them. Now of all thoſe Epiſtles 'tis clear that they were written at his firſt being at Rome, and not immediately before his Martyrdome. For Philip. 1. 26. & 2. 23, 24. he expreſſeth his confidence that he ſhall be delivered, and again come unto them, which is not reconcileable with his perſwaſion of the inſtant approach of his death at the writing of this, and to Philemon v. 22. he ſends to make proviſion for his lodging at Coloſſæ. As for the Subſcription of the Epiſtle, which referres it to the ἐκ δευτέρου, the ſecond time of his coming before Nero, that may poſſibly ſtand good, by this interpretation; that he was twice at his firſt impriſonment brought out to the barre before the Emperor, and freed both times, that the firſt, being his greateſt danger, was moſt memorable to him by all mens forſaking him, and the interpoſing of Gods protection when all other means failed him. And this is more likely to be recited by him in an Epiſtle written ſoon after it, then in one of ten years diſtance from it. However, we know that the Subſcriptions of the Epiſtles are not to be found in all the antient Copies. What the deſigne of this Epiſtle was, is manifeſt, to ſtirre him up to caution, diligence, and diſcharge of his office, on occaſion of the creeping hereſie of the Gnoſticks, c. 2. 17. ſtolen in among them, which had much debauched the Aſiaticks, c. 1. 15. and made uſe of Magick to oppoſe the truth of the Goſpel, c. 3. 8.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. I.

1. I Paul, who (farre from any merit of mine, meerly by the good pleasure of God and his undeserved grace) have received commission to make known the Gospel or the promise of life, which now is made by Christ to all penitent believers,

1. PAUL an Apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,]

2. To Timothy, my dearly beloved son, Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and Christ Jesus our Lord.]

2. Send greeting in the Lord to Timothy by me converted to the faith.

3. In my thanksgivings and prayers to God (whom, as my progenitors of the tribe of Benjamin did before me, so have I obeyed sincerely all my time, even when through ignorance I persecuted the Christian faith, doing according to the dictate of my conscience, or as I was perswaded I ought to doe) I mention thee constantly, praying and giving thanks to God for thee,

3. I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day,]

4. Desiring earnestly to see thee whom I love so dearly, (and this passionate desire being inflamed by the remembrance of thy tears at our parting) that our meeting again may be as full of joy as our parting was of sorrow;

4. Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindfull of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;]

5. Remembring the sincerity of thy obedience to the Gospel of Christ, and being confident that as thy mother and grandmother, which received the faith before thee, continued in it to the end, so thou also wilt persevere and never fall off from it.

5. When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice, and I am perswaded that in thee also.]

6. And that it may be so, I now write to thee, as a monitor or remembrancer, that thou consider the honourable calling which was conferred upon thee by my laying hands upon thee, and making thee Bishop (in which some others joyned with me, see note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) and the many extraordinary gifts consequent thereto, which thou art obliged to stirre up and quicken by the diligent exercise of them, and neither by fear nor compliance with any to let them lie by thee unprofitably.

6. Wherefore I put thee in remembrance, that thou stirre up the gift of God which is in thee by putting on of my hands.]

7. For sure that God that gave us this commission and gifts, hath not given thee or me so poor a cowardly spirit, as that we should be afraid of the dangers and threats of men against the preaching of the Gospel; but courageous hearts to encounter any difficulty, a love of God which will actuate this valour, and cast out all fear of danger, and withall a tranquillity of mind, and a full contentednesse in whatsoever state.

Whatever therefore the danger be of preaching Christ, be not discouraged, or whatever the example of my sufferings, doe thou resolve to doe and suffer the like cheerfully and couragiously, and to be a fellow-sufferer with the Gospel of Christ, to bear whatsoever falls upon that, by that strength which God gives thee,

Annotations on Chap. I.

2. Οἶκος Ὀνησιφόρου, the houſe of Oneſiphorus

V. 16. The houſe of Oneſiphorus] What οἶκος Ὀνησιφόρου, the houſe of Oneſiphorus, here ſignifies, is thought fit to be examined by ſome in order to the doctrine of praying for the dead. For becauſe the prayer is here for the houſhold, and not for the maſter of it, Oneſiphorus himſelf, it is by ſome preſently concluded that Oneſiphorus was dead at that time. And then that being ſuppoſed, it appears v. 18. that S. Paul prayes for him, that he may find mercy in that day. How farre it may be fit to pray for them that are departed this life, needs not to be diſputed here. 'Tis certain that ſome meaſure of bleſſe, which ſhall at the day of judgment be vouchſafed the Saints, when their bodies and ſouls ſhall be reunited, is not till then enjoyed by them, and therefore may ſafely and fitly be prayed for them, (in the ſame manner as Chriſt prayes to his Father, to glorifie him with that glory which he had before the world was.) And this is a very diſtant thing from that prayer which is now uſed in the Romiſh Church for deliverance from temporal pains, founded in their doctrine of Purgatory, which would no way be concluſible from hence, though Oneſiphorus, for whom S. Paul here prayes for mercy, had been now dead. Nay 'tis evident, that the mercy for which they which are conceived to be in Purgatory might be the better, muſt be beſtowed, and conſequently prayed for to befall them, before the day of doom, at which time all that are there are ſuppoſed by them to be releaſed. But neither is there any evidence of Oneſiphorus being then dead, nor probability of it here. For of this Oneſiphorus theſe two things may be obſerved from hence: firſt, That his family was now at Epheſus, and accordingly he ſalutes it there, c. 4. 19. and conſequently that there was his ordinary place of abode; and agreeably it is here ſaid of him, that he had relieved Paul when he was at Epheſus, v. 18. and that is the reaſon why in an Epiſtle to Timothy, reſiding in that city, this mention is made of his family: ſecondly That he was at this time (when Paul wrote this) abſent from his home, in all probability at Rome, (for ῥώμην must be rendred being, not when he was) at leaſt but lately departed, and ſo ſtill on his way from Rome, where Paul was a priſoner, and where Oneſiphorus had ſought and found him out, v. 17. and without fear viſited and relieved him. And this is a fair account, why Paul writing to Timothy, where his family was, mentioned them with ſo much kindneſſe, but joines not him in that remembrance, becauſe he was at Rome, from whence, and not at Epheſus, to which he wrote. And ſo all the force of that argument is vaniſhed.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. THou therefore, my ſon, be ſtrong in the grace which is in Chriſt Jeſus.]

1. Doe thou therefore, my beloved ſon, take all care to ſtrengthen thy ſelf in the Goſpel: ſee note on Heb. 13. a.

2. And the things that thou haſt heard of me among many witneſſes, the ſame commit thou to faithfull men, who ſhall be able to teach others alſo.]

2. And the articles of faith and good life, which I have taught thee from Chriſt, agreed on and conſented in by the teſtimony of all the other Apoſtles, do thou communicate to others whoſe ability and fidelity is known to thee, and appoint them as Biſhops of the ſeveral Churches under thee, to teach others alſo.

* endure patiently συγκακόπαθησον

3. Thou therefore * endure hardneſſe as a good ſouldier of Jeſus Chriſt.]

3. And arm thy ſelf againſt all difficulties, as one that haſt undertaken Chriſt's colours to ſerve under him.

† hath impreſſed him στρατολογήσαντι

4. No man that warreth entangleth himſelf with the affaires of this life, that he may pleaſe him who † hath choſen him to be a ſouldier.]

4. And therefore as the ſouldiers, according to the Roman rules of their militia, are forbidden to meddle with the emploiments of Tutors or Guardians of men's perſons or eſtates, or proctors of their cauſes, to undertake husbandry or merchandice, &c becauſe every of theſe is ſo diſtant from, that 'tis incompetible with the waiting on their colours; ſo whatſoever emploiments of the world are not competible with the diſcharge of thy office, as thou art a miniſter of Chriſt (as while the Empire and ſtate of the world remains heathen, and not Chriſtian, moſt ſecular emploiments are farre diſtant from the Chriſtian, and thy interpoſing in them will tend to no advantage of the ſociety of the Church) it is not fit for thee to meddle in them, but to apply thy ſelf to ſuch cares as may moſt conduce to the ſervice of thy General who hath put thee into this calling, and expects it from thee.

* legally νομίμως

5. And if a man alſo ſtrive for maſteries, yet is he not crowned, except he ſtrive * lawfully.]

5. Thus if any man be deſirous to get the prize, and to that end enter the liſts in any of the exerciſes of the Olympick games, he is not crowned unleſſe he conquer, nor will he be adjudged conqueror, unleſs he have obſerved all the rules of the games, and then be victorious by thoſe rules: ſee note on 1 Cor. 9. f.

† A husbandman muſt firſt toile, before he partakes of the fruits τὸν κοπιῶντα γεωργὸν δεῖ πρῶτον μεταλαμβάνειν

6. † The husbandman that laboureth, muſt be firſt partaker of the fruits.]

6. And ſo in husbandry and all other things, there is required a great deal of pains, and care, and patience, and ſo at length he receives the fruits and the hoped reward in harveſt; and ſuch is the gaining and converting of ſouls, and the far richer reward that attends that in another world.

7. Conſider what I ſay, and the Lord give thee underſtanding in all things.]

8. And to fortifie thee in ſuffering whatever comes, there is nothing fitter then that thou remember and conſider our Saviour, what befell him, that he was put to death, and then by God raiſed from death, (and ſo was herein like David, of whoſe progeny he was to be, who ſuffered ſuch ſad perſecutions from Saul, when he was deſtined to the kingdome, and accordingly came to it) and all this according to that doctrine which I have preached every where:

9. Wherein I ſuffer trouble, as an evill doer, even unto bonds: but the word of God † is not bound.]

9. And for preaching of which I am impriſoned now at Rome, as if I were a malefactor: but this hath not reſtrained me in mine office, but the Goſpel hath been freely preached for all that, and my impriſonment hath been a means of divulging the Goſpel in this city.

10. And on theſe grounds I am very well content to ſuffer any thing for the good of the true Chriſtians, that they being confirmed by my example, may be partakers of all the benefits of the Goſpel, and attain to eternall glory.

10. * Therefore I endure all things for the elect's ſakes, that they may alſo obtain the ſalvation which is in Chriſt Jeſus, with eternal glory.] * For this cauſe dia touto

11. There is not a more certain truth, nor any that deſerves more to be conſidered and depended on by all Chriſtians, then this, that our ſuffering as Chriſt ſuffered in teſtimony and defence of the truth, (for that is the meaning of ſuffering with him Rom. 8. 17. ſuffering as he ſuffered) ſhall certainly be rewarded with participation of his glory.

11. It is a faithfull ſaying; For if † we be dead with him, we ſhall alſo live with him:] † we have died ſunapethanomen

12. And as certain on the other ſide, that if for fear of temporall evils we fall off from the conſtancy of our profeſſion, we ſhall be rejected by Chriſt.

12. If we ſuffer, we ſhall alſo reigne with him: if we deny him, he alſo will deny us.]

13. For Chriſt's part of the promiſe it is certain that will never faile: we may through the wickedneſſe of our own hearts prove falſe to him, in which caſe we loſe all title to his promiſes; but let us adhere to him, and he can never faile us.

13. If we * believe not, yet he abideth faithfull, he cannot deny himſelf.] * be unfaithfull apiſtomen

14. Put all thoſe that are committed to thy charge in mind of thoſe things, that they be not tempted by the Gnoſticks on occaſion of the preſent perſecutions to forſake the Chriſtian courſe. And among other things charge them ſtrictly, as they will anſwer it to God, that they fall not into thoſe idle diſputes, mentioned 1 Tim. 6. 5. which as they tend to no poſſible good, ſo they infuſe uncharitableneſſe and factions into mens minds, and draw men into the Gnoſtick hereſie.

14. Of theſe things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord, that they ſtrive not about words, to no profit, † but to the ſubverting of the hearers.] † to it

a. orthotomounta

16. But ſuffer not thy ſelf or thy flock to be inticed or fall in love with thoſe profane diſcourſes of the Gnoſticks; for they daily advance into higher impieties, adding more new impious doctrines to the heap every day then the former:

And where they are once admitted, their hereſie corrupts and debaucheth very many, infects and poyſons the members of the Church, in the ſame manner as the other parts of the body are infected, when there is a gangrene in any; for that doth not uſe to ſtop, but drawes that which is next it unto the ſame condition, and then creeps farther, untill it have infected the whole body, and that mortally: and ſuch are the Gnoſtick teachers now among you, by name Hymenæus and Philetus,

17. † And their words will eat as doth a canker; of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus,] † And their ſpeech as a gangrene will ſpread o logos autōn hōs gangraina nomēn ixei

Who have lately fallen into a freſh but moſt dangerous error, and by allegorical expreſſions of Scripture have perſwaded themſelves and others, that there is no farther reſurrection, nor conſequently future ſtate to be expected, (ſee 1 Cor. 15. 12.) but that all the places that ſound that way are otherwiſe (after the Gnoſtick Cabaliſtical manner) to be interpreted, and have been ſo ſucceſſeful as to perſwade ſome thus to believe them, have gained ſome followers in this impious doctrine.

18. Who concerning the truth have erred, ſaying that the reſurrection is paſt already, and overthrow the faith of ſome.]

19. But let not theſe and the like falſe impious heretical teachers move any, for God will certainly perform his promiſe to us: his bill of contract with Chriſtians in Chriſt, his decree and purpoſe toward his faithfull ſervants remaines unchangeable, being under ſeal; and the ſeal of this contract hath two impreſſes: on one ſide this, That God is ſure to all thoſe that are faithfull to him, to reward them both in body and ſoul to all eternity, which is ſufficiently deſtructive of their doctrine v. 18. that there is no future ſtate, and ſo no bliſſe for them who are perſecuted here: another on the other, That every Chriſtian obliges himſelf to a ſtrict life (quite contrary to the vicious practices of theſe men) by undertaking the faith of Chriſt.

19. Nevertheleſſe the † foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, The Lord knoweth them that are his: and, Let every one that nameth the name of Chriſt depart from iniquity.] † Obligation, ſee note on 1 Tim. 6. h.

20. But it is to be expected in the Church, as in any great family, that all ſhould not be equally good, ſome furniture of gold, &c. others of wood and earth or ſhels, ſome for more creditable, and ſome for leſſe creditable uſes; ſome heretical, as other orthodox Profeſſions.

And on the contrary be thou an emulous and earneſt purſuer and follower of innocence, fidelity, and firm charity, conjunction and agreement with all thoſe that in purity and ſincerity adhere conſtantly to Chriſt.

22. Fly alſo youthfull luſts: but follow righteouſneſſe, faith, charity, peace with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart.]

23. As for thoſe idle and unprofitable queſtions that are ſet on foot by the Gnoſticks, that tend to no benefit, and have nothing of true knowledge in them, keep thy ſelf carefully from them, for they will breed debates and quarrels, and nothing elſe.

23. But fooliſh and unlearned queſtions avoid, knowing that they doe gender ſtrifes.]

24. And there is nothing more unlike a true Chriſtian then that; he that is ſuch, muſt be milde and quiet, and peaceable toward all others, and being in place as thou art, muſt be ready and induſtrious to inſtruct others in the truth, and not apt or forward to puniſh thoſe that doe amiſſe (ſee note on 1 Cor. 13. b.)

Annotations on Chap. II.

2. Ὀρθοτομεῖν

V. 15. Rightly dividing] That ὀρθοτομεῖν, to divide aright, ſhould referre to the cuſtome in Sacrifices, which were to be cut after a certain preſcribed manner, and of them ſome parts given to the Prieſts, &c. may probably be imagined: But another notion of the phraſe here, as it is joyned with the word of truth, may ſeeme more probable. For in the Old Teſtament the Greek tranſlators uſe of the word belongs to a way or path to goe in, which was wont to be cut out, that it might be fitter for uſe; thence the Latine phraſe, viam ſecare, to cut a way, that is, to goe before and direct any in their journey. And with the word ὀρθὸς, right, joyned with it, it is to goe before one, and direct him the ſtraight way to ſuch a place. Thus ὀρθοτομεῖν ὁδὸν Prov. 3. 6. and 11. 5. is the rendring of יָשַׁר, which ſignifies to ſet right, or rectifie: and ſo to cut a way right, is to put one, and keep one in the right way. We render it, direct thy paths and way, in thoſe places of the Proverbs; and then the Goſpel of Chriſt, the word of truth, being moſt fitly reſembled to a way (much better than to a ſacrifice) ὀρθοτομῶν λόγον ἀληθείας, rightly to cut the word of truth, is to goe uprightly and according to the truth before others in Chriſtianity. And that was Timothies part, as a Doctor or Biſhop, to lead them both by his example and doctrine the right way that is preſcribed by Chriſt, without falling into any errors or ill practice.

b. Περιΐστασο

V. 16. Shunne] The Hebrew סבב circumdedit ſignifies alſo divertit, turning away, or back, as well as going round, and is by the Septuagint or Greek tranſlator of the Old Teſtament rendred not onely κυκλόω often, to encompaſſe, and περιΐστημι once, Joſ. 6. 3. but alſo ἐκκλίνω declino, to decline or avoid, 1 Kin. 18. 11. and twenty times ἀποστρέφω averto, to put from us, or fly from. From hence it is that one of theſe interpretations being ſet for the other (according to the frequent manner of theſe writers) or elſe by the power of the Paſſive or Meane, differing from the Active, περίστημι here, and Tit. 3. 9. ſignifies to avert, decline, avoid, fly from, the ſame with παραιτοῦ, avoid, v. 23. for which, and in the ſame matter, the word περιϊσταμένους avoiding is uſed, 1 Tim. 6. 20. Thus doth Origen uſe the word againſt Celſus, ſpeaking of Chriſts going aſide, when the Phariſees conſulted to kill him, Mat. 12. 5. ἐκτὸς ἦν ἀφυὲς τὸ μετ' οἰκονομίας φεύγοντα καὶ κινδύνους μὴ ὁμόσε αὐτοῖς χωρῶν, It is no degenerous, or cowardly, thing to flie from dangers providently, and not to mix with them: where it ſignifies declining and ſo avoiding of dangers. And ſo Heſychius renders Περιΐστατο, not onely κύκλωσιν, (it ſhould be κύκλωσιν) φεύγει, encompaſſing, but alſo φείγει, ἀνάχωρει, avoid, flie from, & σκόπει look to, which is ſo to look to, to conſider, as to avoid, Rom. 16. 17. if there be danger in it. So Joſephus of Moſes, φεύγετο, μὴ πολλοὶ τῷ λόγῳ ἀσελγείας αὐτοῦ μιμηταὶ γένωνται, He avoided, or took heed, leſt many ſhould imitate the impurity of his ſpeeches: and l. 2. De bell. Jud. c. 12. τὸ ὀμνύειν αὐτοῖς φεύγεται, ſwearing is avoided by them, in a paſſive ſenſe. Who they are which are here to be avoided and taken heed of, is not obſcurely ſet down in the following words, viz. the Gnoſticks, that colluvies of Hereticks, conſiſting of divers branches, differing one from the other, but all agreeing in oppoſing the truth of the Goſpel, and pretending to great perfection of knowledg by the myſtical interpretations of Scripture. That theſe are they, may appear firſt, by the βέβηλοι κενοφωνίαι profane dotages, or vanities, or empty ſounds, which are imputed to the ψευδωνύμου γνώσεως, ſcience falſly ſo called, that is, the Gnoſticks 1 Tim. 6. 20. Secondly, by the character ſet upon them, that they are a growing, ſpreading hereſie, their words ſpread as a gangrene doth, when 'tis gotten into any part of the body, for that is the meaning of νομὴν ἕξει. So in S. Chryſoſtome, T. 3. p. 631. l. 13. ἐδεδοίκει γὰρ μὴ ἐπιπλέον νεμηθῇ τὸ κακὸν, καὶ ὁδῷ βασίζον ὅλῃ καταλάβῃ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, he feared leſt the miſchief would ſpread farther, and going along ſhould ſeize on the whole Church. The word is uſed of ſheep, &c. feeding, and by little and little going over a whole paſture; whence among the Antients the Νομάδες a wandering people, which had no certain habitation; vagi & incertis ſedibus errantes, ſaith Saluſt of the Numidæ, and ſo Seneca cals the Scythians and Getes vagos wanderers, that is, νομάδας. And it is uſed of fire alſo, ſpreading and devouring as it goes. So in S. Chryſoſtome, T. 3. p. 712. l. 30. ἐλόκληρον τὸ Γαλατῶν ἔθνος πᾶσης τῆς πλάνης ἐπενέμετο ἡ πυρὰ, the flame of this error ſpred over all the Galatians. And ſo of many other things, in Heſiod, words wander here and there unreſtrained. And Chryſoſtome, T. 4. p. 710. l. 1. κύων μὲν ποιμένων νέμεται, the dogge wanders, goes about, with the ſheep, for ſure he eats not graſs with them. And ſo Num. 14. 33. οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν ἔσονται νεμόμενοι ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, your children ſhall wander in the wilderneſs. So in * Dorotheus, νομὴ ἔρχεται, it ſpreads, it goes farther every day. And ſo γ. this hereſie coming with thoſe baits to the fleſh, ſecurity from perſecutions, and indulgence to all carnality, debauched many whereſoever it came; and accordingly cap. 4. 3. the Apoſtle foreſees that within a while they will ſpread ſo wide, that ſound doctrine from Timothy will not be endured. Thirdly, by the growing of the hereſie in its own dimenſions, every day adding ſome new opinions to it, and thoſe ſtill more impious than the former, which is the meaning of ἐπὶ πλεῖον προκόψουσιν ἀσεβείας, they ſhall proceed, or advance, to more of impiety, in the end of this verſe. And an inſtance of this follows in Hymeneus and Philetus and ſome others, who affirmed the Reſurrection to be paſt already, and ſo denied any future Reſurrection: which very thing is by Tertullian imputed to the Valentinians, (Id de ſe Valentiniani aſſeverant) which though they were not yet riſen, yet when they came, were a ſpawn of theſe Gnoſticks, and took up all the hereſies which they found among them, and accommodated them εἰς ἴδιον χαρακτῆρα, to their own manner of expreſſion, as Irenæus ſaith.

——Ἔπεα δὲ πολὺς νόμος ἔνθα καὶ ἔνθα,

c. Μήποτε

V. 25. If God peradventure] The notion of μήποτε here is not rightly expreſs'd by if ſo be without any negation in it; for that is the notion of οὔποτε, the direct contrary to this. The beſt underſtanding of it will be by obſerving the force of it, Luk. 3. 15. προσδοκῶντος δὲ τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ διαλογιζομένων πάντων ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν περὶ τοῦ Ἰωάννου, μήποτε αὐτὸς εἴη ὁ Χριστὸς, The people being in an expecta- tion, and all diſputing in their hearts of John, not if he were, but, whether he were not the Chriſt. Where, in a matter of expectation or diſpute about a thing, which they looked on as poſſible, but knew it not, the word μήποτε is uſed, not as if it were to them a matter of fear that it ſhould be ſo, but plainly the contrary, of hope and joy that it might. And ſo here the Biſhop is to proceed in the mildeſt, and moſt winning, and not exaſperating, way, as conſidering hopefully, whether it be not poſſible that God may at length be pleaſed to give them repentance, that is, to bleſſe the Biſhops inſtructions, that they may be a means or inſtrument to work upon them. As for the phraſe δῷ μετάνοιαν give repentance, the grounds of explaining that have been elſewhere laid, by obſerving the force of ſome Verbs, both Active and Paſſive, in theſe books, to denote the effect or reception of the vertue in the Patient, and not only the operation of the Agent. Thus Iſa. 53. 1. Gods arm is ſaid to be revealed, when the revelation of it is aſſented to and obeyed by men, and ſo 'tis all all one with believing their report, in the former part of the verſe. And to omit many more, thus is Gods giving them an heart to perceive, and eyes to ſee, Deut. 29. 3. which ſignifieth their receiving this gift of God, making uſe of the miracles and ſignes and wonders, v. 3. being effectually wrought on, having their hearts affected by them, which they that had not there, it is ſaid of them, that God had not given them hearts to perceive, that is, that thus it was in the event or effect, they did not really perceive. For that any thing ſhould be required on Gods part towards their perceiving which had not been performed by him, is unreaſonable to imagine, when the catalogue is ſo punctual and ſo large v. 2, 3. of what God had done among them. So Gods giving men to Chriſt Joh. 6. denotes their receiving and embracing of him. And ſo here Gods giving repentance is their making uſe of Gods grace and mercy and long-ſuffering (and the Biſhops mildneſs, as an inſtrument of working on them,) their being wrought on by that means, and actually repenting, or reforming their lives upon it.

d. τὸ θέλημα ἐκείνου

V. 26. His will] That τὸ θέλημα, will, referres not to the Devil, which is the immediate antecedent, but to God, which is the remote, v. 25. may be conjectured by the word ἐκείνου joyned with it; for if it belonged to the Devil, the ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, his, immediately precedent would have ſerved the turn, and the addition of this other Demonſtrative, not ejus, but illius (though our Engliſh hath no diverſity or variety of words to expreſſe it.) clearly divides it from ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, him. The onely difficulty will be, whether εἰς τὸ θέλημα ἐκείνου ſhall be thought to denote the Impulſive cauſe, Gods will or pleaſure in giving repentance, (and ſo the words be rendred, according to his will) or the terminus to which their recovering tendeth. To this latter the Context ſeems to incline, by comparing this verſe with ver. 25. for there Gods giving repentance εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν, to the acknowledgment, makes εἰς, to, a note of the term to which that repentance tended, to wit, the acknowledgment of the truth: & then by Analogie, ἀνανήψωσιν εἰς θέλημα, recover to the will, will make θέλημα (the will of God) the term again to which, (as the ſnare of the devil was the term out of which) they recover; and accordingly θέλημα θεοῦ, the will of God, is his will to be obeyed, or practiſed, Epheſ. 6. 6. and ſo our ſanctification is ſaid to be the will of God. As for a third poſſible rendring of it, that they ſhould be ſaid to be taken and caught by the devil, at or according to the will of God, permitting them ſo to be, that is made improbable by the punctation, the comma's before and after, ἐζωγρημένοι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, taken, or caught, by him, putting thoſe words as in a parentheſis, and connecting εἰς τὸ ἐκείνου θέλημα, to the will of him, to the Verb precedent ἀνανήψωσιν recover, thus, whether they may not recover to his will, that is, to that ſtate, thoſe practices, which God requires. As for the diſtance betwixt ἐκείνου of him here, and θεὸς God v. 25. which may make this interpretation leſſe probable, it is very ordinarily to be obſerved, and in the very next chapter, ver. 8, 9. we have an example of it, where the ὡς καὶ ἡ ἐκείνων as alſo theirs in the end of the ninth verſe, is as farre diſtant from Jannes and Jambres in the beginning of the eighth verſe, (to which it certainly referres) as ἐκείνου is diſtant here from θεὸς. Theophylact goes farther yet, and will have the phraſe, caught and taken by him, refer to God alſo. But that cannot well be admitted, becauſe in all reaſon they muſt be conceived to be caught by him who layes the ſnare, and that is the Devil in the former part of the verſe.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. III.

1. But you are to take notice of the prediction of Chriſt, Mat. 24. 9, 12. that in theſe times preceding that famous coming of Chriſt, to puniſh the crucifiers and perſecutors, and relieve the faithfull Chriſtians (ſee 1 Tim. 4. 1. Jam. 5. 3.), there ſhall approach very ſharp perſecutions from the Jewes cauſed by the Gnoſticks, whoſe character is made up of theſe ſo many vices following,

1. THis know alſo, that in the laſt daies * perilous times ſhall come.]

* hard χαλεποὶ

2. That in ſtead of Chriſtian charity, that takes care for the good of others, they conſider onely and intend themſelves,

2. For men ſhall be lovers of their own ſelves,] covetous, boaſters, proud, blaſphemers, diſobedient to parents, unthankfull, † unholy,

† impure or irreverent ἀνόσιοι

3. fiercely and bloodily diſpoſed, haters and perſecutors of all good men,

3. Without natural affection, truce-breakers, falſe accuſers, incontinent, [* fierce, deſpiſers of thoſe that are good,]

* cruel, not lovers of the good ἀνήμεροι, φιλαγάθοι

4. Betraying their fellow-Chriſtians into the perſecutors hands, Mat. 10. 21. and 24. 9, 10. inſolent perſons (ſee note on 1 Cor. 13. d.) that pretend great depth of knowledg, but preferre their luſts before Chriſt,

4. Traitors, † heady, high-minded, lovers of pleaſures more than lovers of God,]

† petulant, puft up, Φίλοι πρὸς πεπωμένοι

5. Pretending Chriſtianity, but doing nothing like Chriſtians: Theſe doe thou avoid, converſe not with them.

5. Having a * form of godlineſſe, but denying the power thereof; from ſuch turn away.]

* ſhew or image μόρφωσιν

6. See note on Rev. 2. n.

6. For of this ſort are they which creep into houſes, and lead captive ſilly women laden with ſins, led away with divers luſts †,]

† and pleaſures, for the King's MS. adds ἡδοναῖς

7. Who being diſciples of the Gnoſticks (which undertake to know ſo much) pretend to be learning that deep knowledge of them, but certainly never learn any thing that is good or Chriſtian of them.

7. Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledg of the truth.]

8. * Now

8. * Now as [a] Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so doe these also resist the truth : men † of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith.]

8. These being given to sorcery (see v. 13. and Rev. 9. c.) and making use of it to contend with the Apostles, and to draw men from Christ, cannot better be compared than to those famous magicians Jannes and Jambres, who undertook to doe as great miracles as Moses, Exod. 7. 11. men that are drawn quite from the Gospel, very farre from being true Christians.

9. But they shall * proceed no farther, for their † folly shall be manifest unto all men, as theirs also was.]

9. But they are almost at an end of their work of deceiving, and persecuting, and opposing Christianity, for they shall be discovered to be impostors, as those Magicians were.

10. But thou hast * fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, long-suffering, charity, patience,]

10. Thou hast another pattern to follow, quite contrary to theirs, that which by my preaching I have taught, and by the constant form of all my actions exemplified to thee, viz. my resolution of propagating the Gospel where ever I was able, my fidelity in discharge of my office, my induring many neglects and affronts, before I would give over my endeavours to reduce impenitent sinners, my zeal to the glory of God and good of souls, and my perseverance in all this in despight of persecutions,

11. Persecutions, afflictions, which came unto me [at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra,] what persecutions I endured : but out of them all the Lord delivered me.

11. at Pisidia, Act. 13. 45. at Iconium, Act. 14. 2. at Lystra, Act. 14. 18.

12. Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution.]

12. Yea, and at such times as these, when Christianity is so violently opposed by the unconverted Jewes, it is to be expected by all that resolve on a true constant Christian course, that it shall infallibly bring persecution upon them.

13. But evil men and † seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived.]

13. But such impious godlesse sorcerers (see v. 7.) and deceivers as these shall grow every day worse and worse, and more pernicious than other, deceiving others, and themselves at last most sadly deceived and mistaken of any, when all their arts of securing shall but destroy themselves, or being delivered up to be deceived themselves, as a just judgment for their deceiving of others.

14. But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and * hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them ;]

14. But doe thou hold fast that form of sound doctrine which was taught thee to teach others, and remembring from whom thou hadst it, thou wilt have no reason to doubt or suspect the truth of it ;

15. And that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus.]

15. And having been instructed in the understanding of the holy Scriptures of the Old Testament, ever since thou wert a child, thou wilt certainly, by the help of the Christian doctrine which thou hast received, be able to discern and understand the truth, and distinguish it from their false doctrines.

16. All Scripture * is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for † correction, for instruction in righteousnesse :]

16. For all those writings which, either by God's spirit of prophesie, or by any other affliction or incitation from God, have at any time been written by the prophets, &c. and, as such, received into the Canon of the Jewish Church, may by us be profitably made use of, to teach us many things that Christ hath taught us, to convince us of the grosnesse of many sins which are confidently practised among men, to reduce those that fall through error or ignorance, to build up those that have begun, and set out in the way of righteousnesse :

17. That the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished * unto all good works.]

17. That the teacher or preacher of the Gospel, sent and authorized by God, may by the study of the Scripture be furnished for all turns, enabled to discharge his whole duty toward the souls of others.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. V. 8. Jannes and Jambres] These names of Jannes and Jambres are not to be met with in the story of the Old Testament, but are here taken out of other records of the Jews (as divers others things mentioned in the New Testament ; for example, Moses's being brought up in the Ægyptian learning Act. 7. 22. and so likewise his age of forty years v. 23. when he went to visit his brethren, which is not in Exod. 2. but in Midrash Rabba Bereschith, and so his having beforehand some either instinct or revelation from God that he should be a deliverer of his people, which seems to be referred to Act. 7. 25. but is not in the Old Testament) they are questionlesse the names of the chief Magicians who did the miracles before Pharaoh, Exod. 7. Thus in the Babylonish Talmud, tr. Menachoth cap. 9. it is shewed how, Johanne and Mamre resisted Moses, saying to him in the words of the proverb, Affers tu stramen in Afraim ? which is in effect, Dost thou cast water into the Sea ? that is, shew miracles here in Ægypt, which is so full of Magicians ? So in the Chaldee Paraphrase of Jonathan, Exod. 7. 11. Janis and Jambres are named, and Exod. 1. 15. are said to be Princes, or chief, of the Magicians. In the Talmud they are called Jochanne and Mambre, in the life of Moses, Jane and Mamre, in Zohar upon Num. 22. 22. Jones and Jambres, in Shalshelet, John, and Ambrose, and in Tanchuma Jones and Jombros. Of these and what is said of them in the Hebrew writers see Buxtorf. Lex. Talmud. Col. 9. 545. And among the heathens, in Pliny (Nat. Hist. l. 30. c. 1.) there is talk of Moses, Jannes and Cabala (or, as other copies read, Jotape) which he mentions as Jews that used Magick. So in Numenius the Philosopher, in Eusebius Prap. Evang. l. 9. c. 8. Ἰαννῆς καὶ Ἰαμβρῆς Αἰγύπτιοι, ἱερογραμματῆς ἄνδρες, ὕλης τῆς μαγικῆς πεῖραν ἔχοντες εἴπερ τινες, &c. Jannes and Jambres skill'd in the holy things among the Ægyptians, inferiour to none in the art of Magick. So * Artabanus cals them τῶν ἱερέων ὑπὲρ Μέμφιν the Priests above Memphis. So Origen contra Celsum l. 4. p. 205. citing out of Celsus τὸν περὶ Μωϋσέως καὶ Ἰαννοῦ καὶ Ἰαμβροῦ ἱστορίαν, the story of Moses and Jannes and Jambres ; and Palladius in the life of Macarius, that speaks of a κηποτάφιον τοῦ Ἰαννοῦ καὶ Ἰαμβροῦ τῶν μάγων ὄπισθεν τοῦ Φαραώ a monument in a garden of Jannes and Jambres magicians in Pharaoh's time : but this cannot well be, if it be true which is said by an old Midrash, on Exod. 15. 10. that John and Mamre were drowned in the red Sea. And to that a MS. Arabick Catena on the Pentateuch agrees in these words, These are the names of the Magicians which stood up against Moses, Dejannes, Jambarus, and Sarudas, and God destroyed them with Pharaoh and his host in the red sea. And therefore it is reasonable to conjecture, that the κηποτάφιον or garden-sepulchre in Palladius, should be κενοτάφιον, an empty monument, without either of their bodies enclosed in it, to record their sinne, but not to preserve their ashes. To these Apuleius seems to referre, Apol. 2. where among the chief Magicians names he reckons Johannes. And to these St Paul here very fitly compares the Gnosticks, their chief founder Simon (and Menander and others after him) being a known sorcerer, (see Note on Rev. 9. c.) and resisting the truth by lying wonders, as those Magicians did. And of him we find that fulfilled in the event, which is here foretold v. 9. that he should meet with the like fate and discovery that those Magicians met with. Simon came to Rome (a second time about the tenth of Nero) grew into a great esteem with him by his sorceries, contended there with Saint Peter as the Magicians with Moses; (see Prosper de dimid. temp. c. 13 Duo Magi Pharaonis Jamnes & Jambres resistentes Moisi—— & contra Neronem Petrus & Paulus Apostoli, at contrariò Simon Magus, qui & se perdidit & Neronem decepit, Moses and Aaron came to Pharaoh, Jamnes and Jambres two Magicians of Pharaoh resisted them. Peter and Paul the Apostles came against Nero, but Simon Magus was on the other side, and both destroyed himself & deceived Nero, making Simon parallel to these Magicians) and accordingly Suetonius mentions one to fly in the aire, in the eleventh of Nero. But then, as the Magicians were confuted and discovered, when Aarons rod swallowed up their rods, Exod. 7. 12. and when they acknowledged the miracle of Moses to be the finger of God, Exod. 8. 19. and the boyle was upon the Magicians, Exod. 9. 11. So was the madnesse of Simon, and his Sectaries, manifested to all men, when he was cast down by the prayer of Saint Peter. And of this these words of Saint Paul are a direct prophesie in this place. This history of Simon is thus mention'd by Arnobius l. 2. cont. Gent. speaking of Rome, In qua cùm homines essent Numa regis artibus atque antiquis superstitionibus occupati, non distulerunt tamen res patrias linquere, & veritati coalescere Christiana. Viderant enim currum Simonis Magi, & quadrigas igneas Petri ore dissipatas, & nominato Christo evanuisse. Viderant fidentem diis falsis & ab iisdem metuentibus proditum, pondere præcipitatum suo cruribus jacuisse præfractis, pòst deinde perlatum Brundam, cruciatibus & pudore defessum ex altissimi culminis se rursum præcipitasse fastigio, They that had been used to Numa's arts, and antient superstitions (the heathen Romans) forsook all and followed Christ, having seen Simon Magus's Chariot and fiery horses dispelled with Peters † mouth, and vanish at the name of Christ, and seeing him that relyed on his false gods betray'd by them and fall headlong on the ground, breaking his legs with the weight, and after that being brought to Brunda, being tormented and ashamed, he cast himself down again from the top of a high house, and so perish'd. So Saint Cyrill in his sixth Catechism, Επλανησε τε, &c. He so deceived the city of Rome that Claudius set him up a statue, and after his heresie diffusing it self, Peter and Paul Governours of that Church destroyed him, setting himself out, and being by others esteemed and worsh p'd as a God; for when Simon undertook to flie, and was carried up in the aire by a chariot of the devils, these servants of God falling on their knees cast against him that dart which Christ directs to, Mat 18. 19. that weapon of agreement of two in prayer, and thereby cast him to the ground. So Sulpitius Severus hist. l. 2. Saint Augustin Serm. 3. in Natali S. Petri & Pauli, and Isiodore Pelusiote, Ἐξ ὕψους κατανύχθη ὁ δείλαιος πρὸς τὸν πολυθρύλλητον θάνατον, &c. miserable creature he was thrown down from aloft to a notorious infamous death. And that this warning of S. Paul to Timothy belongs to those that then lived, and not to some that were to come toward the end of the world, these latter dayes of ours, may appear ver. 5. by the exhortation to him to turn away from such. And upon this consideration Theophylact confesseth, that by the last times may be meant those immediately following S. Pauls death, wherein Timothy should survive.

CHAP. IV.

1. when he appears in his kingdom.

1. I Charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom:]

2. urge them, presse them, call upon them both when they are at leisure to hear thee, when thou hast some special opportunity or vacancy to fasten any thing upon them, and at other times, when thou hast not such probable opportunities, hoping that at some time or other it will succeed, convince the evill doers of their wicked courses, reduce by reprehension those that are fallen, but not so foully, through error, &c. confirm those that have begun well, and let all this be done with lenity and diligent instructing of them.

2. Preach the word, [* be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine.]

* urge them ἐπίστηθι

3. This I prescribe, as the method proper for the present condition of those under thee, that thou mayst gain as many as is possible, as foreseeing that the number of obstinate hereticks will so encrease within a while, that there will be little for thee then to doe, little hope of working on them, when men begin to advance to the higher pitch of heresie, and (to get patrons for their base lusts and vicious practices) betake themselves to false teachers, any that will please or gratifie their humor,

3. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching eares,]

4. And refuse and reject all true doctrine, and betake themselves to the fabulous divinity of the Gnosticks, made up of Gentilisme and Judaisme, an odde mixture of both.

4. And shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.]

5. But doe thou watch over thy flock with all diligence and waryness, be not discouraged with any pressures or dangers, hold out in despight of them all, doe that which belongs to one that is by the Apostles of Christ intrusted (under them) with the propagating of the Gospel, and maintaining it, where it is taught, which being a task of some weight and largeness, see thou perform all the parts of it.

5. But watch thou in all things, † endure afflictions, do the work of an Evangelist, * make full proof of thy ministery.]

* fulfill πληροφορησον

6. And this the rather, because I have been in great danger, brought out to be tryed for my life, (see title of this Epistle note a. and Phil. 2. note e.) and my death hath been very nigh at hand.

6. For I am † now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure * is at hand.]

† already poured out, ἤδη σπένδομαι

* hath been nigh at hand ἐφίστηκε

a.

7. Which I can mention cheerfully, as having the testimony of my conscience, that I have behaved my self faithfully in my combate, run all the hazards, and past through them, and never fallen off from the discharge of my duty according to my Christian profession, and office Apostolicall.

7. [a I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.]

8. Hence.

8. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousnesse, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day: and not to me onely, but unto all them also that † love his appearing.]

8. For this I doubt not but God will give me my reward, when he comes to crown his combatants, even that eternall blisse and felicity, which as the judge or rewarder in the Olympick games or combates, he will certainly adjudge to me, as one who have endured much therein. And the same will he adjudge to all others, who shal have so spent their time, and continued in a Christian course, as that Christ's coming to reward the faithfull, and to destroy all opposers and unfaithfull, may be matter of desire and not terror to them, who if they live not to enjoy his deliverances here, will be abundantly recompensed by death.

† have loved ἠγαπηκόσι

9. * Doe thy diligence to come shortly unto me.]

* Hasten to come to me speedily, Σπούδασον ἐλθεῖν πρὸς με τάχιον

9. I desire with all possible speed that thou come hither to me.

10. For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica, Crescens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.]

10. There being these motives to hasten thee, First because Demas, that did assist me in preaching the Gospel, Philem. 24. and Col. 4. 14. hath now left me, betaking himself to his worldly affaires (see note on 1 Tim. 3. a.) and is gone to Thessalonica, whether to his home there, or to trade, and get wealth in that place. As for Crescens, though he be gone into Gallia, (or France, saith Epiphanius, Hær. Ἀλογ.) yet that is not for any such worldly end, but to preach the Gospel there, and so Titus is gone another way to Dalmatia.

11. Onely Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministery.]

11. By which meanes I am almost alone, no body but Luke remaining with me, which makes me stand in need of thy help and presence. And when thou comest, bring Mark, Barnabas's kinsman, with thee, for I have especiall use of him, for the preaching of the Gospell.

12. And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus.

13. The † [b] cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee. and the books, but especially the parchments.]

† roll

13. When I came from Troas I left a Parchment-roll with Carpus and some books, I pray in thy passage call for them and bring them with thee hither, but especially the Parchment-roll. b.

14. Alexander the Coppersmith did me much evill, [c] the Lord * reward him according to his works.]

* will, or shall reward, for the Syriack and the King's MS. read ἀπόδωσει, and so Scripter Resp. ad Orthod. seems to have done, calling it προφητικὸν, a prediction fit for an Apostolical person, see Theophyl.

14. Alexander, mentioned Act. 19. 33. (see note e. on that chapter) did me a great deale of wrong at my being there. He will one day meet with his just reward for such injuries. c.

15. Of whom be thou ware also, for he hath greatly withstood our words.]

15. The reason why at this time I mention him, is that thou mayst beware of him, avoid him, look upon him as an excommunicate person, delivered up to Satan, 1 Tim. 1. 20. for he stands out contumacious against all our reprehensions, and admonitions to repent.

16. At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.]

16. At my coming to Rome, when I was to plead for my self, all my acquaintance (all that were able to have stood me in any stead, either by their power at Rome, or by their testimonies in my defence) forsook me, for fear of suffering (I pray God to pardon them for it.)

17. Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me, that by me the preaching might be * fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear: and I was delivered out of [d] the mouth of the lion.]

* fulfilled πληροφορηθῇ

17. Yet God assisted and vindicated my innocence, that the Gospel might be preached by my means, and so the Romans, the Gentiles might receive it (see Phil. 4. 22.) and to that end I was at that time delivered from a most considerable present danger, though not freed from prison. d.

18. And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdome: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.]

18. And I am confident that God will at this time so guard me, that I shall be delivered from every enterprise against me, however that he will keep me from doing any thing unworthy of an Apostle and servant of his, that so when I lose this miserable life, I may attain to that eternal kingdome of God.

19. Salute Prisca and Aquila and [the household of Onesiphorus.]

19. See c. 1. note a.

20. Erastus abode at Corinth; but Trophimus have I left at Miletum sick.

† make haste Σπούδασον, see v. 9.

21. † Doe thy diligence to come before winter. Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren.

22. The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit. Grace be with you. Amen.

The second Epistle unto Timotheus, ordained the first Bishop of the Church of the Ephesians, was written from Rome, when Paul was brought before Nero * the second time.

* See note on the Title of the Epistle.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. Ἀγὼν

V. 7. I have fought——] These two verses are wholly Agonistical. Ἀγὼν is any of the four famous games, Olympick, &c. (and of that, as it signifies suffering of afflictions, see 1 Thess. 2. b.) Δρόμος is one sort of combate in either of those four, that of racing. The ἀγὼν is called καλὸς good, either as being in a good cause, or as νόμιμος c. 2. 5. according to the laws of the agones; and so his fighting a good fight is suffering Christianly and valiantly. Τελεῖν is to perform, and so τελεῖν δρόμον to run, or perform the race, (see Note 2. on Act. 21.) Then τηρεῖν πίστιν not referring to his whole life, but this one combat here insisted on, his danger at Rome. And then τηρεῖν πίστιν, to keep the faith, is to observe the Gospel rules, and so not to offend against the νόμοι laws of the combat, (see Note on the title of this Epistle.) Thus in those writings that go under Trismegistus's name we have (Κλεῖδ. l. 4 p. 2.) ἡ ψυχὴ ἡ τὴν εὐσεβείας ἀγῶνα ἠγωνισμένη the soul that hath undertaken and performed this strife, or combat, of piety. Then the στέφανος crown, that is the βραβεῖον, Στέφανος the reward, and that is here called στέφανος δικαιοσύνης, crown of righteousnesse, possibly in the notion that the Hebrew צדקה (to which δικαιοσύνη righteousnesse is answerable) is taken Isa. 48. 18. Nehem. 2. 20. Psal. 35. 27. that is for felicity. As Prov. 8. 18. where wealth and righteousnesse are put together. Abenezra interprets it felicity, or prosperity; and so δικαιοσύνη is used Rom. 6. 16. and opposed to death, by which it there appears to signifie eternal life. But it may also signifie a righteous life, which is thus rewarded and crowned by God. Then δίκαιος κριτὴς the righteous judge is the βραβευτὴς who gives the crown to the conquerour. Καλὸς ἀγὼν

b. Φαιλόνης

V. 13. Cloake] The authority which I have for rendring φελόνλω the roll, is from the antient Glossaries. Thus Phavorinus, φελόνης ὑλητὸν τὸ μέσιον βέμβεγνον, which without question should be written thus, τομάδιον μέμβεγνον, and so the explication of φελόνης will be, a little piece of parchment folded up, which perhaps may be all one with the μεμβράνα hereafter mentioned, because they being added with a μάλιστα δὲ, but especially, seem to denote somewhat which had been formerly mentioned, rather than any new thing. See S. Hierome Ep. 125. ad Damas. q. 2.

c. Ἀποδῴη

V. 14. The Lord reward] Of this form of speech Ἀποδῴη Κύριος, 'tis not here omiss to note that the full importance of it is no more than a Prophetical denuntiation or prediction that should in the just judgement of God befall. Thus some of the the best MSS. read Ἀποδώσει, the Lord shall reward; others of the antients who read ἀποδῴη reward, yet expound it ἀποδώσει shall reward. So the Author of the questions and answers, assigned to Justine, making it περίφρησιν a prediction. So Chrysostome and Theophylact ἀποδῴη, ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀποδώσει, it is instead of the future, shall render, adding that pious men do not rejoice in, or desire to hasten the punishments of the wicked, but that they foretell them, the Gospel and weak believers having need of such comforts. To this may be added, that it is a vulgar Hebraisme for the Imperative and Future tense to be used promiscuously, the one for the other. יִתַּם Psal. 7. 9. in the future, complebitur or consumetur, shall be consumed or fulfilled, is yet by the antient Interpreters rendred in the Imperative; συντελεσθήτω, say the 72. Let it be accomplish'd; and so the Chaldee, Syriack, Arabick and Æthiopick, and onely the Vulgar Latine retains consumetur, shall be consumed. Thus on the other side, Mat. 10. 13. εἰρήνη ὑμῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐπιστραφήτω, Let your peace return to you, is sure a promise from Christ, or prediction, that their peace shall return to them; and thus is it innumerable times in the sacred dialect of these Books.

d. Λέοντος στόμα

V. 17. The mouth of the Lion] Στόμα λέοντος, the mouth of the Lion, is commonly thought here to signifie Nero, so styled because of his cruelty. But as there is no reason to believe that Paul was now admitted to Nero's own hearing, but may more probably be thought to have been heard before some inferior Judge at Rome; so it is very reasonable to expound the mouth of the Lion, as a Proverbial form, to signifie some present, devouring danger, from the gaping of the Lion after his prey, and the direfulness of that.

THE EPISTLE
PAUL THE APOSTLE

THat Titus, a convert of Pauls, after imployed by him, was at length ordained by him the Archbiſhop of the Iſland of Crete, there to ordain Biſhops in every city, is intimated c. 1. 5. and cleared by all antient writers. So Euſebius l. 3. c. 4. affirms him ὃν ὁπὶ Κρήτης Ἐκκλησιῶν ἐπισκοπῶ ἐπιλαχόντα to have been Biſhop of the Churches of Crete. So* Chryſoſtome, that Titus was without doubt an approved perſon to whom was committed ὁλόκληρος τῆς Κρήτης, an intire Iſland, καὶ τοσούτων ἐπισκόπων κρίσις, and the juriſdiction of ſo many Biſhops. So † Theodoret, that he was by Paul ordained Biſhop τῆς Κρήτης μεγάλης ὔσης, of Crete being very great, καὶ τοσούτων ἐπισκόπους χειροτονῆσαι, to ordain Biſhops under him. So the Scholiaſt, Ἀπόστολος Τίτον ὅτι τὸ κατασῆσαι ἐπισκόπους κατέλιπεν, ἐπίσκοπον αὐτὸν ποιήσας, The Apoſtle left Titus to ordain Biſhops, having made him Biſhop firſt. And S. Jerome in Catal. Titus Epiſcopus Cretæ in eadem & in circumjacentibus inſulis prædicavit Evangelium Chriſti, Titus was Biſhop of Crete, and in it and the ambient Ilands he preached the Goſpel of Chriſt; making him Biſhop in that Iſland, and extending his charge to other Iſlands alſo. The time when Paul thus left him at Crete ſeems to be rightly ſet by Baronius, when Paul went into Greece from Macedonia, Act. 20. 2. which he conceives he did not by land, but by ſea, in which journey, ſaith he, by the Ægæan ſea he came to Crete. And this was about An. Chr. 54. Soon after this an. 55. when he came into Greece, he is ſaid to have written this Epiſtle to him, to inſtruct and direct him in the diſcharge of his office; but whether it were at Nicopolis that he wrote it, or whether it were before the beginning of the winter, which he determined to ſpend there, is left uncertain, c. 3. 12.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAUL a ſervant of God and an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, [* according to the faith of Gods elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godlineſſe,]

* for κατὰ

1. to plant that faith by which all Chriſtians become acceptable in the ſight of God; and to confirm them unto the acknowledgment and practice of the Chriſtian religion; ſee note on 1 Tim. 3. f.

2. In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promiſed a † before the world began,]

† long-time ago.

2. In expectation of that infinite reward which God long ſince promiſed obſcurely to Abraham, and will certainly perform to all his true children, that is, to all believers,

3. But hath in * due times manifeſted his word through preaching, which is committed unto me, according to the commandment of God our Saviour,]

* his own ſeaſons καιροῖς ἰδίοις

3. And hath in that ſeaſon which he thought fit to deſigne for it, moſt clearly now revealed by the preaching of the Goſpel, that which was committed to me as an Apoſtle by Chriſt's immediate appointment,

4. To Titus mine own ſon after the common faith,] Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour.

4. To Titus whom I firſt converted to the faith, preaching it according to Chriſt's appointment, to Gentiles (ſuch was he) as well as Jewes.

5. For this cauſe left I thee in Crete, that thou ſhouldſt ſet in order the things that are wanting, and ordain Elders in every city, as I had appointed thee,]

5. In our paſſage through Crete, I conſtituted thee Biſhop there, that thou mightſt diſpoſe and ſettle those things there, which I by the ſhortneſſe of my ſtay omitted to ſettle, and to ordain Biſhops in each city of that Iſland (ſee note on Act. 11. b. and 14. b.) according to the directions which I then mentioned to thee, how they ſhould be qualified.

6. If any be blameleſſe, the husband of one wife, having faithful children, not accuſed of riot, or unruly.]

6. To wit, that thou ſhouldeſt ordain none but ſuch as ſhould be approved by teſtimony of the Church, (ſee note on Act. 6. b.) to be under no ſcandalous ſin, which live not with a ſecond wife after putting away the firſt (ſee note on 1 Tim. 3. b.) whoſe children, if they have any, have all received the faith (for if he bring not up his own children to be Chriſtian, what hope is there that he will be fit to convert others, and to rule in the Church?) and live temperately and regularly.

7. For a Biſhop muſt be blameleſſe, [as the ſteward of God:] not ſelf-willed, not ſoon angry, not given to wine, no ſtriker, not given to filthy lucre;

7. as becomes one that hath the government of God's family intruſted to him:

9. Holding faſt that doctrine which is agreeable to

* both to exhort in wholeſome doctrine, καὶ παρακαλεῖν ἐν τῇ διδασκαλίᾳ τῇ ὑγιαινούσῃ, or to comfort thoſe that are in any tribulation, for the King's MS. reads ἢ παρακαλεῖν ἐν πάσῃ θλίψει

that

that which from Chriſt and us you have been taught, and ſeen exemplified, viz. that the truth of God muſt be confeſſed, though with the greateſt hazards and loſſes, contrary to what is now infuſed by the new Gnoſtick-teachers; that ſo he may be able to inſtruct all in the truth, or to comfort thoſe that for their conſtancy to the faith are under any preſſure, and convince the hereticks of the falſineſſe of their popular, grateful, carnal doctrine.

10. For there are already many unruly perſons that reſiſt our doctrine, and vent idle fanſies of their own, and ſeduce and corrupt others from the truth to their corrupt waies, which will be the ruining of them: And theſe are thoſe eſpecially that ſtand up as advocates for the obſervation of the Jewiſh Law.

10. For there are many unruly and vain talkers, and † deceivers, eſpecially they of the circumciſion:] † deceivers of ſouls ψυχαπάται

11. And theſe are not to be permitted to vent their deceits, for they ſeduce, where they come, whole families at once, and infuſe abominable doctrines into them, and thereby make advantage to themſelves.

11. Whoſe mouths muſt be ſtopped, who ſubvert whole houſes, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucres ſake.]

b. c. 12. And theſe are ſuch kind of men as thoſe which Epimenides, a Cretian Poet and learned man (ſee note on Luke 1. n.) ſaid that Iſland was wont to be full of, lyars, beſtial, luxurious people.

12. One of themſelves, even a [b] prophet of their own, ſaid, The Cretians are alwaies lyars, evil beaſts, [c] * ſlow bellies.] * idle ἀργαὶ

13. The truth of this his cenſure now appears, and therefore do thou examine and inquire narrowly into them, and ſuch as thou ſhalt find to be ſuch, inflict the cenſures of the Church upon them, that thou mayeſt reduce and reform them by that means;

13. This witneſſe is true: wherefore rebuke them ſharply, that they may be ſound in the faith;]

14. That they may no longer hearken to thoſe myſtical Cabaliſtical explications of the Old Teſtament, which the Gnoſticks uſe, and to falſe doctrines of thoſe which, under pretence of Chriſtian liberty, corrupt ſeducible perſons, and pervert them from the Goſpel.

14 Not giving heed to Jewiſh fables, and commandements of men, that turn from the truth.]

d. 15. To a Chriſtian that doth all things with a pure conſcience, all kinds of meats, &c. are lawful: but to impure unchriſtian Gnoſticks, every thing they doe (though it were in it ſelf lawful) would become a matter of ſin to them, their wicked life hath ſo blinded their judgment, that they cannot judge aright, what is lawful, what not.

15. d Unto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and believing, is nothing pure; but even their † mind and conſcience is defiled.] † underſtanding νοῦς

16. They profeſſe that they know God, but in works they deny him, being abominable and diſobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.]

16. They profeſſe themſelves Gnoſticks, aſſuming to themſelves eſpecial knowledge of God; but their lives are quite contrary to all piety, and acknowledgment of God, guilty of all deteſtable unnatural ſins, diſobedient to all that are placed over them in the Church, not wrought on by any admonition, and quite contrary to all Chriſtian practice.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. πρὸ χρόνων Αἰωνίων

V. 2. Before the world began] Of the word αἰὼν that it ſignifies an age, or long ſpace of time, ſee Note on Luk. 1. p. by analogie with which αἰώνιος ſignifies antient, or long agoe, but not alwaies eternal; and χρόνοι αἰώνιοι here being ſpoken not of a decree, but of a promiſe of Gods, and ſuch as cannot be broken without lying (which muſt therefore ſignifie ſuch a promiſe which was made to ſome body, and not only his ſecret unrevealed purpoſe) cannot well be interpreted of eternity, but of ſome long time agoe, under the times of the Old Teſtament, ſuch as was made to Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. And thus the phraſe πρὸ αἰωνίων χρόνων is all one with ἀπ' γενεῶν ἀρχαίων, from ancient generations, Act. 15. 21. ſpeaking of Moſes's time. And accordingly αἰώνιον is oft uſed in the Old Teſtament, either for that which is likely to laſt long, or whoſe beginning is long agoe. So Prov. 22. 28. αἰώνιον for antient, Eſa. 58. 12. & 61. 4. αἰώνιον old, Ezech. 36. 2. αἰώνια antient. And ſo 2 Tim. 1. 9. though the ſcope of the place will allow it to ſignifie eternity, Gods mercy being decreed to us in Chriſt before all time, yet the phraſe of it ſelf ſignifies no more then before antient times, long while agoe.

b. Προφήτης

V. 12. Prophet of their own] Of Epimenides the author of this verſe, it is known that he took upon him to teach men how the judgments of Heaven, when at any time they fell on a city, peſtilence, famine, &c. were to be averted. A ſtory of this is notorious in Diogenes Laertius, and is ſet down Note on Act. 17. g. And ſo ſaith Theophylact of him, that as he was one of the wiſeſt men among the Græcians, ſo he was θειασμοῖς καὶ καθαρσίοις πρόσεχων, one that ſet himſelf to find out and teach others what ceremonies were to be uſed to avert the anger of the Gods (which they that did, are called among the Heathens prieſts and diviners, 1 Sam. 6. 1, 2.) He farther ſaith of him, that he did ſeem μαντικὴν καλοῦσθαι, to rectifie divination, and accordingly, ſaith Laertius, ἱστορικὸς καλεῖται, one very much in the favour of the Gods; but this, as it is elſewhere ſhewn at large, (Note on Luk. 1. n.) not referring only to prediction of things to come, but directing them in their duty for preſent actions. This gives an account of the reaſon why he is here called a prophet of their own, one ſo deemed by them. And as moſt ſuch were among them, ſo was he, a Poet alſo. Of him ſaith Chryſoſtome and Theophylact, that ſeeing the Cretians build a Sepulchral monument to Jupiter, and worſhip him as one that was or had been but a man, ζηλώσας in zeale, and jealouſie, and rage for that God of his, he writes theſe verſes to Jupiter, beginning,

Κρῆτες ἀεὶ ψεῦσται

Which Chryſoſtome makes up into a Diſtich,

——σὺ δὲ τάφον, ὦ ἄνα, σεῖο

Κρῆτες ἐτεκτήναντο, σὺ δ' οὐ θάνες, ἐσσὶ δὲ αἰεί.

The Cretans are alwaies liers, for they have built thee a tombe, but thou haſt never died, but ſhalt continue for ever. But it muſt here be obſerved, that theſe verſes are in Callimachus's hymne πρὸς Δία, which that they are the very lines here referred to in Epimenides, doth no way appear but by Chryſoſtomes conjecture; nay the contrary muſt be concluded by the καὶ θεία that here follows, but not in Callimachus. It is then moſt probable that Callimachus borrowed thence the firſt words, and added the reſt of his own, and ſo applied it to his purpoſe. And then it remains that this was not the occaſion of theſe words of Epimenides cited by S. Paul, and then all S. Chryſoſtomes ſuppoſed difficulties are at an end, which he raiſed on ſuppoſal that the verſe here cited by S. Paul referred to Jupiter (for it was no lye that Jupiter was mortal and had died.) However this were, Epimenides's words, as far as S. Paul cites them, are true, and the matter notorious, even to a proverb that the Cretians were lyars; and accordingly in Cebes's table, οἱ ἐν κειμικοὶ, is juſtly deemed to be falſly written for οἱ ἐν κρηπῖδι in this notion of κρηπίζειν, for ψεύδεσθαι and ἀπατᾶν, lying and deceiving.

See

See Petiti Miſcell. l. 4. c. 4. And ſo in that more general account, and not in this particular reſpect, Saint ἀεὶ ψεῦσται Paul here calls them lyars, for to that the ἀεὶ ψεῦσται alwaies lyars, in Epimenides, belonged, and not to one act of theirs. So in like manner doth S. Paul take out of Aratus, and applie to the true God, thoſe words which that heathen applied ψευδωνύμῳ Θεῷ τὸν Δία, to Jupiter falſly ſtyled a God, by this means ſtopping their mouths with teſtimonies out of their own authors; as to the Jewes he elſewhere argues out of the Prophets of the Old Teſtament, which were of force with them, and not out of the Goſpels.

c. Ib. Slow bellies] What is here meant by γαστέρες ἀργαὶ γαστέρες ἀργαὶ is matter of ſome queſtion. Phavorinus ſeems to have read it γαστέρας ἀργοὺς, and renders it γαστρίμαργοι, great eaters; and ſo indeed that word, proverbially uſed for gluttons, ſeems to be made of γαστὴρ belly, and ἀργὸς, not in the notion of βραδὺς ſlow or idle, but of ταχὺς ſwift (ſo ſaith Heſychius, ἀργὲς, ταχεῖς, and in Homer κύνες ἀργοὶ, are ſwift, eager dogges) and ſo ſignifies greedy devourers. And to this ſenſe hath Guil. Canterus with full confidence interpreted the phraſe, Nov. Lect. l. 1. c. 15. But that which to me ſeems more facile, is to render γαστέρες bellies, as Heſychius doth, τοὺς μόνας ὀπτωμένους, they that take no care but for food: and ſo the word bellies will be proverbially taken for gluttonous perſons, as in Heſiods Theogonia, from whence the latter part of this verſe ſeems to be imitated, and lightly changed,

Ποιμένες ἀγραυλοὶ, κακὰ ἐλέγχεα γαστέρες οἷον

And then ἀργαὶ idle annex'd to it will ſignifie all thoſe ſins of uncleanneſſe conſequent to gluttony, which are alſo proverbially expreſs'd by idleneſſe, as in Sodome Ezech. 16. 49. and ſo ſeem to ſignifie here among the Gnoſtick hereticks in Crete.

d. V. 15, Unto the pure——] The meaning of this verſe will be diſcern'd by conſidering the doctrine of the Gnoſticks (which here, and through this whole Epiſtle, he arms them againſt) that talked much of Chriſtian liberty, and extended it to the partaking of idol feaſts, and to all the filthineſſe of the fleſh, calling themſelves the Spiritual and Perfect, to whom all theſe things were lawful and indifferent or free. Theſe are they that pervert the truth, ver. 14. teach things which are not lawful, v. 11. and are μεμιασμένοι polluted, in the latter end of this verſe. Now the notion of lawful or indifferent is here expreſſed by pure, that is, that hath no impurity or turpitude in it, defileth not the conſcience. Of which ſort of things the Apoſtle here pronounceth that to them that live pure lives, and unſpotted from the pollutions of the fleſh, theſe indifferent things may thus freely be uſed. And this he thus expreſſes, To the pure all things are pure, Κ. τοῖς καθαροῖς that is, They that ſtrictly abſtain from unlawful freedomes may with a ſafe conſcience uſe any lawful liberties; but to them that are defiled and unfaithful, that is, to polluted, filthy, Apoſtate Gnoſticks, nothing is pure, there is no place for ſuch pretences as theſe, that what they doe they doe with a good conſcience, their mind and conſcience is defiled, they are far from thoſe faithful and knowers of the truth, 1 Tim. 4. 3. who have this liberty there allow'd them, their mind is polluted with peſtilent errors, and their conſcience with knowledge and memory of their foul ſins, and ſo Chriſtian liberty belongs nothing to them. That this is the meaning of καθαροῖς to the pure, and not onely to them that count theſe indifferent things lawful, may appear by the latter part of the verſe, where μεμιασμένοις the polluted are ſet oppoſite to the καθαροῖς pure, to whom nothing is pure or lawful; that is, the things that are in themſelves moſt indifferent, are by them done in a polluted manner, their eating things offered to idols is far from being lawful or indifferent in them, Chriſtian liberty can never excuſe them, or be pretended for them.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Πρεσβύτας

V. 2. Aged men] It is not certain here what is meant by πρεσβύ). The wordmay denote the antienter ſort of men, and no more: But the Context ſeems to incline it to Church-officers. For this Epiſtle being written to Titus a Biſhop, who was to ordain ſuch, and that which is here ſaid being the enumerating the qualifications of ſuch, it is evident that it referres to ſome ſuch order, unto which, upon choice and approbation of their qualifications, ſome were to be received, and not others. Whereas of the νεώτεροι or juniors, that is the ordinary Chriſtians aſſumed to no office, the ſtyle is altered, no more then this, that he ſhould admoniſh them to be ſober, ver. 6. Thus the Commentaries under S. Hieromes name, Senes ætate & ordine poſſunt intelligi, Thoſe antient men may be here underſtood that are ſuch both for age and order. But what order is here noted is uncertain ſtill. The word πρεσβύτης may ſeem to be that which is turned into the Latine Presbyter, the σ being ordinarily turned into r, as μάρτυς, martyr, λιγὺς, ligur, χάλης, celer, and the like; and ſo the Commentaries under S. Hieromes name interpret it, Eccleſiæ Seniores, the Elders of the Church. But it is much more likely that it is the order of Deacon; firſt, becauſe the comparing of the inſtructions which are here given to Titus for his Province with thoſe to Timothy for his, 1 Tim. 3. 1. doth inferre this. There the qualifications of a Biſhop are firſt ſet down, that he ſhould be blameleſſe, the husband of one wife, &c. and ſo here chap. 1. 6, 7, 8, 9. almoſt in the ſame words: Both after the example of Jethro's direction to Moſes for the chooſing of rulers over the Iſraelites, Exod. 18. 21. And proportionably as after the Biſhops the Apoſtle gives Timothy directions for Deacons, the Deacons likewiſe muſt be grave, &c. ver. 8. ſo here the directions are given for πρεσβύται, that they be ſober, grave, &c. By which it may reaſonably be concluded, that the πρεσβύται here are the Deacons there. And accordingly they that are here called πρεσβύτιδες in the Feminine, but to Timothy γυναῖκας women only, are generally in the antient Church called διακονίσσαι deaconeſſes. Secondly, It is formerly cleared, Note on Phil. 1. a. that at the firſt in every city the Apoſtles and Apoſtolical men inſtituted none but a Biſhop and Deacons, and that there never was any Biſhop inſtituted, but there were Deacons alſo to attend upon him. To which it is conſequent that here being mention of no other ſtyle which can belong to Deacons, this of πρεσβύται ſhould denote them. As for the title of πρεσβύται, ſenes, antient men, it is not improper to ſignifie theſe: for as πρεσβύτεροι the Elders in the Comparative are the Governours of the Church, and νεώτεροι the younger, the ordinary believers under Government; ſo πρεσβύται is the middle betwixt thoſe, the Poſitive to πρεσβύτεροι, and ſo inferior to them, and yet ſuperior to νεώτεροι, as the Deacons are under the Biſhop, but over the brethren, or ordinary believers.

Νεώτερος

V. 3. In behaviour] Κατάστημα the Noun cometh from the Verb καθίστημι, which we find uſed chap. 1 5. and Act. 6. 3. for ordination or conſecration of Church-officers, according to that which Grammarians have obſerved; κατάστας, (perhaps it ſhould be καταστὰς) μηχανικὸς, in Suidas, noting office or function committed to any. And therefore in all reaſon it muſt ſignifie the rank of thoſe who are thus conſtituted Officers of the Church, in the ſame manner as from καλεῖν, uſed for chuſing officers of the Church, the Eccleſiaſtical word κατάλογος the catalogue, and ἱερὸς κατάλογος the ſacred catalogue, doth frequently ſignifie the liſt of Eccleſiaſtical perſons. This is that which in aftertimes was called κανὼν, when οἱ ἐν κανόνι, they in the rule, is the ſtyle of the Officers of the Church. Thus it may firſt appear by the Context here. Saint Paul giving directions to Titus for the ordaining of Biſhops chap. 1. 5. paſſes orderly to the next degree of Church-officers chap. 2. 2. under the name of πρεσβύται: and then after thoſe ſucceeds πρεσβύτιδες, as ſeveral ſorts of Church-officers under one another. Secondly, by the qualifications which are here ſet down both for the πρεσβύται and πρεσβύτιδες (in like manner as for the διάκονοι and γυναῖκας, that is, ſaith Theophylact, the deaconeſſes, 1 Tim. 3.) which ſure cannot be applied to them under the notion of aged men or women, but onely as ſuch as Titus was to ordain in each city. Whereas the younger women are mentioned in another manner, thus, ver. 4, 5. the πρεσβύτιδες muſt σωφρονίζειν τὰς νέας, diſcipline the young women to be ſober, &c. which is again an intimation of a part of the function of the πρεσβύτιδες, to be as σωφρονισταὶ among the Athenians (of which ſee Note c.) Thirdly, by the word ἱεροπρεπὴς, compounded of ἱερὸς, which is the the word peculiar for ſacred, whether perſons or things, that is, for thoſe which are ſet apart to the ſervice of God (as ἱερομάρτυρες are peculiarly the clergy martyrs; ſee Note on Rev. 3. c.) and ſo ſignifies ſuch as having taken a ſacred habit upon them, (ὃν τῷ σχήματι ἐξεταζομένων, Concil. Nic. cap. 19.) behave themſelves worthy of it. Fourthly, by the nature of the word, which denotes dignity as well as age, and differs little from the word Presbyteræ, by which the Deaconeſſes are expreſs'd by Baronius, out of ſome of the Antients. Thus doe the Commentaries under S. Ambroſe's name underſtand it, Anus in ſa-

b. Κατάστημα

in religione digno, reading it in the Greek ἱεροπρεπῆ, where religio signifies those that are in some sacred function. And those under S. Jerome's name, on 1 Tim. 3. 11. Similiter eas ut Diaconos eligi jubet, unde intelligitur quòd de his dicat quas adhuc hodie in Oriente Diaconissas appellant, He commands them to be chosen in like manner as the Deacons, from whence 'tis to be understood that he speaks of those which now in the East they call Deaconesses. And the words are clear in the 11th Canon of the Council of Laodicea, Μὴ δεῖν τὰς λεγομένας πρεσβύτιδας ἤτοι πρεσκαθημένας ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ καθίσαδς, those that are called antient women, to wit, those that preside in the Church, must not be ordained. Where 'tis clear that the πρεσβύτιδες are said to be Præsidentes, a note of some function over which they were set in the Church, as the addition of ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ in the Church demonstrates, (and not onely of age.) And although the Canon there appoints μὴ δεῖν καθίσαδς, that they should not be ordained; yet first that very prohibition is an argument that they were in the Church: and to that Epiphanius agrees Hær. 79. Φαμηντέον ὅτι ἔχει διακονισσῶν τὸ ἐκκλησιαστικὸν ἐπιδεῖν τάγμα, χήρας τε ὀνόμαζε, κ) τούτων τὰς ἔτι γεραιτέρας πρεσβύτιδας, It is to be observed that the Ecclesiastical order (τάγμα there and κατάστημα here being all one) wanted Deaconesses, and called them widows, and the elder of them πρεσβύτιδες: and secondly for the prohibition it self, it signifies no more then this, that they should not be ordained by that imposition of hands which belonged to the other superior orders in the Church. For there is a double χειροθεσία or imposition of hands, saith Tharasius, εὐλογίας and χειροτονίας, or καθιερώσεως, of blessing, and of ordination or consecration: these were received by the first, not second way. To the same purpose is the Concil. Epannense, Can. 21. Viduarum consecrationem, quas Diaconas vocant, penitus abrogamus, solùm eis pœnitentiæ benedictionem imponendo, that they were not to be ordained, but onely received with a benediction such as is used in the absolution of a penitent. And this was first done against the Heresie of the Cataphrygæ, which would have them ordained, and teach, or preach in the Church (in favour of Montanus's Prophetesses) as appears by the Commentaries affix'd to Saint Ambrose, on 1 Tim. 3. Cataphryges erroris occasionem captantes, propter quod Diaconas mulieres alloquitur, & ipsas mulieres Diaconas ordinari jubere defendunt, &c. sed Apostoli verbis contra sensum untuntur Apostoli, ut cùm ille mulierem in Ecclesia in silentio esse debere præcipiat, illi è contra etiam authoritatem in Ecclesia vindicent ministerii, The Cataphrygæ taking occasion of their error from Saint Pauls speaking to the Deaconesses, defend that they are to be ordained, &c. but they use his words against his sense, and when he will not permit a woman to speak in the Church, they assert their authority of ministery in the Church. By which it appears what was forbidden by those Canons, the Deaconesses having authority or power of officiating in the Church, of preaching, in opposition to Saint Pauls precept of their keeping silence, of administring the Sacrament, * saith Epiphanius, (and consequently they received ordination which belonged to such;) not their being constituted officers in the Church, so as to serve in it: Which is all that I suppose here meant by καλόημα. By what hath been said, it will sufficiently appear how perfectly parallel this place is to 1 Tim. 3. where ἐπίσκοπος, διάκονοι, and γυναῖκες, Bishop, Deacons, and women, v. 11. are just all one with ἐπίσκοπος, πρεσβύτας, and πρεσβύτιδες ἐν καταστήμασι, Bishop, antient men, and antient women in the list, here.

* ἐχ ἱερατεύειν δέ τι ὑπηρέτριαι ἐπιτρέπει, Hær. 79.

c. Σωφρονίζειν

V. 4. Teach the young women to be sober—] There were in Athens some chosen persons to whom the education of youth was intrusted, and these are called σωφρονισταί· Ἄρχοντές τινες χειροτονηθοὶ (saith Phavorinus) δέκα τὸν ἀεὶ δῆμον ἑκάστης φυλῆς, ἐπιμελοῦντο τῆς τῶν ἐφήβων σωφροσύνης, chosen magistrates, ten in number of every tribe, whose office it was to take care of the education of the young people: such were the ἁρμόστραι to the female sex among the Lacedemonians (see Note on 2. Cor. 11. 2. a.) And proportionably with these, it was the office of these Deaconesses to instruct and take care of the younger women, and infuse all Christian practices into them.

V. 5. Keepers at home] Οἰκουρεῖν, to keepe at home, is the office of wives. See Artemidorus Ὀνειροκ. l. 1. ὡς γὰρ δεῖ τὸ πολὺ οἰκουρεῖν αἱ γυναῖκες, wives for the most part keep at home. This Phidias expressed by the Tortoise that carries her house about with her, Pausan. Eliac. 2. See Faber's Semestria, p. 29. And therefore Plutarch in his Γαμ. παραγγελμ. saith 'twas the custome for women among the Ægyptians to use no shoes, ὅπως ἐν οἴκῳ διημερεύσωσι, that they might live quietly at home. Thus the Dogges being called οἰκουροί, which are used ὅπ τῇ φυλακῇ κλημάτων, to keep our goods, doe, saith Artemidorus, signifie women, in the Oneirocriticks, or the interpreting of dreams. So in Euripides in Oreste οἰκουρήματα signifies wives,

l. 2. p. 95.

ἔστ' ἔνδον οἰκουρήματ' οἱ λελειμμένοι φθείρουσιν,

they that are left within doors corrupt their wives. Under this word οἰκουρεῖν are contained two things, both staying at home and taking care of the family, as in Naumachius,

Σοὶ δ' οἰκοφελὴς μελάτω, οἷόν τε φυλάσσειν, thou art to take care of the profit of the house, and to looke to the family. So Hector to Andromache in Homer, Ἰλιαδ. ζ'.

Ἀλλ' εἰς οἶκον ἰοῦσα τὰ σαυτῆς ἔργα κόμιζε
Ἰστόν τ' ἠλακάτην τε—

Go home and fall to thine own works— on which saith Eustathius, Ἐνταῦθα ἡ κ) οἰκεῖον εἶδε γυναιξὶ τὸν οἰκείαν γνωμολόγει ὁποιητὴς, the Poet in those words delivers a moral sentence, that it is the proper imployment for women to keep home, and follow their domestick affairs. Contrary to these are the περιερχόμεναι τὰς οἰκίας they that goe about to houses, 1 Tim. 5. 13.

V. 14. Peculiar people] The notion of περιούσιος is set down by the Glossaries: περιούσιος λαὸς, ὁ ἔγκλητος, saith Phavorinus, ὡς τὸ Ἰσραὴλ εἰς περιουσιασμὸν ἑαυτῷ, ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰς κλῆμα, it signifies acquired or purchased, as, Israel for an acquisition, that is a possession, to himself. So περιούσιος, περιούσιος, saith Hesychius, a purchased people; but especially as that referreth to the richnesse, plentifulnesse, excellency of the possession, περιουσία, πλοῦτος, it denotes wealth, plenty, and περιουσιασμὸς, πλῆθος, multitude, and περιούσιον, πολὺ περισσὸν, abundant, and περιούσιος, πλούσιος πολὺς, rich, much, all in Hesychius. The full notion of it must be fetch'd from the Hebrew סגל, from whence סגלה signifies peculium, proprium, thesaurus, facultates, res chara, that which is a mans own, his treasure, his estate, any thing dear unto him; and so עם סגל, which is generally rendred λαὸς περιούσιος, Exod. 19. 5. Deut. 7. 6. and 26. 18. is 14. 2. and 26. 18. rendred by the Targum חביב, dilectus, beloved, and so in Exodus also; and accordingly here it signifies a beloved, pretious, excellent people, (for which Symmachus puts ἐξαίρετοι) as Mal. 3. 17. סגל is rendred by us jewels, and by Aquila περιούσιος.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. III.

1. And let it be thy frequent and ſpecial care, to exhort all Chriſtians under thee to yield all honeſt obedience to the Kings and Governors under whom they live, and to be ready and cheerfull to the practice of all acts of charity,

1. PUT them in mind to be ſubject to principalities and powers, to obey magiſtrates, to be ready to every good work,]

2. very mild (ſee note on 2 Cor. 10. 1.) and patient toward thoſe that oppoſe them and truth it ſelf.

2. To ſpeak evil of no man, to be * no brawlers, but [gentle, ſhewing all meekneſſe unto all men.] * peaceable ἀμάχους

3. As remembring that we our ſelves, before our converſion to Chriſt, were as oppoſite to the truth, and as perverſly ſo as any can be now ſuppoſed to be.

3. For we our ſelves were ſometimes fooliſh,] diſobedient, deceived, ſerving † divers luſts and pleaſures, living in malice and envy, hatefull, and hating one another. † various ποικίλαις

4. But when Chriſt, of his great mercy and bounty to mankind, was pleaſed to reveal himſelf to us,

4. But after that the kindneſſe and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,]

5. Then out of his free undeſerved mercy toward us, not in reſpect of, nor by way of return unto, any good action of ours, he reſcued and delivered us out of our ſinfull courſes, put us into a ſtate of ſalvation upon our giving our ſelves up in baptiſme his vowed reformed ſervants, ſealing unto us the pardon of all our ſins, and then beſtowing his Spirit upon us, to bring forth in us all fruits of new life,

5. Not by works of righteouſneſs which we have done, but according to his mercy he ſaved us by the waſhing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt,]

6. Which Spirit moſt plentifully deſcended on us from God the Father, Chriſt Jeſus his Son obtaining that mercy from him;

6. Which he ſhed on us abundantly through Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour;]

7. That having our lives amended, and our ſins pardoned by his grace and mercy, we ſhould become, as children of God, his heirs (at preſent in hope) of eternal life.

7. That being juſtified by his grace, we ſhould be made * heirs according to the hope of eternal life.] * by hope heirs of eternal life, κληρονόμοι κατ' ἐλπίδα ζωῆς αἰωνίου

8. This is an important ſpecial Chriſtian doctrine, which I would have thee be earneſt in telling men, and convincing them of the importance of it, that all that have profeſſed to be Chriſtians, ſhould make it their principal care, to ſee that all that belong to them, together with themſelves, doe not only live in the univerſal duties of Chriſtians, but alſo particularly follow ſome honeſt labour or vocation, v. 14. and Epheſ. 4. 28. for theſe are the things that are good in themſelves, and uſefull to mankind, of good report in the actors, and beneficial to the community, keep others from being burthened with the ſlothfull, and enable them to be themſelves helpfull to others.

a. 8. This is a faithfull ſaying, and theſe things I will that thou affirm conſtantly, that they which have believed in God might † be careſull to maintain [a] good works: theſe things are good and profitable unto men.] † make it their care to ſet up good works

9. As for the Gnoſticks, that employ themſelves in compiling a new model of divinity, made up of fooliſh diſputes, and of heathen notions of poetical genealogies (ſee 1 Tim. 1. 4.) and contentions about the obſerving the Moſaical Law, (that Chriſtians be circumciſed, Gal. 6. 12.) and by ſo doing put themſelves out of their calling, live idly, diſorderly, 2 Theſſ. 3. 6, 11. theſe ſpend their time upon vanities, that neither themſelves nor others are the better, but the worſe for.

9. But avoid fooliſh queſtions, and genealogies, and contentions, and ſtrivings about the law, for they are unprofitable and vain.]

b. c. 10. Whoſoever maketh any diviſion in the Church, that teacheth any doctrine contrary to that which hath been taught by Chriſt and the Apoſtles, and, that he may get followers, ſeparates from the Church, from the communion of Chriſtians there; it is thy office and duty toward ſuch an one, firſt to admoniſh him once or twice (Mat. 18. 16.) and if that will not work upon him, or reduce him, then to ſet a mark upon him, as on one which is under the cenſures of the Church, and to appoint all men to break off familiar converſe with him;

10. A man that is an [b] heretick, after the [c] firſt and ſecond admonition reject:]

d. 11. Knowing that ſuch a man is a perverſe, wilfull ſinner, inflicting that puniſhment on himſelf which the governors of the Church are wont to doe on malefactors, that is, cutting himſelf off from the Church, of which he was a member.

11. Knowing that he that is ſuch, is ſubverted and ſinneth, being * [d] condemned of himſelf.] * ſelf-condemned

12. When I ſhall ſend Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, † be diligent to come unto me to Nicopolis: for I have determined there to winter. † make haſt σπούδασον

13. Furniſh Apollos and Zenas the lawyer, that are coming to me, with all things neceſſary for their journey (ſee note on 1 Cor. 16. a.)

13. * Bring Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their journey diligently, that nothing be wanting unto them.] * ſet forth carefully σπουδαίως προπέμψον

e. f. 14. But let not only the Gnoſticks v. 8. be thus admoniſhed and convinced, but let all thoſe alſo that continue with us, all the orthodox Chriſtians, be taught by you to ſet up (in themſelves and families) ſome honeſt labours among men, to ſupply their wants, and provide for themſelves neceſſaries of victuals, &c. that they live not like drones on others ſweat, maintained out of the treaſure of the Church, but earn every one their own livings, 2 Theſſ. 3. 12.

14. And let [e] ours alſo learn to † maintain good works for [f] neceſſary uſes, that they be not unfruitfull.] † ſet up

15. all our loving fellow-Chriſtians,

15. All that are with me ſalute thee. Greet [them that love us in the faith.] Grace be with you all. Amen.

It was written to Titus, ordained the firſt Biſhop of the Church of the Cretians, from Nicopolis of Macedonia.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Καλὰ ἔργα

V. 8. Good works] That καλὰ ἔργα both here and v. 14. ſhould ſignifie honeſt trades, or callings, there will be ſmall doubt or difficulty, when 'tis obſerved how ἐργάζεσθαι to labour is uſed 1 Cor. 4. 12. and 9. 6. of S. Pauls working in his calling, and ſo 1 Theſſ. 2. 9. and 2 Theſſ. 3. 8. 10, 11, 12. then by comparing Epheſ. 4. 28. ἐργαζόμενος τὸ ἀγαθὸν ταῖς χερσὶ, working with his hands that which is good, where bodily labour

is called working of good. Thus a very antient Greek author, Palaphatus περ. ἀπ. ſpeaking of Actæon that ſpent all his time upon hunting, he adds, τῶ δ' ἀγαθῶ πράγματ& ὠμέλει, he neglected the good thing, that is, his buſineſs, all men being then, ſaith he, αὐτουργοὶ, having no ſervants, but doing their own buſineſs themſelves, tilling the ground, &c. and he being the richeſt ὃς ἐγεώργει κ) ἐργασιμώτατ& ὑπῆρχε, who was moſt laborious in his husbandry; whereas this man, ſaith he, ὠμέλει τ' ὀικείων neglected his domeſtick, or his own, affairs. Where ἀγαθὸν πρᾶγμα the good thing, and οἰκεῖα his own or domeſtick affairs, are all one, and ſignifie the buſineſs of the calling. Thus Act. 9. 36. Tabitha is ſaid ἀγαθῶν ἔργων to be full of good works, that is, a very laborious work-woman, that wrought or made many garments, v. 39. and by that means, as it follows, was a very liberal, charitable almes-giver, gave the garments, when ſhe had made them, to old widows, &c. Thus in Cicero vitæ actio ſignifies a trade, or the whole buſineſs of the life, l. 1. De nat. Deor. De actione vitæ multa dicuntur. So Gen. 47. 3. τί τὸ ἔργον ὑμῶν; what is your occupation? to which they anſwer that they are ſhepheards. So in Sophocles's Oedipus, when the queſtion is,

Ἔργον μεμιγμῶν ποῖον, ἢ βίον τίνα;

What is your trade or manner of living? the anſwer is,

Ποιμνᾶς τὰ πλεῖστα τῶ βίω ξυνεπόμην,

I have ſpent moſt of my time in keeping of ſheep. So Jonah 1. 8. τίς σου ἡ ἐργασία; What is thy occupation? This may farther appear by περίστασις which is here uſed with it; for that ſignifies to profeſs, or work in, any art or calling. So Syneſius Ep. 2. περίστη τ' τέχνης λαμπρῶς, ſhe hath followed her trade bravely. So in Cicero Pro Domo; Qui ſacerdotiis præfuerant, the Prieſts. In Chryſoſt. Hom. 31. in Rom. οἱ ἀπ' χειρῶν ζῶντες, κ) ἐργασηρίῳ περεσηκότες, they live by their hands, and profeſs, or work, in the ſhop. And this is inforced by what here followes, for theſe things are profitable to men; anſwerable to what is added, Eph. 4. 28. that he may be able to give to him that needeth, out of the fruits and earnings of his labour: and ſo here, v. 14. (where the ſame exhortation is repeated) he addeth πρὸς τὰς ἀναγκαίας χρείας for neceſſary uſes, (ſee Note f.) that they be not ἄκαρποι unfruitfull, that is, that they may give to others, which he cals καρτὸς fruit, Philip. 4. 27. and the fruits of righteouſneſs, c. 1. 11.

b. V. 10. Heretick.] The literal notation of the word Αἱρετικὸς may beſt be taken from the Verb αἱρετίζω, from which it immediately comes, as from δογματίζω δογματικὸς, and the like. What that is, will be ſeen by theſe ſeverals in Heſychius: Αἱρετεῖ με, προτιμᾶτέραν ἠγήσατό με, to preferre before others; Αἱρετίζειν, αἱρεῖσθαι, ἀρέσκεσθ, to chuſe, to be pleaſed; Αἱρετιῶ (it ſhould be Αἱρετίζω) προσλαμβάνω, αἱρῶ αὐτὸς πρὸς ἐμαυτὸν, to take or receive others to ones ſelf. All which put together will make up this compound, to take up an opinion upon ones own choice or judgment, and preferre it before the doctrine eſtabliſhed in the Church, and to gather and receive diſciples or followers to himſelf, in oppoſition to, or ſeparation and diviſion from, the Church: according to which the heretick is defined by that learned Grammarian, ὁ ἄλλό τι περὶ τ' ἀληθείαν αἱρούμενος ἔχειν, He that chuſeth to have ſome other opinion (or doctrine) beſides (or in oppoſition to, or preferring it before) the truth, (for ſo περὶ ſignifies.) Where as αἱρετίζειν and αἱρετικὸς are all one: ſo, αἵρεσις coming from the latter of thoſe, αἱρεσιώτης that comes from αἵρεσις, and αἱρετικὸς that comes from the former αἱρετίζω, are all one alſo; and both denote a leader of a faction, a teacher of ſome new doctrine, which, that he may get diſciples to him, makes a rent or diviſion in the Church. Such were thoſe falſe teachers, that crept in among them, and led ſilly women captives, removed them from that union of the Church in which before they were, and (as captives are carried by the Conqueror into his own quarters, ſo) took them off from the ſociety of Chriſtians in which they had been, and led them into ſeparated aſſemblies or congregations. Not that the name Heretick is competible to none but thoſe that are the firſt in diſſeminating a falſe doctrine, but that it belongs to all that endeavour to corrupt others & draw them into the faction with them. Such were all the Gnoſticks whereſoever they came, and thoſe were principally here meant.

Ib. Firſt and ſecond admonition.] The firſt and ſecond admonition here referres to the method preſcribed by Chriſt in proceeding againſt Chriſtian offenders, Mat. 18. 15. but in ſome circumſtances differs from it. There is mention of a threefold admonition, one by the injured perſon alone, a ſecond by two or three taken with him, the third by the Church: But here onely a firſt and ſecond admonition. The cauſe of this difference is to be taken from the quality of the perſon to whom this Epiſtle is written, Titus a Biſhop; whereas there the ſpeech was addreſs'd to every private Chriſtian that is injured by any. Here the firſt admonition of the Biſhop carries an authority along with it farre above that of the private perſon and the two or three with him, and ſo may well ſupply the place of both thoſe; and then the ſecond here will be parallel to the third there; and ſo after that is deſpiſed or proved uneffectual, it is ſeaſonable to proceed to Cenſures, to excommunicate the contumacious, which is the meaning of the παραιτῶ here, the avoiding of him. Thus 2 Cor. 13. 2. immediately after the ſecond admonition delivered by S. Paul, προλέγω τὸ δεύτερον, I foretell you the ſecond time (characterized v. 1. by, in the mouth of two or three witneſſes) he tells the offenders, οὐ φείσομαι, I will not ſpare, but proceed to Cenſures. And v. 10. he tells them that this admonition is, ἵνα μὴ ἀποτόμως χρήσωμαι, that he may not proceed to exciſion, or cutting off, which he there calls καθαίρεσις taking away, the word ordinarily uſed in the Canons for excommunication.

c. Μία κ) δευτέρα ἐκκλησία. παραιτοῦ. προλέγω τὸ δεύτερον.

d. V. 11. Condemned of himſelf.] Αὐτοκατάκριτ&, ſelf-condemned, ſignifies not the man's publick accuſing or condemning his own doctrines or practices; for that ſelf-condemnation, being an effect and part of repentance, would rather be a motive to free any from the cenſures of the Church which were already under them, then aggravate their crime, or bring that puniſhment upon them. Nor yet 2dly, can it denote him that offends, and yet ſtill continues to offend againſt conſcience, and though he know he be in the wrong, yet holds out in oppoſition to the Church. For, (beſides that there are very few that doe ſo, and thoſe known to none but God, and if that were the character of an heretick, then none but hypocrites could be hereticks, and he that through pride & opinion of his own judgment ſtood out againſt the doctrine of Chriſt and his Church in the pureſt times, ſhould not be an heretick,) this inconvenience would farther be incurred, no heretick could poſſibly be admoniſhed or cenſured by the Church; for no man would acknowledge of himſelf that what he did was by him done againſt his own conſcience, nor could any teſtimony be produced againſt him before any humane tribunal, no man being able to ſearch the heart. It is rather an expreſſion of his ſeparation from, and diſobedience to the Church, and ſo an evidence of the ἐξέστραπ) κ) ἁμαρτάνει, being perverted and ſinning wilfully, and without excuſe. For he that thus diſobeyes and breaks off from the unity of the Church, doth in effect inflict that puniſhment on himſelf which the Church uſeth to malefactors, that is καθαίρεσις 2 Cor. 13. 10. and ἀκρεῖδω cutting off from the Church, which he being an heretick (and therein a Schiſmatick alſo) doth voluntarily, without the Judges ſentence: his very αἵρεσις hereſie is a ſponta-neous καθαίρεσις or exciſion. So ſaith S. Hierome, Whereas fornicators &c. are turned out of the Church, the heretick inflicts this on himſelf, ſuo arbitrio ab Eccleſia recedens, departing from the Church out of his own choice; which departing, ſaith he, propriæ conſcientiæ videtur eſſe damnatio, ſeems to be a condemnation of his own conſcience. So in the Councilof Laodicea, Can. 40. after an order that no Biſhop ſhall diſobey a citation from the Council, 'tis added, εἰ δὲ καταφρονήσειε, ἑαυτὸν αἰτιάσεται, if he doe deſpiſe it, he ſhall be conceived to accuſe himſelf, which is the next degree to ſelf-condemnation. So in the African Codex Can. 22. 'tis ſaid of a Biſhop that appears not on citation, αὐτὸς καθ' ἑαυτὸν τὴν καταδίκην τοῦ ἀμφῶνηκέναι κεκύρωται, he ſhall be judged to have pronounced ſentence of condemnation againſt himſelf, according to that of Apollonius Tyaneus in Philoſtratus l. 7. c. 7. Ὁ δ' ἐκλιπὼν τὸ δικάσασθαι, πῶς ἂν διαφύγοι τὸ μὴ οὐχ ἑῷ ἑαυτῷ ἐνόχοι δοκεῖν; He that declines a judicature, how ſhall he avoid the being thought to have condemned himſelf? So in the 12 Tables, Præſenti litem addicito, he that appears not is alwaies caſt: and ſo moſt nations have obſerved it, ut abſens cauſâ caderet, ni ſonnia nunciaſſet, that the abſent ſhould alwaies loſe the cauſe, unleſſe he gave his juſt cauſe of being abſent. So Regulæ ab Abbat. Floriac. conſtitutæ, Qui non comparuerit, tanquam convictus judicabitur, He that appears not, ſhall be judged convict, that is, αὐτοκατάκριτος. The like phraſe we have on another occaſion in Joſephus, l. 2. c. 12. de Bell. Jud. Oathes, ſaith he, were wholy avoided, & counted worſe then perjury; Ἤδη γὰρ κατεγνῶσθαι φασὶ τὸν ἀπόμοσον δίχα θεοῦ, For he, ſay they, that is not believed without ſwearing, is already condemned. His uſing an oath condemns him of lying. See Marculf. form. l. 1. c. 37. and Hieron. Bignonius on them, Steph. Forner. Rer. Quotid. l. 6. c. 21. Juſtell. in the Notes on Cod. Can. Eccl. Univ. p. 38. By all which it appears, that every one which ſubmits not to, but ſeparates from the Orthodox Church, whoſe member and ſubject he is (and this every Heretick and Schiſmatick doth) is properly ſaid to be ſelf-condemned. His receding from the Church is an evidence that his doctrine or practice is contrary to that which the Church approves, and that being received from Chriſt and his Apoſtles, this ſingular doctrine or practice of his is condemned by the contrariety to that, and himſelf by his non-ſubmiſſion to the Governour of the Church. And therefore though to ſuch an one, as to any other malefactor, the firſt and ſecond admonition ver. 10. be due, which in all that are not reformed by thoſe, is wont to bring on the ſentence of Excommunication; yet there is no need to proceed to that, becauſe he by contumacy, and non-ſubmiſſion to the Church-ruler, inflicts this upon himſelf. The appointment therefore is more agreeable to his caſe, that men avoid him, v. 10. as one that is already excommunicate by his own, and ſo needs not the Judges ſentence.

V. 14. Ours] The ἡμέτεροι here are all one with the οἱ ἐξ ἡμῶν they that are of us, 1 Joh. 2. 19. of which he ſaith μεμενήκεισ᾽ ἂν μεθ᾽ ἡμῶν, they remained with us, contrary to the Gnoſticks that broke off and ſeparated from them. Thoſe are deſcribed ver. 8. and in reſpect to them peculiarly he commands the doctrine here ſpoken of, of following the buſineſſe of their callings, to be earneſtly preſs'd, becauſe thoſe πεπιστευκότες there, the Gnoſticks that had been profeſſors of the faith, wanted that leſſon ſo much. But now he extends it to thoſe that are not fallen off to that Sect, that they be taught it too that none live idly upon the ſcore of being a Chriſtian, or make that advantage of the liberality of other Chriſtians, but every man labour to earn his own living.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO [a]PHILEMON.

Philemon, to whom this Epiſtle was written, is ſaid to have been an eminent perſon in Coloſſæ; and ſo that of Col. 4. 9. inclines to believe, where Oneſimus, Philemons ſervant, is ſaid to be one of them. S. Paul had converted him to the faith, ver. 19. but that not at Coloſſæ, (for he had not been perſonally there, Col. 2. 1.) but in ſome other place, where he had alſo contracted a friendſhip with him. Oneſimus had been his ſervant, and had ſtolne and run away from him, and coming to Rome while Paul was priſoner there, was converted by him, v. 10. and is now returned to his Maſter with this Epiſtle of commendation, to obtain a pardon and reception for him; which conſequently was written and ſent from Rome, where he now was in priſon, An. Chr. 59. And this at the ſame time that the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians was ſent, as may be conjectured by theſe characters common to them: 1. Timothy joyned with Paul in the beginning; 2. the ſame ſalutations in the concluſion, Epaphras, Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas and Lucas; and 3. Archippus called upon in both to take care and look to the truſt committed to him. CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. PAUL a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt and Timothy our brother, unto Philemon our dearly-beloved, and fellow-labourer,

2. And to our beloved Apphia, and Archippus our fellow-ſouldier, and to [the Church in thy houſe:] — 2. thoſe Chriſtians that are with thee.

3. Grace to you and peace from God our father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

4. I thank my God, making mention of thee alwaies in my prayers,

5. Hearing of [thy love and faith, which thou haſt toward the Lord Jeſus and toward all ſaints,] — 5. thy charity to all the ſaints, and thy faith in Chriſt (ſee note on Mat. 7. d.)

6. That the communication of thy faith may become effectual by the acknowledging of every good thing, which is * in you † in Chriſt Jeſus.] — 6. That your liberality & charity to others that are in want, flowing from thy faith in Chriſt Jeſus, (ſee note on Act. 2. e) may be able to demonſtrate to all the zeal of your charity and kindneſſe toward Jeſus Chriſt.

* among in † toward vis

7. For we have great joy and conſolation in thy love, becauſe the bowels of the ſaints are refreſhed by thee, brother.] — 7. This liberal charity of thine is matter of great joy and comfort to me, to conſider how many Chriſtians are in their wants refreſhed & comforted by thee, my beloved Philemon.

8. Wherefore though I might be much bold in Chriſt to injoyn thee that which is convenient,] — 8. And therefore though from my experience of thee I have great freeneſſe of behaviour toward thee in or through Chriſt (ſee Joh. 7. a.) and am not ſhie or backward to lay it upon thee as an Apoſtolical command, knowing that thou wilt readily obey it,

9. Yet for love's ſake I rather beſeech thee, being ſuch an one as Paul the aged, and now alſo a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt.] — 9. Yet I chuſe rather to make it my requeſt upon the ſcore of thy love toward me, who as an old man and a priſoner, ſhall obtain ſome kindneſſe and affection from thee.

10. I beſeech thee for my ſon Oneſimus, whom I have begotten in my bands;] — 10. And my requeſt is not for my ſelf, but for Oneſimus, one whom I have converted to the faith ſince I was a priſoner;

11. Which in time paſt was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me;] — 11. A perſon that formerly injured thee, when he ran away from thee, but is now, if thou wilt receive him again (according to the ſignification of his name) likely to be profitable to thee, and, if thou pleaſe, to me alſo (ſee v. 13.)

12. Whom I have ſent again: thou therefore receive him that is mine own bowels.] — 12. He is thy ſervant, and therefore I have remitted him to thee. I pray receive him, and entertain him with all kindneſſe, as one dearly beloved by me.

13. Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy ſtead he might have miniſtred unto me in the bonds of the Goſpel. — 13. Had it not been for the reaſon ſpecified v. 14. I would have kept him here with me, that he might attend and doe me all thoſe good offices, while I am in priſon for the doctrine of Chriſt, which I know thou wouldeſt doe, if thou wert here.

14. But without thy mind would I doe nothing: that thy * benefit ſhould not be as it were of neceſſity, but willingly.] — 14. But I would not doe ſo, till thou hadſt given thy conſent, that thy charity to me may be perfectly free, and ſo thy kindneſſe in affording him to me, if thou thinkeſt meet.

* good deed τὸ ἀγαθόν σου

15. For perhaps he therefore departed for a ſeaſon, that thou ſhouldſt receive him for ever;] — 15. And for his leaving thee ſo injuriouſly, there may come advantage to thee thereby: it is very poſſible that he was by God's ſpecial providence thus permitted to run away from thee for a little while, that by the reformation and converſion now wrought on him by me, he may be an uſeful ſervant to thee for ever;

16. Being now ſo improved, that he will not only deſerve to be looked on as a ſervant, uſefull to thee ſo, but more then ſo, as a fellow-Chriſtian, and uſefull to thee in thoſe beſt things; one very uſefull to me, and therefore in any reaſon to be ſo much more to thee, who haſt a double relation to him, as one of thy family, and one of thy faith.

16. Not now as a ſervant, but above a ſervant, a brother beloved, ſpecially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the fleſh, and in the Lord?]

17. If therefore thou look-eſt on me as a friend, if all be common between thee and me, as between friends, treat him as thou wouldſt doe me, if I ſhould come unto thee.

17. If thou * count me therefore a partner, receive him as my ſelf.] * haſt ἔχεις

18. And if at his coming away from thee he purloined any thing from thee, or hath any thing of thine in his hands, I will be anſwerable to thee for it.

18. If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account.]

a.

19. I give thee this bill under my hand, whereby I oblige my ſelf to pay it; though I might put thee in mind, that a greater debt then that need not be ſtood on between me and thee, who oweſt thy converſion, and ſo thy ſoul and wel-being, and ſo thy ſelf, to me.

19. I Paul [a] have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it: albeit I doe not ſay to thee how thou oweſt unto me even thine own ſelf beſides.]

20. give me cauſe of rejoicing to ſee thee, doe as becomes a true charitable Chriſtian to doe.

20. † Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: [refreſh my bowels in the Lord.] † I pray thee Ne.

21. Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt alſo doe more then I ſay.

21. that by the benefit of the prayers of you and others for me, I ſhall have liberty from my bonds, and be permitted to come and viſit you.

22. But withall prepare me alſo a lodging: for I truſt [that through your prayers I ſhall be given unto you.]

23. There ſalute thee Epaphras my fellow-priſoner in Chriſt Jeſus, 24. Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas, Lucas, my fellow-labourers.

25. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with your ſpirit. Amen.

a. Ἐγραψα τῇ ἐμῇ χειρί.

V. 19. Written it with my own hand] Theſe words are to be explained by the Roman laws: that of Ulpian among their Axiomes, Si quis ſcripſerit ſe fide juſſiſſe, omnia ſolenniter acta videri, If any one write that he hath undertaken a debt, this is a ſolemn obliging of him; and that of Juſtinian. Ut quodcunque ſcriptum ſit quaſi actum, etiam actum fuiſſe videatur, That whatſoever is written as if it were done, ſeems, and is reputed, to have been done. Both to this purpoſe, that a man is bound as much by his own hand, or confeſſion under it, as if any other teſtimonies or proofs were againſt him of a fact or debt, or himſelf under a ſolemn obligation. So Anianus paraphraſing on Paulus lib. 5. Collect. t. 7. Si ſcribat aliquis ſe quamcunque ſummam redditurum, ita habetur quaſi ad interrogata iſta, Dabis? Promittis? reſponderit, Dabo, Promitto. Ideóque ad redhibitionem tenetur, If any one write that he will pay ſuch a ſumme, he is as much obliged as if he had anſwered to the ordinary interrogatories, Wilt thou give? Doſt thou promiſe? I will give, I doe promiſe. And therefore he is bound to make payment. So in the Novells Διαταξ. ϱλϛ'. the diſtinction is put between thoſe who in Contracts γραμματεῖα καὶ λογοθέσια ποιοῦσιν, ἃ ἐπ' ἀγορᾶς τίθενται, enter in bands and obligations, which are done in courts, and thoſe who συγγράφουσι τῇ ἰδίᾳ χειρὶ, write it under their own hands; and preſently 'tis added, that he is as much bound who οἰκείᾳ γράφῃ χειρὶ, writes with his own hand, (whence are all thoſe three words, ἰδιόγραφον, and χειρόγραφον, and ζυγγραφὴ,) as he who σύμβολον ἀγορᾶιον ποιήσας, ἢ ὑπογράψας ἐν τοῖς παρ' ἑτέρων γραφῆσιν, ἢ γραμματείοις, ἢ λογοθεσίοις, hath entred an obligation in the court, or ſuperſcribed bills written by others, or bands and obligations, ſuch as are mentioned in the Goſpel, Luc. 16. 6. δέξαι σου τὸ γράμμα, take thy bill, that is, the obligation, (wherein he was bound to the Stewards Maſter, which being in the Stewards keeping he reſtored to him) and by Chryſoſtome expreſs'd by γραμματεῖον ἐκπλάσαι, to give bond. And to this kind of obligation, which is not done by any legal contract, but onely per chirographum, or ἰδιόγραφον, referre theſe words of S. Paul here, ἐμῇ (that is, ἰδίᾳ) χειρὶ ἔγραψα. See *P. THE [a]EPISTLE

OF

PAUL THE APOSTLE

HEBREWES.

WHether this Epiſtle were written by Saint Paul hath not only of late but antiently been doubted. And as the Title or Superſcription which is in our Copie, pretending not to be a part of the Epiſtle, is not ſufficient to conclude any more than that it was in that time when this title was prefix'd believed to be Saint Pauls; ſo there is no doubt but that it went without any Superſcription or known Author more antiently; and ſo hath left ſome place to variety of conjectures, who the Author ſhould be. Saint Chryſoſtome in his Proeme to the Epiſtle to the Romans expreſſeth his opinion of it, that it was by Saint Paul written at Rome in his bands; (but that cannot well be imagined, when he tels them c. 13. 23. that with Timothy, if he come ſhortly, he will ſee them; for that ſignifies the Author to be at liberty when he thus purpoſed.) Long before him Clemens Alexandrinus (as we ſee in Euſebius l. 6. c. 11.) renders reaſons why Saint Paul prefix'd not his name in the front of it, as in all other Epiſtles of his he had done, Paul an Apoſtle, &c. which though it be an evidence of that antient writers opinion, yet it is alſo of its being queſtioned in that time, and is alſo an acknowledgement that it was not own'd by Saint Paul at the time of writing it, or then publickly acknowledg'd to be his. Others were antiently inclinable to father it on Barnabas, others on Clemens Romanus, others on Luke; which is a farther argument of the uncertainty of it. And for the laſt of them, there is a paſſage c. 2. 3. which is conceived to make it more probable to be written by him then by Saint Paul: For ſpeaking of the ſo great ſalvation, whether that be the Goſpel and doctrine of Chriſt, or whether the deliverance of the faithfull out of their perſecutions, (ſee c. 2. Note b.) he ſaith of it, ὑπὸ τῶν ἀκουσάντων εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐβεβαιώθη, it was confirm'd to us by them that heard it; whereas it is known of Saint Paul, Gal. 1. 12. that he profeſſeth not to have received the Goſpell by man, nor to have been taught it, but by the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt; and ſo likewiſe of the deliverance of the faithfull, of which he ſo often ſpeaks ſo confidently, there is no doubt, but among the many revelations which he had received 2 Cor. 12. 7. this was alſo revealed to him. But to this the anſwer is eaſie. Firſt, that ἡμᾶς ns is not to be reſtrained to the writer only, but ſo as to comprehend thoſe to whom he writes, as we ſee it uſed Tit. 3. 3. and Eph. 2. 5. we being dead in treſpaſſes, &c. for it followes immediately, by grace ye are ſaved; and ſo we is all one with ye. And ſecondly, it is no new or ſtrange thing for Saint Paul to confirm the truth of the Goſpel by the teſtimony of others, and tradition from them which ſaw and heard. See 1 Cor. 15. 3. &c. Other κειτήρια are added by the learned Hugo Grotius, from the obſervation of the ſtyle and idiome, which render it probable to be written by Saint Luke. But as all which can be ſaid in this matter can amount no higher than to probable or conjecturall; ſo is it not matter of any weight or neceſſity that it be defined who the Author was, whether Saint Paul, or Saint Luke, a conſtant companion of his for many years, the author of two other books of the ſacred Canon. That * which Theophylact conceives in this matter, is not improbable, viz. that S. Paul wrote it in Hebrew, as being to the Hebrewes, but that S. Luke, or, as ſome ſay, Clement, tranſlated it into Greek; and conſequently that there is not ſo much force in the Argument taken from the difference of the ſtyle, to conclude againſt its being written originally by S. Paul, as there is in the ſublimity of the ſenſe and matter, to conclude that none but S. Paul was the Author of it. And as for the Author, ſo for the place from whence it was written, it is uncertain alſo, the ordinary Copies reading, in the Subſcription, ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, from Italy, but the Kings MS. ἀπὸ Ῥώμης, from Rome. And the argument which is produced in favour of the former, becauſe chap. 13. 24. in the ſalutations are mention'd οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας, which is ordinarily rendred, they of Italy, is not of much force; becauſe that may more fitly be rendred, they from Italy, that is, thoſe that came from thence to Rome, or to any other place where the Author now was at the writing of it. So again that Timothy was the bearer of this Epiſtle, (as is affirmed in the Subſcription) it is not certain, nor, if we will judge by c. 13. 23. probable: for there mentioning Timothies being ſet at liberty, it is added, with whom, if he come ſhortly, I will ſee you, which referres to the Authors intention to bear Timothy company to them, which is not well reconcileable with Timothy's carrying this Epiſtle from him. So that in all theſe circumſtances there is very little certainty. As for thoſe to whom it is written, the Hebrews, they are the Jewes-Chriſtian, which the Author had known in Judea and Syria, (which all belonged to Jeruſalem as the chief and principal Metropolis) who being perſecuted by the unbelieving Jewes, were by the infuſions of the Gnoſticks inclined to great caution and complyances, and conſequently began to forſake the Chriſtian aſſemblies, and to fall off from the profeſſion of the faith: which being the occaſion of this monitory Epiſtle, the ſubject of it conſequently is, to confirm them in the truth of the Goſpel againſt the Jewiſh pretenſions, to repreſent the great danger and ſin of falling off, and to fortifie them with conſtancy and perſeverance by many examples of faith and patience, putting them in mind of the deliverance from their perſecutors, which ſhould now very ſhortly befall them, c. 10. 37. That this Epiſtle was written in Hebrew is phanſied by ſome, but without any reaſon; the Hebrewes to whom it was written, underſtanding and ſpeaking Greek, from whence they are called Helleniſts in many places. And accordingly the places of the Old Teſtament, which are cited in this Epiſtle, are generally ſet down in the words of the Septuaginta tranſlation, which was in uſe with the Helleniſt Jewes, and read in their Synagogues.

CHAP. I.

1. God, which uſed formerly ſeveral ſteps or degrees, and likewiſe ſeveral waies and means of revealing to men the things to come, delivering them out in portions, not all together, and that ſometimes by viſions or by dreams, ſometimes by the oracle, ſometimes by the coming of his Spirit upon the prophets, and ſometimes by voice from heaven, *.

1.* GOD, who at ſundry times, and in divers manners ſpake in time paſt unto the fathers by the prophets,] * God having in many parcels ſpoken of old time Πολυμερῶς. πολλοὶ τρόποι τὸ παλαιόν.

2. Hath in theſe laſt daies ſpoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom alſo he made the worlds;]

2. In this latter age of the world, hath ſent his Son out of his boſome, the eternal Son of God, to exerciſe this office, to take our humane nature upon him, therein to declare with more authority his Fathers will unto us, and as a prophet to foretell his deſigne of dealing with his Church (ſee c. 2. note b.) And to reward his fidelity in this office, he hath given him dominion over all things, power to command and judge men, to rule and govern the Church, as it was he alſo by whom he hath created the heaven and the earth;

a. 3. Who being the means of reflecting to us the ſight of him who is otherwiſe inviſible, Joh. 1. 18. and having perfect dominion over all, and accordingly adminiſtring all by his divine power, having by his death and reſurrection done his part toward the juſtifying and ſanctifying us, pardoning our ſins, and reforming our wicked lives, he aſcended to the right hand of his Father in heaven, there to ſit, as having finiſhed that part of his prieſtly office, which conſiſted in ſacrificing, to which they that were ſeparated were appointed to ſtand before the Lord, Deut. 10. 8. and there to reign, and as a king to defend his faithfull ſervants, and puniſh his enemies;

3. Who being the † brightneſſe of his glory, and the * expreſſe image of his perſon, and †a upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himſelf * purged our ſins, ſat down on the right hand of the majeſty on high;] † beam ἀπαύγασμα * character of his ſubſtence χαρακτὴρ τῆς ὑποστάσεως αὐτοῦ † bearing, or ruling * wrought the cleanſing καθαρισμὸν ποιησάμενος † ſuperior

b. 4. And ſo is advanced to a ſuperiority even over the Angels themſelves, which you may diſcern by the compellations that are beſtowed on him, farre higher then any that are beſtowed on the Angels:

4. Being made ſo much b† better then the Angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name then they.]

5. As that of Son, in the ſecond Pſalme, which though in ſome ſenſe it belong to David, yet is by the Jewes themſelves acknowledged in a more ſublime ſenſe to belong to the Meſſias; ſo likewiſe that 2 Sam. 7. 14. delivered to Solomon, as he was a type of the Meſſias, which in ſome degree true of him, was in a much more eminent manner to be underſtood of Chriſt:

5. For unto which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a father, and he ſhall be to me a ſon?]

6. And again when the Scripture Pſal. 97. ſpeaks of the Lord, that is, the Meſſias his reigning, v. 1. and in the proceſs of the Pſalme deſcribes his entring on his kingdome, that which commenced at his aſcending into the ſuperior world (the heavens here v. 3. and c. 2. 5.) the expreſs words of the Pſalmiſt are v. 7.

6. And again, when *he bringeth in the firſt-begotten into the world, †he ſaith,] And let all the Angels of God worſhip him. * it brings εἰσαγάγῃ † it ſaith λέγει

7. Whereas the titles which he gives the Angels, are no higher than of winds and flames, Pſal. 104. 4.

7. And * of the Angels he ſaith, Who maketh his Angels † ſpirits, and his miniſters a flame of fire.] * to the πρὸς † winds πνεύματα

8. But he gives farre higher titles to the Meſſias, calling him the eternal King and God, mentioning his throne and ſcepter, and his great juſtice in exerciſing his Regal power in ſuccouring the faithfull, and puniſhing the obdurate, and addreſſing to him in this dialect, Pſal. 45. 62.

8. But unto the Son he ſaith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever, a *ſcepter of righteouſneſſe is the ſcepter of thy kingdome.] * the rod of uprightneſſe ῥάβδος εὐθύτητος ἡ ῥάβδος τῆς βασιλείας σου

9. All thy doctrine and practiſe, thy words and thy example, have been deſigned for the advancing of all kind of vertue; and by way of reward for that, God hath entertained or treated thee more liberally then any other, (ſee note on Mat. 26. c. and on Act. 10. c.) preferred and dignified thee before all Angels and men.

9. Thou haſt loved righteouſneſſe and hated iniquity; therefore God even thy God hath anointed thee with the oile of gladneſſe above thy fellows.]

10. Another place, Pſal. 102. 25. applies that which is ſaid of God Gen. 1. 1. about the creation of the world, to the Meſſias, calling him Lord and Creatour of heaven and earth, (which is a proof of what is added in the end of v. 2.) and adding,

10. And, Thou Lord in the beginning haſt laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the works of thine hands.]

11, 12. They ſhall at laſt be deſtroyed, & in the mean time decay daily, be put off like clothes, and worn no more. But the Meſſias ſhall continue immutable and immortal.

11. They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt; and they all ſhall wax old as doth a garment:

c. 12. And as a veſture ſhalt thou *fold them up, and they ſhall be changed: but thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall not fail.]

13. And accordingly thoſe words ſpoken of him Pſal. 110. 1. to this plain ſenſe, that he ſhould reign till all his enemies were ſubdued, and brought to the acknowledgment of him, that he ſhould act a ſignal revenge upon his crucifiers, were never delivered, or applied unto any the moſt dignified Archangel, but only to this eternall Son of God.

13. But to which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, Sit on my right hand, untill I make thine enemies thy footſtool?]

14. The higheſt dignity that is beſtowed on them is, that they are ſervants under God for the uſe of men or Chriſtians, thoſe eſpecially who are now under perſecution, and ſhall ſhortly be reſcued out of it by a ſignal deliverance, and upon their conſtancy and perſeverance ſecured of eternal ſalvation, (ſee c. 2. note b.)

14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth *to miniſter for them who ſhall be heirs of ſalvation?] * for miniſtery for their ſakes who are ready to inherit ſalvation, or deliverance, εἰς διακονίαν διὰ τοὺς μέλλοντας κληρονομεῖν σωτηρίαν

a. φέρων

V. 3. Upholding] The Hebrew נשׂא ſignifies two things, fero, to bear, and rego, to rule; and from the latter of them it is that נשׂיא is the ordinary word for a Prince. Agreeably to this, φέρων, which is ſometimes the rendring of the Hebrew נשׂא, as Num. 11. 14. Deut. 1. 9. may accordingly ſignifie to rule, to govern, διοικῶν, to adminiſter, as a Commander, or Governour, or Procurator of a Province; and ſo 'tis here taken, to denote the Regal power of Chriſt, to which he is advanced by his Reſurrection.

b. Κρείττων ἀγγέλων

V. 4. Better then the Angels] When we read Iſa. 52. 13. Behold my ſervant ſhall proſper, he ſhall be exalted, and extolled, and be very high, the Chaldee reads, my ſervant the Meſſiah. And Abrabaneel a Jew confeſſes, that the antient wiſe men of the Jewes did interpret that place of the Meſſiah, after this manner, that the Meſſiah ſhould be exalted above Abraham, above Moſes, and that he ſhould be higher then the Angels themſelves. And agreeably to this known doctrine of theirs it is, that the Apoſtle here writing to them thus ſpeaks, ſignifying Chriſt to be indeed the Meſſiah, and ſo ſuperior to the Angels themſelves.

c. ἑλίξεις

V. 12. Fold them up] That this whole Text is cited out of Pſal. 102. 25, 26, 27. 'tis evident. In that place of the Pſalmiſt, the Septuagint or Greek tranſlation in the ordinary Copies read, ἑλίξεις, thou ſhalt fold; and from that 'tis ſtill continued here, at leaſt our Copies read it ſo. But there is little doubt but that the reading of the Greek there was not ἑλίξεις thou ſhalt fold, but ἀλλάξεις thou ſhalt change; for ſo the ἀλλαγήσονται, and they ſhall be changed, that follows, doth manifeſt; and ſo alſo the Hebrew תחליפם clearly ſignifies: For חלף, mutavit, is thus ordinarily applied to changing of garments, 2 Sam. 12. 22. ויחלף שׂמלתו and he changed his clothes; and Gen. 35. 3. change your garments, the ſame word is again uſed. By which it is clear, that either the Copie here is by tranſcribers corrupted (as it is eaſie to ſuppoſe, when we remember that the Copies of the Greek Pſalterie reading ἑλίξεις, might very eaſily occaſion their conforming that which here they found to what was before them in the place from whence 'twas manifeſtly cited) or elſe that the Author himſelf, following the Septuagint, tranſcribed this teſtimony verbatim as the words then lay in the Copies of the Greek Bible, and did not reform it by the Original, the ſenſe indeed, though a little changed, being not much diſturbed by this other reading; it being the manner, when a man ſhifts or changes his ſuits, to fold and lay up that which is put off. If in the time of writing this Epiſtle the Septuagint were thus corrupted in the Copies, then this is likely to be the truth of it, it being ordinary for the Apoſtles to cite Scriptures as they were found then in the Greek Bibles, though they varied from the Hebrew, becauſe thoſe Greek Bibles, and not the Hebrew, were in uſe among thoſe to whom they wrote. But if the corruption in the Pſalms were of a later date, then 'tis probable that the tranſcriber of the Epiſtle corrupted it from ἀλλάξεις to ἑλίξεις. That one of theſe is the truth, there will be little ground of doubting, though which it is it be not certain. Mean while the meaning of the place is clear, that the heavens ſhall be changed, after the manner of mens changing their clothes, putting off the old and putting on new, that is, that there ſhall be new heavens, a new ſort of world. The heavens having no more ſervice to doe to the earth, by inlightning and ſhining on it, ſhall be changed into a form which ſhall be moſt agreeable to the preſent imployment or uſe of them.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

1. THerefore we ought to give the more earneſt heed to the things which we have heard, leſt at any time we * [a] ſhould let them ſlip.] 1. Wherefore Chriſt being a prophet ſo much ſuperior a. to all before him, c. 1. 2. and now elevated above Angels to his regal office in heaven, whereby he is certainly able to perform what he foretold, we ought in all reaſon to heed his predictions, which have been delivered to us from him (ſee v. 3.) and to make uſe of them as means to fortifie us, that we be not tempted to apoſtatize and fall off from Chriſt, miſcarry, and be loſt after all this.

* fall away

2. For if the word ſpoken by Angels † was ſtedfaſt, and every tranſgreſſion and diſobedience received a juſt recompenſe of reward;] 2. For if the Law were given onely by the mediation or miniſtery of Angels, and yet the threats on the breaking of that did come to paſſe (ſee note on 2 Pet. 1. d.) and all the ſins committed by the Iſraelites againſt that were ſeverely puniſhed in the wilderneſſe, and they that had provoked were not permitted to enter into the promiſed land of Canaan;

† became γενομένου βεβαίου

3. How ſhall we eſcape, if we neglect ſo great * [b] ſalvation, which at the firſt began to be ſpoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;

4. God alſo bearing them witneſſe both with ſignes and wonders, and with diverſ miracles and † gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, according to his own will?] 3, 4. How ſhall we avoid b. that puniſhment, or the like, being involv'd with the crucifiers in their deſtruction, if we doe not now by conſtancy and perſeverance make our ſelves capable of that deliverance, which Chriſt firſt at his being on earth, and the Apoſtles that heard it from him, have aſſured us of, and which God himſelf hath teſtified both by many prodigies and ominous preſages of it, and by giving them that have foretold this power to doe miracles, and other extraordinary abilities of his Spirit, as he hath thought fit to diſpenſe them, to one man one ability, to another another; by this means giving authority to their predictions.

* or deliverance

† diſtributi σνμμερισμοῖς

5. For unto Angels hath he not put in ſubjection the world to come, whereof we ſpeak.] 5. And that ye may know that what Chriſt hath thus foretold he is able to perform, ye are to know that all power is given to him in heaven and earth, which is a dignity far above that of the Angels; for God gave not them any Regall power to exerciſe now under the Goſpell (ſee note on c. 6. a.)

6. But one in a certain place teſtified of him, ſaying, What is man, that thou art mindfull of him; or the ſon of man, that thou † viſiteſt him?] 6. But this was given to Chriſt onely. And accordingly of him are thoſe words to be underſtood in the diviner ſenſe, which the Author of Pſal. 8. hath, that he is a mean and vile man in outward appearance, not worthy to be conſidered or regarded by God,

† regardeſt ἐπισκέπτῃ

c. 7. Who for the ſpace of 33. years was ſubjected to a condition inferiour to that of Angels; but then after his ſuffering in our fleſh, he was by God moſt honourably advanced to the higheſt dignities, made the ſupreme ruler and King of heaven and earth.

7. * Thou madeſt him c a little lower then the Angels, thou crownedſt him with glory and honour, and didſt ſet him over the works of thy hands.] † Thou haſt leſſened him a little while below ἠλάττωσας αὐτὸν βραχύ τι παρ'

8. And all his enemies and the perſecutors of his Church ſubjected to him, and he advanced above all created beings. This prophecie of the Meſſias cannot be fulfilled, if any enemie be left which is not brought under him: and from thence it is manifeſt, that there is a yet future ſubduing of his enemies to be expected; for as yet the Jewes and Gnoſticks do perſecute the Orthodox Chriſtians, and are not ſubdued or deſtroyed, and the Chriſtians delivered by that meanes.

8. † Thou haſt put all things in ſubjection under his feet. For in that he put all in ſubjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we ſee not yet all things put under him.] † Thou haſt put all things under his feet: for in putting all things under him, he left nothing unſubjected to him, Πάντα ὑπέταξας ὑποκάτω τῶν ποδῶν αὐτοῦ· ἐν γὰρ τῷ ὑποτάξαι αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα, οὐδὲν ἀφῆκεν αὐτῷ ἀνυπότακτον.

9. Only this we ſee already, that the Meſſias that was humbled for a while, even to the death of the croſſe, for the benefit of all mankind and every man in the world, is now after, and for that humiliation of his, rewarded and crowned with glory and honour, and a throne erected for him in heaven, of which this is but conſequent that his enemies ſhall be made his footſtool.

9. But we ſee Jeſus, who was * made a little lower then the Angels, for the ſuffering of death, crowned with glory and honour, that he by the grace of God ſhould taſt death for every man.] * a little while leſſened below, v. 7.

10. For God, the univerſal deſigner of all, in his wiſdome foreſeeing the oppoſitions and ſufferings that would befall his people, believers, in this world, thought it fit that Chriſt his own Sonne, the author of their deliverance, ſhould through ſufferings come to his reward and crown, (ſee note on Phil. 3. 13.) that ſo he might after his own example deliver thoſe that ſuffer conſtantly and patiently.

10. For it became him for whom † are all things, and by whom * are all things, in bringing many ſonnes unto glory, † to make the captain of their ſalvation perfect through ſufferings.] † were all things τὰ πάντα * were † to conſummate τελειῶσαι

11. For as among the Jewes both the firſt-fruits and the whole harveſt are of the ſame nature; and as the prieſt that wrought expiation, and the people for whom it was wrought, were of one beginning: ſo are Chriſt and all mankind of one making, and Chriſt and the Jewes from one original, (to wit, of Abraham, v. 16. who was called One, Mat. 2. 15.) and therefore we muſt expect in our way to exaltation or deliverance, to paſſe through the like condition of afflictions: In which reſpects Chriſt and we are brethren, and we ſo owned by him,

11. For both he that ſanctifieth and they that are ſanctified are all * of one: for which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them brethren,] * from ἐξ

12. According to that of the Pſalmiſt, ſaying,

12. Saying,] I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midſt of the Church will I ſing praiſe unto thee:

13. Another proof alſo of the ſame (viz. that both Chriſt and we are brethren in this, both to paſſe by ſufferings v. 10.) is that of Iſa. 8. 17, 18. where firſt he ſpeaks of waiting on the Lord that hideth his face, and withall truſting in him, being confident of his uncovering his face, giving deliverance, in whatſoever adverſity relying and depending on him, thereby noting that he is to paſſe through ſuch, and after ſpecifying and inſtancing in himſelf and his children given him by God, that is, (in the antitype to Iſaiah and his children, given him by God for a ſign) Chriſt and all faithfull Chriſtians, which are his children ſpiritually begotten to him by God.

13. And again, I will put my truſt in him: and again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me.]

d. 14. Seeing therefore that Chriſtians or believers, thoſe that are to be brought to heaven by Chriſt, are here in humane fleſh and ſufferings, and ſeeing that brethren or fellow-children are of like natures, Chriſt therefore, who is called our brother, is to be ſuppoſed to have part with us in fleſh and ſufferings, and ſo to ſuffer alſo: And by ſo doing he was to fruſtrate and make void the devils deſign, (which was to keep men for ever under the power of death) to rob death of its ſting, and to reſcue men from the bands or power of death, by a reſurrection from death to life.

14. For as much then as the children are partakers of fleſh and blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame: that through death he might † d deſtroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devill,] † evacuate, fruſtrate

15. And ſo take away all that fear of perſecutions and death it ſelf, which makes men ſo cowardly, and keeps them in ſuch awe, that is, in a moſt unchriſtian and ſervile condition, whilſt they ſee no hope of deliverance.

15. And deliver them who through fear of death were all their life time ſubject to bondage.]

e. 16. For 'tis not ſaid any where, that he catches hold of Angels as they are falling, or running, or carried captive from him, to ſave or reſcue them from ruine, or to bring them out of captivity; but only to men doth he this favour peculiarly.

16. * For verily he e took not on him the nature of Angels; but he took on him the ſeed of Abraham.] * For he doth not any where lay hold on Angels, but he layeth hold on the ſeed of Abraham † to expiate ἱλάσκεσθαι

17. And therefore he was not to come in an Angelical glorious guiſe, but in an humble ſuffering condition, whereby he is the better qualified to have compaſſion on thoſe that are in any ſad eſtate, and we thereby ſecured that he will diſcharge his prieſtly office faithfully, and negotiate for us in all affairs between God and us, (ſee note on Act. 13. i.) but eſpecially by ſuffering obtain pardon for us.

17. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a mercifull and faithfull high prieſt, in things pertaining to God, † to make reconciliation for the ſins of the people.]

18. For by the ſorrowes which himſelf ſuffered, 'tis very proper and agreeable that he ſhould become compaſſionate, and willing to relieve thoſe that fall into the ſame or the like evils, that are under the ſharpeſt perſecutions in this life.

18. For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted.]

Annotations on Chap. II.

2. Παραῤῥύωμεν

V. 1. Should let them ſlip] Παραῤῥυῶμεν is a phraſe uſed from the water, which when 'tis not kept within limits, fals away, runs about. Heſychius, Παραῤῥυῶμεν, ἐξολισθῶμεν, and Phavorinus, παραπέσωμεν, it ſignifies to be loſt or fall away; and ſo Prov. 3. 21. when μὴ διαῤῥυῇς, fall not away, is ſet oppoſite to τήρησον ἦ, but keep; and ſo here to προσέχειν, take heed, and therefore the Syriack render it leſt we fall, and ſo the Arabick Interpreter alſo. And accordingly Theophylact hath μὴ ἐκπέσωμεν, μὴ ἀπολώμεθα, let us not fall away, let us not periſh; to note, ſaith he, τὸ ῥυκόλον ὀλισθῆσαι, καὶ τὸ χαλεπὸν τῆς ἀπωλείας, the eaſineſſe of the fall, and heavineſſe of the ruine.

V. 3. Salvation] It may here be matter of ſome queſtion, what is the meaning of the word σωτηρία ſalvation, or deliverance. Three notions of the Verb σώζειν have been oft mention'd: one for eſcaping out of the vitious cuſtomes of the world, repentance and converſion to Chriſt, receiving the faith (ſee Note on Luk. 13. b.) the other for deliverance out of calamities, (from b. σωτηρία

(from whence comes a third notion, for eternal bliſſe in heaven, as an eternal deliverance from all evil, whether of ſin or puniſhment:) and accordingly σωτηρία is oft taken for that eminent deliverance from perſecutions, which was to befall the faithfull at the time of the utter deſtruction of the Jewes, (ſee Note on Rom. 13. c.) If the word be here uſed in the firſt notion, then it muſt ſignifie the preaching of the Goſpel, the means of converting and bringing men to good life. And ſo it may poſſibly be, comparing the Goſpel here delivered by Chriſt with the Law delivered by Angels. The ſecond notion alſo having two parts, one to ſignifie a ſignal deliverance here, another to ſignifie eternal ſalvation, it is not impoſſible that both here and c. 1. 14. it ſhould belong to the latter of theſe, eſpecially there where there is mention of inheriting it. But yet the former of theſe two latter notions, that for the ſignal deliverance of the faithfull, long promiſed, and at the writing of this now approaching, and 1 Pet. 1. 5. call'd the deliverance ready to be revealed in the laſt ſeaſon, may very probably be it that is here meant in both places. In the former, c. 1. 14. where the Angels are ſaid to be ſent εἰς διακονίαν, for miniſtery, διὰ τοὺς μέλλοντας, for them that are ready to inherit this deliverance, that is very agreeable to the manner of expreſſing it elſewhere, by his coming with his angels, or holy myriads, to puniſh the Jewes and reſcue the faithfull Chriſtians; and accordingly in the 7th of the Revelation the Angel is ſent to ſeal the faithfull, when the reſt are to be deſtroyed by the four Angels. And this deliverance being a fatherly act of mercy in God, made over by promiſe to all that ſhould perſevere, may well be ſaid to be inherited by ſuch; and the neerneſſe of it at that time, every where ſpoken of, may be denoted by the μέλλοντας, their readineſſe to receive it, as in Peter it was ready to be revealed. And ſo for the πλειόνη σωτηρία here, if we will judge by the Context, it muſt moſt probably ſignifie this. For firſt, this will by the conſequents appear to be the deſigne of the whole Epiſtle, (See Note on the Title a.) to fortifie the believing Jewes by the approach of this deliverance: Secondly, the Epiſtle beginning with Gods ſpeaking in theſe laſt times by Chriſt, as he had formerly by ordidinary Prophets, c. 1. 1. and the reſt of that Chapter being ſpent in the ſetting out the dignity of this Prophet above all, even Angels themſelves, he applies it to this very matter c. 2. 1. that they give heed to what hath been thus foretold by Chriſt, leſt they ſhould fall away, and this enforced by the danger of ſo falling, v. 2, 3. and by the greatneſſe of the deliverance, ſuch as was thought fit to be foretold by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, who were furniſhed with power of working miracles to confirm their prophecy. Where, as the σωτηρία that began to be ſpoken of, v. 3. is all one with the ἀκουσθέντα the things heard, v. 1. ſo both are fitly appliable to this matter, which we know Chriſt ſolemnly foretold, Mat. 24. and the Apoſtles in their preachings, and in their Epiſtles (See Note on the Title of the Epiſtle to the Romans, a.) And thirdly, the conſequents in this Chapter agree to this interpretation, where Chriſt is ſet out as a King, v. 5. all things to be ſubjected to him, which being not yet fulfilled, as long as his enemies proſper and prevail againſt the Chriſtians, that is there uſed as an argument that ſome farther exerciſe of this power of his, ſome deliverance of the faithfull, was yet to be expected. So again v. 9. where he is exalted by way of reward for his ſufferings, that by the ſame way as he paſs'd they might paſſe alſo, that is, through perſecutions to deliverance, v. 10, 11. and ſo be as his brethren, v. 12, 13. which in the laſt verſe is expreſs'd by his ſuccouring them that are tempted, that is, relieving them that are perſecuted (for ſo πειρασμὸς temptation ſignifies:) and ſo on in the next Chapter, where by occaſion of the mention of the Iſraelites provoking, and being excluded Canaan, he re-inforceth his exhortation of not falling off, that they may enter into Gods reſt, which expects the Chriſtians; which that it belongs to this matter of their deliverance from perſecutions, and Halcyonian dayes attending it, ſee Note c. on ch. 3. So likewiſe may the phraſe εἰς σωτηρίαν be interpreted ch. 9. 28. Where the mention of Chriſts ſecond appearing or coming, and that quite contrary to the firſt, (when he came to dye for our ſins) a coming in power to deſtroy his crucifiers, may very fitly determine it to that deliverance which the perſecuted Chriſtians that held out conſtantly, in expectation of his making good this his promiſe to all ſuch, ſhould reap by it: But not ſo in any of theſe as to exclude, but farther to comprehend, that eternal deliverance which we ordinarily call ſalvation.

V. 7. A little lower] The Hebrew מְעַט hath a double notion, in reſpect of quantity, or of time. Pſal. 8. 5. whence this verſe is taken, as the compariſon is ſet betwixt Enoſch, or Ben Adam, the loweſt man on earth, and the heaven and Angels; ſo the words will bear the firſt ſenſe, that man is little lower then the Angels: but as thoſe words were a prophecy, and the application of them here an enunciation concerning Chriſt, ſo מְעַט is an Adverb of time, and ſignifies a little while.

V. 14. Deſtroy] That καταργεῖν ſignifies to fruſtrate, evacuate, invalidate, take away all force or power from any, hath been formerly ſaid, Rom. 7. Note a. And ſo it muſt be taken here; & καταργῆσῃ διάβολον will be to evacuate or fruſtrate the devils deſign, and cancell that deed by which, upon ſins coming into the world, men were bound over to death. For by Chriſt, though death temporal be not quite taken away, yet it is rob'd of the ſting and victory, or reigning power over man, who by Chriſt is reſcued from death, that is, from the κράτος or power of it here, (as of Chriſt it is ſaid Act. 2. 24. that it was not poſſible κρατεῖσθαι for him to be held under death) and raiſed to eternal life; and mean while, while the body lies in the grave, 'tis but as in a ſtill, quiet ſleep, a freedome from the preſſures of this life, and ſo hath nothing of evil or formidable in it. This notion of the phraſe doth fitly belong to it here, where it is laid as the foundation of comfort to them that dread perſecutions, becauſe they fear death, v. 15. by aſſuring them that Chriſt hath taken away the ſting of death, and that conſequently, if they that are now under preſſures for Chriſt doe not outlive them, or enjoy the promiſed deliverance here, yet death ſhall be no loſſe or diminution to them, they ſhall riſe to eternal life.

V. 16. Took not on him] The notion of ἐπιλαμβάνεται is beſt expreſs'd by Chryſoſtome in theſe words, φεύγοντας ἀπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ πόρρω φεύγουσαν ἀνθρωπίνην φύσιν χειρὸς καλαῖδι λάξας κατέλαβεν, when mankind fled, fled far from him, Chriſt purſued and caught hold of it. The word is interpreted by Cicero cont. Piſon. by retinere ad ſalutem, i. e. manu, aut lacinià, prehendere ac retinere eum qui ſe it perditum, to hold one back, by that means to ſave him, to catch by the hand or garment, and hold him that is about to deſtroy himſelf. And this Chriſt did by faſtning on our nature in his Incarnation, wherein the Angels were not concerned; for he did not ſo to them, but only to us, according to that of the Antients, that that which was not aſſumed was not ranſomed by him, that the nature of man being only aſſumed by Chriſt, and not the nature of Angels, man only had the benefit of it; all his coming and preaching deſigned to bring ſinfull man to repentance, but not to recall or recover the laps'd Angels.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. III.

1. Upon theſe grounds I may moſt reaſonably exhort you, my Chriſtian bretlren, who are called and admitted to the ſame common faith, diſciples of this crucified Saviour, to conſider and imitate Jeſus Chriſt, who was ſent with commiſſion by his Father to preach that Goſpel to us which we profeſſe, and to ratifie it with his own blood, the effuſion of which denominates him our high prieſt, who ſacrificed himſelf for us,

1. WHerefore holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, conſider the Apoſtle and high prieſt of our profeſſion Chriſt Jeſus,]

2. And hath with all fidelity diſcharged his office, to which he was deſigned by God in every particular, in like manner as is affirmed of the fidelity of Moſes, who governed and adminiſtred not any one part, but all the houſe of Iſrael.

2. Who was faithfull to him that appointed him, as alſo Moſes was faithfull in all his houſe.]

a. 3. Nay Chriſt's condition is much more honourable then that of Moſes, as farre as that of the maſter of the family above any the moſt eminent ſervant in the houſe.

3. For this man * was counted worthy of more glory then Moſes, in as much as he who hath [a] builded the houſe hath more honour then the houſe.]

* was vouchſafed or had more honour πλείονος δόξης ἠξίωται

5. And indeed Moſes's fidelity was only as that of a ſervant, or officer, in giving or promulgating thoſe commands which God commanded him to promulgate;

But Chriſt was as the eldeſt ſon, who is the maſter and ruler of the family, and that family of his are we, if we continue our Chriſtian profeſſion courageouſly, in deſpight of all fear (ſee note on John 7. a.) and our cheerfulneſſe in all that befals us here be founded on our hope of deliverance and relief from Chriſt, on thoſe termes on which he hath promiſed it.

* If they ſhall εἰσ-ελεύσονται

12. And therefore let the terrors of that Scripture move you, and from the example of thoſe murmurers and complainers (that were perpetually mutinying againſt God when any hardſhip approached them, ready to turn back into Ægypt upon every ſlight fear and diſcouragement, and for ſo doing were excluded from the promiſed land and reſt) do you take heed, leſt the preſent diſcouragement and preſſures, meeting with covetous or fearfull hearts, make you fall off from the Chriſtian profeſſion or practice.

12. Take heed, brethren, leſt there be in any of you an evill heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.]

13. But daily cheer up one another with incitations and exhortations to perſevere, that none of the baites that are now abroad in the world, thoſe of the Gnoſtick hereſie, which undertake to ſecure your fears, and gratifie your luſts, be able to gain in upon you.

13. But exhort one another daily, while it is called to day, leſt any of you be hardened through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne.]

14. For all our Chriſtian profeſſion hitherto will ſtand us in no ſtead, unleſſe we perſevere conſtant unto the end, in the courage and patience which himſelf hath exemplified to us, (ſee note on c. 11. a.)

14. For we are made partakers of Chriſt, if we hold the beginning of * our confidence ſtedfaſt unto the end.]

* or, his confidence, for the King's MS. reads αὐτοῦ

15. And thus the words in the Pſalmiſt lye, To day, &c.

15. While it is ſaid, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.]

16. Whence it appears that ſome that were firſt obedient, that heard and received the Law from heaven, did after rebell, and fall off, and murmure againſt God: but Caleb and Joſhua did not ſo, and conſequently not all that by the conduct of Moſes came out of Ægypt: which may be matter of admonition to you, that you imitate thoſe few that adhered to, and not the many that fell off from God.

16. For ſome when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Ægypt by Moſes.]

17. And ſo when it is ſaid that he was provoked and wearied with them fourty years, 'tis apparent it was with thoſe diſobedient murmurers that would have gone back to Ægypt, and never a man of them came to Canaan, but dyed every one of them in the wilderneſſe; and that may be a warning for us.

17. But with whom was he grieved fourty years? was it not with them that had ſinned, whoſe carcaſſes fell in the wilderneſſe?]

18. Laſtly, when 'tis ſaid that he ſwear they ſhould not come into Canaan, 'tis apparent who they are that do not come, the contumacious murmurers, v. 10. which gives us this matter of obſervation, that thoſe that would not truſt God with their preſervation, ſhall be ſure to be deſtroyed by that means by which they expect to be preſerved, by going back, renouncing Gods conduct; and ſo will it be with you, falling off from Chriſt will bring certain ruine on you.

18. And to whom ſwear he that they ſhould not enter into his reſt, but to them that † believed not?]

† were diſobedient ἠπειθήσασιν

19. And ſo the ſhort is, that unbelief and falling from God upon our carnal fears, or impatiences, or murmurings at the preſent perſecutions and hardſhips that befall Chriſtians, will deprive us of all reward of our faith, as it did the Iſraelites, that followed Moſes for a time, but afterwards fell off.

19. So we ſee that they could not enter in becauſe of unbelief.]

Annota-

a. Κατασκευάζειν οἶκον οἰκίᾳ

V. 3. Builded the houſe] Καλασκευάζειν οἶκον, to build a houſe, is here an Hebrew form of ſpeech, in which language, as οἶκος houſe ſignifies not only the material houſe, but thoſe that inhabit it, the houſhold or family, ſo καλασκευάζειν, to prepare or build, is anſwerable to בנה, which as it ſignifies to build, ſo it is vulgarly uſed for begetting, ſo farre that Ben בן, which is the ordinary word for a ſon, comes from thence; and ſo to build a houſe is to beget or raiſe a family, and καλασκευάσας οἶκον here is but a periphraſis of a Pater familias, the father or maſter of a family.

b. Καύχημα Ἐλπὶς

V. 6. Rejoycing] That glorying and rejoycing are one in the New Teſtament is ſufficiently known, and that there is no difference unleſs of degrees, the glorying being the higher of the two. And ſo again that hope ſignifies the hope in God, reliance on him in expectation of the performance of his promiſe in the moſt improbable ſeaſon, even when all things in reſpect of this world are moſt improſperous and adverſe. And therefore that hope being the foundation of all a Chriſtians rejoycing, eſpecially of that which is in time of affliction (and accordingly the phraſe uſed Rom. 12. 12. rejoyce in hope) this will clearly be the meaning of this phraſe; The rejoycing in all that befalls us here, founded in a ſure hope of receiving abundantly from God both here and in another world. And this is here joyned with παῤῥησίαν free confeſſion of Chriſt in time of perſecution. Thus Rom. 5. 2. καυχώμεθα we glory, or rejoyce, in hope of the glory of God; which is there attended with οὐ μόνον δὲ, and not only ſo, but we glory in afflictions, v. 3. which the Apoſtle really doth, 2 Cor. 11. 23. boaſting diſtinctly of his toyles and ſtripes and impriſonments, and 2 Cor. 12. 9. moſt gladly will I glory in my weakneſſes, that is, the afflictions that have befallen me. Contrary to which is ſorrowing as they that have no hope, 1 Theſſ. 4. and forſaking or falling off through perſecution.

Παῤῥησία

c. Κατάπαυσις μου

V. 11. My reſt] What is meant by Καλάπαυσίς μου, Gods reſt, in this place is evident, both as it reſpects Moſes's time, and Davids: One reſt there was expected in Moſes's time, the coming into Canaan, another in Davids, the bringing the Arke (to which the publick ſervice of God was conſequent) to Jeruſalem. So ſaith R. Solomon on Pſ. 95. the land of Iſrael, and alſo Ieruſalem, which is called a Reſt, as 'tis ſaid, This is my Reſt for ever, here will I dwell. According to which there muſt be in that Pſalm a double reſt literally underſtood: Firſt, that peaceable, proſperous poſſeſſion of the promiſed land of Canaan, which after all their expectation and indurance they ſhould at laſt enjoy, (all that obeyed God) whereas Gods oath is gone out againſt the diſobedient murmurers, (that revolted from God, and in their hearts returned to Ægypt again) that they ſhould never enter into that reſt. Secondly, the enjoyment of the privileges of Gods preſence in the Arke, and afterwards in the Temple, Gods publick and ſolemn worſhip. That the phraſe doth certainly belong to both of theſe may appear by the original of it, which we have Deut. 12. 9. Ye are not as yet come into the reſt, and to the inheritance which the Lord your God giveth you: where the reſt is the quiet poſſeſſion of that inheritance ſo long promiſed them by God, (as Ruth 3. 1. ſeeking her reſt is getting her a quiet, proſperous condition, and belongs there to getting her an husband which was childleſſe, that it may be well with thee, as there it followeth) and it is more fully explained v. 10, 11. When ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the Lord your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you reſt from all your enemies round about, ſo that you dwell in ſafety; Then there ſhall be a place which the Lord your God ſhall chuſe to cauſe his name to dwell there, thither ſhall ye bring your burnt offerings, &c. Where 1. the reaſon is manifeſt why it is called Gods reſt here, becauſe God giveth it them, it is an eminent act of his power and mercy that they ever come to it; 2^ly, it is clear that the reſt conſiſts in the expulſion of their enemies, their quiet and ſafety, an immediate conſequent of which is their peaceable publick aſſembling to the ſervice of God at Jeruſalem. Now as 'tis the judgment of the learned Jews, David Kimchi, &c. that the ſtate under the Meſſias is foretypified by that reſt of Gods, העולם חבוה שכולו שבת the age to come which ſhall be all Sabbath, ſaith Solomon Jarchi on Pſ. 92. ſo here it appears by this authors application of it. And accordingly we may diſcern what is the meaning of Gods reſt, which c. 4. 1. is ſaid to be promiſed the Chriſtians, even that which is moſt literally expreſs'd by that deſcription of that reſt in Deuteronomy, viz. a quiet and ſafety from the perſecutors, proſperous, peaceable daies for the publick worſhip and ſervice of God, which ſhould now ſhortly befall the Chriſtians by the deſtruction of their perſecutors, the unbelieving Jewes, who, as the Canaanites, when they had fill'd up the meaſure of their iniquities, ſhould ſhortly be rooted out. The only thing farther to be obſerved, (and wherein the parallel was to hold moſt remarkably, and which is the ſpecial thing that is preſſed in this place) is the fate of the diſobedient, murmuring Iſraelites, which were ſo impatient of the hardſhips that befell them in their paſſage toward this reſt, that they frequently and fouly fell off from God, and returned to the ſins and idolatries and villanies of heathen Ægypt, from whence they were reſcued by God; all theſe were excluded from this reſt of Gods giving, their carcaſſes fell in the wilderneſſe, and of that whole generation only Caleb and Joſhua, which were not of the number of theſe provokers, attained to that reſt, were allowed entrance into Canaan. And juſt ſo the Gnoſtick Chriſtians, thoſe that in time of perſecution forſook Chriſt, and returned to the heatheniſh, horrid villanies from which Chriſtianity was deſigned to reſcue them, were never to enter into this reſt of Gods, were certainly to be deſtroyed with the Jewes, with whom they ſtruck in and complied, and deſiring to ſave their lives, ſhould loſe them, uſing their own wayes to attain their reſt or quiet, ſhould miſcarry, and never have part in Gods reſt: whereas all that have believed, c. 4. 3. that is, that have or ſhall adhere and cleave faſt to Chriſt in the preſent perſecutions, and never murmure, nor provoke, do certainly enter into this reſt; (as many as ſurvive theſe perſecutions,) happy, Halcyonian daies of a peaceable, proſperous profeſſion of Chriſtianity were very ſhortly to attend them. And this is a ſufficient means of explaining and underſtanding that whole 4^th Chapter of the καλάπαυσις and Σαββατισμὸς, the Reſt and the Sabbatiſme (as that is diſtinctly ſevered from the ſeventh daies Sabbath ver. 4.) which ἀπολείπεται remaineth (and is now ſhortly to be had) to the people of God, the faithfull, ſincere, conſtant Chriſtians, the true Iſraelites, v. 9. and ſo v. 10, 11. where alſo the parallel is obſerved betwixt this reſt of Gods giving, and that Sabbatick reſt, which God is ſaid to have reſted on the ſeventh day. For as that was a ceſſation from all the works of the ſix daies creation, v. 10. ſo is this reſt that is now to befall the Chriſtians a remarkable, diſcernible ceſſation from all the toyles and labours that their perſecutions under the Jewiſh unbelievers had brought upon them, and is accordingly ſtyled ἄνεσις θλιβομένοις reſt, or releaſe, to the perſecuted, 2 Theſſ. 1. 7. and ἡμέραι ἀναψύξεως, daies of refreſhment, or breathing, from theſe toyles. See Act. 3. Note a. According as it fell out in Veſpaſian's time, immediately after the deſtruction of the Jewes. See Note on Rev. 1. d. And thus when death is mention'd as the releaſe of the Confeſſors from their ſufferings, Rev. 14. 13. it is expreſs'd by ἀναπαύσονται

Σαββατισμὸς

Ἀπολείπεται

ἐκ τῶν κόπων αὐτῶν, their reſting from their toyles, or labours. See Rev. 14. e. And it is farther obſervable to this purpoſe, that the inſtitution of the Sabbath among the Jews, though it be in Exodus 20. tranſcribed as a copie of Gods ſeventh daies reſt, yet Deut. 5. where that commandment is again repeated, 'tis ſet parallel to, and commemorative of, the deliverance out of Ægypt, Remember thou waſt a ſervant in the land of Ægypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence with a mighty hand and ſtretched-out arm, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the ſabbath day, v. 15. By which it appears how fitly, and with what analogie to Scripture-ſtyle, this deliverance from perſecutions, and daies of peaceable ſerving of God, are here ſtyled a reſt, that had long been promiſed, and now approached the Chriſtians. For as the Jewiſh Sabbath in ſome things reſembled the reſt after the Creation, (in being a ceſſation from works of weight and difficulty with which formerly the perſon was exerciſed, and ſo alſo in reſpect of the time of obſerving it, the ſeventh day) but in other things is the repreſentation and commemoration of the deliverance out of Ægypt, in reſpect of the tasks and ſtripes from which they were freed, and of the plentifull condition to which they were brought; ſo may the word reſt, propheſied of by the Pſalmiſt, both as it concerned the Jewes in Davids time, as ſtill future, both after the Creation, and after the entring into Canaan ſo many years, and as it yet farther reſpected the times of Chriſt, be fitly interpreted reſt from perſecutions, and have one eminent completion in this, the Chriſtians peaceable enjoying of Chriſtian aſſemblies, which was now through the conduct of God approaching them.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IV.

1. Upon thoſe words of God c. 3. 15. (an ominous admonition, if it be not heeded) we have great reaſon to fear, leſt that promiſe of coming to Gods reſt, (as for thoſe others, to Canaan) being made to us, a promiſe of deliverance from our perſecutors, and peaceable daies of profeſſing the Goſpel attending it, (ſee c. 3. c.) we may yet (ſee note on Mat. 3. f.) by our diſobedience miſſe of attaining to it.

1. LET us therefore fear, leſt a promiſe being left us of entring into his reſt, any of you ſhould ſeem * to come ſhort of it.]

* to miſſe ὑστερηκέναι

2. For as they had the Law of God, the Decalogue, delivered unto them, ſo we have the Goſpel, the new Law of God, preached by Chriſt on that other mountain, Mat. 5. 6, 7. But as then, ſo here, this word of God being only heard, and not digeſted by faith, will not be profitable, or ſtand them in any ſtead that have heard it, it being the practice of the Goſpel-precepts, patience and conſtancy, &c. which will advantage any. Or, we muſt to our hearing Gods word, adde both obedience and Communion with all Orthodox Chriſtians, or elſe the word will benefit us nothing.

2. For unto us was the Goſpel preached, as well as unto them: but the word † preached did not profit them,[a] || not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.]

2. † of hearing, or which was heard ἀκοῆς
|| who are not by faith united to them that have heard

3. For as there is ſuch a thing as a reſt yet future, for us to hope for, ſo it is moſt certain, that this is only for conſtant perſevering believers to enter into; and ſuch muſt we be, if we mean to enter into Gods reſt. By Gods reſt, I mean not that which is ſo oft called by that name, the Sabbath of the ſeventh day after the creating of the world in ſix daies; there are more reſts of God beſide and after that. That mentioned in the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 95. 8. is called Gods reſt, though it were many years after the creation of the world: And ſo there is now a yet future reſt for us, happy, peaceable, Halcyonian daies here in the Church of Chriſt now perſecuted, which ſhall ſhortly come, after the deſtruction of Chriſts enemies, quiet ſeaſons of worſhipping of God (anſwerable to that Canaan that the Iſraelites (all but the murmurers) poſſeſs'd, after the expulſion of Gods enemies, the Canaanites, &c.) which they that hold out, and are not diſcouraged by the preſent preſſures, ſhall attain to, if they live ſo long, and however an eternal reſt in heaven. And it neerly concerns us now to attempt to enter into that, and to be very carefull to doe ſo.

3. For * we which have believed do enter into reſt, as he ſaid, As I have ſworn in my wrath, if they ſhall enter into my reſt: although the works † were finiſhed from the foundation of the world.]

* or let us which have believed, enter into the reſt, for the King's MS. reads εἰσερχώμεθα † had been done γενομένων Stirtus

4. For one place of Scripture ſpeaks of that firſt ſabbath immediately after the creation, thus, And God &c.

4. For he ſpake in a certain place of the ſeventh day on this wiſe, And God did reſt the ſeventh day from all his works:]

5. And another in the Pſalmiſt, long after, mentions this other reſt as ſtill future: which as it cannot referre to that after the creation, ſo neither can it to that of the Iſraelites in Canaan, being written after them both; but in the firſt ſenſe, to Davids time, being a promiſe to them of that age, that if they would then come in and hearken to the voice of God, after all their former rebellions, their land ſhould be truly what it was promiſed to be, a reſt to them, no Midianite, Philiſtine, or Canaanite ſhould diſturbe them, their ark ſhould be no more captive, but reſt with them for ever in Jeruſalem: and in a ſecond myſtical ſenſe, to theſe times of the Goſpel, to which the Jewes acknowledge that Pſalm to belong, and wherein God by Chriſt was preſent among them, (the higheſt completion of what was obumbrated by the Ark or Temple) but ſhould be taken away from them, if they did not timely believe on him.

5. And in this place again, If they ſhall enter into my reſt.]

6. Seeing then there is ſuch a thing as a reſt for ſome to enter into, and the Iſraelites that came out of Ægypt, through their diſobedience, failed of entering into it,

6. Seeing therefore it remaineth that * ſome muſt enter therein, and they to whom it was firſt preached enter not in, becauſe of † unbelief;]

* ſome enter τινὰς εἰσελθεῖν
† diſobedience, ἀπειθείας

7. And again ſeeing the Pſalmiſt, ſo long after the Iſraelites entring into Canaan, ſpeaks of a ſet time of entring into his reſt, and that at that time ſtill future, and yet farther typical of ſomewhat under the Goſpel,

7. Again, he * limiteth a certain day, ſaying in David, To day, after ſo long a time, as it is ſaid, To day if ye will hear his voice harden not your hearts:]

* defines ὁρίζει

8. (For if Joſhua, which is in the Syriack dialect call'd Jeſus, (ſee Act. 7. 45.) had compleated that prophecie by leading them into it whom Moſes had not led, the Pſalmiſt would not then have ſpoken of another future,)

8. For if † Jeſus had given them reſt, then would he not * afterward have ſpoken of another day:]

† Joſhua Ἰησοῦς
* have ſpoken of another day after theſe things περὶ ἄλλης ἡμέρας μετὰ ταῦτα ἐλάλει

9. It from all theſe premiſes clearly follows, that there is now for Chriſtians a reſt ſtill behind, which all that adhere faſt to Chriſt ſhall now have their parts in, and of which that place in the Pſalm is a typical prediction, ſee note c. on c. 3.

9. There remaineth therefore † a reſt to the people of God.]

† a ſabbatizing Σαββατισμὸς

10. And this reſt is a reſt from toyl and labour, a quiet repoſe of the Church, as of the Ark at Jeruſalem, in a free exerciſe of the true religion, ſuch as will be had after the deſtruction of the perſecutors, parallel to that ſabbath wherein God reſted from his labours, and hallowed it a day unto his ſervice.

10. For he that is entred into his reſt, he alſo hath ceaſed from his own works, as God did from his.]

11. Let us then ſet carefully about this deſign of getting our parts in this reſt, and that muſt be, if we fall not from theſe promiſes and hopes through diſobedience, as the Iſraelites fell from their reſt in the promiſed Canaan.

11. Let us labour therefore to enter into that reſt, leſt any man fall off after the ſame example of * unbelief.]

* diſobedience, ἀπειθείας

12. For

† living and active ζῶν καὶ ἐνεργὴς * nerves ἁρμῶν † imagination thoughts ἐνθυμήσεων καὶ ἐννοιῶν

12. For b the word of God is † quick, and powerfull, and ſharper then any two-edged ſword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of ſoul and ſpirit, and of the * joynts and marrow, and is a diſcerner of the † thoughts and intents of the heart.]

12. And let us not think to deceive or eſcape that vengeance that expects all that fall off from Chriſt, how cloſely and cunningly ſoever they b.

doe it: For what Chriſt hath foretold, that he that will ſave his life ſhall loſe it, and that they only that hold out and endure to the end ſhall eſcape, is ſure to prove ſo true, that there is no hope by the moſt artificious dextrous managery to avoid the force of it, the word of God being like God himſelf, vital and operative, piercing into the depths and ſecrets of men, diſtinguiſhing between thoſe which are the hardeſt to be diſcriminated, the true and the hypocritical Chriſtian, and when the actions doe not diſcover, ſearching into the thoughts and moſt cunning contrivances (as the prieſt in diſſecting the ſacrifices, obſerves and ſeparates thoſe things which are moſt ſecret, and cloſeſt joyned together.)

13. Neither is there any creature that is not manifeſt * in his ſight: but all things are naked and c † opened unto the eyes of * him with whom we have to doe.]

13. And no man ſhall be able to diſguiſe himſelf ſo cunningly but he ſhall be diſc covered, diſcloſed, layed open and bare, as the ſacrifice when 'tis firſt flay'd, then cut down the back, and all laid upon and diſcernible before the prieſt.

14. Seeing then that we have a great high prieſt, that is paſſed into the heavens, Jeſus the Sonne of God, let us hold faſt our profeſſion.]

14. On theſe conſiderations therefore, (the reſt which is promiſed upon our conſtancy, and the certain ruine if we doe not perſevere) and withall having ſuch an example before our eyes, Chriſt, that having ſuffered, aſcended through the clouds unto the right hand of the Father in the ſupreme heaven, which is a token to us, that ſufferings are the way to exaltation, let us take heed, and be ſure, that whatever oppoſition or afflictions we meet with in the way, we be not diſcouraged from our courſe of Chriſtianity, and the acknowledging and profeſſing it publickly.

† have compaſſion on συμπαθῆσαι * after our likeneſs, except ſin, χωρὶς ἁμαρτίας † with freeneſſe μετὰ παῤῥησίας * for a ſeaſonable relief, εἰς εὔκαιρον βοήθειαν

15. For we have not an high prieſt which cannot † be touched with a feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted, * like as we are, yet without ſinne.]

15. For Chriſt our high prieſt, that is entred into heaven before us, hath alſo ſuffe red before us all that we can ſuffer, and ſo will be ſure to be ſenſible of our condition, and to aſſiſt, and aid, and relieve us, that if we be not wanting to our ſelves, we ſhall be able to ſtand.

16. Let us therefore come † boldly unto the d throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace * to help in time of need.]

16. And accordingly let us adhere to him, and pray d.

confidently to him, make an open free diſcovery of all our wants and requeſts to God, who though he ſits upon a throne, yet ſits there to hear our requeſts moſt freely, (ſee Joh. 7. a.) to relieve us in a fit ſeaſon, and will do ſo, when we moſt want and leaſt look for it.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. μὴ συγκεκερασμένους

V. 2. Not being mixed] If συγκεκερασμένοις be the right reading, then queſtionleſs that being joyned with λόγος, the Engliſh rendring is proper, being not mix'd with faith—— But it is certain that S. Chryſoſtome read it συγκεκερασμένους in the Accuſative caſe Plural, ſo as to be joyned with ἐκείνους them, who are ſaid not to have been profited. This is clear by that paſſage in him, ἐκ ᾧ τοῦ μὴ συγκεκρᾶσθαι οὐκ ὠφελήθησαν, for by not being mix'd they were not profited, which ſuppoſes the not mixing and not profiting to belong to the ſame perſons. And ſo Theophylact expreſſely reads it, μὴ συγκεκερασμένους, & upon that reading proceeds all his interpretation. If therefore this be the right reading, as not improbably it is, then the rendring is evidently this; But the word that was heard did not profit thoſe who were not by faith joyned, or united, to them which heard. Thus Theophylact interprets, μὴ συγκεκερασμένους, τυτέστι μὴ ἑνωθέντας μηδὲ συμφυήσαντας διὰ τῆς πίστεως τοῖς ἀκούσασιν, ἀλλ' ἀπορραγέντας αὐτῶν, not mix'd, that is, not united or agreeing by faith with them that heard, (that is, ſaith he, that believed, ἅτοι γὰρ τῷ ὄντι ἀκούσαντες ἂν λέγοιντο, for theſe are ſaid to be hearers indeed) but breaking off from them. To this S. Chryſoſtome accords in theſe words, ὃ δὲ λέγει τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν—— This is that which he ſaith, They heard, ſaith he, as we hear, but they received no profit: do not you therefore think that by the hearing the word preach'd ye ſhall be profited, ſeeing they alſo heard, but were profited nothing, becauſe they believed not. What there followes in S. Chryſoſtome of thoſe that were with Caleb and Joſhuah, that ἐπειδὴ μὴ συγκεκράθησαν τοῖς ἀπιστήσασι, διέφυγον τὴν κατ' ἐκείνων ἐξενεχθῆσαν τιμωρίαν, ſeeing they were not joyned with the unbelievers, that is, agreed not with them, they eſcaped the puniſhment which went out againſt them, Theophylact profeſſeth not to underſtand; This, ſaith he, Chryſoſtome ſaith according to his great and deep wiſdome, ἐμοὶ γοῦν τῷ ἀναξίῳ οὐκ ἔδωκε νοῆσαι πῶς αὐτὸ εἶπεν, but he hath not given me, unworthy man, to underſtand how he ſaid it. Where yet I ſuppoſe the riddle not ſo inextricable, viz. that that paſſage of S. Chryſoſtome was rather delivered ex abundanti, over and above what was neceſſary to the interpreting of the words, then deſigned to ſet down who were the συγκεκραμένοι. That he had ſet down clearly before, viz. that the diſobedient or unbelieving Jewes were they: which being ſaid, he farther addes on the other ſide, that Caleb and Joſhuah, and thoſe that were with them, aſſociated not with the unbelievers, &c. which certainly was true alſo; for as the unbelievers joyned not with them, ſo neither they with the unbelievers. Having thus expatiated, he retires again, and obſerves ſomewhat from the Critical notation of the word; He ſaith not (ſaith he) ὃ συνεφώνησαν they conſented not, but ὃ συνεκράθησαν they mix'd not, joyned not with them; in which words he ſpeaks not of Caleb and Joſhuah, as in the laſt period he had done, but of thoſe of whom S. Paul ſpake, that is, of unbelievers: and ſo I doubt not but that which followes, τυτέσιν ἀσασιάσως διέστησαν is corrupt, and ſhould be read, τυτέστι στασιαστικῶς διέστησαν, that is, they ſeditiouſly differed, or departed, from them, who (as he addes) were all of one and the ſame mind; which he obſerves on purpoſe to make the parallel more complete betwixt thoſe provoking Iſraelites then, and the Gnoſtick hereticks, referred to in that Epiſtle, who brake union, divided ſchiſmatically and ſeditiouſly from their Biſhops, as thoſe from their leaders Caleb and Joſhuah. That this was his meaning, appears by his concluſion, ἐπαινεῖ μοι δοκεῖ καὶ στάσιν αἰνίττεσθαι, In this word he ſeems to me to intimate a ſedition; which I ſuppoſe a competent evidence that στασιαστικῶς, was the right reading. The corrupting of which word was it (as appears) which made S. Chryſoſtomes meaning ſo unintelligible to Theophylact, it being indeed by this means wholly miſtaken by him. Meanwhile it is not eaſie to divine what cauſed the Author of the Annotations on that place of S. Chryſoſtome to expreſs his wonder whence that Father took that phraſe ὃ συνεκράθησαν, addingthat it was neither in S. Paul, nor in the place of Numbers, where μὴ συγκεκραμένους the Participle was viſible before him, in tha place, Heb. 4. 2.

b. ὁ λόγος τῦ Θεῦ

1b. Word of God] That ὁ λόγος τῦ Θεῦ, the word of God, ſhould ſignifie Chriſt, the eternal Word, is not impoſſible, it being among the Jewes the known title of the Meſſias (ſee Luk. 1. Note b.) and to that the mention of eyes v. 13. doth ſomewhat incline it. But this phraſe being not elſewhere found in this ſenſe in the New Teſtament, ſave only in Saint John's writings, who is therefore called Θεολόγος, it is more reaſonable here to take it for the word of God, that is, that which had been delivered by Chriſt, and particularly that ſevere ſanction and denunciation of judgment againſt all that hold not faſt to him in time of temptation, thoſe that openly or clancularly deny him by their words or actions. For it muſt be obſerved, that this Epiſtle being accommodated to the preſent condition of the Chriſtians in Judæa, who were now daily ſollicited by the Gnoſticks, and drawn off from their conſtancy and purity, doth labour by all arguments to fortifie them. And in this Chapter doth it by two arguments, one depending on the other. Firſt, from the advantages which they ſhall reap by a conſtant adhering to Chriſt; not only eternal reſt in heaven, an ample reward for all their perſecutions, whatever they are, but even in this life more peaceable dayes of profeſſing and worſhipping Chriſt, when the unbelieving Jewes the perſecutors ſhould be deſtroyed, and that time was now at hand, c. 10. 37. And this hath formerly been explained to be meant by the ἀπάυσις reſt, that is here ſpoken of, a reſt from the labours, that is, wearyſome perſecutions and preſſures that lay upon them. This he reſembles to the Iſraelites Canaan, as in the refreſhment that it yielded the people of God after a ſad travaile in the wilderneſſe, ſo in the propriety that the faithfull ſervants of God had in it, none but they admitted to it; when they that had been brought out of Ægypt, and received the Law from God's mouth at Sinai, and ſo were highly favoured and dignified by him, yet upon their murmuring and falling back toward Ægypt in their hearts, through impatience of hardſhips and the like (herein directly parallel to the Gnoſticks, and thoſe that were ſeduced by them, who either ſecretly or openly forſook Chriſt in time of perſecutions) were cut off and deſtroyed in the wilderneſſe, and not a man of them entred into Canaan. And accordingly the ſecond argument is here taken from the ſeverity of Chriſt's denunciations againſt theſe (every where in the Goſpel) which ſhall thus fall off from him, 'the ſeed on the ſtony ground, and they that are ſcandalized in him, and they that ſeek to ſave their lives, &c. which denunciation, ſaith the author here, ſhall like a divine vengeance (ſharper, ſaith Theophylact, then warre or ſword was to the rebellious Iſraelites,) certainly find out every one that is obnoxious to it, how ſecretly ſoever he have contrived it. This is here rhetorically and figuratively expreſs'd by the reſemblance of a prieſts knife cutting up the ſacrifice, proceeding and entring into the leaſt and the moſt ſecret parts of it, the nerves the leaſt, and the marrow the inmoſt parts. And all this meant but to aſſure them that they which thus fall off ſhall never be concealed. This vengeance foretold will find them out, if they be not carefull to make good their conſtancy, and ſo to be of the number of thoſe to whom the reſt is promiſed: which is the meaning of that exhortation ver. 11. which this is ſet to back, as the reaſon of it, ζῶν γὰρ ὁ λόγ☉ τῦ Θεῦ, for the word of God is living, &c. Upon which it followes, ver. 14. that we ſhould therefore hold faſt our profeſſion, or avowed confeſſion and acknowledgment of Chriſt, conſidering what he hath ſuffered before us, by which we may be ſure that he will aſſiſt and relieve us if we ſtick faſt to him.

c. τραχηλίζειν

V. 13. Opened] The notion of τραχηλίζειν here hath been much doubted of. I conceive it is moſt clearly that which Phavorinus thus expreſſes, Τραχηλίζειν, διχοτομῶν λέγει, ἤγουν τὰ διὰ τῆς ῥάχεως σχίζειν, it ſignifies to cut in two, to divide down the Spina dorſi (ῥάχηλ☉ ſignifying, ſaith he, πᾶν σπονδύλως τῶν κογχυλίων, the ſpondyls of the back-bones;) and ſo it belongs clearly to the cuſtome of the Prieſts, in examining the ſacrifices whether they were intire and without blemiſh or no. This is called δοκιμάζειν and ἐξετάζειν ἱερεῖα, to try and ſearch the ſacrifices, (as in Lucian περὶ θυσ. Οἱ θύοντες στεφανώσαντες τὸ ζῶον, κ) πολύ γε περίτεχον ἐξετάσαντες εἰ ὁλοτελὲς ἔη, &c. περιάγουσι τῷ βωμῷ, The prieſts put a crown on the beaſt's head, and having firſt ſearched it a great while, if it be perfect, they bring it to the altar,) and among the Fathers μωμοσκοπεῖν to look as a Momus or Cenſor, and conſider whether there were in the ſacrifice any מום or blemiſh, whether all were ἄμωμα κ) ἀσινῆ, immaculate and unhurt. They that did this were the μωμοσκόποι, who to that end uſed to flay the body firſt, and then cut it down the neck or back-bone called ῥάχηλ☉, and being ſo cut to lay it upon the Altar, that the Prieſt might ſearch and look into the inwards, and, as Philo ſaith, ὅσα ὀπὶ γαστὶ κ) μηρῶν ἀνακέκρυπται, whatſoever is hid in the belly, &c. To which refers that of Solomon Prov. 20. 27. The ſpirit of the man is the candle of the Lord, ſearching the hidden parts of the belly. As therefore the entrails of the ſacrifice and the moſt ſecret parts are conſpicuous to the Prieſt by the help of the μωμοσκόπος, and by cutting the ſacrifice thus down the ῥάχηλ☉ neck, or back-bone; ſo are all before the word of God, the moſt ſecret things, diſcerned and ſeen into: & that is the meaning of γυμνὰ and τετραχηλισμένα, naked, in reference to flaying, taking off the skin with which the fleſh was clothed and covered, and cut down the back alſo. Thus ſaith Iſidore Peluſiote Ep. l. 1. 94. that the phraſe here uſed is ἐκ μεταφορᾶς τῶν ἱερείων τῶν εἰς θυσίαν προσαγομένων, by a metaphor of conſecrated beaſts brought to ſacrifice; ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐκεῖνα τῶν δορῶν ἀφαιρεθέντα πᾶσιν τῆς φαινομένης ἀποχυμνῦ) περιβολῆς, κ) τῶν κεκρυμμένων ἔνδοθεν ὁπλοθείκνυ) διαθέσεις, κ) ῥαχηλίζε) εἰς ἔρευναν παντὸς ὀστέκ κ) μέλους, πρὸς τὸ πάντα ἐκκαθαρθῆναι, ὅτω, &c. For as they being flay'd are made naked and deveſted of all the viſible covering, and ſhew the placing of thoſe things which were hid within, and are cut down the back-bone, to the end that he may ſearch and look into every bone and part, that all may be cleanſed (or found to be pure) before they are ſacrificed; ſo, &c. Hence is that of Heſychius, Τετραχηλισμένα, πεφανερωμένα, and Phavorinus, ἀνακεκαλυμμένα· the word ſignifies diſcovered, and made manifeſt.

d. Θρόν☉ χάριτ☉

V. 16. Throne of grace] The Jewes mention a double throne of Gods, כסא רחמים the throne of pity or mercy, and כסא הדין the throne of judgment: and they adde that, when ſitting in the throne of judgment he ſees the multitude too great of thoſe that deſerve puniſhment, he then removes to the throne of mercy, or pity, that is, of pardon.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. V.

1. To this purpoſe of Chriſt's being our high prieſt, and, as ſuch, working deliverance for us, c. 4. 15. it will not be amiſſe to inlarge a while, by comparing the chief things obſervable in an Aaronical

1. FOR every high prieſt * taken from among men is † ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and ſacrifices for ſinnes;]

* being taken from men ἐξ ἀνθρώπων λαμβανόμ☉

† conſtituted καθίσταται

priest with the like which are observable in him, every one of them. They are chiefly three. First, the Aaronical high priest is severed and set apart from the common multitude, and appointed to act in stead of them in all things between them and God, and particularly in matter of burnt-offerings, which are by men given to God, and so spent by the Priest wholly in God's service, and of sin-offerings, such as Lev. 4. 3.

*Being able to μετριοπαθεῖν † are in error πλανωμένοις

2. * Who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that † are out of the way, for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity:]

2. Both which he offers for the sins of the people, those which they commit without deliberation, through ignorance, surreption, or suddain passion. And this secondly, he can doe affectionately, and with a fellow-feeling of those infirmities which have betrayed them to such sins, through incogitancy, without malice or presumption, as considering that he himself is subject to the like infirmities as well as others, and so the more inclinable in all reason to mildnesse toward them.

3. And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.]

3. And because the Priest is subject to those infirmities; 'tis therefore appointed that he shall offer also for himself, not only in case of any actual commission of this kind, of which he is at any time guilty, Lev. 4. 3. but also because such sins may passe by him undiscerned, he is therefore on the great day of expiation, when he offers for the sins of the people, to offer for himself also, Lev. 16. 6.

*as Aaron also was καθὼς καὶ Ἀαρών

4. And no man taketh this honour unto himself but he that is called of God, * as was Aaron.]

4. And thirdly, the nature of this office was such, that no man might legally assume it to himself, but only he that was of Aaron's line, and so called to it by God that had assigned it to that line.

5. So also Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest, but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee.

6. As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedek.]

5, 6. Now of these three things propounded of a legal high priest, the first v. 1. the second v. 2, 3. and the third v. 4. every of them are directly appliable to Christ. As first the last of them (see note on Mat. 7. b.) that Christ did not intrude himself upon this office, but God called him to it. And that is the meaning of two places in the Psalmes: first Psal. 2. This day have I begotten thee, O my son, that is, bestowed this special dignity upon thee to be a King and Priest after thy resurrection, that is, upon the ascending of Christ, which was his going into the Holy of holies, whither none but the high priest went; the second, Psal. 110. Thou art such a Priest as Melchisedek was, that is, a King and a Priest together, and that never to cease or to be succeeded by any, till all be delivered up to God the Father, 1 Cor. 15. 24.

†preserve him out of death, σώζειν ἐκ θανάτου ix-- * hearkned to, delivered from his fear

7. Who in the daies of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears, unto him that was able to † save him from death, and was * [a] heard [b] in that he feared;]

7. The second parallel betwixt Christ and the Priest in his offering for himself now follows; For so did Christ also in the time of his lowest estate of infirmities and destitution, (when upon the crosse he cried out, My God, my God, &c.) offer up prayers and very submisse petitions to his Father, that he would, if he died, yet deliver him out of death, preserve his spirit, and restore it again, saying, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit, and cried with a loud voice (Mat. 27. 50. Mar. 15. 37. Luk. 23. 26.) at the delivering those words, and it seems (though it be not mentioned in the Gospel) added tears therewith; and accordingly he was delivered from that which he feared, and according to his ardent prayer he was thus preserved by God, and though he died, was yet restored from death by God, and not suffered to lie under the power of it; a. b.

8. Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered.]

8. And having past through so much of sufferings, even to the highest degree of death it self, in obedience to his Fathers will, and so having found how dear obedience cost him, though he were the Son of God in an eminent manner, he could not but learn from thence, what an hard thing it is to perform constant obedience, when death it self sometimes must be taken in the way to it, and consequently he could not but learn to have compassion on those that sin out of weaknesse v. 2. though in that he were unlike the priest, that he was not subject to sin like him, which taught the priest his compassion to sinners.

† consummate or consecrated * being pronounced by προσαγορευθεὶς ὑπὸ

9. And being † [c] made perfect he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him:

10. * Called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedek.]

9, 10. After this third and second part of the parallel, the first now follows in the last place, that as the priest is taken from among men, and advanced to that office to negotiate between God and man, in the things belonging to God, especially in offering sacrifices, so Christ is parallel to the priest also, though in an higher manner, not taken from the common multitude of men, as the priest was (in that unlike) but yet negotiating in the whole businesse of souls, as the priest did, consecrated by his sufferings, as the priest by the ceremonies of his consecration, and being so consecrated, he offers up himself unto his Father (as the priest did gifts and sacrifices v. 1.) presents himself now at his right hand in heaven by way of intercession for us, for pardon and for grace, and by that means, if we live sincerely, though not perfectly obedient to him, becomes unto us the author of eternal salvation, being after his resurrection from the grave pronounced or declared by God an high priest, such an one as Melchisedek was, a king and a priest together, the priest to pray for blessings on us, as Melchisedek did on Abraham, and the king to doe that with power, actually to bestow those blessings on us. c.

*Concerning which Περὶ οὗ † much matter, and which would not easily be interpreted by speaking, πολὺς ὁ λόγος καὶ δυσερμήνευτος λέγειν * what are the elements or letters of the beginning τίνα τὰ στοιχεῖα τῆς ἀρχῆς, see note on Rom. 3. a. † partakes of ὁ μετέχων * tasts not of ἄπειρος

11. * Of whom we have † many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing.]

11. Of which resemblance also between Christ and Melchisedek I might speak very much, which would not easily be understood if I should speak it: For I cannot boast much of the quickness of your understanding or perception in divine things, or your forwardness to hearken to what is thus said unto you, the persecutions that are fallen on the Church have discouraged you; Theoph.

12. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again * which be the first principles of the oracles of God, and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat.]

12. For some of you that have been long employed in the Church, and in that respect might be fit to be Bishops, (see note a. on ch. 6.) in stead of that have indeed need that the first doctrines and principles of Christianity, necessary for all the youngest and tendrest Christians to know, should be taught you again, and 'tis unfit to give you such mysterious abstruse doctrine, concerning the priesthood of Christ and Melchisedek, who want instruction in the plainest parts of Catechistical doctrine.

13. For every one that † useth milk, * is unskilfull in the word of righteousnesse, for he is a babe.]

13. For he that is gotten no higher then milk, will be hurt, not fed, by having more solid food given him; and so they that are not gotten beyond the lowest, most necessary part of Christian knowledge, must not be burthened with higher doctrines, such as belong to proficients, for they are as children which have neither teeth nor stomach to overcome such harder food.

14. But [d] strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil.]

14. But these higher doctrines, like stronger meats, are for those that are perfect men of full growth, (and answerable to them, those that are of full knowledge in Christianity) that by long custome and conversation in the sacred writings, have so exercised and improved their faculties that they can discern between good and bad, true and false doctrines (which children and raw rude persons cannot doe.) See Origen. cont. Cels. l. 6. p. 262. d.

a. Εἰσακουθεὶς

V. 7. Heard] Εἰσακούειν to hear is uſed by the Greek tranſlators of the Old Teſtament to expreſſe הושיע to preſerve or deliver; ſo Pſal. 55. 18. (to which the Greek σώζειν, which we ordinarily render to ſave, is directly anſwerable, and ſo is here joyned with εἰσακούειν in the ſame ſenſe:) and it is alſo uſed in other places for ענה reſpondit, anſwered, which is in effect the ſame, the anſwering a prayer for deliverance being all one with delivering; ſo Pſal. 22. 22. Thou haſt heard, or anſwered, me from the horns of the Unicorn, that is, delivered me from that great danger.

b. Εὐλαβεια

Ib. In that he feared] Εὐλάβεια noting ordinarily a pious fear, doth in S. Luke (whom ſome think to be the Author of this Epiſtle) denote any other kind of fear alſo: ſo Act. 23. 10. where in the commotion the Commander is ſaid to be εὐλαβηθεὶς, afraid, that Paul would be torn in pieces. So מוראה φόβος fear, from ירא timuit, is rendred εὐλαβοῦς Exod. 3. 6. And being here taken alſo in the ſame ſenſe, it is yet with ſome difference, being here uſed (as many other words which denote the affections) to ſignifie not the affection, but the object, or thing it ſelf which is feared. So 1 Pet. 3. 14. φόβον αὐτῶν μὴ φοβηθῆτε, fear not their fear, that is, the puniſhments which they threaten; and ſo Iſa. 8 16. (from whence the place is taken) the Hebrew, which is rendred φόβον αὐτῶ his fear, is מוראו, which ſignifies the terrible thing, the object of fear, not fear it ſelf, which is יראה, and therefore it followes in that very place, Κύριος ἔσται φόβος, The Lord ſhall be thy fear, that is, ſurely, the object of it, he ſhall be feared by thee. And ſo the Hebrew is in other places rendred by ὁράματα, Deut. 26. 8. terrible ſights, or appearances, and c. 34. 12. θαυμάσια τὰ μεγάλα, the great wonders, or terrible things that were done before them. So פחד fear is ſometimes rendred πόλεμος warre, Job 22. 10. ſometimes ὄλεθρος deſtruction, Prov. 1. 26. ſo Jude 23. οὓς ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε, whom ſave in fear, that is, in time of danger, as it follows, ſnatching out of the fire: ſo πλόησις terror is uſed for the thing that is feared, Prov. 3. 25. πλόησις ἐπελθοῦσα, the fear approaching, explained by ὁρμαὶ ἀσεβῶν ἐπεχόμεναι, the aſſaults, or violences, of the wicked that come upon them. Of theſe and the like words ſee Note on Luk. 1. g. And thus εὐλάβεια will be anſwerable to θάνατος death preceding, as εἰσακουθεὶς heard to σώζειν being ſaved. As for the other interpretation of the ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβείας, taken from the notion of ἀπὸ in that place, where 'tis ſaid they could not ſpeak ἀπὸ χαρᾶς for joy, or in that they were ſo full of joy, by analogie with which ſome would render this, that he was heard in that he was ſo much afraid, there will be little reaſon for that, even according to that analogie; his joy being the cauſe (and that noted by ἀπὸ) of what they did or abſtained from doing, but his fear being not in like manner the cauſe of what another did or of what he ſuffered, but the pleaſure or mercy of him that did hear him, that is, of God, of which this hearing was the effect, and not of his fear.

ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε

Ατὸ

c. Τελειωθεὶς

V. 9. Made perfect] Τελειοῦν in the Agoniſticall notion we have formerly explained, Note on Phil. 3. d. Another notion there is of it not far diſtant from thence, uſuall among the Greek tranſlators of the Old Teſtament, to ſignifie the conſecration of a Prieſt, who was to perform and paſſe through ſome ceremonies, and thoſe being done, and he actually conſecrated, he was ſaid τελειοῦσθαι to be conſummate. The Hebrew word to which this is anſwerable is מלא, from מלא implevit, to which τελείωσις is not unfitly accommodated, becauſe τελειοῦσθαι and πληροῦσθαι, to be perfected and filled, are ſo neer Synonyma. The applying of this word to the conſecration of a Prieſt was perhaps from that cuſtome of filling the hands of him that was conſecrated with fleſh and bread Exod. 29. 24. Hence the ram that was offered at the conſecration of the prieſt is called איל המלאים of impletions, and the fleſh again, the fleſh of impletions, or fillings, but in Greek θυσία τῆς τελειώσεως, the ſacrifice of conſecration, in the Septuagint, Exod. 29. 34. That it is taken here in that notion, may appear by the προσαγορευθεὶς ὑπὸ Θεοῦ ἀρχιερεύς, that follows, as an explication of it, v. 10. pronounced, or proclaimed, or declared, high prieſt, which belongs to Chriſt after his Reſurrection, and not before, that being the time wherein all power was given unto him, viz. that power of bleſſing wherein the Melchiſedek-Prieſthood conſiſts. As for the ſacrifice on the Croſſe, that was the ceremony of his conſecration, anſwerable to that which was preſcribed Exod. 29. 11. after which he was aſſumed ſolemnly to this office of Prieſthood, according to that of Menander in Artemidorus Oneirocrit. l. 4. who dream'd in Greece that he was crucified ἔμπροσθεν ἱερᾶς Διὸς πόλεως, before the temple of Dioſpolis, or the city of Jupiter, upon which, ſaith he, ἱερεὺς ἀποδεχθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ, λαμπρότερος ἐγένετο καὶ ἐυπορώτερος, he was appointed, or conſtituted, prieſt of that God, and ſo became more ſplendid and wealthy then he was.

V. 14. Strong meat] What στερεὰ τροφὴ, ſolid food, literally ſignifies, hath no doubt or difficulty in it; 'tis that which is agreeable to healthy men's ſtomachs, and tends moſt to the nouriſhing of ſuch, but is too hard and heavy for children or weak ſilly perſons, and doth rather deſtroy then advantage ſuch. What 'tis here figuratively applyed to is clear alſo, viz. the explication of figures or types in the Old Teſtament, ſo as to diſcover Evangelicall truths in them. As for example, the comparing of the Prieſts under the Old Teſtament, whether Aaron or Melchiſedek, with that which the Goſpel teaches us of Chriſt, and ſhewing what thoſe typically or myſtically, or in a ſpiritual ſenſe, ſignifie. That theſe are here meant by ſolid food, appears by the diſcourſe which this Author had now in hand, though he tell them that they are ſcarce fit to receive it. And on that occaſion, by way of Parentheſis, that which is here ſaid, and at the beginning of the next Chapter, comes in, after which he returns to this kind of diſcourſe again, at the end of c. 6. and beginning of c. 7. This Melchiſedek, &c. The only difficulty here to be explain'd is, why or how the Author here fals off into this long digreſſion, interſerting this ſtrange parentheſis in the midſt of his diſcourſe about Chriſt's Melchiſedekian Prieſthood, on which he was entred here in this c. 5. v. 10. and returns not perfectly to it again till the beginning of c. 7. To this the ſolution is, that on occaſion of this myſtical explication of ſome paſſages in the Old Teſtament, he began to think of the Gnoſtick leaven among them, which conſiſted much in giving figurative myſtical interpretations of the Old Teſtament, which being called γνῶσις knowledge, they aſſumed that title of Gnoſticks or knowing men to themſelves, upon this ground of their dealing ſo much in theſe interpretations, and gathering and confirming all the branches of their hereſie from places of Scripture perverted by that means. Upon this occaſion he therefore thinks fit to tell them firſt, that as the interpreting Scripture after this manner is a difficult task, and if it be undertaken by unskilfull raw teachers, it may doe a great deal of hurt; ſo if the auditors be ignorant, and not well and habitually ſetled in the truth of Chriſtianity, and ſomewhat converſant in the Scriptures, ſo as to be able to judge between true and falſe, Chriſtian and hereticall doctrine, this way may do them a great deal of hurt, may ſeduce, and corrupt, and deſtroy them, as ſtrong meat doth weak ſtomachs. Secondly, that this is the caſe of many of theſe Hebrews, even thoſe that have have been Christians long enough to be better proficients, and judges of true and false doctrine, meaning no doubt those that had received some of these Gnostick heretical infusions, and either were already fallen off into their abominable practices, or else were very much in danger of doing thus. And of these he resolves that (though he doth not now mean to do it, chap. 6. 1. but may perhaps at some other opportunity, v. 3. yet) it were most proper to begin with them, as with new converts, or children, not yet sufficiently catechised in the principles, and to instruct them in the nature of Faith and Repentance from wicked abominable works, of Baptisme and the vow of it (to forsake all carnall sins, and to stick close to Christ in despite of all temptations) of imposition of hands in the absolution of those that were laps'd (as many either were already, or were likely to be) and in like manner of the resurrection of the dead and everlasting judgment (which these Hereticks began to doubt of; see 2 Tim. 2. 18. and 1 Cor. 15. 12.) upon which he farther thinks fit to warn them of the danger of such apostasie from the Christian faith, c. 6. 4. And that enlargeth the Parenthesis. And that having resolved them thus unfit to have this solid food allowed them, he yet proceeds, ch. 7. to give it them, entring there into this mystical divinity concerning Melchisedek's Priesthood, the reason is clear; first, because this touch here given might be sufficient to avert the danger, and secondly, because of the generality of them he was perswaded better things, c. 6. 9. though of some he had reason to passe this severer censure.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase.

* the discourse of the beginning of Christ ὁ τῆς ἀρχῆς τοῦ Χριστοῦ λόγος † be carried on φερώμεθα

1. THerefore leaving * the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us † go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith towards God,]

1. And that we may discourse at large of this high point of Christs Melchisedek-Priesthood, c. 5. 10. it is necessary (though some mens stupid ignorance and impenitent lives, or relapses to their former unchristian sins after their receiving of Christianity, would tempt one to return and plant again the first principles among them, (see c. 5. note d.) to passe over those rudiments of Christian Religion, in opposition to perfection here, and the word of righteousnesse, c. 5. 13. or those first things that we read of in the Gospel (see Note on Rom. 3. a.)

2. Of the doctrine of Baptismes, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.]

2. And these are referr'd to six heads, as so many stones in the foundation; first, Repentance or change of mind, a resolute forsaking of all sinfull works; secondly, Faith on Christ, or embracing the Gospel; thirdly, the Doctrine of Baptisme now among Christians, as before among the Jewes the ceremony to receive Proselytes into the Church; fourthly, Imposition of hands for those that were fallen after Baptisme, after the example of Christ, who laid his hands on the sick when he healed them, to which absolution is answerable, (the cure of the sick being the loosing from that band, Luke 13. 16. See Note on 1 Tim. 5. f.) fifthly, Resurrection from the dead; and sixthly, Eternal judgment.

3. And this we will doe, if God permit.]

3. Of which, if God see fit, I may have another season to instruct others Catechistically that stand in need of it, (but at this time I shall not doe it, but ascend to higher parts of Christian knowledge, the understanding of the figures and types of the Old Testament applicable to Christ under the Gospel) the danger being so great to them that doe not understand them aright, and order themselves accordingly.

4. For it is impossible for those who were once inlightned, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the holy Ghost,

4, 5, 6. For as for those that have been received into the Church by Baptisme, and so by oath obliged themselves to continue in the true faith and Christian practice to their lives end, and having done so have for some time enjoyed the privileges of Christians, pardon of sin, and peace of conscience, a consequent of the mercy sealed in Baptisme, and yet farther have had some of those extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghost poured out upon them (see Note on Acts 6. c.) and by their continuance in the Church for some space, have had experience of the promises of Christ, and the wonderful works of mercy wrought for us by him under the Gospel, Eph. 1. 19. if those, I say, shall through the Gnostick infusions apostatize from the faith, after all these engagements to continue in it, they must never be received to the peace of the Church again, and those consequent advantages and privileges from which they are fallen, being guilty of the same sin that the Jewes were in denying and crucifying of Christ, and making an Impostor of him: (for thus did all they that fell off to the Gnostick heresie, in which Judaism and denying of Christ was a special ingredient.)

8. But that which beareth thorns & briars is * rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burnt.]

7, 8. For as the ground that, being sowed and watered from heaven, fructifies proportionably for the benefit and advantage of them to whom it is designed to be useful, is commended by God as good ground, on which the rain from heaven is bestowed to some purpose, and as far as it is capable, rewarded by him with more rain, more fructifying showers and beams, that it may bring forth more fruit (like the good tree and the good servant in the parable;) but contrariwise that ground or field which, after the like sowing and irrigation, brings forth only thorns instead of fruit, is given over, rejected by God and man, and may justly expect to be cursed as the fruitless Fig-tree, and is finally fit for nothing but to be burnt and destroyed (like that of Sodome) never to bear fruit again: So he that hath been baptized, and made partaker of the holy Ghost, and hath extraordinary gifts of the Spirit bestowed upon him, on purpose for the benefit of others, if he renounce and apostatize from Christ, he is never to be restored to his dignity again, but is to be look'd on as one that, in stead of edifying, hath endevoured and done his worst to ruine the Church, and so is to be cast out of it irreversibly, the curse of a fruitlesse Tree or Field to fall upon him. And so generally the Gnostick Apostatizers, especially those that from any extraordinary gifts have fall'n into this foul noisome heresie, are to look for an heavy curse, for fierce judgments approaching them, and in the conclusion for utter destruction.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

2. Βαπτισμῶν

V. 6. Fall away] What παραπεσόντας, falling away, here notes, may beſt be collected from the Context: and that firſt from the Antecedents, the illumination, and taſting the heavenly gift, and partaking of the Holy Ghoſt, and taſting the good word of God, and the powers of the future age; and ſecondly by the Conſequents, crucifying again, and putting to an open ſhame the Son of God. The former ſhews from whence it is that they are ſaid to fall, and the latter how deep the fall is that is here ſpoken of. The former conſiſts of ϕωτισθέντας ſeveral degrees; firſt, ϕωτισθέντας, thoſe that have been inlightened. That certainly ſignifies Baptiſm, which among the Antients was generally call'd ϕωτισμὸς, illumination. And this contained under it not only the acknowledgment of the truth, c. 10. 26. but farther alſo the vow of Baptiſme, that of forſaking all wicked wayes, and adhering conſtantly to Chriſt to their lives end. Now all that were thus baptized, and thereby entred into the Church, were received to abſolution of all their ſins paſt, admitted to be members of the Church, and to enjoy the privileges of Chriſtians, the mercies afforded men there, called the gift of God, Joh. 4. 10. And they that have enjoyed the benefit and comfort of this for ſome time, may here fitly be expreſſed by γευσάμενοι τ δωρεᾶς τ ἐπουρανίου, that have taſted the heavenly gift: and that phraſe being annex'd to the ϕωτισθέντας, illuminate, with the Conjunction τε, and, may fitly be reſolved to belong to the ſame matter, as a fuller expreſſion of the ϕωτισθέντας enlightned, thoſe that by being baptized have been admitted to theſe privileges of Chriſtians, and have taſted, enjoyed them for ſome time. But then, as beſide theſe of Baptiſme and pardon of ſin, there were other χαρίσματα, extraordinary powers and gifts in the Church; ſo here, beſide the mention of being inlightned, and taſting the heavenly gift, are added theſe other phraſes, that ſeem to be ſet on purpoſe to denote thoſe higher endowments: firſt, Μέτοχοι γενηθέντες πνεύματος ἁγίου, made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, thoſe which have the Holy Ghoſt, which deſcended on the Apoſtles, Act. 2. communicated to them, for ſo had many believers at that time in the Church of Judea, (ſee Note on Act. 2. d. and on Act. 6. c.) and ſecondly, καλὸν γευσάμενοι θεοῦ ῥῆμα, δυνάμεις τε μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, having taſted the good word of God, and the powers of the future age; where, firſt, μέλλων αἰὼν, the future age, is the very phraſe uſed uſed in the Septuagint, Iſa. 9. 6. for the ſtate of Chriſtianity, where Chriſt is called πατὴρ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος the father of the future age, there being in the Jewes account two Ages, the one before, the other after the coming of the Meſſias, and the ſecond in reſpect of the former called μέλλων future, (and ſo οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα, the future world, ch. 2. 5. that after the coming of the Meſſias,) and אחרים ימים the after, or later, daies, ἐσχάται ἡμέραι, often mentioned in the New Teſtament; ſecondly, δυνάμεις powers, is the ordinary word to denote miracles, and ſo δυνάμεις μέλλοντος αἰῶνος will be either thoſe miraculous powers, extraordinary gifts, which were beſtowed on believers by the coming of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, for the confirming themſelves, and converting of others, (and ſo were generally the conſequents and effects as of the Holy Ghoſt deſcending on the Apoſtles, ſo of their impoſing hands on others, and their receiving the Holy Ghoſt; for of ſuch we oft read, that they ſpake with tongues, &c. which were theſe δυνάμεις powers, miraculous gifts here ſpoken of,) or elſe more ſimply, and ſo as to agree with the good word of God, (whereby the Evangelical promiſes are denoted) the miraculous tranſcendent mercies enjoyed under the Goſpel. And then that will be the importance of theſe ſeveral ſorts of phraſes here put together, thoſe that are not only baptiſed Chriſtians, but furniſhed with extraordinary gifts and graces, and ſuch as have had experience of the wonderfull mercies and performances of Chriſt to Chriſtians under the Goſpel. And ſuch as were ſo, will be the Subject of this Propoſition. Then for the Conſequents, they expreſſe the degree of the fall here ſpoken of; They that are here ſuppoſed to have fallen from this ſtate, are ſaid ἀνασταυροῦν to crucifie Chriſt a ſecond time, and παραδειγματίζειν, that is, to inflict open puniſhment upon him, (ſee Note on Mat. 1. h.) That muſt needs include renouncing and denying of Chriſt, the looking on him as ſuch as the Jewes pretended him to be when they crucified him, that is, as an impoſtor; and accordingly the Hebrew נפל, anſwerable to παραπίπτειν, falling away, ſignifies with them Apoſtaſie, and ſo מעל, which is oft rendred παραπίπτειν to fall away, doth denote alſo, 2 Chron. 20. 19. and elſewhere, and ſo the Gnoſtick hereticks (which are in the Apoſtles eye) are ſuppoſed by S. John to deny Christ, and thereupon are called Ἀντίχριστοι Antichriſts. And both theſe put together ſeem to make up the full importance of this place, That they that being baptized illuminate Chriſtians, endowed with extraordinary gifts, and having continued ſo for ſome time (and ſo for their time ought to be Doctors, c. 5. 12.) fall off after all this not only to ſome waſting ſin, but to denying of Chriſt, renouncing of him, apoſtatizing from him, could not poſſibly be again renewed to repentance; and what that ſignifies will be ſeen Note b.

δυνάμεις μέλλοντος αἰῶνος

Καλὸν Θεοῦ ῥῆμα

Ἀνασταυροῦν Παραδειγματίζειν

b. Ib. Renew them again unto repentance] What ἀνακαινίζειν ſignifies, may, I ſuppoſe, be beſt concluded by the notion of ἐγκαινίζειν to dedicate, from whence we have ἐγκαίνια the feaſt of the dedication of the Altar, in the book of the Maccabees, mentioned in the Goſpel. Agreeably when men, which by their creation after God's image were dedicated to his ſervice, had fallen away from him into idolatry, or ſin, the receiving them to Baptiſme, upon vow of new life, was the ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν, dedicating them anew to repentance, or new life. And accordingly to prepare them for Baptiſme, they uſed to confeſſe their ſins, and the Catechiſt to lay hands on them, and pray for abſolution; as it is ſaid of Conſtantine, Ἐξομολογοῦμαι τῶν διὰ χειροθεσίας ἐυχῶν ἠξίωτο, He confeſs'd, and obtained the prayers by impoſition of hands, Euſeb. de vit. Conſt. l. 4. Conſequently πάλιν ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν again to renew to repentance, is to uſe ſome new courſe of dicating and conſecrating them anew, after ſome foul fall or waſting ſin after Baptiſme, and that was wont to be by Penance and Abſolution. For μετάνοια repentance is ſometimes taken for admiſſion to pardon, or the whole proceeding of the Church with the penitent in order to his abſolution from the Cenſures. So μετάνοιαν αἰτεῖν to ask repentance is to demand or beg admiſſion to that courſe which ſhould prepare them for Abſolution, Conc. Neocaſ. Can. 52. and elſewhere frequently. And ſo in our 16th Article, the grant of repentance is put to explain that which had been before, in King Edward's Articles, the place for penitents, and in the Auguſtan confeſſion, Abſolutionem impertire, to afford abſolution, Art. 12. and this according to Scripture-ſtyle, where to preach repentance is to proclaime admiſſion to pardon upon repentance. And therefore when it is here ſaid that it is ἀδύνατον impoſſible (not to be hoped for, or attained) again to re-dedicate ſuch an one to repentance, the meaning will be, that ſuch as are here ſpoken of, Apoſtate Gnoſticks, that from ſo high a ſtate of Chriſtians, ſo long continued in, ſhall fall off, and joyn with the Jewes in denying of Chriſt, and perſecuting Chriſtians, are never to hope to be received to the peace of the Church again, to have the benefit of their publick prayers, as c. 10. 26. it is ſaid of ſuch, that there remains no more ſacrifice for ſin. For although for other foul acts of ſin, ſacrificing to Idols, &c. the antient Church, eſpecially of the Roman Communion, allowed place for reconciliation and abſolution after a firſt offence, (ſome denying it to a ſecond, amplius nunquam, ſaith Tertullian De pœn.) yet to Apoſtates, and thoſe which turned open, obſtinate enemies, after the acknowledgment of the truth, this was not allowed. (And accordingly we read of Julian the Apoſtate, that in ſtead of praying for him, they prayed againſt him.) And this or the like underſtanding of theſe words ſeems to be the reaſon that the Roman Church, which at firſt received not this Epiſtle, thinking it to oppoſe admiſſion to the peace of the Church, for any act of known and groſſe ſin after Baptiſme, did after receive it into the Canon, obſerving ſome other interpretation (reconcilable with their doctrine) of which the words were capable. And if this be not thought to come home to the force of the word ἀδύνατον impoſſible, becauſe though the Church will not receive ſuch, yet it is ſtill poſſible they may; that is eaſily anſwered by obſerving, that that word is uſed ſometimes to ſignifie that which by law may not be done, though naturally it may. So Joſephus againſt Appion, l. 2. ſpeaking of great offenders, ſaith, Ἀδύνατος ἡ τοιάσδε παράτασις, 'tis impoſſible to obtain remiſſion of the puniſhment, that is, the law permits it not. One other notion there is that this place may be capable of, by applying it yet more peculiarly to the Gnoſticks at that time; that they that ſo foully fell off from Chriſtianity through the Jewiſh perſecutions, ſhould in the iſſue never be capable of repentance, the deſtruction that, as a thief in the night, ſhould come ſo unexpectedly on the Jewes, ſhould alſo involve them, and ſweep them ſuddenly away. And to this belongs that which is added v. 8. that they were neer a curſe, whoſe end was to be burnt: and to that the place Heb. 10. 26. very well accordeth. But the words here have generally been conceived by the antient Church to belong to the Cenſures, and admiſſion to Penance and Abſolution; and to that the phraſe ἀνακαινίζειν εἰς μετάνοιαν, renewing to repentance, hath a propriety, and that other may be the interpretation of v. 8. and preſuppoſe, and fitly be ſuperadded to this, and not be excluſive of it.

c. V. 7. Bleſſing] What εὐλογία bleſſing here ſignifies is ſomewhat uncertain, the word being capable of ſeveral acceptions. That which is moſt commodious to the matter in hand, and contrary to κατάρᾳ curſing, which follows, is, that it ſignifie praiſe or approbation, by by way of reward, the well done good and faithfull ſervant, and the bliſſe attending it. And then, as any that doth his duty is ſaid to be approved, and any that brings in fruit to be commended by God (eſpecially when it is conſidered that the ſimilitude of the earth is here uſed to ſignifie Men, who are capable of ſuch payments by way of reward from God, if the earth be not,) and becauſe the ſimilitude is not here applied, the ἀντιμισθοσις being left out, it was therefore more reaſonable to uſe this phraſe, (which belongs more properly to the man then the earth) more ſignally to note, that what is ſaid of the Earth, is meant of the Man. It is here farther obſervable of this earth, that the thing for which it is rewarded, (and for want of which the reprobate earth is curſed) is the bearing fruit meet for them, δι' ους γεωργεῖται for whom it is plowed, not for God that ſends it the rain; which notes the perſons which are meant under the repreſentation of the earth to be thoſe which had gifts given them by God for the uſe of others, and ſo ſignally denotes thoſe that had received the Holy Ghoſt, and the extraordinary graces thereof, (parallel to the rain from heaven) in order to the inſtructing and profiting of others: to which end they that make uſe of thoſe gifts as they ought, bring a great bleſſing on others, convert many to righteouſneſs, and withall themſelves reap the fruit of it, ſhine like ſtarres, ſee Jam. 5. 20. And ſo this is a farther evidence, that it is not the fall of an ordinary Chriſtian, but the Apoſtaſie of one that had been partaker of extraordinary gifts, which is ſpoken of in the former verſes. And that may be matter of admonition to the moſt perfect, not to be high-minded, but fear, leſt he thus fall after all this.

d. Ἐχόμενα σωτηρίας

V. 9. Accompany ſalvation] That ἐχόμενα ſignifies adjoyning, and that proportionally to the Septuagint, who render אחר next after by ἐχόμενα, hath been ſaid Note on Mar. 1. b. and then ſo it muſt ſignifie here, things that joyn neer upon deliverance, or ſalvation. The onely difficulty will be, what notion belongs to σωτηρία deliverance or ſalvation in this place. And that will moſt probably be the temporal deliverance here, preparative to the eternal reſt hereafter, this being the interpretation of the promiſes, v. 12. which by Faith and endurance are poſſeſſed; whereas they that now for perſecutions fall off, loſe both their preſent and future reward, are deſtroyed here with the Jewes the perſecutors, and are loſt eternally.

e. κατὰ τάξιν

V. 20. After the order] κατὰ τάξιν after the order may here ſignifie no more then ſicut or quemadmodum, even as, or after the manner of: for the words in the Pſalmiſt are על דברתי, which Aben Ezra explains by after the manner, or like as. Not that τάξις ſhould ſignifie here, as it would doe being ſpoken of the Aaronical Prieſt, for there it ſhould ſignifie a natural ſucceſſion in that line from Aaron, obſerved among all the Levitical high Prieſts; but onely a ſimilitude or agreement, in ſo many particulars nominated, with Melchiſedek (ſee Cunæus De Rep. Heb.) particularly that of being a King and a Prieſt together, which was ſo ſolemnly preſignified of Chriſt by the Prophets, and perhaps from thence taken into the heathen Oracles, that about that time among the Romans the dignity of the Pontificate was joyned with the Imperial, firſt by Auguſtus, and afterwards by the reſt of the Emperors. See Sueton. in Auguſt. and in Galba c. 8. and in Claud. c. 22. And thereupon ſaith Tacitus An. l. 3. Nunc Deûm munere ſummum Pontificem ſummum hominem eſſe, Now by the gift of the gods the chief prieſt is the ſupreme man, or Emperour.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. VII.

1, 2. Now that Chriſt was not onely an Aaronical Prieſt, but of a much higher kind, appears by the nature of the Prieſthood of Melchiſedek, after the manner of which Chriſt's Prieſthood was.

1. FOr this Melchiſedek, King of Salem, Prieſt of the moſt high God, who met Abraham returning from the ſlaughter of the Kings, and bleſſed him,

2. To whom alſo Abraham gave a tenth part of all, firſt being by interpretation King of righteouſneſſe, and after that alſo King of Salem, which is King of peace,]

For this Melchiſedek, who in his name [King of righteouſneſſe] and in his title [King of Salem, or Peace] reſembled Chriſt moſt abſolutely, and is called Gen. 14. 18. a Prieſt of the moſt high God, and ſo a King and Prieſt both, and who as ſuch, when Abraham came from his victory over Kedorlaomer and the other Kings, came out and treated him civilly, as a King, and as a Prieſt bleſſed him, and received from him the tenth of all he had there,

3. One, of whoſe father, or mother, or pedegree there is no mention in the ſtory in Geneſis; as being indeed of another race, not of that which is recorded in Scripture, ſee v. 6. (which notes him to be no Prieſt by deſcent, as the Levitical Prieſts were, and accordingly their genealogies and pedegrees both on the fathers and mothers ſide were preſerved exactly) as neither of his birth nor death, the time of his entring on, or leaving his office, and ſo ſtands in the ſtory as a kind of immortal Prieſt without any ſucceſſor mention'd in his Prieſthood (nay, perhaps the laſt Prieſt of the true God that was in Phœnicia, Idolatry preſently coming in) this Melchiſedek, I ſay, is in all this an embleme of Chriſt, (and ſo is ſet down Pſal. 110.) who is ſuch a Prieſt as he, in reſpect of the conjunction of Prieſthood and Regal office, of the no predeceſſors or ſucceſſors in the line, of the title of King of righteouſneſſe and Prince of peace, and of his continuing for ever in that office, that is, as long as there ſhould be need of any (as Melchiſedek did, as long as the worſhip of God continued in Phœnicia.)

3. Without father, without mother, without * deſcent, having neither beginning of dayes nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Prieſt continually.] * pedegree ἀγενεαλόγητος

4. And ye will ſoon diſcern what an eminent perſon this Melchiſedek was, when ye but remember that the Patriarch Abraham, that had undertaken the ſervice of the true God, and was the ſtock from whence all the Aaronical Prieſthood ſprang, did himſelf give him a tithe out of the choiceſt of the ſpoils which he took in the victory over the Kings.

4. Now conſider how great this man was, unto whom the Patriarch Abraham gave the tenth † of the a ſpoils.) † out of the prime of his ſtore

5. Now the Levitical Prieſts had commiſſion by Law to receive tithes of all Jews that came from Abraham, as Levi did, that is, from their own Countrymen.

b.

5. And verily they that are of the ſons of Levi, who receive the office of the Prieſthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the b people according to the Law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham.]

6. But Melchiſedek, who was no kin to Abraham, nor of that people, a ſtranger to him, received tithes from him, (which is an argument of greater dignity then to receive it onely from his own people) and bleſſed him who was ſo ſpecial a favorite of Gods, as to receive promiſes of ſuch a nature, ſo oft repeated to him.

6. But he whoſe deſcent is not counted from them, received tithes of Abraham, and bleſſed him that had the promiſes.]

7. And

7. And without all contradiction, the leſſe is bleſſed of the better.] 7. And this is a clear argument that Melchiſedek was a greater perſon then Abraham.

8. And here men that die receive tithes: but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witneſſed that he liveth.] 8. And in the Levitical Law they that receive tithes, dye, ſucceed, and are ſucceeded, their ſucceſſion of one after the death of another is recorded in the Scripture, and ſo their death punctually ſet down: but in that place of Geneſis, Melchiſedek hath no other mention made of him, but that he liveth, no kind of mention of his death.

9. And as I may ſo ſay, Levi alſo, who receiveth tithes, paid tithes in Abraham.] 9. So again, if you compare it, you ſhall find that Levi alſo, who under the Law hath the privilege of receiving all the tithes, did in Abrahams perſon (as the ſons are included in the parents) pay tithes to Melchiſedek; which ſhews again the dignity of that Prieſthood above the Levitical.

10. For he was yet in the loins of his father when Melchiſedek met him.] 10. For Levi was in the loins of his great grandfather Abraham, and as it were included in him, and ſo may be ſaid in ſome ſenſe to have done what he did, and paid what he paid.

11. If therefore perfection were by the Levitical Prieſthood (for * under it the people received the Law) † what farther need was there that another Prieſt ſhould * riſe after the order of Melchiſedek, and not be † called after the order of Aaron?] 11. This is an argument that the Levitical Prieſthood was not ſo perfectly able to make a perfect expiation of ſin, (although it be true that it was inſtituted by the Law of God for that time;) for if it were, there would then have been no need, as it ſeems there was, that God ſhould inſtitute another ſort of Prieſt, to wit, his own Son, to be ſuch a Prieſt as Melchiſedek was, and not ſuch an one as Aaron.

* about that ἐπ' αὐτῇ † what need now is there τίς ἔτι χρεία * be raised ἀνίστασθαι † named or ſaid λέγεσθαι

12. For the Prieſthood being * changed, there is made alſo of neceſſity a † change of the Law.

13. For he of whom theſe things are ſpoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.] 12, 13. And the truth is, the Prieſthood being a thing about which the Moſaical Law was principally converſant, the changing of the Law about that, and tranſlating it to a Tribe or family, that of Judah and David, of which none by the Law were to be Priests, is an evidence that the Law is aboliſhed, and conſequently that neceſſity of legal obſervances, or continuing in all the words of that Law, and of the Moſaical yoke.

* translated μεταθεμένης † translation μετάθεσις

14. For it is evident that our Lord ſprang out of Judah, of which Tribe Moſes ſpake nothing concerning Prieſthood.] 14. Now this is clear by our Saviours being of the Tribe of Judah, a Tribe from whence the Priests were not to come.

15. And it is yet far more evident: for that after the ſimilitude of Melchiſedek * there ariſeth another Prieſt,] 15. And more clear by the diſtinct words concerning him, of his being ſuch a Prieſt as Melchiſedek was, not as Aaron.

* another priest is raised up ἀνίσταται ἱερεὺς ἕτερος † indiſſoluble ἀκατάλυτος

16. Who is made not after the Law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an † endleſſe life.] 16. For by that it is manifeſt, that Christ, who is now our Prieſt, and inſtalled to it after his reſurrection, was not made a Prieſt by any law that provides for the mortality of Priests, and ſo appoints them in a ſucceſſion, as the Aaronical Prieſthood was, but by that Spirit that powerfully raiſed him from the dead, never to dye again, and ſo to be a Prieſt for ever.

17. For he teſtifieth, Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek.] 17. According as the Pſalmiſt teſtifieth, Thou art a Prieſt for ever, &c.

18. For there is verily a diſannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakneſſe and unprofitableneſſe thereof.] 18. And indeed that this Moſaical Law ſhould be evacuated, there was reaſon, becauſe it was ſo unable and uneffectual to doe that which was deſigned, viz. the expiating of, or cleanſing from ſin.

† superinducing of better ἐπεισαγωγὴ κρείττονος * or let us, for the King's MS. reads ἐγγίζομεν

19. For the Law made nothing perfect, but the † bringing in of a better hope did; by the which * we c draw nigh unto God.] 19. For the Moſaical Law got no man any freedome from ſin, was able to give no man ſtrength to fulfil the will of God, and could not purchaſe pardon for any that had broken it. This therefore was to be done now afterwards by the Goſpel, which gives more ſublime and plain promiſes of pardon of ſin, which the Law could not promiſe, of an eternal and heavenly life, to all true penitent believers: which gracious tenders now made by Chriſt, give us a freedome of acceſſe to God, and confidence to come and expect ſuch mercies from him, to lift up pure hands, &c. 1 Tim. 2. 8. and in all reaſon we are to make that uſe of it, and not to fall off from Chriſt to Moſaical obſervances. c

20. And inaſmuch as not without an oath he was made Prieſt,

21. (For thoſe Priests were made without an oath; but this with an oath, by him that ſaid unto him, The Lord ſware, and will not repent, Thou art a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek)

22. By ſo much was Jeſus made a ſurety of a better * Teſtament.] 20, 21, 22. And 'tis likewiſe added by the Pſalmiſt, that God ſware, and will not repent, interpoſed his oath in this matter, which is an argument of the immutability and weightineſſe of the matter, and of the eternal continuance of this Prieſthood of Chriſt, and ſo of the preeminence of it beyond the Aaronical, which was not eſtabliſhed by God by oath: And ſo as much as a durable, immutable, eternal Prieſthood is more excellent then a tranſitory, mutable, finite Prieſthood (ſuch as the Levitical, being fixt in mortal perſons, one ſucceeding the other, and ſuch as was it ſelf mortal, not to laſt any longer then the coming of Chriſt) ſo much was that Covenant, wherein Chriſt was Sponſor and Surety for God, that it ſhould be made good to us on Gods part (on condition we performed that which was required of us) viz. the Covenant confirmed to us by Chriſt in the Goſpel, a better Covenant then the Covenant of the Law, wherein Moſes undertook for God to us.

* Covenant διαθήκης

23. And they truly were many prieſts, becauſe they were not ſuffered to continue by reaſon of death.] 23. And the Levitical prieſts are a number of men ſucceeding one another, by whom proviſion is made for the mortality of the men, which otherwiſe will bring it to an end.

* a prieſthood that paſſeth not away † perpetuity εἰς τὸ παντελὲς

24. But this man, becauſe he continueth ever, hath * an unchangeable prieſthood.] 24. But Chriſt being now no longer mortal, hath no ſucceſſor in his Prieſthood, his Prieſthood paſſes not from him to any other. d.

25. Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to † the uttermoſt that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.] 25. By all which evidences it appears, to our preſent comfort, that he living for ever can intercede for ever for us, beſtow on us whatever we ſtand in need of, and ſo from time to time relieve and ſuccour againſt all temptations thoſe that are true ſincere Chriſtians, that ſerve Chriſt with all their hearts, that adhere conſtantly to him.

* free from evil, undefileable, ἄκακος ἀμίαντος

26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, * harmleſſe, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher then the heavens;] 26. And this was a ſort of high prieſts that we ſinfull weak creatures had need of, one that being mercifully diſpoſed, is alſo uncapable of ſuffering any hurt, of being defiled or corrupted, or conſequently of dying, v. 25. and to that end is advanced to a pitch above our ſinfull corruptible condition here;

27. Who

27. Who hath no neceſſity oftentimes, as upon the great day of expiation once a year (ſee ch. 10. 11.) to offer ſacrifice firſt for his own, then for the peoples ſins, as the high prieſt did under the Law. All that was neceſſary for him to doe, in proportion to thoſe offerings of the Levitical prieſt, was performed by him at once, by his death upon the croſſe, by which he both offered for himſelf, that is, made expiation as it were, (not to deliver himſelf from ſin, for he was never guilty of any, but from the infirmities aſſumed by him, but eſpecially from death it ſelf, and ſo is now never likely to die, and determine his Melchiſedek-prieſthood) and for others alſo, offered one ſacrifice for the ſins of the whole world, which will ſerve the turn without ever repeating it again.

27. Who needeth not † daily, as thoſe high prieſts, to offer up ſacrifice, firſt for his own ſins, and then for the peoples: for this he did once, when he offered up himſelf.] † upon a day καθ' ἡμέραν

28. For the Levitical Law makes ſuch men prieſts, and none elſe, which are ſubject to mortality; but the oath of God, Pſal. 110. concerning the immutable prieſthood, makes Chriſt the chief prieſt, whoſe life, and ſo whoſe prieſthood, was never to determine, whoſe offering for himſelf, that is, for the putting off his infirm, mortal body, was complete at that once, and needed never to be offered again by him, any more then the ſame offering of his as it was for the ſins of the world. See ch. 10. 11, 12.

28. For the law maketh men high prieſts which have infirmity; but the word of the oath which was ſince the Law, maketh the Son, who is conſecrated for evermore.]

Annotations on Chap. VII.

2. Ἀκροθίνια

V. 4. Spoiles] The true notion of ἀκροθίνια will be beſt diſcerned by conſidering the parts of it, σῖτος, and ἄκρα. σῖτος ſignifies properly heaps, whether of ſand or corn, or any other goods. And Phavorinus obſerves that in the Feminine gender it ſignifies (from that of heaps of ſand) the ſea-ſhore, but in the Maſculine it is taken for χεννάδων καὶ λίθων, an heap of goods or ſtones, and the like: ſo again ſaith he p. 110 σῖτος δέ ἐστιν οἱ σωροὶ τῶν πυρῶν ἢ κριθῶν, the word ſignifies heaps of wheat or barley; where, by the way, the ἢ πᾶσα ἀπαρχὴ that followes in the author, muſt not be taken as an interpretation of σῖτος, but ſubjoined to ἀπαρχὴ τῶν σίτων before, and accordingly the punctation muſt be altered from what it is in the printed copie, thus, Ἀπαρχὴ τῶν σίτων (σῖτος δέ ἐστιν οἱ σωροὶ τῶν πυρῶν ἢ κριθῶν, ἢ πᾶσα ἀπαρχή.) Then for the word ἄκρα, it ſignifies the top, or prime, or choiſe part of any thing (as ἀκρόδρυα are the prime part of the trees, viz. the fruits upon them, οἱ καρποὶ δενδρικοί.) And then theſe two put together in compoſition are the prime, or chief part of whatſoever it is that is meant by σῖτος and what that is particularly in any place, the matter ſpoken of muſt determine. Thus when the notion of σῖτος is that of corn or fruits &c. then ἀκροθίνια are in the Grammarians αἱ ἀπαρχαὶ τῶν καρπῶν, the prime, or choiſe, of the fruits, or firſt-fruits, ſuch as among all men were wont to be conſecrated to the gods (not in order of time the firſt that are gathered, but) for quality the faireſt or beſt of the heap. So when the notion of σῖτος is the heaps of goods taken in warre, τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν πολεμίων, be it gold or other pillage, χρυσία or ζῶα, then the ἀκροθίνια are the prime and choiſe of thoſe, ἀπαρχαὶ λαφύρων the prime part of the prey, which generally was dedicated and preſented to God (ſuch as is mentioned 1 Sam. 15. 21. under the title of the chief things of the ſpoil, ſheep and oxen, &c. to ſacrifice unto the Lord in Gilgal.) And this is by Herodotus, Thucydides, Xenophon and Euripides called ἀκροθίνια. And there is a memorable place in Arrian's Κυνηγ. χῆν, ſaith he, ὅτι ἤρξατο ἀρχεῖς ἀπὸ θεῶν, &c. καὶ ἀπαρχὰς ἀλισκομένων ἀναθεῖναι, ἐμοὶ μὲν οὖν ἡ ἐν τῇ θήρᾳ πολέμου ἀκροθίνια, Men ought in hunting to begin from the gods, and to preſent to them the firſt-fruits of what they have taken, no leſſe then in a victory in war the chief of the ſpoiles. So when σῖν ſignifies the ſea-ſhore, then ἀκροθίνια are the prime of thoſe rarities as ἀναπλέοντες οἱ ἐξ ἐμπορείας, which the merchants, when they return from a voyage, offer up as ἀναθήματα to the gods. From theſe ſo many notations of the word, it comes not only to ſignifie any or each of theſe, but in general, πᾶσα ἀπαρχὴ, all the prime, or choice, of any kind; but this καταχρηστικῶς, ſaith he, by way of abuſe, not in the firſt propriety. Agreeably hereunto, δεκάτη τῶν ἀκροθινίων will here ſignifie a tithe or tenth given to Melchiſedek, as to the Prieſt of God (not of the ἀκροθίνια, a tenth part only of them, for that were δεκάτη ἀκροθινίων, but) tenth of all, Gen. 14. 20. and that tenth paid ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων, out of the choice, or prime, or beſt of the ſtore, for that was wont to be pick'd out and dedicated to God. The whole difficulty then remaining will be, not whether he paid a full tithe of all the ſpoils, for that is already cleared by Geneſis, he gave him tithes of all, and by this chap. v. 2. δεκάτην ἀπὸ πάντων, a tithe from all, to which ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων is added, not to deny what was before ſaid, but to ſpecifie that this tithe of all was choſen out of the beſt and choiceſt; but, I ſay, the onely remaining difficulty will be, whether this tithe then paid by Abraham were of all his own poſſeſſions, and ſo that the notion of ἀπὸ πάντων ver. 2. and paid tithes of all, Gen. 14. 20. or whether it were only of the tithes of the ſpoils taken in that war againſt the four Kings, and ſo that the notion of ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων here. To which I anſwer, firſt, That there is little doubt but that ἐκ τῶν ἀκροθινίων here, and ἀπὸ πάντων ver. 2. referre to the ſame thing exactly, to wit, that which Gen. 14. 20. is called the tithe of all; and if that be the tithe of the ſpoils only, then πάντα muſt be interpreted (with this reſtraint from the matter in hand) not all his own goods, but all that he had there with him, all that he had then acquired, all the ſpoils. Or if ἀκροθίνια ſhould ſignifie his other ſtore, his corn and fruits at home (as, according to the notion of the word, 'tis clear it may doe) then πάντα ſhall ſignifie all his titheable poſſeſſions of any kind. But then ſecondly, It muſt be conſidered that Abraham was not now at his own home, but in his returne from the conqueſt over the Kings, v. 1. and that, if it ſhould be doubted of, farther appears, becauſe Melchiſedek King of Salem came out to meet him, as a ſtranger in his paſſage, which ſignifies that he was then paſſing through Melchiſedek's dominions. And he, that is, Melchiſedek, brought him forth bread and wine, Gen. 14. 18. not offered bread and wine to God, as ſome would have it, but, ſaith Cyril of Alexandria, ἐξενεγκὼν αὐτῷ brought it out to Abraham. And Philo Judæus mentions this act of Melchiſedek as an act of bounty and hoſpitality, oppoſite to what Amalek after did to Iſrael: Amalek, ſaith he, met not Iſrael with bread and water, but Melchiſedek met Abraham with bread and wine, and preſented it to him, and bleſſed him. And Joſephus, Ἐξοχήγησεν ὁ Μελχιζεδὼκης τῷ Ἀβράμῃ στρατῷ ξένια, καὶ πολλὴν ἀφθονίαν τῶν ὀπτηδείων παρέχει, καὶ παρὰ τῶν εὐωχιῶν αὐτῶν τε ἐπαινεῖν ἤρξατο, καὶ τὸν Θεὸν εὐλογεῖν ὑποχείριόν οἱ ποιήσαντα τὸν ἐχθρὸν, He brought forth gifts, and abundance of victuals to Abrahams army, and at the feaſt began to commend Abraham, and bleſs God that had ſubdued his enemies. All agreeing to make this bringing forth bread and wine to Abraham an act of Regal liberality in that King of Salem toward that ſtranger or paſſenger, as his bleſſing him was of his Prieſtly office. And therefore thirdly, it cannot be imagined that Abraham had all his poſſeſſions there with with him at that time, but only the ſpoils which his conqueſt had afforded him, and nothing elſe, unleſſe there were ſome ſmall remainders left of proviſion which he had carried out for his march. Nay fourthly, the manner of paying tithes being not ordinarily thus, that a man ſhould give the tenth of all his poſſeſſions, but only the tenth of his increaſe, much leſſe that he ſhould give a tenth of that all, whenſoever, or as oft ſoever as he meets a Prieſt, but only at the time of harveſt, or whenſoever he receives from Gods hand any kind of increaſe; it will not appear reaſonable that Abraham ſhould at this time pay to Melchiſedek a tithe of all his poſſeſſions, nor indeed of any thing but what he had now reaped by way of harveſt, that is, of the increaſe that Gods proſpering hand had given him in the victory over thoſe Kings. And of that it is that it is here ſaid, he preſented the tithe to Melchiſedek, and having done that, and allowed a portion to them that went with him, Gen. 14. 24. he reſtored all the reſt (but what was eaten in the war, v. 24.) to the King of Sodom, from whom it had formerly been taken: and ſo the truth is, of the whole tithe which Abraham gave Melchiſedek, no part was of his own poſſeſſions, but only of the King of Sodom's goods, which Abraham had taken as lawful reprizal from the four Kings, on whom he avenged the cauſe of his nephew Lot and the King of Sodom, formerly conquered by them. All which notwithſtanding, it ſtill ſtands good in the fifth place, that Abraham did pay full tithe, and that of the choiceſt of this increaſe of his, that is, of the ſpoils taken in that warre; and that will be a ſufficient example and teſtimony of the cuſtome in Abrahams time of paying tithes to the Prieſt of all our increaſe, of what kind ſoever it is. Though that this was paid to a Prieſt of another country, ver. 6. was a peculiar dignity and honour to Melchiſedek, as 'tis there intimated, the due being only to receive tithes of their own country-men, ver. 5.

1. Glaph. tit. de Abr. & Melchi. l. 2. Sacr. legis Alleg. p. 106.

b. ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸν νόμον

V. 5. People according to the law] Τὸν λαὸν here ſignifies the Jewes, that people, called oft τὸ ἔθνος the nation, and ὁ λαὸς the people, as when Caiaphas propheſies that it was expedient that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not, and many the like; and ſo here, with an addition, τὸν λαὸν κατὰ τὸν νόμον, the people that were under the Moſaical Law, that is, punctually the Jewes. And this is more probable then that κατὰ νόμον ſhould belong to ἀποδεκατοῦν, tithe, according to the Law, for that had been ſaid before in ἐντολὴν ἔχουσιν, they have commandment, and needed not again be ſo ſuddainly repeated; and ſecondly, the τουτέστι, that is, that follows, ſeems to ſet τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτῶν, their brethren, as an interpretation of what went immediately before, which cannot be of the κατὰ νόμον ἀποδεκατεῖν, tithe according to Law, but will very readily be ſo of the τὸν λαὸν κατὰ τὸν νόμον, the people according to Law, in this notion of it, that people to which the Law was given, the legal people, the people of the Jewes.

V. 19. Draw nigh] What is the importance of ἐγγίζειν here, will appear by the Hebrew קָרַב, which ſignifies promiſcuouſly to draw nigh, and to offer. From it comes the ordinary word Corban, which the Evangeliſts render a gift, viz. that which is preſented and conſecrated to God in the Temple, and the place where the offerings were laid up was alſo called by that name, and τὰ δῶρα gifts, Luk. 21. 4. So קָרַב ſignifies alſo both to draw nigh, and to offer. From the firſt notion of it the word ἐγγὺς neer ſeems to be derived, the Conſonants or Radicals in both being the ſame, and accordingly 'tis fitly rendred by ἐγγίζω to draw neer. So Exod. 19. 22. Οἱ ἐγγίζοντες ἱερεῖς Κυρίῳ the Prieſts that draw nigh unto the Lord, and Lev. 21. 21. οὐκ ἐγγιεῖ τοῦ προσφέρειν θυσίας, He ſhall not draw nigh to offer ſacrifices. And this and the other ſignification of the Hebrew words are here both contained under the word ἐγγίζω to draw nigh, which is here anſwerable to either of thoſe Hebrew: For that is the meaning of it here, that we by our high Prieſt Chriſt are made a kind of Prieſts our ſelves, enabled to draw nigh to God, and offer up our ſelves to him, to preſent our bodies to him a living ſacrifice, Rom. 12. 1. to lift up pure hands, 1 Tim. 2. 8. that is, to doe as the Prieſts were wont to doe. This the vulgar Latine ſeems to have conſidered, when he renders ἐγγίζειν here offerre, to offer; not, as Lucas Brugenſis conjectures, as if he had read προσφέρειν, but out of the exact critical notation of the word and προσφέρειν among theſe writers and the tranſlators of the Old Teſtament. c. Ἐγγίζειν Κόρβαν τὰ δῶρα

V. 24. Unchangeable] That ἀπαράβατον here ſignifies that which doth not paſſe from father to ſon, from one ſucceſſor to another, is from the nature of the word παραβαίνειν tranſire, to paſſe; and ſo they are the words of Athanaſius concerning Chriſt, ἀπαράβατον καὶ διάδοχον ἔχων τὴν ἀρχιερωσύνην, he hath a pontificate, or Prieſthood, that paſſeth not away, or doth not go by ſucceſſion to others. d. Ἀπαράβατον

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOW of the things which we have ſpoken, this is the ſumme: We have ſuch an high Prieſt, who is ſet on the right hand of the throne of the Majeſty in the Heavens.]

1. Now to recapitulate all that we have ſaid in this matter of Chriſts being our high Prieſt: The high Prieſt which intercedes for us Chriſtians, is one that is entred into Heaven, and there ſits at the right hand of God, that is, reigns there, hath all power given unto him, and ſo is a King and Prieſt together, actually beſtowes upon us all thoſe things for which he intercedes for us, grace and pardon to all obedient ſincere Chriſtians, and is able and ready to help us in time of need,

2. A Miniſter of the Sanctuary, and of the true Tabernacle, which the Lord * hath built pitched, and not man.]

2. One that miniſters and officiates in his Church, that hath the ordering of the true, not typical, figurative Temple and Tabernacle, that which is not built by humane workmen, but by God, (all power being given unto him in Heaven and in Earth, having dominion inſtated on him over his Church to deliver them, and over his enemies to deſtroy them.)

3. For every high Prieſt is ordained to offer gifts and ſacrifices: wherefore it is of neceſſity that this man have ſomewhat alſo to offer.]

3. A Miniſter, I ſay, for ſo every Prieſt is, his buſineſs being peculiarly to ſacrifice, and offer burnt-offerings and ſin-offerings &c. c. 5. 1. and agreeably Chriſt was to have ſome ſacrifice to offer to God as a Prieſt, and that was himſelf, preſenting himſelf in Heaven, the true Sanctuary, after the ſlaying him upon the croſſe, c. 9. 12.

4. For if he were on earth, he † ſhould not be a Prieſt, * ſeeing that there are Prieſts that offer gifts according to the Law.]

4. And for his being a miniſter not on Earth only, but now more eſpecially in Heaven, and there exerciſing his Prieſthood, 'tis clear, becauſe here on Earth there be ſtore of Prieſts which officiate according to the preſcription of the Moſaical Law, viz. thoſe that offer the Levitical ſacrifices, and ſo there is no need that Chriſt ſhould take that office upon him, if it were to be exerciſed only here, becauſe that legally belongs to others.]

* hath built ἔπηξεν

† ſhould not have been οὐκ ἂν ἦν

* thoſe being Prieſts ὄντων ἱερέων

5. And thoſe Prieſts which officiate here on earth, do attend on and perform none but that figurative typical ſervice, which ſignified and repreſented this offering of Chriſt, preſenting himſelf to God in Heaven, and there interceding for us. (So that that which was by God himſelf ſaid to Moſes, when he was to make the Tabernacle, that he ſhould take care to make it according to the pattern ſhewed him in the Mount, may fitly be applied by way of accommodation to this matter; this offering of Chriſts in Heaven being indeed that ſubſtantial Idea, of which all the ſervice of the Tabernacle was but a type or ſhadow, and ſo fitly ſtyled an heavenly pattern.)

5. Who † ſerve unto the example and ſhadow of heavenly things, as Moſes was admoniſhed of God when he was about to make the Tabernacle: For ſee (ſaith he) that thou make all things according to the pattern ſhewed to thee in the Mount.] † wait upon the in age

6. But as for Chriſts office or Miniſtery that he thus exerciſeth, it is above that of the Levitical Prieſts, which conſiſted only in typical obſervances, and as much above them, as the Covenant which Chriſt mediated between God and man was above the Moſaical œconomy. Of this Covenant it is obſervable, firſt, That it is now ſettled as a Law, in which both parties are mutually bound to each other, God to man, and man to God; and ſecondly, That it is a much more excellent, perfect, beneficial Covenant then the former, the duties now required more ſpiritual and ſublime, and the promiſes now propoſed infinitely better promiſes then thoſe which were under the Law, (viz. not only legal impunity, which the ſacrifices under the Law yielded, but pardon and remiſſion, that pardon not only for light faults, ſins of error &c. for which thoſe ſacrifices were deſigned, but even for wilful ſins, if forſaken and repented of, yea and the pouring out the Spirit on all fleſh, giving ſpiritual gifts for the building up of the Church, not only to a few, as to one or two Prophets under the Law, but to many, even to all, Gentiles as well as Jewes, yea to all Chriſtians in ſome meaſure; and laſtly, in ſtead of the promiſes of a temporal Canaan, the plain promiſes of eternal life and bliſſe.)

6. But now hath he obtained a more excellent Miniſtery, by how much alſo he is the Mediator of a better covenant, which was * eſtabliſhed upon better promiſes.] * enacted

7. For if that firſt covenant had been faultleſſe, then ſhould no place have been ſought for the ſecond.

7. For if the Covenant under the Law had been ſo perfect, that it could not have been improved or bettered, there would have been no need of a ſecond Covenant.

8, 9. Which appears by this, becauſe when he ſpeaks in the Prophet Jeremy c. 31. 31. of making a new Covenant, he doth it by way of complaint, or finding fault with the weakneſſe and imperfection of the former, (ſee c. 7. 18.) after this manner, or form of ſpeech, The Covenant which I will now make, is not after the rate of the Covenant which I made with the Iſraelites by Moſes (a Covenant made up of external carnal commandments) when I brought them out of Ægypt; for that was not effectual to them, was not able to attract them to obedience, or perſeverance, but they fell off from me, and conſequently I forſooke them, ſaith the Lord.

8. For finding fault † with them, he ſaith, Behold, the dayes come, (ſaith the Lord) when I will make a new Covenant with the houſe of Iſrael and the houſe of Judah; † he ſaith to them

9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Ægypt, * becauſe they continued not in my Covenant, and [a] I regarded them not, ſaith the Lord.] * for in a.

10. But this is the Covenant which I will make in the latter dayes, or age of the Meſſiah, in time of the Goſpel; I will in ſtead of thoſe external carnal ordinances and obſervations, give them ſpiritual commands for the regulating their affections, precepts moſt perfectly agreeable to all rational minds; and by the exceeding greatneſſe of that grace and mercy, in this and many other particulars, ver. 12. I ſhall incline their affections willingly to receive my Law, as well as convince their underſtandings of their duty, and ſo I will take pleaſure in them, and they ſhall perform obedience unto me, live like a people of God, worthy of ſuch a Leader.

10. For this is the Covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael after thoſe dayes, ſaith the Lord; I will put my Laws into their mind, and write them † in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they ſhall be to me a people.] † on

11. And there ſhall be no need of ſuch pains in teaching men what they are to doe, as under Moſes Law, (which conſiſted of many outward performances which had no ſuch inward eſſential goodneſſe in them, as that a mans own reaſon ſhould prompt him to them, and approve them as beſt and moſt excellent, if they were not taught by the Law-maker, and kept ſtill in their minds by inſtruction in the Law:) but the precepts now propoſed being ſo agreeable to humane reaſon, they ſhall be found written by every man in his own heart (as it were) able of themſelves to approve themſelves to men, ſee Deut. 30. 11.

11. And they ſhall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his * brother, ſaying, Know the Lord: for all ſhall know me from the leaſt to the greateſt.] * or citizen, for the King's Ma. reads man

12. Eſpecially when that part of the Covenant is conſidered, promiſe and aſſurance of pardon for all forſaken ſins, as alſo for frailties and weakneſſes daily continuing upon us: For in all reaſon ſuch a Covenant as this, giving us aſſurance of ſuch gracious uſage, will have great efficacy to move any man to devote himſelf wholly to Gods ſervice, that eaſie and bleſſed yoke.

13. And this form of ſpeech, A new Covenant, is an argument that the former was old, and an evidence, that ſo indeed that legal Covenant or Moſaical Law was: and being now perfectly old and decayed, 'tis not likely to live long, but, with the Jewiſh Church and Common-weal, within few years (within ten after the writing of this Epiſtle) 'tis ſure enough to be deſtroyed.

13. In that he ſaith, A new covenant, he hath made the firſt old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old, is ready to vaniſh away.]

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. V. 9. I regarded them not] The whole place being by this Writer cited out of Jeremy chap. 31. 32. ſome difficulty there will be to accord this part of the citation, ἠμέλησα αὐτῶν, I regarded them not, with that which we now find in the Hebrew there. For the words בעלתי בם, as our Hebrew copies now read, ordinarily ſignifie ἐκυρίευσα αὐτῶν, I ruled over them, which is very farre diſtant both from the deſigned ſenſe of that place, if we will judge by the Context, and from the words, I regarded them not, as they are here recited. The unfitneſſe of that rendring in that place in the Prophet is viſible to any reader that obſerves the words immediately precedent, which my Covenant they brake, to which theſe other cannot connect (but rather the contrary) and I ruled over them, or, I was their Lord. Here our Engliſh have put husband for Lord, and although for and, and yet farther altered it in the Margent, Should I have continued an husband unto them? by way of interrogation; which as it makes the ſenſe directly contrary to what it would be without the interrogation, ſo it is a confeſſion, that that contrary ſenſe is (in the truth) it which alone is agreeable to the place. It is therefore farre more reaſonable to conſider, that the words which are here recited in this Author, and are exactly agreeable to the Context in the Prophet, (which is deſigned to ſet down the Iſraelites breaking of Covenant, and Gods dealing with them by way of

Heb. 8. 9. ἠμέλησα 1569

puniſhment) are the very words by which the Greek Tranſlator had rendred that place in the Prophet, which makes it neceſſary to conclude, that either the Hebrew Copy now is in this particular varied from what it was when they tranſlated it, or that בעל hath ſome other ſignification then that which is ordinarily taken notice of. That all Copies tranſcribed from hand to hand ſhould be ſubject to ſome light changes, is nothing ſtrange; nay, 'tis evident, by comparing 2 Kin. 20. 12. with Eſay 39. 1. that ſuch miſtakes have been committed: for there in a ſtory, which in both thoſe places is exactly the ſame, we now read ברארך Berodach in the former place, and מראדך Merodach in the latter, which muſt needs be imputed to the hand of the Scribe, and not to any other original. So in the ſame ſtory, in the very next verſe, 2 Kin. 20. 13. we read וישמע, And Hezekiah heard, or hearkned, but Iſai. 39. 2, it is וישמח, And Hezekiah was glad of them; where the light change of ח into ע is viſibly the error of the Scribe. And ſo the eighteenth Pſalm, which was certainly delivered by David in one fix'd, certain form, is yet varied in many particulars, 2 Sam. 22. which cannot be imputed to any cauſe but that of the Tranſcribers; and the Maſorites pains, coming long after theſe changes were come in, can give no ſecurity or fence againſt them. And then it is not impoſſible but that thus it hath happened in that place of Jeremy which is here cited. Accordingly the Annotations under the name of Hugo Grotius conceive, that the Septuagint read it בחלתי, not בעלתי, and accordingly rendred it ἠμέλησα, I forſook them, regarded them not, continued not my defence unto them, but permitted them to be often worſted by their enemies: but Mr Meade from Cappellus ſuppoſeth it to have been נעלתי (which is as light an alteration, only ב for נ, as in the other ע for ח) which is alſo ἠμέλησα, ἀφῆκα, ἐβδέλυξα. I neglected them, departed from them, deteſted or abomin'd, and accordingly forſook them. Other examples of this nature we have in the New Teſtament, which may here fitly be taken notice of. Mat. 15. 9. we have theſe words, Καὶ μάτην σέβονταί με διδάσκοντες διδασκαλίας ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων, In vain they worſhip me, teaching doctrines the ordinances of men. This verſe is taken out of Iſa. 29. 13. where yet the Hebrew reading now, ותהי יראתם אתי מצות אנשים מלמדה, hath nothing that can be duly rendred καὶ μάτην and in vain. But by the Septuagint there, (and the Evangeliſt here) it is to be believed that it was otherwiſe read when they ſo rendred it; and if for ותהי in the beginning of the verſe we read ותהו, and onely change the points of the laſt word, without change of any letter, and read מלמדה, docens, teaching, in ſtead of מלמדה taught, it will then be exactly as the Septuagint render, & the Evangeliſt cites it from them: For that תהו ſignifies μάτην in vain appears by the uſe of it in that ſenſe, Iſa. 45. 18, and 19. and c. 49 4. and from thence it is that the Idols are oft in this Prophet called תהו vanity. So Mat. 27. 9, 10. we have theſe words cited out of Jeremy the Prophet, Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰ τριάκοντα ἀργύρια, καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως, καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος. Wherein there are many difficulties. As firſt, how theſe words come to be cited out of Jeremy, which are found in Zachary onely. But that may be ſalved, either by ſaying that this was firſt in Jeremy's prophecie (ſomewhat of his not now extant, but by tradition delivered down to have been originally his) and afterward in Zacharie's, according to a ſaying of the Jewes, that the ſpirit of Jeremy reſted on Zachary; or elſe by affirming that thoſe latter (the 10, 11, 12.) chapters of Zachary were really the prophecies of Jeremy, though, as other mens Pſalmes are annex'd to David's, and Agur's Proverbs to Solomon's, ſo theſe chapters of Jeremy's prophecie (perhaps not coming to light till after the Captivity) are affixed to the former chapters of Zachary. A ſecond difficulty there is, how ἔλαβον and ἔδωκαν, they received and gave, can here connect with συνέταξέ μοι the Lord commanded me. And that may be anſwered alſo by obſerving that ἔλαβον, being anſwerable to ואקחה in the Hebrew, muſt neceſſarily be rendred in the firſt perſon Singular, I received, not in the third Plural, they, and conſequently that the ν in ἔδωκαν is to be look'd on as a miſtake of the Scribe, (conceiving that ἔλαβον had been the third perſon Plural, and ſo according this unto it) whereas both the Syriack in Matthew reads it I gave, and the Hebrew in Iſaiah ואשליך I gave, or ſent. And that this muſt be ſo read, appears by the μοὶ retained in all, as the Lord commanded (not them, but) me. But then there is a third difficulty, which can no way be ſalved, but by making uſe of the obſervation which we are now upon. For in ſtead of thoſe words in Matthew, καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος, according as the Lord appointed me, the Hebrew reads in Zachary בית יהוה the houſe of the Lord, and the Septuagint agrees, with a little change (the addition of εἰς into) εἰς τὸν οἶκον Κυρίου, into the houſe of the Lord, rendring ואשליך I gave, or ſent, (which belongs to laying down the price in the purchace of the field) καὶ ἐβαλον and I caſt, as if it referred to the caſting it down in the Temple. For ſalving of which, it muſt firſt be obſerved that the thing to which this prophecie is applied in Matthew, is the high prieſt's buying the potter's field, v. 7. with that money which Judas returned to them, v. 3. caſting it down in the Temple, v. 5. which accordingly they take up, λαβόντες, v. 6. which is an evidence that the teſtimony applied to that matter muſt be interpreted of thoſe High prieſts, repreſented prophetically in the firſt perſon ſingular, ἔλαβον I received, ואשליך καὶ ἔδωκα, and I gave, or parted with them, אל היוצר εἰς τὸ χωνευτήριον in the Septuagint, and εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ κεραμέως for the potters field. Secondly, the phraſe בית יהוה ſeems to be a miſtake for ſomewhat elſe, and that Mr. Meade hath very probably conjectured to be (by an eaſie change of כ for ב, and ד for י) כרת יהוה according to the word of the Lord, as the phraſe is uſed Heſt. 1. 8, 15. and often in that book, and ſo that will be exactly rendred by the καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος, according as the Lord appointed. And unleſſe ſome ſuch change be imagined, there will be no ſenſe in the Hebrew: firſt, becauſe בית יהוה, without any prepoſition before it, is to be rendred the houſe, not into the houſe, of the Lord; and ſecondly, becauſe the place belonging to the High-prieſt's buying the field, hath nothing to doe with Judas's caſting down the money in the Temple, or houſe of the Lord, which act of his was precedent to the High-prieſt's ἔλαβον, and ἔδωκα taking, and giving that money for that purchaſe. Thus again Act. 15. 17. where we read Ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸν Κύριον, that the reſidue of men may ſeek the Lord, &c. the words are evidently taken out of Amos 9. 12. And yet there the Hebrew words, as now we read them, are ſomewhat diſtant, למען ירשו את־שארית אדום that they may poſſeſſe the remainder of Edom. And therefore both by the Septuagints tranſlation, and the citation in the Acts, learned men have adventured to reſolve, that the Hebrew was then diſtant from what now we find in the Copies, moſt probably thus, למען ידרשו אל שארית אדם that the reſidue of men may ſeek the Lord, and all this by light changes of ו for ד, ת for ל, and אדום Edom for אדם man or men, the Singular number collective being oft put for the Plural. So when Hoſ. 14. 2. we find in the Hebrew copie which we now uſe, פרים שפתינו the calves of our lips, but in the Greek tranſlator, and from thence Heb. 13. 15. καρπὸν χειλέων ὁμολογούντων, the fruit of our lips, 'tis poſſible and eaſy to conjecture that the antienter and true reading was פרי (not פרים) which ſignifies καρπὸς fruit. Theſe examples according in this matter (and many more diſcernible in the Old Teſtament, by comparing the Hebrew, as now we have it, with the Greek) make it not unreaſonable to receive this account which hath here been given of ἰμείλησα, on occaſion of which theſe others have been here mention'd, becauſe omitted in their proper places. But Mr. Pocock hath given me ſome reaſon to depart from theſe conjectures, and adhering to the ordinary reading, to take notice of another notion of the word בעל, where it is in conſtruction with ב. In moſt other places the word is uſed either with an Accuſative caſe after it, or with the prepoſition ל, and then conſtantly it ſignifies dominari, but in this place of Iſaiah, and Jer. 3. 1. it is uſed in a peculiar different manner with ב; and then 'tis Kimchi's obſervation, as his ſonne tells us, that whereſoever בעל is uſed with ב, it is taken in an ill ſenſe; and accordingly he interprets it in Jeremie קצתי בנם, I have lothed you: and ſo Rabbi Tanchumi, It ſignifies, ſaith he, to ſcorne or reject, in the ſame ſenſe as the word בחל is uſed, which is but a light change from ע to ח. And thus in the Arabick, which is but a Dialect of the Hebrew, the word בעל ſignifies not onely dominari, and maritum eſſe, but perturbari, ſeparari, faſtidire, nauſeare, and in that ſenſe is uſed in conjunction with ב, as here it is, and with alla. So Ebn Jannahius, whom David Kimchi commonly followes, and cites by the name of R. Jonah. And ſo this is a fair account of this place. The like alſo hath he given of that other laſt mentioned, Heb. 13. 15. making καρπὸς fruit to be there taken in the notion of κάρπωμα, which the Septuagint uſe for an holocauſt, which being ordinarily of Bullocks, the Hebrew פרים calves may well be rendred by it. Paraphraſe.

a. 1. That firſt covenant indeed had ceremonial lawes, peculiar waies of worſhipping God, and a tabernacle. And firſt for the latter of them, (ſee Mat. 7. note b.) the Tabernacle, (that was a type of the whole world, of earth and heaven, this made by Moſes, but that by God, ch. 8. 2.) this conſiſted of two parts.

1. *Then verily the [a] firſt covenant had alſo ordinances †of divine ſervice, and a worldly ſanctuary.] *the firſt therefore †worſhip λατρείας

2. For as this world conſiſts of two parts, this lower world, and the higheſt heavens, ſo alſo the Tabernacle had two regions in it; the firſt was called the Holies (or the Sanctuary) wherein was the candleſtick (with ſix branches, and one in the midſt, to ſignifie the planets) and the bread, or twelve loaves ſet upon the table (to ſignifie the fruits of the earth, brought forth by that inlivening influence of the heavens, ſaith Philo:)

2. For there was a Tabernacle made, the firſt wherein was the candleſtick, and the table, and the ſhew-bread; which is called the ſanctuary:]

3. And the ſecond was a place of more ſanctity then the former, which was beyond the former, anſwerable to the place where the Oracle was in the former Temple, and is the image of the higheſt heaven,

3. And after the ſecond veile, the Tabernacle which is called the holieſt of all]

b. 4. Having a golden cenſer belonging to it, not alwaies kept in it, but carried in when the prieſt went in, who was not to goe without incenſe, and the Arke covered round about with gold, and in this the pot of Manna, and Aaron's rod, and the tables of the Commandements, in reſpect of which it is called the ark of the covenant,

4. Which had the golden cenſer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the [b] golden pot that had Manna, and Aarons rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant,]

c. d. 5. And over it the images of the Cherubim, by which God is wont to appear, and ſhew himſelf, Exod. 25. 22. and theſe ſhadowing the covering of the Arke from whence God was wont to ſpeak with Moſes, to give him anſwers, and ſhew that he was propitious to the people.

5. And over it the cherubims of [c] glory, ſhadowing the [d] mercy-ſeat:] of which we cannot now ſpeak particularly.

6. And this being thus deſcribed, we may aſcend to the former things mentioned v. 1. the prieſts officiating, and the ſtatutes about that: and that ſervice of the prieſts was of two ſorts, the daily ſervice, and that was in the former outward part of the tabernacle;

6. Now when theſe things were thus ordained, the prieſts went alwaies into the firſt tabernacle, accompliſhing the ſervice of God:]

e. 7. But into the inner part of the tabernacle, or the Holy of holies, none entred but the high prieſt, and he onely one day in the year, on the faſt, or great day of expiation, and then alwaies he carried with him blood of calves & of goats, of calves to offer for himſelf, and of goats to offer for the people, (By which it appears that the offering of Chriſt which is anſwerable to this, is, after his paſſion, performed at his going into heaven, which was ſignified by the Holy of holies:)

7. But into the ſecond went the high prieſt alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himſelf, and for the [e]* errors of the people:] *ignorances

8. By which the Holy Ghoſt typically ſignified, that no man by the power of that firſt covenant could goe to heaven, or that the way to heaven was not there revealed, none being then admitted thither but the high prieſt once a year, who was a type of Chriſt; but now that that Holy of holies is deſtroyed, and therewithall the Judaical Law, there is now admiſſion for all true Chriſtians or worſhippers of God, who now have promiſes and right to heaven, though till after death they are not admitted to their poſſeſſions.

8. The Holy Ghoſt this ſignifying, that the way into the holieſt of all was not yet made manifeſt while as the firſt tabernacle was yet ſtanding]

9. And the parabolical, typical meaning of this will be appliable to thoſe of this time, that ſtill obſerve and contend for the obſervation of the Judaical forms of worſhip, and think it is ſtill in force: For all theſe performances will not be able to give any man confidence to pray to God, to bring any man to heaven, or to obtain for him the pardon of any wilfull or preſumptuous ſin in the ſight of God, to free him from any ſin that hath waſted his conſcience, or give him grace to purge himſelf from ſuch ſin (ſee note on 1 Joh. 3. c.)

9. † Which was a figure for the time then preſent,* in which † were offered both gifts and ſacrifices, * that could not make him that did the ſervice perfect, as pertaining to the conſcience,] †Which parable belongs to the time approaching, Ητις παραβολὴ εἰς τὸν καιρὸν τὸν ἐνεστηκότα * according to which (parable) for the King's MS. reads κατὰ ὃν † are offered προσφέρονται *being not able to perfect the worſhipper μὴ δυνάμεναι τελειῶσαι τὸν λατρεύοντα

10. But onely to purge him from legal uncleanneſſes or pollutions, as having eaten any unclean meat, drinking wine at any unlawful time, (Lev. 10. 9.) or out of any unclean veſſel, omitting any waſhing commanded by the Moſaical Law, and neglecting any of thoſe external carnal ordinances, upon which they were to be puniſhed here, or to be ſeparated from the congregation, (to gain them impunity for ſins of ignorance, &c. v. 7.

10. † Which ſtood onely in meats and drinks and divers waſhings, and carnal ordinances impoſed on them untill the time of reformation.] †Being only impoſed for meats μόνον ἐπὶ βρώμασι for to this end onely theſe ſacrifices were inſtituted, and ſo onely in order to this life, and meant onely to continue till the time of Chriſt, wherein the whole ſervice was to be reformed, and the whole courſe of bringing men to juſtification and ſalvation, a true and ſpiritual purity, to be introduced, and a better covenant to be made with them.

11. But Chriſt being come an high prieſt of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands, that is to ſay, not of this building.

11, 12. But when Chriſt came to enter on the high-prieſthood to obtain for us all thoſe bleſſings (of purging the conſcience, which could not be had by the Law, of

12. Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entred in * once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.]

* for once, or, once for all, ἐφάπαξ beſtowing on us our great reward, which is not to be had in this life, and ſo) which were future in reſpect of the Law and of this life, and to that purpoſe made uſe of a tabernacle that was of a more honourable nature then that under the Law, to wit, his own body, not made with hands as that was, but formed by the Holy Ghoſt in the Virgins womb, after an extraordinary manner (and ſo differing not onely from that tabernacle as fleſh from wood, but alſo from other humane bodies, as that which was conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, from that which was begotten after the ordinary manner) when, I ſay, Chriſt entred on his high prieſthood, he aſcended into heaven, in ſtead of the Holy of holies, and did this once for all, in ſtead of the once a year of the high prieſt, and this with his own blood, or having laid down his own life, in ſtead of that blood of goats for the people, and of bullocks for himſelf, which the prieſt took with him to the Holy of holies, having thus found out a way of purchaſing eternal redemption for us from the guilt and power of ſin, by his death and reſurrection.

13. For if the bloud of bulls and goats, and the aſhes of an heifer ſprinkling the unclean, [f] ſanctifieth to the purifying of the fleſh:]

13. For if the legal pollutions, the eating or touching [f] of unclean things, &c. be expiated by bloud and aſhes, ſo far as to keep them that are polluted ſo from being turned out of the Congregation, and from any legal puniſhment:

14. How much more ſhall the bloud of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſcience from dead works to ſerve the living God?]

14. How much more ſhall Chriſts death, the ſhedding of his bloud for you, and after that, his preſenting himſelf to his Father in heaven in a body that ſhall never die any more, raiſed from the dead by the Spirit and power of God, and now being not onely alive, but immortal, deliver you from the guilt of ſin, and fit you to ſerve God in a vital Chriſtian courſe, giving over all the ſins of the former life?

15. And for this cauſe he is the Mediatour of the New * Teſtament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the tranſgreſſions that were under the firſt † Teſtament, they which are called might receive the promiſe of eternal inheritance.]

* Covenant: ſee note on the title of theſe books. † Covenant

15. And for this end was Chriſt made uſe of to intercede between God and us, and eſtabliſh and ſeal a new Covenant with us, that by the intervention of his death for the expiation of all ſins and tranſgreſſions, even ſuch as could not be expiated under the old Covenant, they which are effectually called, the truly penitent reformed believers, may have heaven and eternal bliſſe made over to, and poſſeſſed and inſtated on them, by way of inheritance.

16. For where a Teſtament is, there muſt alſo of neceſſity * g be the death of the Teſtator.]

* be produced

16. He ſhed his bloud, I ſay, becauſe that a Teſtament [g] be valid, or that any man enjoy any thing by the death of another, the death of the Teſtator is required neceſſarily, and muſt be avouched or produced by him.

17. For a Teſtament is † of force after men are dead, otherwiſe it is of no ſtrength at all, while the Teſtator liveth.]

† firm βεβαία

17. There being no ſtability in a Will as long as the Teſtator liveth, becauſe he may change it if he will, and beſides it is to be ſuppoſed of him, that he meant not the benefit of it to his heir till after his own death.

18. Whereupon neither the * firſt Teſtament was dedicated without bloud.

* firſt was conſecrated πρώτη ἐγκαινίζεται

18. And therefore agreeably to this nature of Covenants, which are among the Eaſtern Nations ſtill ſigned with bloud, and of Teſtaments which are not in force till the Teſtators death, we read in the Law, that the ceremony of bloud was uſed in the ſanction of the firſt Covenant, that under the Law.

19. For when Moſes had ſpoken every precept to all the people according to the Law, he took the bloud of calves and of goats with water and ſcarlet wooll and hyſſope, and ſprinkled both the book and all the people,]

19. For when the Commandments, Exod. 20, 21, 22, 23. were by Moſes recited to all the people according to Gods appointment, then, as it follows Exod. 24. 6. he took, &c. and ſprinkled, &c. (which noted this ſanction of Covenants (as of Teſtaments by death) by the Ceremony of bloud, and fore-ſignified the ſhedding of the bloud of Chriſt for the making of a new Covenant with us,)

20. Saying, This is the bloud of the † Teſtament which God hath * enjoined unto you.]

† Covenant * commanded for or toward you, ἐνετείλατο πρὸς ὑμᾶς

20. Saying, This bloud is the Ceremony of eſtabliſhing the Covenant which God hath made with you.

21. Moreover he ſprinkled with bloud both the Tabernacle and all the Veſſels † of the Miniſtery.]

† of ſervice λατρείας

21. And ſo likewiſe he ſprinkled the Tabernacle, and all the utenſils that were uſed in the worſhip of God, with bloud.

22. And almoſt all things are by the Law purged with bloud; and without ſhedding of bloud is no remiſſion.]

22. And generally under the Law the courſe was, that all things that were purified ſhould be purified by that ceremony of ſhedding bloud, and ſo in like manner, that when any ſin was committed, a beaſt ſhould be ſlain for a ſacrifice, by way of confeſſion that that ſin deſerved death.

23. It was therefore neceſſary that the patterns of things in the heavens ſhould be purified with theſe, but the heavenly things themſelves with better ſacrifices then theſe.]

23. And therefore the Law commanding that the Tabernacle which (in reſpect of the two parts of it, but eſpecially the inmoſt part) is an image of the higheſt Heavens, ſhould thus be purified with the bloud of bullocks or goats, that is, that the Prieſt ſhould never enter in thither without ſuch bloud-ſhedding, it is moſt agreeable and proportionable to theſe types, that Chriſt ſhould dye, ſhed his own bloud, and ſo enter into Heaven to be our high Prieſt (and in like manner that we through many ſufferings ſhould enter into the kingdome of God.)

24. For Chriſt is not entred into the holy places made with hands, which are the * figures of the true; but into Heaven it ſelf, now to appear in the preſence of God for us:]

* copies ἀντίτυπα

24. For Chriſt was not ſo an high Prieſt as to enter into any holy place built by men, the image or repreſentation to ſignifie Heaven, (ſee Wiſd. 9. 8.) but into Heaven it ſelf, there to appear before God, as the Prieſt was ſaid to doe in the Holy of holies, and to recommend our wants and affairs to him, and negotiate for us, and ſo to relieve us when we ſtand in need of him:

25. Nor was the similitude betwixt him and an high Priest to hold in this, that as the Priest enters into the holy place every year with the bloud of bullocks and goats, so Christ should enter every year into that which was signified by the Holy of holies:

25. Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high Priest entreth into the holy place every year with bloud of others:]

26. (For then he should from time to time ever since the beginning of the world have dyed many times) but in this, his presenting himself in the sight of God, his going to heaven to intercede for us, differs from the Priests going into the Holy of holies, that Christ doth shed none but his own bloud, and that but once for all, and that now in this last age, (see Note on Mat. 24. c.) this close or shutting up of the Jewish state, on purpose to obtain pardon for whatsoever sins repented of, and to work reformation among us.

26. (For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world) but now once † in the end of the world * hath he appeared h to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.]

† at the consummation of the ages ἐπὶ συντελείᾳ τῶν αἰώνων
* hath he been manifested by sacrificing of himself for the putting away of sin,

† and where as there is reserved for men, ἀπόκ. ἀνθρ. κεῖται τισὶ
* for their deliverance εἰς σωτηρίαν, see note on c. 2. b.
† the King's MS. adds here διὰ πίστεως, by faith.

27. For in this is the condition of Christ like to the condition of other men, that as they must die but once, and then be judged to all eternity:

27. † And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgement:]

28. So Christ having yielded up himself for a sacrifice for us, and so born our sins up to the crosse with him (dyed as our surety or proxy) shall doe this but once: when he comes again it shall be in another manner, he shall not come to this earth to dye again, but shall come in glory and power, (quite unlike that state wherein he was when he bare our sins) to the relieving and bestowing deliverance on those who expect and wait for him, and constantly adhere to his commands.

28. So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin * unto salvation †.]

Annotations on Chap. IX.

2. πρώτη

V. 1. First covenant] That it must be read ἡ πρώτη the first without σκηνὴ tabernacle, will appear by the authority of antient MSS. (as, besides others taken notice of by other men, in an antient one in Magd. Col. Library in Oxon) and of the Syriack, and old Latine Translation, and of Saint Chrysostome, and the Greek Fathers, who read it not: And then there is little doubt but the Substantive to it must be διαθήκη Covenant, mentioned in the former Chapter, and called ἡ πρώτη, the first, in the verse immediately preceding this, c 8. 15. which antiently was conjoined with this, before the division into Chapters. Besides the addition of σκηνὴ tabernacle will not be very congruous; for then the Tabernacle must be said to have in it τὸ ἅγιον κοσμικὸν, the worldly holy, that is, the Tabernacle, as appears v. 3. where σκηνὴ tabernacle is called ἁγία ἁγίων the Holy of holies. As for δικαιώματα ordinances, see Rom 8. d. and λατρείας is in any reason to be taken not in the Genitive, but the Accusative plural, and so will note sacrifices and other institutions for Gods worship, which belonged to that Mosaical Covenant.

b. στάμνος χρυσῆ

V. 4. Golden pot] It is a matter of some difficulty to determine, whether it were the Ark, in which the Pot of Manna and the Rod are here said to be kept, or more generally the Holy of holies, wherein, as in a common place, both they and the Ark were. For first, the phrase ἐν ᾗ in which, may equally referre to σκηνὴ λεγομένη τὰ ἅγια ἁγίων the tabernacle called the Holy of holies, and to κιβωτὸς the Ark: and secondly it is positively affirmed, 1 King. 8. 9. that there was nothing in the Ark but the tables of stone. But then on the other side it is apparent that those Tables of the Law were in the Ark, and therefore the mention of those being immediately subjoyned to the mention of the Pot and the Rod, and connected distinctly with a ᾗ, the pot and the rod and the tables, in all reason they must be thought affirmed to be in the Ark, where it is certain the Tables were; and 2. it is as manifest that the κατεράνω αὐτῆς, over it, v. 5. denotes the Ark, on the covering of which, and not of the Holy of holies, the Cherubim were. To this difficulty that which Theophylact hath affirmed is most satisfactory, that though at that time which is referred to 1 King. 8. 9. that is, in Solomons time, there was nothing in the Ark but the Tables, yet in after-times the Pot and the Rod were put there, viz. in Jeremies time, when the Ark was to be hid by him: and all this, saith he, S. Paul may be supposed by tradition to have had from Gamaliel his Master, a Pharisee; and accordingly, saith he, ᾗ νῦν οἱ Φαρισαΐζοντες τῶν Ἑβραίων συντίθενται τοῦτο οὕτως ἔχειν, the Hebrews, or Jewes, of his time, which were of the Pharisees sect, affirmed it to be so.

V. 5. Glory] Δόξα, glory, is here set to signifie the Schechina, or appearing of God, which was wont to be by Angels, of which there Cherubims were the representations. See Note on Mat. 16. n. and on Mar. 1. 2.

c. Δόξα

Ib. Mercy-seat] The word Ἱλαστήριον is answerable to the Hebrew כַּפֹּרֶת. Now the word כפר signifies two things, first, to cover (and indeed the English word cover seems to come from it) and that either simply to cover, or to cover with pitch, &c. & secondly in Piel, to cleanse, expiate, and to be propitious. Hence it is rendred sometimes ἀσφαλτῶσαι to plaster, or cover, with bitumen or pitch, and sometimes, most ordinarily, ἱλάσκομαι, ἐξιλάσκομαι, καθαίζω, to propitiate or cleanse. And accordingly כַּפֹּרֶת is rendred sometimes κατακάλυμμα a covering, Exod. 26. 36. sometimes ἱλαστήριον propitiatory; and ἱλαστήριον propitiatory, when the sense is κατακάλυμμα covering. See Note on Rom 3. h. And so in this place, where it notes a part of the Ark, it must be taken in the notion of the Hebrew, and rendred in that sense of κατακάλυμμα, covering, as 'tis Exod. 26. 34. and 30. 6. or as the Hebrew כַּפֹּרֶת, if it had been here retained, would have imported.

d. Ἱλαστήριον

V. 7. Errors] The word ἀγνοῶν, though it signifies peculiarly ignorance, yet is taken among the Greek Writers in the Old Testament for sinning indifferently. So Tob. 3. 3. Judith 5. 20. Ecclus. 51. 26. 1 Mac. 13. 39. 2 Mac. 13. 37. Ecclus. 23. 2. and 3 Mac. σύστημα μηδὲν ἠγνοηκὸς, a company that had not sinned against the King, according to the notion of the Hebrew שָׁגָה, which as it signifies ignoravit, erravit, ignorance, error, so also it signifies defecit, recessit, falling off, failing; and so here it signifies all those sins for which there was allowed expiation and sacrifice under the Law, that is, all sins but those of Presumption, or Will.

e. Ἀγνοήματα

V. 13. Sanctifieth] Ἁγιάζειν to sanctifie in this place signifies to purifie, in the notion that belongs to the Hebrew טָהֹר which is sometimes rendred καθαρὸς pure, sometimes ἁγὸς holy; and accordingly ἀκάθαρτα and ἅγια, impure and holy, are set opposite 1 Cor. 7. 14. So also the Hebrew קדש which is vulgarly ἁγιάζειν to sanctifie, is used for washing among the Jewes. See Note on 1 Cor. 7. d. Thus it appears to be used here, not onely by the κεκοινωμένους unclean, or polluted, immediately precedent, and the καθαρότητα cleansing, or purity, following; but by the evidence of the matter here

f. Ἁγιάζειν

here ſpoken of. For that was the deſign of the legal ſacrifice, bloud and aſhes, to cleanſe them that were legally polluted, which is the meaning of πρὸς τὴν τῆς σαρκὸς καθαρότητα for the cleanſing of the fleſh, that is, to make them legally clean, ſuch as might come into the congregation again. But this ſtill in a Metaphorical ſignification, as cleanſing ſignifies expiation, or obtaining pardon of ſin, freeing from the inconveniences or Cenſures that belong'd to it. In this ſame ſenſe the word is uſed c. 10. 10. Through which will we are ſanctified, ἡγιασμένοι ἐσμὲν, that is, our ſins are expiated, through the offering of the body of Chriſt once for all, which v. 26. is expreſſed by another phraſe, that he hath now once appeared to put away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelf.

ἠγιασμένοι ἐσμὲν

V. 16. Be the death —] What the word φέρειν ſignifies here, will be beſt gueſt by the Context, which looks to the validity of Wills and Teſtaments, and to the pleading of them in Law, to receive benefit from them. This is expreſſed v. 17. by βεβαία and ἰσχύει, and of this it is ſufficiently known in all Lawes, what is here ſaid, that as long as the Teſtator lives there is no validity in his Will, no pleading any thing from it, becauſe Voluntas eſt ambulatoria, ſay the Lawyers, a man as long as he lives may change his Will. In this ſenſe may this 16. v. be thus interpreted, Ὅτι διαθήκη, where there is a Teſtament, that is, where a Teſtament is produced or pleaded, or, where a Teſtament is a Teſtament, or, to the confirming of a Teſtament, to the proving of a Will, ἀνάγκη, it is neceſſary, φέρεσθαι θάνατον τοῦ διατιθεμένου, that the death of the Teſtator be brought, produced, alledged, brought into the Court, teſtimony brought of it; for otherwiſe the Will will not be βεβαία firm, nor ἰσχύειν of force, ὅτε ζῇ, &c. as long as the Teſtator is alive, or as long as there is no conſtat of his death. Thus is the word φέρειν and φέρεσθαι uſed ſometimes in the New Teſtament, in a Forenſical ſenſe, as κατηγορίαν φέρειν, to bring an accuſation, 1 John 18. 29. ἐγκλήματα φέρειν, Act. 25. 7. to bring accuſations or charges againſt any, and φέρειν κρίσιν to bring, or enter, a ſuit againſt one.

g. φέρεσθαι

Βεβαία

V. 20. To put away] Ἀθετῶν properly ſignifies to fruſtrate, as ἀθετεῖν βουλὴν Θεοῦ, to fruſtrate God's counſel, that is, deprive it of (evacuate) the end of it: and ſo here Chriſt's death is ἀθέτησις ἁμαρτίας, depriving ſin of its end or deſigne, which was firſt to get us into its power, to reign in our mortal bodies, and then maliciouſly to bind us over to puniſhment eternal; from both which Chriſt's death was deſigned to redeem us, from living in ſin, and from being puniſhed for it, according to the two benefits of Chriſt's death, ſignified in the Sacraments, grace and pardon.

h. Ἀθέτησις

CHAP. X.

Paraphraſe.

* the good things.
† by the ſame ſacrifices eve y year κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ταῖς αὐταῖς θυσίαις

1. For the Law having a ſhadow of * good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never † with thoſe ſacrifices, which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect.]

1. For the Moſaical Law, which contained no more then an imperfect ſhadow or rude firſt draught of thoſe mercies made over to us by the Goſpel, eternal life, &c. and not the lively repreſentation or effigies of them, ſuch as the Goſpel now affords us, is no way able by ſacrificing every year, as long as the temple laſts, bullocks and goats, that is, by repeating often thoſe ſame kinds of ſacrifices, to work that great benefit for the worſhippers which the Goſpel is deſigned to doe, viz. to give men full pardon of ſin, and purifie their conſciences.

* Sure they would have ceaſed, for many other copies read ἐπεὶ ἂν ἐπαύσαντο, leaving out ἂν, others read the ἂν not but by way of interrogation: ſo Theophylact

2. For then * would they not have ceaſed to be offered, becauſe that the worſhippers once purged ſhould have had no more conſcience of ſin.]

2. For then they would not need to be offered again continually, when the work for which they were offered was once wrought, as if the cure were wrought, the medicine need not be any more applyed.

† a commemoration ἀνάμνησις

3. But in thoſe ſacrifices there is † again remembrance of ſins made every year.]

3. Whereas now being only a commemoration of ſins, not a purging them away, they are offered every year anew on the day of expiation, thereby commemorating not only the ſins committed that year, ſince the laſt day of expiation, but their former ſins again, for which they had formerly ſacrificed, at the time of committing of them, and to typifie that one true ſacrifice of Chriſt, that alone is able to do the work for all our ſins.

4. For it is not poſſible that the bloud of bulls and goats ſhould take away ſins.]

4. For the truth is, it is not in the power of any ſacrifice of any beaſt to take away the guilt of ſin, or purifie the conſcience.

* thou haſt not delighted in, οὐκ ἠυδόκησας † framed κατηρτίσω

5. Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he ſaith, Sacrifice and burnt-offering * thou wouldſt not, but a body haſt thou † prepared me.]

5. And therefore in the Prophetick Pſalm concerning Chriſt's coming into the world, God's deſpiſing of thoſe legal ſacrifices is mentioned, and all that is thought fit to be depended on in order to obtaining pardon for ſin, is the body of Chriſt, God giving him a body, and deſigning that to crucifixion, fitting it for the Croſſe, as the ſervants ear for the door-poſt, Deut. 15. 17. to which it was to be nailed, (on which ground of ſimilitude it is, that in ſtead of opening or boaring my ear, in the Pſalmiſt, tis here framing him or fitting him a body, ſee Note on 2 Cor. 13, c.) and ſo decreeing that to be the perfect and complete ſacrifice, which was to ſupply the defects of all the reſt.

6. In burnt-offerings and ſacrifices for ſin thou haſt had no pleaſure.]

6. And then he adds in the name of Chriſt ſpeaking to God his Father, The offerings of legal ſacrifices, I know, are not acceptable in thy ſight, or able to reconcile thee to ſinners.

* Indenture, or folding of the Bill, ſee note on Lu. 4. 2.
† that I my doe τὸ ποιῆσαι
* according to the Law κατὰ νόμον

7. Then ſaid I, Lo, I come (in the * volume of the Book it is written of me) † to doe thy will, O God.]

7. Therefore I, that is Chriſt, come (according to what he had undertaken and bound himſelf by bond to his Father, in order to that great work of our redemption) to perform whatſoever thou my God ſhalt require of me.

8. Above, when he ſaid, Sacrifice and offering, and burnt-offerings, and offering for ſin, thou wouldſt not, neither haſt pleaſure therein, (which are offered * by the Law;)

8, 9. By which place of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 40. it is clear, that the ſacrifices appointed by Moſes's Law are not of any force with God, but onely the ſufferings and death of Chriſt, the firſt being in that place wholly renounced and diſclaimed, and onely the ſecond ſet up.

9. Then ſaid he, Lo, I come to do thy will (O God.) He taketh away the firſt, that he may eſtabliſh the ſecond.]

† through which ἐν ᾧ
* by διὰ τοῦ

10. † By the which will we are ſanctified, * through the offering of the body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all.]

10. And by this gracious will of God (which Chriſt came to perform in the body which God prepared for him, v. 5.) by offering that body once for all, and not by thoſe legal ſacrifices, which were oft repeated, all our ſins are expiated, (ſee note on c. 9. e.) and we received into Gods favour, as many of us as by performing the condition of ſincere obedience, ſtill required of us, are rendred capable of that great benefit purchaſed for us by the ſufferings of Chriſt.

11. Again, under the Law, the high Prieſt was wont every year once (ſee c. 7. 27.) on the great day of expiation, to officiate and offer up yearly the ſame kinds of ſacrifices, bullocks, &c. none of which have power to free the conſcience from the guilt, or the offender from the puniſhment of ſin.

11. And every Prieſt † ſtandeth * daily miniſtring and offering oftentimes the ſame ſacrifices, which can never take away ſins :]

† Stood indeed μεν ἑστηκε

* upon a day καθ' ἡμεραν

* hath for continuance ſate εἱς το διηνεκες ἐκαθισεν, ſee v. 14.

12. But Chriſt having by his own death made one compleate ſacrifice, which will ſuffice for the ſins of all the world, without need of repeating it, (ſealing to all that ſhall ever live a covenant of mercy and remiſſion upon repentance) hath ever ſince continued at the right hand of God, and ſhall doe ſo for ever,

12. But this man, after he had offered one ſacrifice for ſins * for ever, ſate down on the right hand of God,]

13. Exerciſing his regal office in mens hearts, and meaning to exerciſe it alſo over ſin and death it ſelf, in aboliſhing or ſubduing them both in the reſurrection.

13. † From henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his foot ſtool.]

† For the time to come τὸ λοιπον

14. For that one offering of his in his death hath done the whole work, once for all compleately, for all obedient Chriſtians, all ſanctified diſciples of his (that having the interceſſion of Chriſt in heaven, the ſending the Spirit, &c. adjoyned with it, which are the grounds of furniſhing us with all grace, &c.)

14. For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified.]

15, 16, 17. And of this the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament doe teſtifie ; for after he had premiſed, as the firſt thing promiſed in his covenant, the writing his laws in their hearts and on their minds, and revealing his will, and giving them his ſanctifying grace for the reforming of their wicked lives, he then adds as a ſecond part of his covenant, the free pardon of all the ſins and tranſgreſſions of their former life, whatſoever they have been.

15. * Whereof the Holy Ghoſt alſo is a witneſſe to us, for after that he had † ſaid before,

16. This is the covenant that I will make with them after thoſe daies, ſaith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and * in their minds will I write them :

17. And their ſins and iniquities will I remember no more.]

* And the holy Ghoſt alſo beareth us witneſſe, Μαρτυρει δε ἡμιν και το

† firſt ſaid προειρηκεναι

* upon ὁτι

18. And this being done once for all, there is no need of any farther ſacrifices, or Judaical obſervances, for which ſome of you doe ſo zealouſly contend.

18. Now where remiſſion of theſe is, there is no more offering for ſin.]

19. The doctrine then of the ſuperlative excellence of Chriſt's prieſthood above the Moſaical being thus evidenced, and the benefit of it being to us ſo great, even to give us liberty (ſee Joh. 7. a.) to approach unto God in prayer, and apprehenſion of his promiſes, to have title to heaven it ſelf, through what Chriſt hath purchaſed for us,

19. Having therefore, brethren, † boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus,]

† liberty παῤῥησιαν

20. (Which confidence and liberty to enter he hath helped us to by a way never known before, and that a clear or living way, in oppoſition to the dead ſhadows and rudiments under the Law, which, I ſay, he hath helped us to, by paſſing himſelf from the outer to the inner tabernacle, from this life to another, breaking through the veile or partition between them, that is, through his fleſh, being fain to die before he entred heaven)

20. * By a new and living way which he hath conſecrated for us, through the veile, † that is to ſay his fleſh,

* Which he hath conſecrated for us a new and living way by the veil, Ἡν ἐνεκαινισεν ἡμιν ὁδὸν προσφατον και ζωσαν

† that is, his own fleſh τουτεστι τῆς σαρκος αὐτου

21. And having one that interceſſes for us at the right hand of God, and that hath taken upon him the whole care of his Church, and of every faithfull ſervant of his that ſhall adhere and keep cloſe to him,

21. And having an high prieſt over the houſe of God,]

22. Let us ſerve and worſhip him unfeignedly, being fill'd with faith (ſee note on Luc. 1. a. and h.) and having reformed our wicked lives in ſincere reſolution of heart, (without which there is no more reception to be hoped for at God's hands, Iſa. 1. 15. then under the law there was liberty to come into the congregation for them that had touched any impure thing, till they were ſprinkled with water by the prieſt) and having our actions waſhed and pure alſo.

22. * Let us draw near with a true heart, in full aſſurance of faith, having our hearts ſprinkled from an evil conſcience, and our bodies waſhed with pure water.]

* Let us come to him in fulneſs of faith, Προσερχωμεθα μετα πληροφορίας

23. Let not all the afflictions and dangers that can approach us, move us ſo much as to waver in our Chriſtian profeſſion, which having the hope of eternal life joyned with it, is fortification enough againſt all the terrors of this world, having God's fidelity engaged to make good the promiſe to us.

23. Let us hold faſt the profeſſion of the † faith without wavering, (for he is faithfull that promiſed.)

† hope ἐλπιδος

24. And let us conſider all advantages that we can have upon one another, to provoke and excite one another to charity, and all actions of piety, (ſuch as are joyning in the publick ſervice, ver. 25.) whenſoever we ſee any thing of fainting or growing cold in any ;

24. And let us conſider one another to provoke unto love and unto good works ;]

25. And not ſuffer our ſelves to proceed ſo farre toward defection, as to give over the publick aſſemblies, (the forſaking of which is not onely deſerting of the publick profeſſion of Chriſt, but alſo of the means of growth in grace) but ſtirre up one another to the performance of this and ſuch other duties of confeſſion toward Chriſt, by this argument among others, that now their deliverance from the perſecutions which ſo diſcouraged them is near at hand, (by reaſon of the deſtruction of the enemies of the croſſe, the Jews and Gnoſticks, that have cauſed all theſe perſecutions) which therefore would make it unreaſonable for them now to give over their conſtancy, and loſe all, when they are ſo near the end of their voyage, (ſee Rom. 13. 11. and Jam. 5. 7, 8.)

25. Not forſaking the aſſembling of our ſelves together, as the manner of ſome is, but exhorting one another : and ſo much the more, as ye ſee the [a] day approaching.]

26, 27. For if we obſtinately commit ſuch a ſinne as this, defection from Chriſt, and forſaking Chriſtianity (as they that forſake the publick aſſemblies are in danger to doe) after once receiving it (ſee note on Mat. 12. h.) there is no plea or apologie of ignorance or unwillingneſſe for that ; and conſequently, as under the Law no ſacrifices are to be offered for ſuch, nor ever any for Apoſtates, ſo now there is no way of remiſſion which will be profitable for ſuch, all that is to be expected is the judgments and wrath of God, ſuch as are like to be ſent out ſpeedily to utter deſtruction, againſt all ſuch enemies of Chriſt, (ſee note on 2 Per. 3. g. and Heb. 6. b.

26. For if we ſin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth [b] no more ſacrifice for ſins,

27. But a certain fearfull looking for of judgment, and * fiery indignation, † which ſhall devour the adverſaries.]

* burning of fire πυρος ζηλος

† ready to μελλοντος

28. He

28. He that despised Moses Law, died without mercy, under two or three witnesses.]

28. He that offended wilfully, and so capitally, under Moses's Law, was not capable there of any mercy, but the thing being proved against him by competent testimony, he was to be put to death.

29. Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath troden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the Covenant wherewith * he was sanctified, † an unholy thing, and * hath done despight unto the spirit of grace?]

* he hath been — ἡγιάσθη
† a profane thing κοινὸν
* hath reproached ἐνυβρίσας

29. How much sadder then will his condition be judged to be, who against all light and conviction received, and formerly assented to, shall thus fall off, and by doing so, joyn with those Antichristian Gnosticks, and Jewes the crucifiers of Christ, and enemies of Christians, which have despised Christ, as vile, and nothing worth, yea as one that died as a malefactor, and so his blood no better then unclean, profane blood, not such as will bring any benefit to us, (as it was designed to doe) and scorn and reject the Gospel it self, revealed to us by the Apostles, authorized thereto by the descent of the Spirit on them, and other mercies in it so graciously bestowed on us?

30. For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord: and again, The Lord shall judge his people.]

30. For we know it is the Lord that said, Vengeance, &c. and again Psal. 135. 14. that God will avenge his people, (his Church) and consequently will avenge the cause of those which now suffer among you, against their persecutors, in his time, if you can patiently wait for it.

31. It is a fearfull thing to fall into the hands of the living God.]

31. To which purpose you may be armed with this consideration, that 'tis not near so formidable a thing to be persecuted and punished by mortal men, as by him that lives for ever: see Mat. 10. 20.

32. But call to remembrance the former daies, in which after ye were illuminated, ye indured a great † fight of afflictions;]

† combate ἄθλησιν

32. Now that the being persecuted for Christianity should bring you to this defection, there is no reason, considering how, when you did first receive the faith, (see Rom. 13. 11.) ye indured afflictions courageously (and therefore ought not now at last to fail in any reason, lest you lose the fruit of all that)

33. Partly whilest ye were made a gazing-stock both by reproaches and afflictions, and partly * whilest ye became companions of them that were so used.]

* being made partakers of those which so lived κοινωνοὶ τῶν οὕτως ἀναστρεφομένων

33. Suffering most courageously and notoriously your selves, and shewing your fellow-feeling and common concernment with them that were thus afflicted.

34. For ye had † compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, * knowing in your selves that you have † in heaven a better and an enduring substance.]

† or a fellow-feeling with prisoners, for the King's MS. reads τοῖς δεσμίοις συνεπαθήσατε
† a better

34. For (first to the latter of them, see note on Mat. 7. a.) you expressed your sense of my sufferings (and perhaps of many others that were in like manner imprisoned) in mourning for me, and relieving me; and (for the former) ye parted with your worldly wealth, which was violently torn from you, with perfect patience, nay rejoycing that you were thought worthy to suffer for Christ's sake, and considering, and assuring your selves that such sufferings as these yield you (and will bring you by way of reward) a more valuable and durable kind of wealth, eternal blisse in heaven.

* knowing that you have in your selves γινώσκοντες ἔχειν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς being in heaven, and an abiding one, κρείττονα ὕπαρξιν ἐν οὐρανοῖς καὶ μένουσαν

35. Cast not away therefore your * confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.]

* boldnesse παῤῥησίαν

35. Having therefore indured so much upon these grounds of the certain retribution that all your sufferings bring with them, be not beaten out of your fearlesnesse (see note on Joh. 7. a.) and patience and Christianity at last.

36. For ye have need of patience, † that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.]

† that having done ποιήσαντες

36. For Christianity being a life of faith and hope, fastned on future promises, both those of this life, release from persecutions, and those of another life, eternal blisse, which will not be had till we have done what God appoints us in the interim to doe or suffer, 'tis clear that patience is necessary for all Christians at all times, and particularly for you at this.

37. For yet * a little while, and he that † shall come will come, and will not tarry.]

* a very little while μικρὸν ὅσον ὅσον † cometh ἐρχόμενος

37. For the time is now very near at hand, that Christ (see note on Mat. 11. a.) shall come as a judge to destroy the enemies, and as a reliever to rescue all faithfull disciples (see note a.) and though you may think he hath stayed something long, yet now he will come very speedily to that work.

38. * Now the just shall live by faith: † But if any man ᶜ draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.]

* But δὲ
† And if he draw back or slink away Καὶ ἐὰν ὑποστείλῃται

38. Mean while the true constant Christian shall by the strength of his faith live, and hold out against all these terrors, sustain himself by his faith (see Rom. 1. 17.) and he that doth not so, but is affrighted and driven by afflictions out of his hold and profession (as now ye are like to be) God will certainly reject and hate such a man, never accept of such temporary obedience.

c.

39. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition: but of them that believe to the ᵈ * saving of the soul.]

* purchasing, acquiring, finding, περιποίησιν

39. But as Christ told his disciples, that in times of persecution he that would save his life should be the most likely to lose it, and he that would venture the utmost for Christ's sake should be most likely to thrive, and secure himself even in this world; so it is likely to be at this time: and so I may say it with comfort of all true faithfull constant Christians, that we doe not mean to forsake Christ, or fall off to the Gnostick compliances, which in stead of delivering will prove the certainest way to ruine, but to stick constantly to him, as the likeliest way to preserve us here, and the only way of securing us to eternity, whether to save our lives, or our souls.

Ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ

V. 25. Day approaching] The notion of ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ, the day of Christ, and ἡμέρα, day, and παρουσία Χριστοῦ, coming of Christ, and βασιλεία Θεοῦ, kingdome of God, and many the like, signifying that famous destruction of the Jewes, hath been often mentioned. The other phrases have been gathered together from their dispersions through this book, Note on Mat. 3. c. Mat. 24. b. c. &c. Now for this of ἡμέρα, day, or ἡμέρα Χριστοῦ, day of Christ, although somewhat hath been said on Rom. 13. Note d. yet now more fully it must be explained. The force of the phrase may appear Zach. 14. 1. Behold the day of the Lord cometh, and I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battel, and the city shall be taken, &c. and so in many places of the Old Testament: and accordingly in the New, Luk. 17. 24. The Son of man ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ αὐτοῦ, in his day, that is, when he comes to destroy Jerusalem; so Mat. 24. 36. περὶ δὲ τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης of that day and hour, that is the punctual time of this destruction (not of the day of the last judgment, but of somewhat that was to come in that age, v. 34.) knows no man. So Luk. 17. 30. ἡμέρᾳ the day wherein the Son of man shall be revealed; & v. 31. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ in that day; and c. 19. 40. ἡμέραι the daies shall come in which thy enemies shall cast a trench. So Act. 2. 20. ἡμέρᾳ Κυρίου μεγάλην καὶ ἐπιφανῆ, the great and conspicuous day of the Lord, Ἡμέρα ἐκείνη Ἡμέραι Ἡμέρα Κυρίου from

from which none of the Jewes ſhould eſcape, but only the believers: In which place, as 'tis cited out of Joel, 'tis obſervable that there is firſt mention of the laſt daies, v. 17. (which as the Jewes render the daies of the Meſſias, ſo Peter interprets the time after the reſurrection of Chriſt, in which the Spirit was poured out) then of this great day v. 20. which is as it were ἐσχάτων ἡμέρα, the laſt of the laſt, fourty years after his reſurrection, in which Judæa was to be laid waſt. So 1 Cor. 1. 8. the day of the Lord Jeſus, agreeable to the ἀποκάλυψις Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ, revelation of the Lord Jeſus, ver. 12. both of them denoting this time of judgment on unbelievers, and deliverance of the faithfull: See alſo chap. 3. 13. So 1 Theſſ. 5. as χρόνοι and καιροὶ times and ſeaſons, v. 1. referre to this matter (as, the time is come, Ezech. 2. 7.) ſo ἡ ἡμέρα Κυρίου, the day of the Lord cometh as a thief (the ſame that is ſaid of it 2 Pet. 3. 10.) belongs to this matter alſo. So 2 Theſſ. 1. 10. In that day. So here ἐγγίζουσα ἡ ἡμέρα, the day approaching, as Luk. 21. 8. ὁ καιρὸς ἤγγικε, the ſeaſon approacheth, or as Joel 2. 1. ὅτι πάρεστιν ἡμέρα Κυρίου, ὅτι ἐγγύς, the day of the Lord is come, it is nigh at hand. So the ἡμέρα διαυγάζουσα day dawning is that day of judgment to the Jewes, and deliverance to the believers among them, 2 Pet. 1. 19. (ſee Note g.) And that this phraſe ſhould thus ſignifie will not be ſtrange, when it is conſidered that in all languages and idiomes, the word Day ſignifies judgment here on earth. So ἡμέρα 1 Cor. 3. 13. the day ſhall declare, that is, the judgment, or trial; and ἀνθρωπίνη ἡμέρα, man's day, 1 Cor. 4. 3. that is, the judgment of men: ſo dies in Latine, diem dicere, to implead, and in Engliſh a daies-man, an umpire or judge (ſee Note on Mat. 3. c. and Mat. 24. b.) That this is the meaning of this place will appear by the ſcope of the place, which is, to comfort them which were ready to fall off from Chriſtianity, upon the continued perſecutions of the Chriſtians by the Jewes, among whom theſe Hebrew Chriſtians lived, as will appear in the ſtory, Act. 11. 19. & 1 Theſſ. 2. 14. the approach of whoſe deſtruction muſt conſequently be matter of comfort to them that had ſuffered long, and ſo of keeping them from falling away, (ſee Note on Rom. 13. c.) And ſecondly, 'twill appear by the plain words that follow to this very purpoſe, to ſuſtain their patience, v. 37. Yet a little while, and he that cometh, ὁ ἐρχόμενος, that is, Chriſt, which hath promiſed to come to their puniſhment and your relief, will come, (and that notes this particular, the deſtruction of the Jewes, which is called his coming, Mat. 24) καὶ οὐ χρονιεῖ, and he will not tarry, that notes the ἐγγίζουσαν, the approach of that day. And to this purpoſe to confirm men in patient expectation of this, without all diſheartning by the delay, follow all thoſe examples of Faith, c. 11. in which it appears that many depended by faith on performances of promiſes to their poſterity, which were never performed to themſelves perſonally, and ſo might very well fortifie the Hebrewes for an expectation of a farre ſhorter time, it being now very near at hand. The ſame is expreſſed, when it draws nigher at hand, by ἐσχάτη ὥρα, 1 John 2. 18. the laſt hour.

Ἑκουσίως ἁμαρτανόντες &c.

V. 26. For if we ſin wilfully——] What is meant by this phraſe, Ἑκουσίως ἁμαρτανόντες μετὰ τὸ λαβεῖν τὴν ἐπίγνωσιν τῆς ἀληθείας, Sinning wilfully after receiving the acknowledgment of the truth, muſt be collected by a brief ſurvey of every part of the phraſe. First, ἁμαρτάνειν to ſin, as it ſignifies in general any kind or ſort of ſin, not only deliberate, but of ignorance, or paſſion, or ſurpriſe, and again not only an act, but habit or courſe of ſin, (and is to be determined to either by the Context in any place,) ſo in many places it appears to ſignifie the great ſin of Apoſtaſie: ſo c. 3. 17. and is applied to the Apoſtate Angels 2 Pet. 2. 4. And ſo here ſure it muſt ſignifie the ſin here ſpoken of, ver. 23, and 25. being the not retaining, that is, forſaking, the profeſſion of their hope, that is, the Chriſtian profeſſion, and ἐγκαταλείποντες τὴν ἐπισυναγωγὴν ἑαυτῶν, forſaking the aſſemblies of publick worſhip, &c. which though done upon the motive of fear, to avoid perſecution, yet was an Apoſtatizing from the Chriſtian courſe, and that no ſuddain, paſſionate, but weighed, deliberate act and courſe, and is therefore defined ver. 38. to be an ὑποστολὴ εἰς ἀπώλειαν a drawing back to perdition, an Apoſtaſie from the Chriſtian profeſſion, a preferring the advantages of the world, the preſerving their own preſent ſafety before the ſervice and worſhip of God, and privileges belonging to it; and accordingly this ſin of theſe forſakers is ellewhere ordinarily expreſs'd by loving the world, and the things of the world, in oppoſition to, and excluſion of, the love of the Father, loving of pleaſures more then of God, ſerving of the belly, &c. and 'tis known of theſe Gnoſticks, that as they renounced the Chriſtian profeſſion, ſo they joyned with the enemies (called here ὑπεναντίοι adverſaries v. 27.) againſt the Chriſtians, and to ſave themſelves calumniated and perſecuted others. Now this ſin thus conſidered is here farther expreſs'd to be ſo by the mention of their former acknowledgment of the truth, and by their continuing in this courſe ἑκουσίως wilfully after the acknowledgment of the truth. That may be taken in a double notion: First, to ſignifie the commiſſion of this ſin after the acknowledgment of Chriſtianity in general, after having received the faith, and obeyed it (which muſt neceſſarily deprive them of all excuſe of Ignorance or Involuntarineſſe) as, 2 Pet. 2. 21. ἐπιγνωκέναι τὴν ὁδὸν τῆς δικαιοσύνης, having acknowledged the way of righteouſneſſe, and then ἐπιστρέψαι to turn, clearly ſignifies. And this 'tis certain is contained here: for they that thus forſook the aſſemblies, and drew back, were the δίκαιοι, the juſt, v. 38. But, I ſuppoſe, there is yet a farther notion of it, which muſt be added to this, the doing this contemptuouſly againſt the Apoſtles doctrine and admonition, concerning the infuſions of the Gnoſtick-hereticks, and conſequently a caſting off the authority of the Apoſtles and Governours of the Church, who acted in power of the Holy Ghoſt; and they that thus diſobeyed, were look'd on and dealt with as heathens and Publicans, deſperate and incorrigible, Mat. 18. 17. Thus ſaith Photius, Πολλὴ ἡ διαφορὰ τοῦ ἐξ ἀγνοίας ἁμαρτήματος πρὸς τὰς ἐν γνώσει καὶ μετὰ καταφρονήσεως πεπραγμένας ἀνομίτους πράξεις, There is great difference between ſins committed out of ignorance, and wicked practices committed in knowledge and with contempt, Epiſt. p. 386. And that this was it, appears, not only by the exhortations and admonitions of the Apoſtle through this whole Epiſtle, Take heed, brethren, that there be not in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing, or Apoſtatizing, from the living God, ch. 3. 12. and by his laying before them the examples of the murmuring and provoking Apoſtatizing Iſraelites, which loſt their Canaan, and by foretelling the like vengeance that would ſuddainly fall on them, if they did thus depart; but alſo by one end or conſequent of their forſaking their Church-meetings, contemning and rejecting the exhortations and admonitions of their Governours, for which, among other things, theſe meetings were ordained. And this ſeems to be here noted by mention of the ἀλλὰ παρακαλοῦντες but exhorting, which was eſpecially the Governours office, and which they that forſook the aſſemblies did forſake alſo, and did not ſubmit themſelves to it. And then they that thus ſinn'd ἑκουσίως wilfully after the having received this acknowledgment of the truth, were they that did contemptuouſly forſake and caſt off the Chriſtian yoke, which they had once ſubmitted to, and that is the character of Apoſtates. Adde to this the conſideration of v. 28. where, parallel to the fate of the perſon person here, is set Ἀθετήσας τις τὸν νόμον Μωσέως, Any one that despiseth, or setteth at nought, Moses Law, the man that will doe presumptuously, and will not hearken to the Priest, or to the Judge, Dent. 17. 12. such an one, as when his fact is competently proved against him, he must die without mercy: And that is also the meaning of the οὐκέτι περὶ ἁμαρτιῶν θυσία, there remains no longer any sacrifice for sin. It is such a sin for which the High-priest among the Jewes was not allowed to offer sacrifice for expiation. Ἀδιόρθωτος ἡ κολάσεως παραίτησις, saith Josephus, l. 2. cont. Apion. there was no deprecating, no possibility of averting the punishment of death which belonged to such. Accordingly we see the practice in Maimonides (in the title of dressing oblations, cap. 3. num. 3, 5.) that no sacrifice should be made for Apostates, though for Ethnicks there might. So again appears v. 29. by ὁ καταπατήσας τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, trampling on the Son of God, that is, contemptuously using him, as these Apostatizing desertors did,

Καταπατῆσαι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ

Αἷμα διαθήκης κοινὸν ἡγησάμενος counting the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, (as Ezech. 22. 26. to the Priests ἀθετῶν violating Gods Law, is added their profaning Gods holy things) contemning the Covenant sealed by the blood of Christ, by which they have obliged themselves to adhere to him, and

Καὶ ὑβρίσας τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς χάριτος contumeliously using the Spirit of grace, that is, again despising and throwing away those pretious advantages of the Spirit of God which had been bestow'd upon them, but now are repell'd and rejected by them, as in the Canons of the Councils, they that have undertaken the office of Church-widows, and after marry, are said to doe despite to the grace of God: (see Conc. Wormac. cap. 45.) for which S. Paul hath casting off their first faith, 1 Tim. 5. 12. By all which appears what the nature and aggravations of this sin was, A forsaking the Christian orthodox, and going over to the heretical Gnostick way, which was a downright Apostasie from Christ to Antichrist. And for such an one the punishment is figuratively expres'd by, there remains no farther, or no longer, sacrifice for sins: that is, either the blood of Christ trampled on by him, v. 29. will not prove beneficial to him, and so, because there is no other sacrifice, he is capable of no mercy; or else the prayers and oblations of the Church, which are used for those that they have any hopes of, belong not to him. See Note on chap. 6. b. and 1 John 5. c.

c. Ὑποστολῆς

V. 38. Draw back] What is here meant by ὑποστολὴς we have two waies of discerning; first, by considering the word in the few other places of the New Testament: Act. 20. 20. οὐδὲν ὑπεστειλάμην τῶν συμφερόντων τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι ὑμῖν, I did not withdraw, or hold back, from declaring to you any of those things that were profitable for you, and almost in the same words and sense v. 27. οὐ γὰρ ὑπεστειλάμην τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι, &c. I did not withdraw, or withhold, my self from declaring to you the whole counsel of God. So in Phavorinus, ὑποστειλάμην, ὑποκρυψάμην hiding himself, getting out of the way, and ὑπεστειλάμην, παρητησάμην, the word used c. 12. 25. for detractare, to get off from any employment, to be unwilling to enter upon it, to hang back, to refuse; so ὑπέστειλεν ἑαυτὸν, Gal. 2. 12. he stunk away, withdrew himself, got out of their company, and that as an effect of fear, φοβούμενος, &c. fearing the Jewish Christians. So Phavorinus again, ὑποστειλάμενος, φοβηθείς, and ὑποστέλλεται, φεύγει, fearing, running away. And so here the matter of the discourse being exhortation and encouragement to constancy in the Christian profession, in despight of all the terrors and assaults that lay on them from the Jewes at that time, and that upon constant expectation of receiving a rich reward, deliverance here within a while, if they live and continue constant, and eternal blisse in another world, for all that they could suffer here, (which is the meaning of the παῤῥησία confidence, &c. ver. 35.) it will be most agreeable that the just man's living by faith in the beginning of v. 38. should be his patient, cheerful, constant continuance in the Christian profession, meerly upon the strength of the promises that are made to courage and constancy, the promised deliverance in this, v. 36, & 37. and eternity in another world: and contrary to that, the ὑποστολὴς drawing back here, and ὑποστολὴ v. 39. must needs be a fainting in the course, a pusillanimous falling off, a detractation or failing in point of perseverance, caused by fear or pusillanimity. And this will likewise appear by a second medium, by looking into the prophet Habakkuk, ch. 2. 4. from whence 'tis clear those words immediately precedent are cited, ὁ δίκαιος ἐκ πίστεως ζήσεται, the just shall live by faith. If that place of Habakkuk be observed carefully in the Septuagint and the Hebrew, it will not be improbable which some have surmised, that the Septuagint read the Hebrew words a little otherwise then now we read them; not עפלה, arrogans fuit, was lifted up, as we read in the beginning of the verse, nor נפשו his soul, but עלפה for the former, and נפשי my soul for the latter. Now the word עלף which they are surmised to have read there, is perfectly answerable to the ὑποστολὴ here (as the נפשי my soul is rendred here ψυχή μου my soul, otherwise then the Hebrew there will regularly bear it) for the Hebrew signifies primarily texit, covered, (and so ὑποστολὴς was rendred by ὑποκρυπτὴς being hidden, out of Phavorinus) and then also it signifies turbatus fuit, was frighted, or troubled, (which they that are, slink, or hide themselves out of the way.) So Isa. 50. 20. Thy children עלפו, the Chaldee reads, were troubled, the Septuagint, ἐταράχθησαν were in distresse or great fear; and Jonah 4. 8. 'tis rendred ὠλιγοψύχει, was ready to faint; and so Am. 8. 13. the Targum explain it by ישתלהון, they shall be weary, or faint, and so in other places, the Septuagint render it by ἐκλείπειν fainting or failing: and so the Septuagint, if they read as is surmised, will seem to have taken it in Habakkuk, He that falls off, or faints, the cowardly or fearful, my soul doth not like him. But others that have considered that place in Habakkuk, conceive the ordinary Hebrew reading may be well retained, the word עפל being of the same signification with עלף Jonah 4. 8. ויתעלף & defecit, and so Isa. 51. 20. בניך עלפו thy sonnes have fainted. Thus Rabbi Tanchum renders it by withdrawing himself, being far removed, and that is all one with our notion of ὑποστολὴς. And the Arabick word which is answerable to it signifies negligere, alio animum avertere, to neglect, to turn away his mind; and so that is agreeable also. Thus ישר, which in the latter part of the verse ordinarily signifies right, is frequently rendred ἀρέσκειν pleased, and so is all one with εὐδοκεῖ· and then נפשו his soul may be retained also, meaning Gods soul, from whom he averts, which therefore the Septuagint thought fit to expresse by ψυχή μου, my, that is, Gods soul, in like manner as they have done Psal. 5. 9. where the Hebrew hath, his strength, and they read τὸ κράτος μου, my strength. See Mr. Pocock Miscell. p. 45. And all this sets down the true notion of the word in this place, thus; But if he that should live by his faith, shall cowardly withdraw himself from the publick worship of Christ, v. 25. (as Ignatius saith they did which had received the infusions of the Gnosticks, Εὐχαριστίας καὶ προσευχῆς ἀπέχονται, Ep. ad Smyrn. they abstain from the Eucharist, and from prayer, that is, publick assemblies, and exhorts them to mend that fault, πυκνότερον συναγωγαὶ γινέσθωσαν, ad Polyc. Let there be more frequent assemblies, and so again ad Ephes.) if they withdraw from the ἄθλησις the patient, magnanimous encounter of afflictions, v. 32. from the παῤῥησία or confident profession of the truth, v. 35. (in expectation of the future reward) reward) from the ὑπομονὴ patience, and doing the will of God, v. 36. and from the faith, v. 38. whereby we depend ſecurely on the promiſes of Chriſt, with confidence that they ſhall be performed to us, If, ſaith the Author, the juſt, the Chriſtian prove thus puſillanimous, hang back from this performance of his duty, if by afflictions he be disheartned and terrified, Gods ſoul hath no pleaſure in him, he is utterly rejected and disliked by God. And thus, v. 39. ὑποστολὴ cowardiſe is directly ſet oppoſite to πίστις faith, as περιποίησις ψυχῆς, ſaving the ſoul, or life, to the ἀπώλεια deſtruction or looſing of it.

ὑποστολὴ

d. Περιποίησις ψυχῆς

V. 39. Saving of the ſoul] The word περιποίησις ſignifies acquiring, purchaſing, getting, poſſeſſing. So περιποίησις δόξης, purchaſing of glory, 2 Theſſ. 2. 14. περιποίησις σωτηρίας, purchaſing, or acquiring, of ſalvation, 1 Theſſ. 5. 9. But Phavorinus, who hath that notion of it, gives us alſo περιποίησις σωτηρία καὶ διασώσεις, ſaving, delivering; and ſo being here ſet oppoſite to ἀπώλεια deſtruction, and joyned with ψυχῆς of the ſoul, or life, it ſeems moſt probably to ſignifie as κτᾶσθαι ψυχὴν to poſſeſſe the ſoul, Luk. 21. 19. (which is the ſame with περιποίησις ψυχῆς, ſaving the ſoul here; ſo ſaith Phavorinus, Κτῆσις, περιποίησις, poſſeſſing is purchaſing) is σῴζειν ψυχὴν to ſave or preſerve the life, Mar. 8. 35. Luk. 9. 24. See Note on Eph. 2. d. 1 Pet. 2. c.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XI.

2. 1. And that you may know to what your being Chriſtians, and your profeſſing the faith of Chriſt, obligeth you in this matter, you may conſider what Faith is, a confident dependence on God for the performance of his promiſe, a being convinced of the truth of thoſe things of which we have no ocular or ſenſible demonſtration.

1. NOW Faith is the *[a] ſubſtance of things hoped for, the † evidence of things not ſeen.]

*confident expectation † conviction, ἔλεγχος

2. And that you may not look on this faith as a new and a ſtrange thing, ye may through all times ſee the examples of it among pious men, which may excite you to the practice and exerciſe of it at this time, now you have ſo much need of it, ch. 10. 36. For indeed ye may obſerve that this was it by which the Antients or Fathers of the Old Teſtament received a teſtimony of Gods approbation of, and reſpect unto them.

2. For by it the Elders * obtained a good report.]

*received a teſtimony ἐμαρτυρήθησαν

b. 3. One act of faith it is, by which we rightly apprehend the omnipotent power of God in creating the whole world, heaven and earth, meerly by a word, ſaying, Let there be light, &c. and there was light: and ſo by the ſame act of faith we ſee God can and doth produce effects quite diſtant from the ordinary courſe of nature, for ſo all this viſible world was framed, not out of things conſpicuous to our eyes, as now a man of a man, a tree from a kernel, &c. but by the meer command of God out of nothing, or out of the earth, which is deſcribed as an inviſible Chaos of confuſion, Gen. 1. 2. (And then why may we not believe God's promiſe in the like manner at this time, that he is able to bring you deliverance out of your preſent perſecutions, upon your continuing conſtant unto him, by thoſe ways that are leaſt diſcernible to you, meerly by acts of his own power and wiſdom?)

3. Through faith we underſtand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, ſo that things which are ſeen † were [b] not made of things which do appear.]

† were made not

4. Another act of faith it was (appliable alſo to your preſent purpoſe) which was diſcernible in Abel, who offered to God the firſtlings and the fat, Gen. 4. 4. that is, the beſt and faireſt that he had in all his flock, whereas Cain did not proportionably, but only brought of the fruit of the ground (without any choice of the beſt) an offering to God, v. 3. This Abel certainly did upon a belief of Gods eſſence and attributes, and a conſequent love of him, willing to give him that which is moſt precious; (and parallel to that is the faithful conſtant Chriſtian now, that will lay down his life for Chriſts ſake, ſuffer any thing, part with all that is moſt precious) and from this faith it was that God pronounced him a righteous perſon, and expreſſed his approbation of his ſacrifice; and from this it was that God ſaid of him that his blood cried from the ground, when he was dead, intimating that he had then a life with God, who was able to ſpeak to him (ſee Philo, li. Pejorem inſidiari meliori) and that God would avenge his blood, and the blood of all ſuch upon their perſecutors.

4. By faith Abel offered unto God * a more excellent ſacrifice then Cain, by which he obtained witneſſe that he was righteous, God teſtifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet ſpeaketh.]

*a ſacrifice exceeding that of Cain πλείονα θυσίαν παρὰ

5. By faith Enoch did that which was acceptable in the ſight of God, and was rewarded by God by being tranſlated to heaven, inſtead of dying (And that ſignifies that they that walk and perſevere in the ways of God, when they goe out of this world, they are never the worſe for it, they are removed to a place of endleſſe bliſſe.)

5. By faith Enoch was tranſlated that he ſhould not ſee death, and was not found, becauſe God had tranſlated him: for before his tranſlation he had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God.]

6. And this acceptation of God was a proof that he had faith, for otherwiſe his actions could not have been acceptable to God; for without believing the power, and wiſdome, and juſtice of God, 'tis impoſſible to doe any thing that can pleaſe God, or be rewarded by him: For he that undertakes the ſervice or worſhip of God in any kind, muſt believe that he is God, and that he rewards all his faithful ſervants, that doe what they are enabled to doe toward the ſearch and performance of his will. And he that doth believe this, what ſhould ever tempt him to forſake or diſobey him, when his ſincere, faithful performances, how dear ſoever they coſt him here, are ſure to be abundantly rewarded by God, and his forſaking and falling off to bring judgments and ruine upon him?

6. But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him: for he that cometh to God muſt believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him.]

7. A like example of faith we have in Noah, who believing the threats, and heeding the warning of God that foretold the drowning of the world, and aſſuring himſelf that God would deſtroy and drown the wicked of that age, and preſerve him and his family (an embleme of the Church of faithful obedient Chriſtians) did accordingly ſo fear the judgment of God denounced againſt the wicked, and believe Gods command of making an Ark for himſelf and his family, that he ſet preſently to making of that Ark, by that means to ſave both himſelf and his family from the Floud (Parallel to which is your belief of Gods threats and commands, and making uſe of that way of ſecuring your ſelves which Chriſt hath directed you, a careful obedience, and cloſe adhering to the commands of Chriſt in this time of approaching deſtruction;) and thus as a Prophet he foretold, and brought upon the whole world of ſinful men an univerſal deſtruction, and himſelf was left the only poſſeſſor of the earth, had it all for an inheritance to him and his poſterity, and no queſtion had the happineſſe of another world, as a reward of his pious fear and faith in God, and the actions which he did out of that principle.

7. By faith Noah being warned of God of things not ſeen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an Ark to the * ſaving of his houſe; by which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteouſneſſe which is † by faith.]

*delivering of his houſhold σωτηρίαν τῷ ἰδίῳ οἴκῳ
† according to κατὰ

8. A like act of faith was Abrahams obedience to Gods command of leaving his Country, and going whitherſoever God ſhould direct him, not knowing whither it was, only receiving a promiſe from God, that his poſterity ſhould be the poſſeſſors of that place whither he was appointed to goe, but no way aſſured that himſelf ſhould ever be owner of any part of it.

8. By faith Abraham, when he was called to goe out into a place which he ſhould afterward receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out, not knowing whither he went.]

9. By

9. By faith he ſojourned in the land of promiſe, as in a ſtrange countrey, dwelling in Tabernacles with Iſaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the ſame promiſes.] though he ſojourned in that land which was promiſed him, in the ſame manner as he ſhould if he and his ſeed had had nothing to doe with it (he and his ſons and his ſons ſons dwelling in it in Tabernacles, erected for a tranſitory paſſage through it, and not in houſes, as in a place of poſſeſſion, and thus they lived all their lives long till Jacob was removed into Ægypt) yet he firmly believed that his ſeed ſhould poſſeſſe that land, and was himſelf very well ſatisfied without it;

9. And accordingly a like act of faith it was in him, that

10. For he looked for a City which hath foundations, whoſe builder and maker is God.]

10. Upon this ground of Chriſtian faith, that God had

* for him an abiding firm building, which after a pilgrims life expected him in another world, (ſee 2 Cor. 5. 1. & Heb. 12. 28.) and would plentifully reward all his obedience, though he had no other reward to receive in this life.

† even ſo

11. Through faith † alſo Sarah her ſelf received ſtrength to conceive ſeed, and was delivered of a child when ſhe was paſt age, becauſe ſhe judged him faithful who had promiſed.]

11. By the like belief and relying on Gods power and providence, againſt all probabilities to the contrary, Sarah being both barren, and of an age paſt child-bearing, did not only by her handmaid Hagar, but of her own womb, and that by Abraham, when he was very old alſo, receive ſtrength to conceive and bring forth a ſon, having no ground to believe this, or hope it poſſible, but that God had promiſed it, and ſhe was confident he would not break his promiſe, but perform it.

* dead in theſe reſpects τῶν νενεκρωμένων

12. Therefore ſprang there even of one, and him * as good as dead, ſo many as the ſtars of the sky in multitude, and as the ſand which is by the ſea ſhore innumerable.]

12. And as the reward of their faith of this, they became ſo fruitful, that from one Abraham (called by that title of One, Mal. 2. 15.) and that at a time when he was paſt power of getting children, there yet came a moſt numerous progeny, according to the promiſe of God made to him, and laid hold on and depended on by his faith.

* By or according to faith all theſe died Κατὰ πίστιν ἀπέθανον

† ſojourners on the land παροίκους ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς

13. * Theſe all died in faith, not having received the promiſes, but having ſeen them afar off, c and were perſwaded of them, and embraced them, and confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and † pilgrims on the earth.]

13. And this his numerous poſterity did not, till the time of Joſhua, come to enjoy this promiſed land of Canaan; only as Abraham went on cheerfully, as believing that four hundred years after the promiſes ſhould be performed to his ſeed, ſo did they comfort themſelves with the aſſurance that their poſterity ſhould enjoy them if they did not, and meanwhile calling themſelves gueſts and ſtrangers in that promiſed land, Gen. 23. 4. and 47. 9. and not poſſeſſors of it: (which is an inforcement of that conſtancy which is now called for of Chriſtians in perſecution, upon ſtrength of that promiſe of the approaching coming of Chriſt to reſcue them, which in caſe it ſhould not come in their daies, yet being ſo ſure to come to their poſterity, ſo much ſooner then the Canaan came to Abrahams poſterity, this may be matter of faith and encouragement to Chriſtians as reaſonably as the aſſured expectation of thoſe promiſes was to Abraham and his poſterity.) c.

14. For they that ſay ſuch things declare plainly that they ſeek a Country.]

14. And this language of theirs, calling themſelves ſojourners in Canaan, and not poſſeſſors of it, ſignifies that they did not think themſelves at home, but that they were in purſuit of a Country.

* if they had mentioned ἐμνημόνευον † they had εἶχον

15. And truly * if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, † they might have had opportunity to have returned.]

15. And that not their own Country Chaldæa, from whence Abraham firſt went out upon Gods command, for he and his poſterity had many ſeaſons to have gone back thither, if that had been the Country they look'd after.

16. But now they deſire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not aſhamed to be called their God; for he hath provided for them a City.]

16. But now 'tis clear that the Country which they profeſs'd to expect, was that promiſed to their poſterity, which being not come till after this life of theirs, was a type of heaven: and in having made this proviſion for them, God is moſt juſtly ſaid to be the God of Abraham, &c. for whom he made ſo rich a preparation, deſtining the land of Canaan, and in that a famous City Jeruſalem (though it was not yet imaginable how it ſhould be built) for their poſterity, and in that myſtically foreſhewing an eternal City and Kingdome, the Canaan and Jeruſalem above, which they ſhould have which continued conſtant to Chriſt, and obtained not the promiſes in this life.

* having admitted or entertained the promiſes ὁ τὰς ἐπαγγελίας ἀναδεξάμενος

† ſhall the ſeed be called to thee, κληθήσεταί σοι σπέρμα

17. By faith Abraham when he was tryed offered up Iſaac, and * he that had received the promiſes offered up his only-begotten ſon;

18. Of whom it was ſaid, that in Iſaac † ſhall thy ſeed be called:]

17, 18. Another eminent act of faith it was in Abraham, that upon Gods command to ſacrifice his only ſon Iſaac, he preſently and readily obeyed, took him and carried him to the Mountain, and was ready to have offered him up, if God had not ſtopt him: and having entertained and embraced and firmly believed the promiſes of a numerous ſeed and people that ſhould ſpring from him, and having no other ſon but this from whom they ſhould ſpring, nor poſſibility in nature, nor promiſe above nature, that he ſhould have any more children, but a plain affirmation that this people, which ſhould be counted his ſeed, to whom the promiſes belonged, ſhould come from Iſaac, he did yet abſolutely obey that command of Gods, in reſolving to kill that ſon on whom all thoſe promiſes depended, and yet never doubted of the pertormance of the promiſes,

* in a figure he had alſo received him, ἐν παραβολῇ αὐτὸν ἐκομίσατο

19. Accounting that God was able to raiſe him up even from the dead; from whence * alſo he received him in a figure.]

19. Reſolving with himſelf that rather then the promiſe ſhould not be performed, which was made to him of a numerous poſterity, to ſpring particularly from Iſaac, God, who was able to raiſe from the dead, would ſo raiſe Iſaac when he ſhould have killed him, having withall a kind of pledge to aſſure him that he would doe that, becauſe when he was conceived and born to him, it was a kind of coming from the dead, viz. from Sarahs womb, when ſhe was paſt age of child-bearing, and from himſelf, who in this reſpect of getting children was mortified and dead alſo, v. 11, 12. (And this again is an example to encourage and confirm the faith of Chriſtians, that in obedience to Chriſt they continue conſtant to death it ſelf, or the utmoſt danger of it, knowing that God will performe his promiſes to them, yield them the promiſed deliverance, though they cannot imagine the manner how.)

† by faith concerning things to come Πίστει περὶ μελλόντων

20. † d By faith Iſaac bleſſed Jacob and Eſau concerning things to come.]

20. An act of faith alſo it was in Iſaac that, after that manner that is ſtoried of him, he bleſſed his two ſons Jacob and Eſau, that is, prayed for bleſſings on them, nay, as a Prophet, foretold from God what ſhould befall the poſterity of each of them; firſt, aſſuring himſelf that the promiſe made to Abraham ſhould be fulfilled in Jacob, Gen. 28. 4, 5. and ſo that what he had done, though through error, miſtaking Jacob for Eſau, would yet certainly be performed to him by God, Gen. 27. 33, 37. And for Eſau, he foretold alſo of his poſterity, that at length they ſhould be freed from their ſubjection to the Jewes, v. 39. which was a kind of bleſſing of him alſo, although it were not performed to him perſonally, but to his poſterity many years after. (And the like faith will it be now in the Chriſtians, that ſhall aſſure themſelves that God will now bleſſe and preſerve the faithful conſtant believers, give them deliverances from their preſſures, although they be not yet preſent but future.) d.

* worſhipped upon προσεκύνησεν ἐπὶ

21. By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, bleſſed both the ſons of Joſeph, and * worſhipped leaning upon the e top of his ſtaffe.]

21. Thus Jacob, a little before his death, roſe and ſet himſelf up upon his bed, and leaning upon his ſtaffe, (which was an embleme of faith) depending and relying firmly upon Gods promiſe, he prayed and worſhipped God, and bleſſed prophetically Manaſſeh and Ephraim, foretold how God ſhould deal with them and the tribes that ſprang from them, after his and their death. e.

22. By the ſame faith, and aſſurance that God would make good this promiſe of giving Canaan to Abraham's ſeed, though 'twere not yet given, Joſeph, before his death a little, mentioned the Iſraelites going out of Ægypt, and commanded that when they went, his bones ſhould be carried with them; which argued his aſſurance, without all doubt, that they ſhould poſſeſſe that promiſed land, and be delivered out of the Ægyptian thraldome that they were for ſome years to lye under.

22. By faith Joſeph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Iſrael: and gave commandment concerning his bones.]

23. Another act of faith it was in Moſes's parents to break through all fear, to hide the child, and endevour to ſave him in ſpight of the King's bloudy law, having been aſſured from God that there ſhould be born from among them one that ſhould deliver them out of Ægypt, and judging by ſomewhat extraordinary in Moſes's look, that he was that perſon thus promiſed them. (And a like act of faith it will now be, thus confidently to believe this promiſed deliverance, and to act accordingly.)

23. By faith Moſes, when he was born, was hid three moneths of his parents, becauſe they ſaw he was a † proper child, and they were not afraid of the Kings commandment.] † comely ἀστεῖον

24. An act of faith it was in Moſes, that when he came to age, he would not accept the honour of being adopted by Pharaoh's daughter;

24. By faith Moſes, * when he was come to years, refuſed to be called the ſon of Pharaoh's daughter;] * being grown big μέγας γενόμενος

25. Chuſing rather to endure any affliction that ſhould fall on the Iſraelites, then to enjoy all the pleaſures and advantages of a palace, with the guilt of that cruel ſin of perſecuting the children of God, which he could not eſcape doing, if he lived in that court, when he came to be of age;

25. Chuſing rather to ſuffer afflictions with the people of God, then to † enjoy the pleaſures of ſin for a ſeaſon;] † to have the temporary enjoyment or delight of ſin πρόσκαιρον ἔχειν ἁμαρτίας τέρψιν

26. And counting that reproach which Chriſt & Chriſtians endure now, and which the children of Iſrael, the anointed of the Lord, Pſal. 105. 15. then endured in Ægypt, (being moſt reproachfully afflicted and oppreſſed) a far more deſirable thing then all the wealth and power in Ægypt; looking upon the great difference of rewards between thoſe two ſtates in another world, wealth and greatneſſe and perſecuting Gods children being attended, as Dives, with flames, and affliction and reproach with heaven and bliſſe, like Lazarus. (And the like faith will it be in the Chriſtian, to renounce all thoſe ſecular advantages that the Gnoſticks now promiſe men that will forſake the pure faith, and joyn with them in compliance with and aſſiſting the perſecutors; and rather to ſuffer any the ſharpeſt perſecutions from the Jews, then thus joyn and concur with them in perſecuting the Chriſtians.)

26. Eſteeming the reproach of Chriſt greater riches then the treaſures in Ægypt: for he had reſpect unto the recompence of the reward.]

27. So after, it was alſo an act of his faith, and obedience to the word of God, delivered him in the buſh, that, being threatned by the King, if he ſhould ever any more mention the going out of the people of Iſrael, Exod. 10. 28. he went out from the King courageouſly, and having told Pharaoh that he would never treat with him more about it, he conducted the Iſraelites out of Ægypt, depending conſtantly on God, and as firmly, as if he had ſeen him preſent to ſecure and defend him. (And the like faith it is to confeſſe Chriſt now, be the danger never ſo great and immineent of doing ſo.)

27. By faith he forſook Ægypt, not fearing the wrath of the King: for he * endured as ſeeing him who is inviſible.] * was conſtant ἐκαρτέρησεν

28. Another act of faith it was and obedience to God, in Moſes, that he did that which he did about the Paſſeover, and ſprinkling the ſide-poſtes of the door, to deliver by that means all the firſt-born of the Iſraelites: (by which was alſo typified the redemption wrought by Chriſt, and that which is now approaching foretold and promiſed by him, that he that endureth to the end ſhall eſcape, that the believers ſhall be ſealed and ſecured, before the deſtruction come out againſt this people, ſee Rev. 4. 7, &c.)

28. Through faith he kept the Paſſeover, and the ſprinkling of bloud, leſt he that deſtroyed the firſt-born ſhould touch him.]

f. g. 29. And an act of faith it was in the people of Iſrael, that they ventured into the Erythræan ſea, and went through part of it, as if it had been firm ground; whereas the Ægyptians, perſecuting and trying to follow them, were drowned. (And the like faith will now ſecure the conſtant ſufferers, whilſt their perſecutors are overwhelmed and deſtroyed by the ſame means that gives them deliverance.)

29. By faith they f paſſed through g the Red ſea, as by dry land: which the Ægyptians aſſaying to doe were drowned.]

30. An act of faith it was in Joſhua, and the people in obedience to him, to go about Jericho ſeven days together with the Ark before them, upon which followed the falling of the walls of it. (And the like in the Chriſtians now; to truſt confidently in God's deliverance, although they uſe no artifices, or ſecular policies, or means of their own to work it for them.)

30. By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compaſſed about ſeven days.]

31. An act of faith it was in Rahab, who had formerly been an Idolatreſſe and an harlot, (and now kept an Inne or Victualling-houſe) to entertain the ſpies ſent by the Iſraelites ſafely, believing that God whom they worſhipp'd to be the true God, whereupon ſhe was ſaved alive, when the reſt of the incredulous idolatrous people of that land were deſtroyed. (And the like faith will it be in them now that ſhall uſe all kindneſſe and fidelity to the perſecuted Chriſtians, and the doing thus will be much a more probable way to ſecure them that doe it, then all the Gnoſtick treacheries and compliances with the perſecutors.)

31. By faith the harlot Rahab periſhed not with them that † believed not, when ſhe had received the ſpies with peace.] † obeyed not ἀπειθήσασι

32, 33. What need I give you any more examples of this matter? 'Twere infinite to enlarge on this ſubject, to tell you all that might be ſaid for your encouragment to truſt God, and adhere conſtantly to him: ſuch were the great champions of Gods people, who depending on Gods ſtrength and bleſſing, conſtantly and fearleſly diſcharged their duty, and by Gods eſpecial motion, and their obedience thereto, were raiſed up to govern the Iſraelites, and to fight their battels for them, and to make conqueſts, Gedeon over the Madianites, Barak over the Canaanites, Samſon and Samuel over the Philiſtines, Jephtha over the Ammonites, David over the Amalekites, Jebuſites, Moabites, Philiſtines, Idumæans, Syrians: and all theſe by faith, (not thinking they ſhould be able to vanquiſh them without fighting, but) fighting valiantly, and depending on God's promiſe and power to give them victories, with ſmall as well as with great numbers, who again by faith lived godly and righteous lives, received great mercies from God miraculouſly, onely by the ſtrength of his having promiſed it. And ſome of them, Daniel by name, (contained under the word prophets ver. 32.) obtained that miracle of mercy and deliverance from God, that the Lions, when he was thrown into their den, did him no hurt:

32. * And what ſhall I more ſay? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samſon, and of Jephtha, of David alſo, and Samuel, and of the Prophets;

34. Others were ſo favoured by God, that the fire did them no hurt when they (that is, the three children) were caſt into it; others eſcaped preſent danger of being killed by the ſword, as David from Saul, Elias and Michaiah from Ahab, the Jews in Heſter from Haman; others were recovered from deſperate diſeaſes, as Job and and Hezekiah, others became wonderfully courageous in fighting, as Jonathan, &c. and routed the armies of the Heathen Canaanites, &c. very often.

† by resurrection ἐξ ἀναστάσεως

35. Women received their dead † raised to life again: and others were [h] tortured not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection.]

35. Some women (as the widow of Sarepta, 1 Kin. 17. 21. and the Shunamitish woman, 2 Kin. 4.) had their children restored from death to life, upon their entertaining the prophets of God, cherishing and relieving Gods servants, Elias and Elisha: Others when rack'd and tormented for the acknowledgment of the truth, had no desire to be spared, but refused to be delivered when they might, meerly by the strength of faith, believing a resurrection to life eternal after death, and looked upon that as much more desirable then a present remission of torments. Thus the mother and seven children 2 Mac. 6. 19, 30. and ch. 7. 9.

36. And others had trials of * cruel mockings and scourgings, yea moreover of bonds and imprisonment.]

36. Others, as Michaiah and Jeremiah and the Maccabees, had patience tried by whipping, very reproachfull and painfull, others by shackles and imprisonment, and so Joseph in Ægypt, and others.

† were burnt with hot irons ἐν want, distressed, ill handled, ἐστερούμενοι, θλιβόμενοι, κακουχούμενοι

37. They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, † [i] were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandred about in sheep-skins and goat-skins, being * destitute, afflicted, tormented:]

37. Some were stoned, as Zacharias; others sawn asunder, (as Isaiah by Manasses, say the Jews) others burnt alive, or broiled, or run through with hot irons, as the Maccabees; others, very many, kill'd by the sword; others, the prophets that preached the coming of Christ, meanly arrayed in skins, as Ezechiel, John Baptist, &c. being very poor, in great dangers, and meeting with very ill usage;

38. Used thus, as men that were too good to live in this wicked world, and accordingly others of them lived recluse and retired from the world, in deserts and hills, and caves of the earth.

† received testimony μαρτυρηθέντες

39. And these all having † obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise:]

39. And all these valiant champions and servants of God last mentioned v. 36, &c. and before v. 8, 13. being much commended for their faith, did not in their time receive the promises made to Abraham, had no deliverance in this life from their persecutors:

* God foreseeing somewhat better concerning us, that they might not be perfected without us, τοῦ Θεοῦ περί ἡμῶν κρείττον τι προβλεψαμένου

40. *God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be [k] made perfect.]

40. God having determined this as the time most congruous in his wisdome to give the utmost completion to all those prophecies and promises to send the Messias into the world, and, as a consequent of his resurrection from the dead, to grant us those privileges and advantages that the fathers had not enjoyed, a rest after long persecutions, a victory over all oppolers of Christ's Church, that so what was promised to Abraham's seed, Gen. 22. 17. that they should possesse the gates of their enemies, being but imperfectly fulfill'd to the fathers, might have the utmost completion in the victory and flourishing of the Christian faith over all the enemies thereof.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Ὑπόστασις

V. 1. Substance] The use of this word ὑπόστασις, both here and in the other places of the New Testament, will appear by observing the Greek rendring of the Hebrew יחל and תוחלת from it. The word signifies to hope, and in Piel to expect with some confidence, and so to stay and wait for any thing, generally rendred by the Targum ואורך and he expected, Gen. 8. 10, and 12. but sometimes by מחצפין ausi sunt, Ezech. 13. 6. they took confidence. Now this word Mic. 5. 7. is by the Greek translators rendred ὑποστῆ, where the Hebrew יחל לבני אדם he shall hope in the sons of men, is by the Targum rendred מכתר he shall expect, we render it, wait for them. The sense beareth depending on them for aid, and so subsisting in them, and that is the literal notation of the ὑποστῆ. Thus likewise the Noun תוחלת ἐλπὶς, hope, Lam. 3. 18. expectation, waiting, is rendred ὑπόστασις Psal. 39. 8. and so in the book of Esdras, 2 Esdr. 8. They who have not ὑπόστασιν καλῶν ἔργων the hope, or confidence, of good works (that μέγας παῤῥησίας θησαυὸς in Plutarch) that great treasure of confidence, that ariseth from well doing. Agreeable to this notion of the word is the acception of it in every place of the New Testament, (save onely that Heb. 1. 3. where speaking of Christ he is called χαρακτὴρ ὑποστάσεως αὐτοῦ, the character of his subsistence.) Thus 2 Cor. 9. 4. μὴ καταισχυνθῶμεν ἐν τῇ ὑποστάσει ταύτῃ τῆς καυχήσεως, that we be not put to shame in this confidence of boasting, that is, in having had that confidence of their liberality and readinesse, as to boast of them in that behalf. For to that belongs that great shame, in case his confidence should miscarry, as that hope which is rightly grounded upon firm promises ἐ καταισχύνει doth not put to shame, saith the Apostle, Rom. 5. 5. and to the same purpose c. 9. 33. To the same sense is that in the same words c. 11. 17. which is explain'd after by ἐάν τις παμῷ, πάμῳ κἀγώ, If any have confidence, I also have confidence, according to that mention'd from the Targum, Ezech. 13. where the Hebrew answerable to ὑπόστασις is rendred daring; and so Polybius seems to have used the word ὑπόστασις for courage and valour or good assurance. So oft in * Diodorus Siculus, Ἐπῆρεν αὐτὸν πρὸς τὴν ὑπόστασιν ταύτην ὄνειρος, a dream raised him to this confidence, giving him a vision of great advancement and glory, and παρώξυνε πρὸς τὴν ὑπόστασιν τῶν Φιλομήλου, he incited them to keep the constancy, or courage, of Philomelus. So in * Josephus, ἀμετάλλακτον αὐτῶν ὑποστάσιν their immutable courage or constancy. Thus Cicero defineth Faith, Fides est dictorum conventorúmque constantia & veritas, It is a constancy and truth of all that hath been said and agreed. And so the Hebrew and Chaldee word for faith אמן, and חימנות, and so also the Arabick אמאנה signifies firmness, constancy, stability. So Heb. 3. that which is v. 6. ἐὰν πρὸς τὴν παῤῥησίαν καὶ τὸ καύχημα τῆς ἐλπίδος μέχρι τέλους βεβαίαν κατάσχωμεν, if we hold fast the confidence and the boasting of hope firm untill the end (as the condition of being Christians or the household of Christ) is expressed v. 14. in this other phrase, little differing from it, ἐὰν περ τὴν ἀρχὴν τῆς ὑποστάσεως μέχρι τέλους βεβαίαν κατάσχωμεν, If we hold fast the beginning of confidence, that is, that confidence exemplified to us by Christ, which we had from the beginning, firm unto the end. And so here, faith is ἐλπιζομένων ὑπόστασις, the expectation (or dependence, or confidence, or the confident expectation) of things hoped for by us, (and this opposed to the ὑποστολὴ falling off, or cowardly behaviour, mentioned in the conclusion of the former Chapter;) the promise of Christ being the object as of our hope so of our faith also, and differing very little in that particular, but that faith seems to be the greater adherence, to have the lesse of doubting, the more of confidence in it.

* De bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 12.

b. Τὰ φαινόμενα

V. 3. Not made of things which doe appear] Μὴ φαινόμενα things that appear not seems to denote the earth, Gen. 1. 2. in that ſtate when 'tis ſaid to be tohu vabohu, without form and void, or, as the Septuagint render it, ἀόρατος, inviſible, not to be ſeen.

c. καὶ πεισθέντες

V. 13. And were perſwaded] The words καὶ πεισθέντες, and being perſwaded, which are added in ſome Copies between ἰδόντες ſeeing, and καὶ ἀσπασάμενοι and embracing, are wanting in the antient MSS. of the greateſt reputation, and, beſides others mentioned by other men, in a very antient one of Mag. Coll. in Oxford.

d. Περὶ μελλόντων Ἰσαὰκ

V. 20. By faith Iſaac bleſſed Jacob] Some difficulty here is, where it is ſaid of Iſaac that by faith concerning things to come he bleſſed Jacob and Eſau, to what part of the ſtory in Geneſis it ſhall belong. In ch. 27. he bleſſeth Jacob, v. 28, 29. God give thee of the dew of heaven—— Let people ſerve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mothers ſons bow down to thee—— But it will, firſt, be hard to affirm, that he here bleſs'd Jacob by faith, when it is evident he knew not that it was Jacob whom he thus bleſs'd; and ſecondly, Iſaac thinking verily that it was Eſau whom he thus bleſs'd, it could not be an act of faith in him, or reconcileable with that which God had revealed to Rebecca, c. 25. 23. (that the elder ſhould ſerve the younger) thus to pronounce or foretel of Eſau, that he ſhould be lord over his brethren. For theſe two reaſons it will not be fit to referre this of the Apoſtle to that part of the ſtory wherein blind Iſaac, contrary to his intention, thus bleſſed Jacob. The next paſſage in the ſtory will, I ſuppoſe, be much more commodious for the turn, when upon Eſau's coming with his veniſon, Iſaac finds himſelf to have been abuſed, and trembling very exceedingly, tells him that Jacob had brought him veniſon already, and he had eaten and bleſs'd him, yea and he ſhall be bleſſed, v. 33. and again, v. 37. that he had made Jacob his lord, and given him all his brethren for his ſervants. Where Iſaac diſcerning what he had done, though by miſtake, remembers the Oracle that God had delivered before their birth, and conſidering how punctually the bleſſing thus given to Jacob by him did agree to that, he doth now by faith reſolve, that ſo it ſhould certainly be, that what his affection had deſigned to Eſau, was by God promiſed to Jacob, and conſequently ſhould irreverſibly belong to him, and thereupon he confirmes it anew to Jacob, Yea and he ſhall be bleſſed, and I have made him thy lord. And ſo this was the bleſſing wherewith by faith Iſaac bleſſed Jacob. Then for his bleſſing of Eſau, that viſibly followes, v. 39. Thy dwelling ſhall be the fatneſs of the earth—— (and in the body of it again inſerted a farther confirmation of Jacobs bleſſing, by telling Eſau, thou ſhalt ſerve thy brother, v. 40.) and it ſhall come to paſs that when thou ſhalt have the dominion, thou ſhalt break his yoke from off thy neck. Where it muſt farther be ſuppoſed that Iſaac, beyond that prediction before their birth, that the elder ſhould ſerve the younger, had received from God another Oracle concerning his two ſonnes, that as the poſterity of Jacob, the Jews, ſhould have the preeminence and dominion for ſome time over the Edumæans, the poſterity of Eſau, ſo in proceſs of time, the Jewes ſhould be brought down, and ſo the Edumæans be quitted of that yoke; and accordingly Iſaac foretelling this is here as truly ſaid to have by faith bleſs'd Eſau. And this perhaps was it upon which Iſaac before had pronounced that bleſſing upon him which he took to be Eſau, Be lord over thy brethren—— which though, in reſpect of the times next inſuing, it were true of Jacob (and accordingly was in Gods providence thus directed to him) yet in reſpect of the latter times, when the Jewes ſhould be brought low, was to be truely appliable to Eſau, and ſo might by faith be deſigned by Iſaac to him.

e. ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδου

V. 21. Top of his ſtaffe] The Hebrew מטה ſignifies both a bed and a ſtaffe, perhaps antiently the very ſame word for both, though now Grammarians have pointed it diverſly, and made a difference of ſound alſo betwixt them. The Hieruſalem Targum reads it, Laudes Dei cecinit ſuper ſpondam ſuam, He ſang the praiſes of God upon his bed-ſtead. The Greek here followes the Septuagint's tranſlation, and there is no queſtion of the truth of it: and indeed it may well be that both notions of the Hebrew may here ſtand, and the truth be, that ariſing out of his bed, he ſate on it, and lean'd, as ſick perſons do, upon his ſtaffe, for we after read, that he gathered up, or returned again, his feet into the bed, Gen. 49. 33. which is a ſigne that he was before riſen out of it, and ſate on the ſide with his feet on the ground, which was very fit for this poſture of leaning on his ſtaffe.

f. διαβαίνειν

V. 29. Paſſed through] Διαβαίνειν doth not here ſignifie to goe from one ſide to the other, quite through, or croſſe the ſea (for the Iſraelites journeying makes it appear that they did not ſo) but to goe in into part of the channel, Exod. 14. 22. and paſſe on there a good way in the midſt, v. 29. and then to come out again on the ſame ſide; for ſo the Iſraelites did, as appears by the ſtory. This is expreſſed Pſal. 137. 14. by God's dividing the Red ſea, and leading them בתוכו διὰ μέσου αὐτῆς, by, or through, the midſt of it, agreeably to what is now ſaid.

g. Ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα

Ib. The Red ſea] That ſea through part of which the Iſraelites paſſed (and in which the Ægyptians were drowned) is in the Hebrew ſtyled ים סוף mare algoſum, the ſea that was ſo full of weeds, &c. (See Pſal. 106. 7. and 137. 13.) By the ſide or ſhore of this ſea did the poſterity of Eſau or Edom dwell. Now Edom is by the Septuagint called Ἐρυθρὸς red, becauſe as that comes from the Hebrew אדם red, with a very little change of one letter ו inſerted אדום, ſo from ἐρυθρὸς red doth the word Ἐρυθρᾶς alſo vary as little. From hence alſo (and not from Erythræus a king drowned there, as Diodorus Siculus ſaith) it is that this ſea is by them rendred ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα in thoſe places of the Pſalmiſt (and elſewhere,) where the Hebrew onely have ים סוף the weedy ſea, and accordingly it is here retained ἐρυθρὰ θάλασσα, meaning that Edumæan ſea, which by analogie would rather be ſtyled Ἐρυθρᾶια then Ἐρυθρὰ, the Erythræan or Edumæan, then the Red ſea.

h. τυμπανιζόμενοι

V. 35. Tortured] What is here meant by τυμπανιζόμενοι I ſhall propoſe by way of conjecture, by theſe ſteps and degrees. That this puniſhment was that inflicted by Antiochus on the Maccabees there is little queſtion, the many circumſtances here agreeing with thoſe there doe make it manifeſt: as firſt, the word τυμπανιζόμενοι here, and there; ſecondly, their not accepting deliverance here, ſet down there diſtinctly, 2 Mac. 6. 30. then thirdly, the mention of a better reſurrection here, compared with that their comfort there, c. 7. 9. and fourthly, the ἐμπαιγμοὶ contumelious uſages here, v. 36. and there 2 Mac. 7. 7. ſuch as are mentioned 1 Sam. 31. 4. and are defined by Sophocles in Antigona, Τὸν θανόντ' ἐπικτανεῖν, καὶ ἐπελλίζειν πεπτῶτι κειμένῳ καὶ ἐμπαίζειν, to kill and inſult on the dead, and uſe him contumeliouſly; ſo fifthly, μάστιγες ſtripes here, and there v. 30, &c. ſixthly, the πεῖρα ἐμπαιγμῶν trial of contumelies here, and there the narration how thoſe ἐμπαιγμοὶ were to trie whether they would perſiſt or no; ſeventhly, the word, whether ἐπειράσθησαν tried, or ἐπυρώθησαν ſcorched, here v. 37. If it be the former, then it referres to πεῖρα trial, forementioned; if the latter, then to the burning them alive, and frying them in a pan, τηγανισμὸς, 2 Mac. 7. 5. This being premiſed for the general explication of this word and thoſe that follow, 'tis in the next place obſervable that Ariſtophanes hath this paſſage, Ὦ πύπαγα καὶ πώγωνες, where where the Scholiaſt hath obſerved two ſignifications of the word τύμπανον, which Phavorinus hath borrowed from him; firſt, for ξύλον ἐφ' ᾧ ἐτυμπάνιζον, an engine of wood upon which they puniſhed men in this manner, ἔχεσθαι γὰρ πύτη τῇ τιμωρίᾳ, for this was a kind of puniſhment, that is, τυμπανισμὸς was ſo; ſecondly, ξύλα οἷς τύπτουσι ἐν τοῖς δικαστηρίοις οἱ τιμωρούμενοι, cudgels with which they were beaten in their judicatories, or, as Heſychius and Suidas adde, ἰσχυρῶς πλήττουσι, are ſtrucken very ſtrongly. Thirdly, it may be obſerved, that here κύφωνες is joyned by Ariſtophanes with τύμπανα, and that κύφωνες are in that Scholiaſt, wooden jokes or clogs (for ſo κλοιὸς is turned into Engliſh by the change but of i into g, which is an ordinary tranſmutation, and eaſie for the ſound, i and g having the ſame ſound in many words) hanged to the neck, and mentioned Jer. 28. 14. where it ſignifies ſuch a joke of iron with ſuch a wooden clog faſtned to it, which both bound in the neck cloſe, and bowed the head down, and made it κύφων (from whence 'tis named;) and 'tis mentioned alſo by Ariſtotle, Pol. 5. δεδῆσθαι ἐν ἀγορᾷ ἐν κύφωνι, to be bound in the market-place with this joke. This being alſo obſerved, 'tis fourthly to be conſidered, that in * Lucian κύφωνες καὶ τροχοὶ are put together, as in Ariſtophanes τύμπανα καὶ κύφωνες· and therefore probably that τύμπανα in the former acception, for ξύλα ἐφ' οἷς, the wooden inſtruments on which they were puniſhed, are the ſame that τροχοὶ wheels in Lucian. To which purpoſe we find in antient Authors, that tympanum is machina ad aquam, lapides, &c. in altum ſubvehenda parata, an engine to lift up water, ſtones, &c. mentioned oft by Vitruvius in this ſenſe, and Nic. Perottus Cornucop. p. 34. by which it appears, that it was a wheel with teeth, like that upper great wheel in a mill, which cauſes the going about of the mill-ſtone. After this form, with no great difference, 'tis moſt probable was the τύμπανον on which men were puniſhed, viz. a wheel on which the man was tied, and ſo fetched up on high; and therefore Suidas adds κρεμᾶται he is hanged, and Heſychius, Ἐτυμπανίσθησαν, ἀνεκρεμάσθησαν, ἐσφαιρίσθησαν, they were hanged, they were carried about in a ſphare. This wheel was a kind of engine on which any were tormented, and no queſtion that which is mentioned 2 Mac. 6. 28. ἐπὶ τὸ τύμπανον ἐνδίως ἦλθε, he came preſently to the torment, and v. 19. ἐνδιατρίβων ἐπὶ τὸ τύμπανον παρεῖχε, he came voluntarily to the torment. From this cuſtome of hanging malefactors upon the tympanum, it is that Celſus in Origen. p. 81. ſpeaking of Chriſt, calls him ἄνδρα ἀτιμότατον, καὶ ἀντυμπανισθέντα, a moſt infamous perſon, put to death upon the tympanum, thinking his hanging on the croſſe to be that upon the tympanum. When the malefactors were thus hanged or faſtned to the tympanum, 'tis obſervable in the fifth place, that other puniſhments followed: firſt, flaying, whereupon in Heſychius ἐδάρη is flay'd is ſet to the explication of it; and ſo 2 Mac. 7. 7. τὸ δὲ κατασθέμενος τὸν δερὶ ἀφειδέστερον, they pull'd off the ſkin with the hairs (and ſo in Agathias l. 4. p. 128. where he diſcourſeth of the antiquity of that puniſhment, & fetcheth it from Sapores King of Perſia:) then ſecondly, upon examination of the perſon, and not yielding, but ſtill holding out againſt the torment, they proceeded either to ἀκρωτηριασμὸς, cutting off the extreme parts, hands and feet and tongue, or to βάσανος, rack, c. 7. 8. which was by blows inflicted with a cudgel or tympanum, c. 6. 30. (and therefore 1 Sam. 21. where the Septuagint read προσποιοῦτο καὶ ἐτυμπάνιζεν, Aquila reads προσίκνει beat him) and theſe blows were to death, as in the Maccabees 'tis clear, μᾶλλον δὲ ἕτοιμοι πληγαῖς πελιτῶν, being ready to die with the blows, and again when he ſaith, ἀσφαλῶς κατὰ τὸ σῶμα ἀλγηδόνας μαστιγούμενος, I am grievouſly pained with thoſe blows, it follows preſently μετήλλαξεν, he died, v. 31. From this uſe of the cudgel in this puniſhment of τυμπανισμὸς, it is that Polybius for τυμπανίζειν ſets ξυλοκοπεῖν to beat with cudgels, in reſpect of this one part of that puniſhment, not but that it had much more in it beſide, as beſide βάσανος rack and ἀκρωτηριασμὸς cutting off the extreme parts, formerly mentioned, (it ſeems by the ſtory of the Maccabees) τηγανισμὸς frying or broiling. By what hath been ſaid it appears that this puniſhment was, firſt, very Painful, ſecondly, Contumelious, thirdly, Capital. Firſt, very Painful; ſo Ariſtot. Rhet. 2. c. 5. mentions τοὺς ἤδη τυμπανιζομένους, men that are under that puniſhment, as thoſe that think themſelves δεινὰ πάντα πεπονθέναι, to have ſuffered all the ſad meaſure imaginable, and ἀνεψυγμένοι εἰς τὸ μέλλον, made ſoulleſſe and ſenſleſſe for what is behind. Secondly, moſt Contumelious; for ſo l. 3. Mac. ἀσχίστοις βασάνοις ἀντυμπανισθήσῃ, that puniſhment was a moſt ſhamefull torment. Thirdly, Capital; bringing death finally, though ſlowly, and therefore is named by Ariſtotle Rhet. 2. 5. among thoſe things which have no ἐλπὶς σωτηρίας hope of eſcaping, and he reckons Antiphon the Poet for one, c. 6. who ἀντυμπανιζόμενος, being thus puniſhed by Dionyſius, asked one of his companions jeſtingly, who of the ſpectators ſhould ſee them to morrow: ſo in Maccabees, ἕτοιμοι πληγαῖς πελιτῶσι μαστιγούμενοι, c. 6. they die with it; and ſo the King of Babylon, the third after Nebuchadnezzar, as * Euſebius cites it out of Polyhiſtor, ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων ἀντυμπανίζεται, was ſo uſed by his friends, and then it preſently follows ἀπολυμένου δὲ, and dying, &c. which is repeated in like manner by Beroſius l. 3. χαλδαϊκῶν in the Fragments ſet out by Joſ. Scaliger, where yet for καβασσοαρέχου in Euſebius, we find λοβοσσοαρχόδου, who, ſaith Scaliger, was certainly Belſhazzar, of whom ſaith Juſtin Martyr from Dan. 5. ἀντυμπανίσθη τὸ θηρίον the beaſt was put to that death, for which we now read in the Greek copie ἀνῃρέθη he was killed, and no more. Megaſthenes out of Abydenus calls him Λαβασσοαρδοκήνου, and ſaith he died βιαίῳ μόρῳ, by a violent death, and adds no more. See Scaliger in thoſe Fragments in the end of the book De emend. Temp. p. 4. By all this it appears that this was a puniſhment uſed among the Grecians and Babylonians; and, it ſeems, by the Romans too: for ſo in Euſeb. Eccl. Hiſt. l. 5. c. 1. we find, Ἀποστίλων καὶ Καίσαρος τοῦ μὴ ἀντυμπανισθῆναι, &c. of the Emperors commanding the Chriſtians to be put to this torment; and if they renounced Chriſtianity, they were to be looſed.

Ἐμπαιγμοὶ

* Præpar. Evang. l. 4. p. 167.

V. 37. Were tempted] Some Copies read ἐπειράσθησαν, others have ἐπυράσθησαν. The truth is, ἐπειράσθησαν, which is the ordinary reading, ſeems not to be agreeable, after πεῖραν ἔλαβον, they received trial, &c. and neither the Syriack, nor Chryſoſtome (and they that follow him) have this word, or any thing for it; ſo that it is likely it came out of the margine into the Text, and then 'twill be doubtfull, but not much material, which reading is to be preferred. i. Ἐπυράσθησαν

V. 40. Made perfect] What is the meaning of this κρεῖττόν τι ſomewhat better, which this Author ſaith was by God foreſeen, and reſerved for the faithful, conſtant Chriſtians, will beſt be underſtood by the former verſe 39. Theſe all μαρτυρηθέντες διὰ πίστεως, being commended, or having received teſtimony, or perhaps being martyred, by their faith, οὐκ ἐκομίσαντο τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν received not the promiſe. Where firſt it muſt be obſerved who ἵνα πάντες all theſe were: moſt diſtinctly the Maccabees, mentioned immediately before, ver. 36, 37, 38. but not ſo as to exclude, or not to comprehend thoſe others which were ſet down as examples of Faith before them, for they alſo muſt be contained in the ἵνα πάντες all theſe. For the Maccabees, next before mentioned, theſe are in the Jewes ſtories commended for their conſtancy in adhering to Gods commands, or the Jewiſh lawes, in ſpite of the cruelleſt perſecu- k. Κρεῖττόν τι προβλεφθὲν Μαρτυρηθέντες Οὗτοι πάντες ters and tormentors, and were really martyred, or put to death, loſt their lives, διὰ πίστεως by their faith or conſtancy; and of theſe it is ſaid, they received not the promiſe, God having foreſeen, or reſerved, ſomewhat better for us, that is, God having reſerved for the Chriſtian Church ſome performance of promiſe which he had not afforded thoſe former. By this it is already apparent that eternal bliſſe in another world was not the matter of this promiſe, both becauſe this was not it that they could be evidenced to have miſs'd by their being tormented and put to death, but that which it was more ſure they received, becauſe they were ſo ill uſed here; and ſecondly, becauſe if it were ſuppoſed to be true, (as ſome vainly conceive,) that thoſe that died before Chriſt did not attain their bliſſe till after Chriſt's reſurrection, yet it will be acknowledged by all that they then received it, and then it will follow that the ἡμεῖς, the Chriſtians, had not κρεῖττόν τι any advantage of them that lived before, in that reſpect, thoſe obtaining the bliſſe aſſoon or ſooner then they, and no torment or temporary pains being ſuppoſable for ſuch Martyrs between the day of their ſufferings and their attaining to bliſſe, wherein theſe latter can by any be thought to exceed them. It follows then, that as the promiſe which they by ſuffering received not, was ſome promiſe of this life, ſo the κρεῖττόν τι the ſomewhat better was ſomewhat which the Chriſtians ſhould enjoy in this life. In the next place then, we may have another way of finding out what this promiſe was wherein the Chriſtians were to have the advantage of the former, by looking on ver. 13. where of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob it is ſaid, in like manner, that they died receiving not the promiſe. That promiſe was clearly the promiſed land, that Canaan, the type of the Chriſtians reſt, or deliverance from their enemies, (ſee Note on Heb. 3. c.) which they received not in their life time; & though their poſterity afterward did receive it, yet ſome promiſes there were made unto Abraham and his ſeed, which even they that attain'd the promiſed land did not receive. And what were they? Among the promiſes made to Abraham (not perſonally to him, but to his ſeed) this is one, Gen. 22. 17. that his ſeed ſhould poſſeſſe the gates of his enemies. This it ſeems was look'd upon by all the Jewes as a ſpecial part of the promiſe to Abraham, repeated by all the Prophets, Luk. 1. 70. that they ſhould be ſaved from their enemies, and from the hands of all that hate them, v. 71. and this diſtinctly there mentioned by Zachary, as a ſpecial part of the Covenant and oath made to Abraham, ver. 72, 73. that he would grant them, that being delivered without fear from the hands of their enemies, they might ſerve God in holineſſe, &c. ver. 74, 75. And this was it which, being not fully attained by Abraham's poſterity in Canaan, was ſtill by them expected to be perform'd by the Meſſias, and was the κρεῖττόν τι, the ſomewhat better, that was reſerved for theſe times of the Meſſiah. For of the reſt of the faithful, named after Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, even thoſe that were poſſeſſors of Canaan, who did ſubdue enemies by their faith ver. 32, 33. and ſo are ſaid to have obtain'd promiſes there, yet this was not for a continuance, ſuch as might be called the poſſeſſing the gates of their enemies, and deliverance from the hands of all that hated them, but (as by the conſequents, eſpecially by the ſtory of the Maccabees, 'tis manifeſt) this Church or nation of the Jewes fell under heavy perſecutions and oppreſſions, and was waſted and brought low by theſe means, and at laſt was delivered up to be finally deſtroyed by their enemies, their City, their Temple, and their whole ſervice and way of worſhip. Whereas the Chriſtian faith and profeſſion and Church was to endure and hold out, and both flouriſh the more for perſecutions, and finally get victory over all, and never be deſtroyed by the enemies thereof: which was the meaning of Chriſt's prediction, that the gates of Ἅιδης, that is, the power of deſtroyers, ſhould not prevail againſt it; which being all one in effect with the promiſe to Abraham, that his ſeed (ſpiritual ſeed, the Chriſtian Church) ſhould poſſeſſe the gates of their enemies (for to poſſeſſe the gates of their enemies is directly equivalent with the gates of their enemies not prevailing againſt them) it follows moſt properly here, that they without us ſhould not be perfected, that is, that they ſhould not have the promiſe to Abraham made good to them in the utmoſt extent, but that they were to want the higheſt part of the completion of the literal ſenſe of that promiſe, till it were accompliſh'd in the Chriſtian Church, which ſhould in this have the preeminence, a very conſiderable advantage above the Jewes, that however it were perſecuted, it ſhould never be deſtroyed. And this notion and interpretation of this place, as it agrees very well with the purport of the whole Epiſtle (deſigned on purpoſe to fortifie the Chriſtian Hebrews againſt the dread of perſecutions, upon this one ground, becauſe Chriſt was able and willing to deliver them, c. 4. 15. yea and would now ſpeedily come unto their reſcue, c. 10. 37. and though ſome reſiſted to blood, died in the cauſe, yet a ſignal deliverance they ſhould ſpeedily have by the deſtruction of their enemies the Jewes, & in fine the Chriſtian Church ſhould not fail, but flouriſh the more for perſecutions) ſo it ſeems to be taken notice of by Procopius on Iſaiah (p. 683.) who interprets the place, περὶ τῶν παρ' Ἰουδαίοις διωμολογημένων τῆς παρουσίας Χριστοῦ προμηνύοντων, of the pious Jewes that expected the coming of Chriſt; and again, p. 701. when he ſpeaks of Chriſt's coming, he ſaith of it, καθ' ὃν τοῖς πεπιστευκόσι τὰς ὑπ' ἀλπίδος ἐπαγγελίας ἀπέδωκεν, by which God gave believers thoſe promiſes which they hoped for ſo long. As for the word τελειωθῶσι be perfected, that ſignifies to receive a reward or crown, to have the full of their hope or expectation beſtowed upon them: and accordingly Chriſt is ſaid to be τελειωτὴς τῆς πίστεως the perfecter of their faith, c. 12. 3. in giving them the full completion of the promiſes, the object of their faith, which was not done to the Jewes (before Chriſt) χωρὶς ἡμῶν, without us, but had the full completion in the Chriſtian Church. According to which it is ſaid of theſe promiſes, that the Fathers of old ſaw them, and ſaluted them afarre off, as thoſe that ſalute their friends at a diſtance, being not able to come near them, μὴ λαβόντες but received them not, ver. 13. that felicity being reſerved peculiar to the Chriſtian Church, which was now to enter on theſe promiſes.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XII.

3. 1. Wherefore we having ſuch a multitude of examples of faith and conſtancy in the antients, which may ſerve as ſo many encouragements and obligations to hearten and incite us to our courſe, let us lay aſide all worldly love and fear, that may hinder and encumber us in our way, and how fair pretences ſoever we may have to forſake

1. WHerefore, ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, let us [a] lay aſide every weight, and the ſin * that doth ſo eaſily beſet us, and let us run with † patience the * race that is † ſet before us,]

Chriſt,

Chriſt, yet let us not fall off from our conſtancy, but proceed cheerfully, and perſevere in our Chriſtian race, whatſoever difficulties or afflictions we meet with, as they that hope not for any reward till they come to the end of their courſe, and there prove conquerors over all oppoſition.

2. And for our encouragement let us look on our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who in himſelf hath given an example of the enduring of the higheſt afflictions, and will be ſure to crown all thoſe that follow after him, hath led us as a captain in this march of faith, having in his eye that reward of his ſufferings, a numerous ſeed, Iſa. 53. a Church of pious livers, and an exaltation expected from God for himſelf, Phil. 2. 9. and in intuition of theſe, going before us courageouſly through all aſſaults, and being now in the poſſeſſion of all power in heaven, hath undertaken to reward whatſoever we doe or ſuffer for him.

4. Ye have not yet [d] reſiſted † unto bloud, ſtriving againſt ſin.

5. * And ye have forgotten the exhortation which ſpeaketh unto you as unto children, My ſon, deſpiſe not thou the chaſtening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him.]

* And have ye forgotten Καὶ ἐκλέλησθε

4, 5. What ye have yet ſuffered in the combating with ſin, is but a kind of light skirmiſhing, you may well reſolve to prepare your ſelves for yet ſharper aſſaults. You have been exhorted and warned by Solomon, in the perſon of wiſdome ſpeaking to her ſons, Prov. 3. 11. neither to kick againſt Gods puniſhments, without making that uſe of them for which they are ſent, (as they that are no way reformed by afflictions) nor to be diſcouraged and diſheartned by them. d.

6. For whom the Lord loveth he chaſteneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth.]

6. For it is an effect in God of paternal love, that on his beloved children and ſervants he inflicts puniſhments for their farther amendment, and it is an argument of his approving and acknowledging them for his own, that he dealeth thus ſharply with them, permitting them to be perſecuted.

7. If ye endure chaſtening, God dealeth with you as with ſons: for what ſon is he whom the father chaſteneth not?]

7. And therefore in that ye are afflicted or puniſhed, ye are to reckon your ſelves dealt with as children by their parents: for among men ye ſhall ſeldome ever hear of a child that hath not ſometimes been chaſtened by his parent.

†have been made partakers μέτοχοι γεγόναμεν

8. But if ye be without chaſtiſement, whereof all † are partakers, then are ye baſtards, and not ſons.]

8. It were a ſadder condition on the other ſide, and an argument that though ye are in God's family, ye are not owned and acknowledged by him, (and ſo that ye have no title to, or expectation of the inheritance) if when all the faithful mention'd c. 11. did paſſe through preſſures and perſecutions, ye ſhould now have immunity from them.

9. Furthermore, we have had fathers of our fleſh, which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: ſhall we not much rather be in ſubjection to the father of ſpirits, and live?]

9. Again, we know that when our carnall fathers, which begot us men, chaſtiſed us, we have not been incited thereby to love or reverence them leſſe, to forſake or renounce them: and ſhall we for a little perſecution fall off from Chriſt our ſpiritual father, which makes Chriſtians and Saints of us, and if obey'd conſtantly, and adher'd to in ſpight of perſecution, will beſtow eternal life on us as a reward of our patience and perſeverance?

* according as they thought good κατὰ τὸ δοκοῦν αὐτοῖς

10. For they, verily, for a few days chaſtened us * after their own pleaſure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holineſſe.]

10. The carnal parents indeed chaſtiſed you when you were children and no longer, and that (as having abſolute dominion over their children) by the rules of their own judgment or will, which are oft corrupt; but all Gods chaſtiſements are for your advantage, that you may be the higher advanced toward his purity or ſanctity: and ſo 'tis a mercy of his, and a kindneſſe above that of parents, that he never gives over this ſpecial care of you, but continues this healthful diſcipline unto you.

† matter of joy, but ſorrow, χαρᾶς, ἀλλὰ λύπης * but at laſt it returns ὕστερον δὲ καρπὸν διδοῦσα

11. Now no chaſtening for the preſent ſeemeth to be † joyous, but grievous: * nevertheleſſe, afterward it yieldeth the [e] peaceable fruit of righteouſneſſe unto them which are exerciſed thereby.]

11. 'Tis true indeed, that there is in all affliction that which is ungrateful to fleſh and bloud, and ſo cannot be joyous to us at the preſent; but then in the end it gives us our payment for all our patience, viz. a bleſſed reward of bliſſe and peace to all that have ſuffered any thing as Chriſtians. e.

12. Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees,

13. And make ſtraight pathes for your feet, † leſt that which is lame be turned out of the way, but let it rather be healed.]

† that the lame be not turned out of the way, but may rather be healed, ἵνα μὴ τὸ χωλὸν ἐκτραπῇ, ἰαθῇ δὲ μᾶλλον

12, 13. Wherefore encourage all the cowardly puſillanimous fearful perſons (ſee Note on v. 3. b. and c.) and by the conſiderations here offered to you, remove all things out of the way which may diſcourage the weak, and make them forſake their Chriſtian courſe, when they ſee it perſecuted; but on the other ſide, whomſoever you ſee thus weak, or in danger of being thus perverted or diſheartned through his own fears, cure him of his fears, and eſtabliſh and confirm him in his courſe of Chriſtianity.

14. Two great faults there be in the Gnoſticks, of which I would adviſe you, malice and uncleanneſſe, all filthy pollutions of the fleſh; and be you carefull ye be not ſeduced into either of theſe, but on the contrary ſtrive as much as is poſſible to maintain peace, and all kind of charity even with your perſecutors, and be ſure ye doe not make uſe of Chriſtian liberty to licentiouſneſſe, to the neglecting of that purity and ſanctity of life, without endevour of, and growth in which, no man ſhall come to heaven;

16. Leſt any of their unclean infuſions come in among you, or leſt there be any ſo profane, that, like Eſau, through hunger or any ſuch preſſure, he part with the Prieſthood and primogeniture, that is, to avoid the afflictions of this life here, he forſake Chriſtianity it ſelf, and for the preſent to get a little eaſe from perſecution, he forſake the publick meetings for Gods ſervice, Heb. 10. 25. and all other privileges attending it. f.

17. For ye know how that afterward when he * would have inherited the bleſſing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, though he ſought it † carefully with tears.]

17. Which profaneneſſe of Eſau's in ſelling at ſo ſmall a rate the privileges of the firſt-born (to which the Prieſthood was annexed) was ſo provoking a ſin in God's ſight, that after when he would have gotten bleſſing from Iſaac, and beſought him to reverſe his act, to doe otherwiſe then he had done, to give him the bleſſing, that is, the promiſe of Canaan for his ſeed (when he had with error, but withal by the ordering of divine providence, given it to Jacob) and thereupon cried with an exceeding bitter cry, Gen. 27. 34. he was not able to prevail with him with all this importunity; which ſignifies how impoſſible it is for them who have been thus profane as to forſake Chriſt, or that which is moſt ſacred, the publick aſſemblies of his ſervice, (reſembled by Eſau's ſelling his birth-right) for the removing a little preſſure, to get the reward of a Chriſtian, happineſſe here, and heaven hereafter (reſembled by the bleſſing) though they would never ſo fain get it, and expreſſe vehement ſorrow that they cannot.

18. This is enough to inforce the great admonition of this Epiſtle, of holding faſt the faith, and not falling off, for perſecutions, to Judaiſme and hereſie: for you Chriſtians have a more honourable calling then that of the Jewes, that was only to the Law given from mount Sinai, a mountain on earth, onely that ſet out with terrible repreſentations of fire, and thick clouds, and thunder, and lightning, 20, 21. A token of the great unſupportableneſſe of the Moſaical Law, which was farther ſignified by the ſeverity threatned to any beaſt that ſhould touch that mount whence the Law was given, and the ſo formidable aſpect of thoſe things that appeared there, that Moſes himſelf could not chuſe but tremble, (as is received by tradition of the Jews (as many other things, ſee note on 2 Tim. 3. 2.) though not mentioned in Exodus:) Which ſure may take off any man among you from falling in love with Judaiſme.

20. For they * could not indure that which was commanded, And if ſo much as a beaſt touch the mountain, it ſhall be ſtoned or thruſt through with a dart.

Yea unto Jeſus Chriſt, who, as a mediator between God and us, hath eſtabliſhed a ſecond covenant, and aſſured us that it is indeed the covenant of God, and conſequently that we may be confident that God will perform his part of it, and now requires of us, and gives us grace to perform ours; and to his blood, with which we muſt be ſprinkled, before we can be admitted into heaven (as the Prieſt was to ſprinkle himſelf before he went into the Holy of holies) which is quite contrary to Abel's blood, as 'tis mentioned in Geneſis, that called for vengeance on Cain, this called for mercy even upon his crucifiers, if they would repent and reform, and doth powerfully draw down mercy on the penitent believers: or that hath much more efficacy in it to obtain Gods acceptance then had the blood of Abels ſacrifice, which was the firſt type of the blood of Chriſt, of which we read, and of which it is ſaid, that God had reſpect to it.

24. And to Jeſus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of ſprinkling, that ſpeaketh better things then [1] that of Abel.]

25. And therefore be ſure ye deſpiſe not Chriſt, who is come to deliver God's will unto you: For if they were deſtroyed that contemned Moſes that delivered the Law from mount Sinai, then much ſeverer deſtruction is to be expected for them that deſpiſe the commandments of Chriſt, that delivers them immediately from heaven.

* delivered the oracle † we that refuſe him from heaven ἡμεῖς οἱ ἀπ' οὐρανῶν χρηματίζοντα

26. In giving the Law, there was an earthquake when God ſpake, and that was ſomewhat terrible; but now is the time of fulfilling that prophecie, Hag. 2. 7. where God profeſſes to make great changes, greater then ever were among them before, even to the deſtroying the whole ſtate of the Jewes: ſee Mat. 24. note n.

26. Whoſe voice then ſhook the earth; but now he hath promiſed, ſaying, *Yet once more I ſhake, not the earth onely, but alſo heaven.]

* Yet once, or, This one time ἅπαξ

27. For that is the notation of the phraſe which is rendred [Yet once] which ſignifies ſome final ruine, and that very remarkable, as here the total ſubverſion of the Jewes, of all their law and policy, as of things that were made on purpoſe to be deſtroyed, deſigned by God only for a time, for that imperfect ſtate, as a forerunner and preparative to the Goſpel, which therefore is a ſtate of which there is no mention of the ſhaking it, nor conſequently of any other future ſtate that ſhall ſucceed it, which ſignifies that that is moſt certainly to indure for ever, till the end of the world.

27. † And this word, Yet once more, ſignifieth the * removing of thoſe things which were ſhaken, as of things that were made, that thoſe things which cannot be ſhaken may remain.]

28. We therefore that are vouchſafed our part in this immutable kingdome, or ſtate under Chriſt, a condition that no perſecutions, nor even the gates of hell, ſhall prevail againſt, but it ſhall be ſure finally to overcome and ſurvive all oppoſition, let us take care to hold faſt and not forſake the Goſpel, (ſee note on ch. 13. d.) through which we may ſerve God ſo as he will now accept of, with reverence of ſo glorious a maſter, and with fear of his wrath, if we doe provoke him by abuſing his mercies (ſee Phil. 2. c.)

28. Wherefore we receiving a kingdome † which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may ſerve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear.]

† that is not to be ſhaken ἀσάλευτον

29. For this gracious God which is our God, will ſhew himſelf to the provoking Chriſtians, as (or more ſeverely then) he threatned to the Iſraelites, Deut. 4. 24. an embleme of which we have Exod. 24. 17. where the ſight of the glory of the Lord, that is, of his preſentiating himſelf, was like devouring fire on the top of the mountain.

29. *For our God is a conſuming fire.]

Annotations on Chap. XII.

a. V. 1. Lay aſide every——] This verſe is wholly Agoniſtical (as appears by the ἀγῶνα combate or race mentioned in the cloſe of it) and muſt be explained in every part by proportion with the ἀγῶνες or games among the Gracians. Theſe Agones were ſacred and ſolemnly kept, and in them there was a kinde of Aſſi-

ſes

ſes or Court of Judicature. He that propoſed the combat (to which refers προκείμενος ἀγὼν the propoſed race in the end of the verſe) that ſet the laws of the agones, and adjudged the crown to the conquerour, was called βραβευτὴς or κριτὴς the Judge; and to him Chriſt ἀρχηγὸς is here compared, who as he is the ἀρχηγὸς, leader, that goes foremoſt, and ſhews us the way in our Chriſtian race, ſo he is τελειωτὴς v. 2. the rewarder and crowner of them that conquer. So again, he that proclaimed the laws of the combate was called κήρυξ, the præco or cryer, 1 Cor. 9. 27. and they that were ſet at the goal to diſcerne and pronounce who came firſt thither (and ſo was conqueror) were μάρτυρες witneſſes, and as they brought in evidence, ſo the crown was awarded by the Judge; and not only they, but all that ſtood about as ſpectators, to behold and commend the courage and conſtancy of the athletæ, were μάρτυρες witneſſes alſo. And of them there was always good ſtore, a great concourſe of people, from whence they were called πανηγύρεις frequentiæ, populous meetings, to behold the games, to ſee who were conquerors in them. To theſe laſt are here compared thoſe great examples of Faith and Patience, which had been mentioned in the former chapter, who being now at their journies end, their goal, their reſt, are ſuppoſed to look on the preſent Chriſtian racers, both to give evidence whether they run well or no, and with their commendations to hearten and encourage them in their combates, that they faint not or give over. And there being ſo many here mentioned in the former chapter, they are fitly called νέφος a cloud, as any great number or troup of men is Rhetorically called a cloud, and that very frequently among authors. And becauſe the ſpectators in thoſe games ſtood on either ſide of the race or ſtadium, or otherwiſe round about, at the other games of wraſtling, &c. or at a Theatre, it is therefore ſtyled περικείμενον νέφος, an encompaſſing cloud of witneſſes, or ſuch as is placed round about us, to look and teſtifie how men behave themſelves in their race. It is farther ſufficiently known, that they that were to perform any of thoſe exerciſes, uſed all care to fit and prepare themſelves for it by diet before, ſo as it might fit them to perform their courſe, and at the time, by having nothing on that might hinder or foreſlow them. To this purpoſe they did carefully rid themſelves of all weight, made themſelves as light as they could, and leſt their very garments might hang in their way, incumber them in their courſe, they generally put them off, and ran naked, γυμνοὶ καὶ ἀχίτωνες, ſaith * Porphyrie, naked and without their garments, from whence they were alſo called γυμνασταὶ, referring to their naked running. To this way of preparing themſelves to the race the Author here referrs; to that of weight diſtinctly, by ἀποθέμενοι ὄγκον πάντα, laying aſide, or putting off, all weight, meaning thereby moſt probably the love and care of the world, which is apt to preſſe down the ſoul, and was a very conſiderable temptation in thoſe times of perſecution, where the love of the world was ſuch enmity with God, and made ſo many inclinable to the Gnoſticks, in hope of preſerving their worldly wealth. To the latter, the ſtripping themſelves, putting off their garments, our ordinary Tranſlation refers the latter words, ἀποθέμενοι πᾶν τὸ εὐπερίστατον ἁμαρτίαν, laying aſide that ſin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us, taking the word εὐπερίστατος in an Active ſenſe, for intangling (as a light garment is wont to doe) and ſo hindring their courſe, not by its weight or preſſing down, as the ὄγκος or weight before, but by ſome other way of encumbring or diſturbing, as light garments, which by the wind or motion of the air become troubles and hindrances to the racer. And anſwerable to that we might imagine the fears that come acroſſe men in their Chriſtian courſe, and much hinder their ſpeed, and interrupt their conſtancy. And that cowardly humor, thoſe treacherous fears, that, like the light garment, intangle them at every ſtep, muſt be laid aſide, or elſe they will never run, δι' ὑπομονῆς, with indurance or perſeverance, the race that is ſet before them. But of that word εὐπερίστατος it muſt be obſerved, that as it is an ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, onely this once uſed in the whole Bible, ſo it will be matter of ſome difficulty to determine what is the exact importance of it. Firſt then, it is not reaſonable, or according to any analogy, to render it, as it is ordinarily rendred, in an Active ſenſe; περίστατος of which it is compounded, and ἀπερίστατος which is the contrary to it, being certainly Paſſives; and ſo Saint Chryſoſtome here inclines moſt to a Paſſive ſignification. Secondly, then ſuppoſing it a Paſſive, one notion of the word preſently offers it ſelf (from the Apoſtles uſe of περίστασο 2 Tim. 2. 16. and Tit. 3. 12. to decline or avoid) that which may eaſily be declined. So Joſephus, ſpeaking of the Eſſeni, τὸν ὅρκον ἀυτοῖς περίστασθαι, ſwearing is avoided by them: and Lucian, ὅπως εὐλαβήσομαι καὶ περιστήσομαι ὥσπερ τοὺς λυσσῶντας τοὺς κυνῶν, I will avoid and decline them as I would mad dogs. But this cannot here be thought the Apoſtles ſcope, to diminiſh the force of this ſin here, as a thing eaſily to be avoided by our care, but rather to note it as very noxious, and apt to ſeduce and miſchief, if it be not carefully warded. If therefore this notion of περίστασις be here taken, then certainly the meaning of the word muſt be, not that which may very eaſily be avoided, but is very fit to be declined or taken heed of, that which there is all reaſon to part with, and ſo ἀποθέσις to put off, as being ſo uſeleſſe and ſo dangerous and hurtful in our courſe. But a third notion, I ſuppoſe, of this word may be thus fetch'd out. Περιστάσεις literally ſignifies circumſtances, as when we read in Rhetoricians γύμνη περίστασις, a bare naked poſition: ſo in Georgius Alexandrinus in the * life of Chryſoſtome, a poor, helpleſſe, diſtreſſed woman is called ξένη καὶ ἀπερίστατος: and ζήτημα ἀπερίστατον, a queſtion generally propoſed, without the circumſtances of time, place, perſon, intention, occaſion: ſee Hermogenes l. 3. περὶ ἐπιχειρημ. According to this it is that Heſychius explains ἀπερίστατον by μωρὸν, ἀφορμὰς μὴ ἔχον, which I ſuppoſe is thus to be rendred, Stolidum, nullas habens hypotheſes, nulla argumenta, fooliſh, and that which hath no reaſons, arguments, or conſequently pretences for it. And if this be the notion of the Privative, then εὐπερίστατος will be that which hath ſuch fair arguments and pretences for it, the ſin which is ſet forth with ſuch goodly circumſtances to ingratiate and recommend it to us; as when he that denies Chriſt, doth it (as the Gnoſticks ſaid of themſelves) only with the mouth, not with the heart, and again with an innocent intention, and only to avoid perſecution and utter undoing in the world. Agreeable hereunto it is, that S. Chryſoſtome uſeth περιστάσεις, applied to ſin, to denote temptations, Tom. 3. p. 555. l. 20. Διὸ καὶ ἐπάγει λέγων, ἵνα μὴ πανδὶς ἁμαρτήματος διαβολικῆς καὶ πάσης περιστάσεως τὸ ἀνθικείμενον, τὸν πειρασμὸν δηλῶν καὶ τὰς ἁμαρτίας· where as he explaines all diabolical ſin by ἁμαρτίας ſins, ſo he evidently interprets περιστάσεις by πειρασμὸς temptations. And of theſe περιστάσεις in this notion he there underſtands the phraſe εὐπερίστατος ἁμαρτία, for ſo he addes in that place, l. 21. Εὐπερίστατον γὰρ ἡ ἁμαρτία, πάντοθεν ἰσαμβὴν, ἐμπεφυτευμένον, ὄπισθεν, καὶ ἔτως ἡμᾶς καταβάλλουσα; for ſin is provided with temptations, being incompaſſed (where we ſee the Paſſive uſe of the word) on all ſides, before, and behind, and ſo ſhoots at us, or ſtrikes us. So Tom. 4. p. 698. l. 30. Σατανικὴ περίστασις, temptation of Satan. So Heſychius Presb. Centur. 2. 85. Εἰ δὲ ἐκ περιστάσεώς τινος χαυνωθέντες, but if by any temptation we become more remiſs. Thus Diogenes Laertius in the life of Zeno, that it is the part of a wiſe man χωρὶς ἀνθρωπίνων σαρκῶν καὶ περίστασιν, to eat mans fleſh in caſe of extremity, or when he is by ſuch forcing forcing motives invited to it. And this ſenſe as it agrees beſt with the critical importance of the word, ſo it accords exactly with the Context and ſcope of the Author; who here exhorts to venture all the hazards, perſecutions, death it ſelf, rather then, upon any pretence, to forſake the Aſſemblies, to deny Chriſt, c. 10, 11. and here in this chapter he ſets Chriſt's example before them, a pattern of conſtancy and perſeverance even to death. And ſo this is the moſt probable notion of the word that I can think of.

b. Κάμητε — V. 3. Wearied] Κάμνειν is alſo an Agoniſtical word, literally ſignifying to be tired, belonging to them that are worſted in any of thoſe exerciſes (Νικώντων δ' οὐκ ἔστι κάμνειν, ſaith Plutarch, it cannot be affirmed of the victors) to goe out of the field like a wounded, or wearied, or worſted perſon. So when Coriolanus being wounded was admoniſhed by his friends to retire, and cure his wounds, he anſwered, οὐ δεῖ νικῶντα κάμνειν, A conqueror ought not to retire, or ſubduce himſelf out of the field. And thus generally it ſignifies to give over fighting, ἀπόνειν and ἀπαγορεύειν in Phavorinus, to give over, to deſpair, and again ὀκνῆσαι to play the coward or run-away.

c. Ψυχαῖς ἐκλυόμενοι — Ib. Faint in your minds] Ψυχαῖς ἐκλυόμενοι, and ἐκλυόμενοι ſimply, v. 4. ſignifies in the ſame ſenſe that κάμνειν, to turn coward or puſillanimous, ſuch as whoſe ſouls within them fall away like water, diſſolve; and 'tis ſpoken of thoſe who give over the attempt as hopeleſſe, flie diſheartened, creſt-fallen, out of the field (ἀναπίπτοντες and ἀδυμοῦντες in Thucydides) expreſſed again, v. 12. by παρειμένας χεῖρας the hands that hang down, which note the prælii detractatio, giving over the buſineſſe, yielding, flying out of the field, confeſſing themſelves conquered. So Ecclus 2. 12. after the woe againſt them that truſt not in the Lord, δειλαὶ καρδίαι cowardly hearts, and χεῖρες παρειμέναι the hands hanging down, are put together, for which the Greek of Jer. 35. 3. read ἀνειμένας χεῖρας extended hands, as in * Plutarch ἀνατείνειν χεῖρας to hold up, and in Cicero, manus tollere, in Virgil, tendere palmas, to hold up, or ſtretch out the hands; the holding out and hanging down of the hands being both equally contrary to the uſing them, or holding them up, (the exerere lacertos ſtretching the arms in a manlike manner againſt all oppoſers) & both ſignes of a conquered perſon, that yields himſelf ſo, which the Greek expreſſe by ἀπαυδᾶν.

d. μέχρις αἵματος — V. 4. Reſiſted unto blood] Of the umbratilis pugna, or σκιαμαχία, beating the aire, or περιπυγμή, we have formerly ſpoken, on 1 Cor. 9. 26. the firſt lighter skirmiſhes before the ſtata pugna, or ſet combate, the beginning of the bloody fight. To this the Apoſtle here referres, when he ſaith, ye have not yet reſiſted, μέχρις αἵματος, as far as blood, that is, as far as the old athletæ were wont, who after the περιπυγμή, or brandiſhing of their arms or weapons, at laſt fell to down-right blowes with their cæſtus in their hands, which ordinarily brought the blood with them. This the Apoſtle applies to their ſpiritual agones, (τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς Ὀλύμπια ἀγωνισάμενοι, the Olympicks of the ſoul in Porphyrie's ſtyle, and here, πρὸς τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ἀνταγωνισάμενοι, combating againſt ſin) that they had no reaſon to be diſheartned with Chriſts permitting them to be afflicted and perſecuted, as they were, for there are far greater and bloodier combates againſt ſin, ſuch as bring blood and death, and againſt thoſe they muſt be provided, in compariſon of which theirs yet are but σκιαμαχίαι or skirmiſhes.

e. Γεγυμνασμένοις — Κατὰ δικαιοσύνης — V. 11. Peaceable fruit] Agreeably to the former Agoniſtical expreſſions in the beginning of the chapter, is here added γεγυμνασμένοις, exerciſed in theſe gymnaſia of afflictions, and the receiving of their βεβαῖον or reward, ſtyled here καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης, the fruit of righteouſneſſe, that fruit which belongs to all righteous men now under the Goſpel (or elſe according to a ſingular notion of δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe for felicity, mention'd in the Note on 2 Tim. 4. a.) and emphatically εἰρηνικὸς καρπὸς, referring, as the learned P. Faber hath conceived, to the corona oleagina, the olive crown, (that tree being an emblem and ſymbolum of peace) of which the Olympian crowns for their victors were ordinarily made. But of that ſee more, Ja. 3. Note g.

Εἰρηνικὸς καρπὸς

V. 16. Profane perſon as Eſau] Why Eſau, in ſelling his birth-right, is here called profane, will appear by that known obſervation among the Jewes, that as long as God was ſerved within private walls, before the erecting of the Tabernacle and Temple, and inſtitution of Prieſthood, the right of Prieſthood in every family was annexed to the primogeniture, the firſt-born was ſtill the Prieſt. Thus Exod. 24. 5. when 'tis ſaid that Moſes ſent the young men of the children of Iſrael to offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings unto the Lord, the Chaldee paraphraſe renders them בוכרי the firſt-born, and Uzielides adds this Scholion, becauſe as yet the Aaronical Prieſts were not inſtituted. This, ſay the Jewes (and 'tis reaſonable to believe them) was it that made Jacob ſo ambitious of the πρωτοτόκια or privileges of the primogeniture: and if Baal Haturim, on Gen. 28. out of Bereſith Rabba, may be heeded, this was it which Jacob deſired to have confirmed to him by God in thoſe words, Gen. 28. 20. If God will be with me. And therefore for Eſau to ſell this ſacred privilege for one meſſe of pottage, to undervalue this prerogative of offering to God ſo vilely, out of a little preſent impatience, (and proportionably for the Hebrew Chriſtians, for a poor ſecular end, viz. to rid themſelves of a little perſecution or affliction for the Goſpel, to quit the publick ſervice of God, as it appears ſome did at this time, c. 10. nay to forſake Chriſtianity it ſelf, to apoſtatize utterly (to which that was but a præludium) and ſo to part with that privilege of Prieſts which belongs to all Chriſtians, ſo far as the prerogative of offering up prayers to God) this will eaſily be acknowledged an act of great profaneneſſe. To which may be accommodated that which the Jeruſalem Targum, Gen. 25. 34. ſaith of Eſau, he contemn'd his primogeniture, and ſet at nought his part in the world to come, and denied the reſurrection of the dead, viz. becauſe in contemning his privileges of Primogeniture, and in that of the Prieſthood, he is interpreted to have done all this.

f. Βέβηλος & de Heræ

V. 23. General aſſembly] The word πανήγυρις ſignifies properly, θέατρον, συνέδρωσις, a theatre, a multitude of people come together, as in the Grecian games to behold their agones and their ſacra. Hence doth it ſignifie alſo any frequentia populi, but eſpecially a promiſcuous mix'd multitude from all parts, and, in a ſacred ſenſe, an aſſembly of worſhippers of all ſorts and countries; which is a particular notation of the Chriſtian Church, the net which gathers up good and bad (that is, Jewes, which were called the only people of God before, and Gentiles, which were proverbially called ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners) is made up of a company of all nations, nay takes in the Angels themſelves named immediately before, and who are ſaid to ſing, and joyn with us in our publick aſſemblies.

Ib. Firſt-born] The Firſt-born had not only the privilege of the Prieſthood before the Law, but alwaies ſince, the פי שנים the double portion, διπλῆ τιμὴ, the portion not only of poſſeſſions, but of dignity & honour above the reſt of the brethren. And proportionably the Apoſtles, which were either ſimply the firſt converted to the faith of Chriſt, or elſe preferred before others, as Judah to the Primogeniture of dignity, and Levi in reſpect of the Prieſthood, are call'd here the firſt-born, and the Church firſt founded in them, and planted by them, is here called ἐκκλησία πρωτοτόκων, the Church of the firſt-born, the Apoſtolical Church.

i. Ib. Written in heaven] Ἀπογεγραμμένος signifies to be enrolled (see Note on Luk. 2. i.) and this belonged either to all the congregation of Israel, Num. 1. 18. or in a special manner to the first-born of every family, who had that dignity before others, and in time came (as families grew into tribes) to be princes of the tribes of their fathers, Num. 1. 16. or to some choise renowned men, who were to be captains, or heads, of thousands in Israel, or finally to all souldiers listed or enrolled. And to this manner of enrolling doth this phrase ἀπογεγραμμένοι ἐν οὐρανοῖς, written, or enrolled, in heaven, referre, to denote those that are registred by God, matriculated in heaven, that is, beside the Apostles, all other holy men, renowned in the book of God: and so this phrase is fit to be joyned to the πρωτότοκοι foregoing in the forementioned notion.

Ἀπογεγραμμένοι ἐν οὐρανοῖς

k. Ib. Made perfect] Τετελειωμένοι are those that have received their crown, their reward, in the Agonistical notion so often mentioned, that is, that have attained the end of their race, are triumphant in heaven. And the use of this very phrase among the Jewes is ordinary, קדושים נכבדים ἅγιοι τετελειωμένοι, those that are advanced to be, as they are wont to say, under the throne of glory.

Τετελειωμένοι

l. V. 24. That of Abel] The meaning of this passage παρὰ τὸν Ἄβελ, or, as Theophylact and others read, παρὰ τὸ Ἄβελ, is not easily resolved on. If it be τὸν, it may then agree with Abel as the Accusative case, and then it must be rendred then Abel, meaning, then Abel spake; or else referring the τὸν to ῥαντισμὸν going before, and reading Ἄβελ in the Genitive case, it will then be rendred, then that (sprinkling) of Abel, noting the sprinkling of blood which in that sacrificing of his firstlings, Gen. 4. 4. he is supposeable to have used. If it be τὸ, then as it is certain it must refer to αἷμα blood precedent, and so denote the blood of Abel, so it is uncertain what blood is meant, whether the blood of Abel shed by Cain, or the blood of Abels firstlings in his sacrifice. So that all these four possible notions of the words are in effect but two: the first and the third referring to that of Abel and his own blood shed by Cain; and the second and fourth to the blood of the cattel in his sacrifice. And which of these is now to be preferred is the onely difficulty. That the first should be it, the authority of the Greek Commentators and others would incline, and the manner of the Scripture-style in many places (using words and phrases, which must be supposed to signifie much more then their natural importance affords; see Note on Mat. 12. e.) may help to perswade it. For thus it may then be explicated very commodiously; That whereas the blood of Abel, the first that ever suffered, called for nothing but vengeance on the murtherer, the blood of Christ, quite contrary wise, called for mercy on his very crucifiers, and on all the world of men besides, and so spake as good things as Abels did ill, cryed as loud for pardon as his is said to do for vengeance. But if we consider the design of the whole Context, which is the comparing the state and œconomie under the Law and before Christ with that now after or since his coming, and the preferring the latter infinitely beyond the former, we shall then have great reason to incline us to accept the second sense, that the sprinkling of the blood of Christ, that sacrifice of his upon the Cross, had infinitely more efficacy in it (and that devolved to us) to obtain Gods acceptance, then that sacrifice of Abels, the first great type of that shedding the blood of Christ, this lamb of God, is affirmed in the Scripture to have had. That this sacrifice of beasts offered by Abel should here be mentioned with Christs sacrifice of his own body on the Cross, the reason is evident, because all the sacrifices of beasts, not onely under the Law, but before it, among the Patriarchs, before and after the Deluge, were all types of Christs one perfect sacrifice. And Abels being the first of these recorded in Scripture, and attested to have had much of Gods acceptation, particularly more then Cains (see Heb. 11. 4.) is therefore the fittest to be insisted on in this place. And that Christs blood is said to speak better things then that, and so then any other blood in sacrifice, is agreeable to Heb. 9. 13, 14. For if the blood of Bulls —— how much more the blood of Christ; and ver. 22, 23. And almost all things are purged by blood —— It was necessary therefore that the heavenly things themselves should be purged by better sacrifices then these. And accordingly in the antient Liturgies, and in the Canon of the Mass now in use, when the Bread and Wine is consecrated into the Sacrament of the body and blood of Christ, the prayer makes mention of Abels sacrifice, and Melchizedeks offering, chusing out those two as the most antient and eminent types (under the Old Testament) of this sacrifice of the blood of Christ commemorated in that Sacrament. This (and much more, which, if it were needfull, might be added to this purpose) will make it reasonable to have annex'd this latter sense to the former more ordinary, if not to prefer it before it.

Παρὰ τὸν Ἄβελ

m. V. 25. Speaks] Χρηματίζειν is a word of a special signification, noting Divine revelation, either by בת קול the voice from heaven, or any other way. So Mat. 2. 12, 22. revelation of God's will by dream, and Luk. 2. 26. by that or some other such way, and Act. 10. 22. a revelation by an Angel. So of Moses Heb. 8. 5. and here of Noe, ch. 11. 7. and Rom. 11. 4. ὁ χρηματισμὸς that voice from heaven to Elias, 1 Kin. 19. 12. Hence saith Phavorinus, Χρηματισμὸς, ὁπτασία, it signifies a vision, νομοθεσία, the giving of the law; and again, Χρηματισμὸς δίδωμι, ἤγουν θείους λόγους oracles or divine speeches, agreeable to the known notion of χρηστήριον, for μαντεῖον ἢ θεῶν, an oracle of God. According to which notion of the word it is here to be rendred, not speaking simply, but speaking from God, delivering oracles, warnings or precepts from him.

Χρηματίζειν

CHAP. XIII.

Paraphrase.

1. LET brotherly love continue.

2. Be not forgetfull to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained Angels unawares.]

1, 2. And for particular directions of Christian life, I shall commend these unto you at this time, in respect of your present state. Be kind unto all Christians, not onely those of your own nation, Jewes, but to any of all countries strangers so called or aliens: let not the Christian vertue of hospitality to strangers be strange to you, for by the practice of that Abraham and Lot, Gen. 18, and 19. received Angels into their houses unawares.

3. Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which * suffer adversity, as being your selves also in the body.]

* are evil intreated κακουχούμενοι

3. Have that compassion to prisoners, that sense of their sufferings, as you would have if you were in the same condition with them; relieve and rescue those that are under any affliction, as men that know and consider your selves to be in the same frail humane estate, subject to all that befalls any man.

4. a† Mar-

4. And whereas the Gnosticks pronounce marriage unlawfull, but indulge to all unnatural lusts, doe ye look on marriage not onely as lawful, but as honourable, instituted by God: onely take care that you make use of it as a fortification against all unlawfull lusts. For fornication of what sort soever, which the dislike of marriage brings many to, and adultery, which is the violation of marriage, are sins that will be severely punished by God.

4. † Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed *undefiled: but †whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.]

† Let marriage be honourable among all. Τιμιος ὁ γαμος εν πασιν. * be undefiled ἀμιαντος † fornicators πορνοι

5. And in such times, especially as these of persecution, there is no temper so fit for you to be furnished against, as that of covetousnesse: whatever God at present allows you, be ye fully satisfied with that. For what God said to Joshuah of the Jewes, he saith to all true Christians, of whom those were the type, that he will by no means utterly destitute them, and so they have no need of that fear which is wont to betray men to covetousnesse.

5. Let your * conversation be without covetousnesse; and be content with †such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.]

* disposition, temper of mind, manners, be free from the love of money, ἀφιλαργυρος † the things that are present τοις παρουσι

6. So that we Christians, particularly you Hebrew Christians, that suffer so much for the profession of the faith, may from the word of God take courage, and say, I will trust God with my security, and live fearlesse of all danger, knowing that as long as he sees it best for me, he will deliver me from worldly dangers, and that when he permits them to come, the utmost shall doe me no hurt.

6. So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall doe unto me.]

b. 7. Set before your eyes the Bishops and Governours that have been in your Church, and preached the Gospel to you, observe their manner of living, their perseverance till death, and then make their faith, their perseverance and constancy in the doctrine of the Gospel, the example for you to imitate and transcribe.

7. * Remember them b which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation.]

* Be mindful of your Governors Μνημονευετε των ηγουμενων

8. The same faith that then was the true faith in which they persevered to the death, will be so now unto you and to all ages; you have no reason to think that 'tis so suddenly changed, that Judaisme which they took to be abolished, should now be in force again among you, as your Gnostick teachers are willing to perswade you.

8. Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever.]

c. d. 9. This change and bringing in of new doctrines of Judaisme into the Church is a piece of dangerous inconstancy: 'Twere sure more for the turn to be grounded in the truth, to take that which is best for your turn, and then never to remove or be carried about from that to any other. And that that is the Gospel, and not the Mosaical Law about sacrifices and meats, &c. that this is much better for the soul then tother, will soon appear unto you if you consider how empty and unprofitable those observances of the law alwaies were, (considered in themselves) even when they were in force; for even then they that dealt in them were really little profited by them, (see ch. 10. 1, 2, 3. where the sacrifices are said only to be a commemoration of sin, unable to expiate, and so leaving in estate of damnation, unlesse they advance farther to Christ, signified by those sacrifices.)

9. Be not carried about with † divers and strange doctrines: for it is a good thing that the heart be c established with d grace, not with meats, which have not profited them * that have been occupied therein.]

† various ποικιλαις * which walked περιπατησαντας

10. And if any man think his Judaizing will doe him no hurt in respect of Christianity, that those that stand for the Mosaical performances may yet have their portion in Christ, let him know he is mistaken. For Christ, the only Christian altar to which we bring all our sacrifices, and who is so beneficial to us, will not be beneficial to them that depend on the Mosaical Law, they that doe so have no right to partake of Christ (Gal. 5. 2. If you be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.)

10. We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle.]

11. And the truth of this you may discern by a ceremony among the Jewes, to wit, in the sacrifice of atonement or expiation, of which the priest never eat a bit, the blood he carried in with him into the holy place, and the body was burnt without the camp: Now by that sacrifice the Messias was typified most lively, as is acknowledged by themselves, so that they, even the Priests and principal persons among them, being not allowed to eat of that sacrifice, might hence collect this truth in hand, that they that eat or partake of Christ, should reap no benefit by him as long as they pretended their law in force, and depended on these legal ceremonies for heaven.

11. For the bodies of those beasts whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest † for sin, are burnt without the camp.]

† for a sin-offering περι αμαρτιας

12. And that the burning that sacrifice (all the body of it) without the camp, so that no part of it was usefull to the Jewes, people or priest, did typifie this truth, that Jewes relying on their religion should not receive benefit by Christ, may farther be illustrated by our Saviours practice, who when he was to enter into the holy place, that is, heaven, to blesse and sanctifie us, and to that end to shed his own blood, to carry it as it were in with him, as the priest did the blood of goats and bullocks into the holy place, (to signifie that there is no means of expiation to be had but by his blood) he suffered without the gate, so fulfilling the type, and confirming this truth typified by it, that it was not by those legal sacrifices, but by Christ's offering himself, that any benefit is to be hoped for by us.

12. Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctifie the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.]

13. Let us therefore leave the Judaical service, the Mosaical Law, though many afflictions threaten us for so doing, let us relie wholly on Christ upon the crosse, (know nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified) and take all afflictions, in the way to that, cheerfully, therein imitating Christ himself, who endured the crosse, despised the shame, &c.

13. Let us goe forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.]

14. For this that is to be had here, is no condition of rest and tranquillity; we, like Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that sojourned in Canaan, are not to look upon our present being, as the preferment which is promised Christians (which if it were, we might then expect it free from afflictions) but we have a future expectation of stability, whereon we depend.

14. For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come.]

c. 15. Let us therefore now our high priest is entred heaven, by him offer up to God our Christian sacrifice, our sacrifice not of beasts bodies, but that figured by them, our sacrifice of praise; and that not like to that of the Jewes, at some set seasons onely, but continually all the daies of our lives; not the fruit of our herds, to be burnt upon his altar, but the offering of our charity, almes and mercy, our Christian sacrifice, v. 16. joyned with our thanksgiving to God (and never omitted by the primitive Christians in their Eucharist) answerable to the free-will-offerings or vowes, Hos. 14. 3. in acknowledgment of his power and goodnesse.

15. By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the c fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name.]

16. But be sure not to omit any season of charity or supply to any brothers wants that can at any time be offered to you; for this is of the same nature and obligation with the former. All such are offerings to God, very acceptable to him, (whatsoever ye doe to one of these little ones, ye doe unto him) and required now of us under the Gospel as our only Christian sacrifice.

16. But * to doe good and to communicate, forget not; for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.]

* beneficence and liberality ευποιιας και κοινωνιας, see note on Act. 2. d.

17. Obey

17. Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit your selves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account, that they may doe it with joy, and not † with grief, for that is unprofitable for you.]

17. Obey those that are set to rule you in your several Churches, the Bishops (see note a.) whose whole care is spent among you, as being to give an account of your proficiency in the Gospel. And by your submission to them doe ye endevour to make their task as easie and sweet as you can, that they may have joy not sorrow in the execution of it; for 'twill be small benefit to you that they have no comfort in the discharge of their office toward you, and as long as they doe it sadly, cannot doe it so effectually as otherwise they might.

† grieving or sighing στενάζοντες

18. Pray for us: for * we trust we have a good conscience, † in all things willing to live honestly.]

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

a. Τιμιος ὁ γαμος

V. 4. Marriage is honorable] The main difficulty here is, what Verb is here to be understood, and taken in, for the clearing the construction. It may possibly be ἐστὶ, is, & then the onely remaining difficulty will be, what shall be meant by ἐν πᾶσι, whether it be most fitly rendred in all, whether denoting all things, that is, all respects, or all men, that being of several ages or of several qualities, are yet capable of marriage, or whether, as Theophylact addes, in all times of persecutions or of release from persecutions; or whether, according to the promiscuous use of prepositions in these writers, & particularly of ἐν, oft taken notice of in other places, it be to be rendred among all, that is, among all men, noting the general estimation & opinion of all men of all nations, whether Heathens, Jewes, or Christians, among all whom (save the Gnostick-hereticks, then newly sprung up) marriage had been look'd upon with honor. This might easily be shewed out of the Jewish writers and customes. Marriage and procreation was the means of taking away their reproach, and so a note of peculiar honor among them. So likewise among the Heathens the Lacedemonians law appointed a mulct first for the ἄγαμοι unmarried, then another for the ὀψίγαμοι those that married late, as the third, and the severest, κακογαμίῳ for marrying ill. See Aristo's Commentaries in * Stobæus. And * Musonius in his book, whether marriage be any hinderance to Philosophers, hath discoursed it at large, ὅτι μέγα καὶ ἀξιοπόθητον ὁ γάμος, that marriage is a great and desirable thing, as being the beginning of the constitution of families, cities, kingdomes, the onely lawful means of continuing the world, and that therefore the Gods have taken special care of it, Juno, Cupid and Venus; and consequently that it is unreasonable to affirme μὴ πρέπειν ἀνθρώπῳ ταῦτα, that there is any sort of men, philosopher or other, for whom this is not convenient. See Hierocles also, as he there is set down in * Stobæus, out of his tract on this subject. And plenty of the like observation we have among the antient Romans, who have injoyed great privileges by this of marriage and propagation; the jus trium liberorum, the privilege which they had that had gotten three children in lawful marriage, is famously spoken of among them. And accordingly to these premisses, this sense will be very perfect truth, Marriage is honorable among all men, Jewes, Heathens and Christians also, among whom Christ hath left it in the same dignity in which he found it, having instituted nothing to the prejudice of lawful marriage, but, as Theophylact addes, looking upon it with honor, as that which ἐν σωφροσύνῃ τηρεῖ, preserves men and women in sobriety and continence, or abstinence from all unlawful pleasures. All which being granted, and supposed to be most true, yet it seems most probable from the Context, that not ἐστὶ is, but ἔστω let be in the Imperative, is the Verb which is here understood. Let marriage be honourable among all, and let the bed, the marriage-bed, be undefiled, or simply the bed, whether in or out of marriage, so as to contain the monial as well as conjugal chastity, proportionable to the Fornication as well as Adultery after mentioned in the interdict. That it is thus, by way not of affirmation, but exhortation or precept, may appear by the verses before, which from the beginning of the Chapter are all exhortatorie, and in the Imperative, but especially v. 5. where the style is exactly the same as here, ἀφιλάργυρος ὁ τρόπος, disposition, or conversation, without covetousnesse, and yet the sense must necessarily be thus made up (and so our Engliſh hath rendred it) let your converſation be without coveteouſneſs, and ſo again ἀρκούμενοι be content with the things that are preſent. To this agrees what Georgius Alexandrinus ſaith in the life of Chryſoſtome, p. 188. l. 15. that he alwayes bid them τίμιον τ γάμον καὶ τλὼ κοίτλω ἀγνὴν φυλάτ̃ειν, to keep marriage honourable—— which being taken from this place evidently, is by him ſet by way of exhortation. And to this rendring therefore I do adhere, as an admonition ſeaſonably given, contrary to the * Gnoſticks infuſions among them.

* See Note on 1 Tim. 4. b.

b. Ἡγέμονες

V. 7. Them which have the rule] The word ἡγέμων is a common word to ſignifie all kind of authority or rule: ἡγέμων λαοῦ, ruler of the people, Ecclus 9. 22. ἡγέμων ἐκκλησίας, ruler of the congregation, chap. 13. 54. ἡγέμων δυνάμεων, ruler of the armies, 1 Mac. 13. 8. ἡγέμων Ἰουδαίων, ruler of the Jews, v. 42. ἡγέμων ἔθνους, ruler of the nation, Ecclus 17. 13. ἡγέμων πόλεως, ruler of the city, c. 10. 2. ἡγέμονες ἀδελφῶν, ruler of the brethren, v. 24. and c. 49. 17. and frequently ἡγέμονες, ruler, ſimply. So the Hebrew נשיא and משל and נגיד, which are ordinarily rendred ἄρχων governor, are often ἡγέμονες ruler. And what kind of government it is, muſt ſtill be judged by the circumſtances of the Context in any place, and not from the nature or uſe of the word. In the New Teſtament it is applied to Chriſt as ruler or governor in Iſrael, Mat. 2. 6. and ſo alſo to the government of the Apoſtles in the Church, Luk. 22. 26. ὁ ἡγέμων ὡς ὁ διακονῶν, let him that ruleth, that is, who ſhall be conſtituted ruler in the Church, be as he that ſerveth; and there it is all one with μείζων ἐν ὑμῖν the greater, or greateſt, among you. So Joſeph is ἡγέμων εἰς Αἴγυπτον a ruler over Ægypt, Act. 15. 22. Judas and Silas that were ſent by the Council of Apoſtles and Elders at Jeruſalem, and choſen ἐξ ὑμῶν out of them, and ſo ſome of that number of the Biſhops of Judæa, that were in the Council, are called ἄνδρες ἡγούμενοι ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, rulers among the brethren, which there appear to be Biſhops of Judæa, (ſee Note on Act. 15. e.) and accordingly do teach and exhort and confirm and impoſe hands, all which were the Biſhops office in that place. And thus it is here uſed in this verſe, and again v. 17, and 24. περὶ ἐπισκόπων λέγει, he ſpeaketh of Biſhops, ſaith Chryſoſtome and others. And theſe the Biſhops of Jeruſalem, and the other cities of Paleſtine (τοῖς ἐν Παλαιστίνῃ καὶ ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμοις, ſay the Scholiaſts in the Argument of the Epiſtle) to whom the Epiſtle was ſent. Of theſe there are theſe Characters in this Chapter, all agreeing to this interpretation; Firſt, that they had ſpoken to them the Word of God, that is, preached the Goſpel to them in this verſe: Secondly, that they watch'd over their ſouls, and are to give an account of them; and conſequently the Hebrews muſt obey and be ſubject to them, ver. 17. all evidences of their charge and authority in the Church: Thirdly, all their rulers, and all the ſaints, are the two comprehenſive words which contain all the Hebrews, to whom this Epiſtle is written, the former noting the Biſhops, the latter all the faithful committed to their charge. And 'tis obſervable that the latter Jewiſh Writers, when they ſpeak of Chriſtian Biſhops, expreſſe them by a word of great affinity with this here, retaining the Greek ἡγεμὼν in their language, with little or no change, הגמון or אגמון, either with or without the Aſpirate. So in Abrabaneel on Iſa. 34. fol. 54. col. 4. ſpeaking of the famous Burgenſis, from a Jew turned Chriſtian, and at laſt become a Biſhop, he ſaith, that he was formerly called Solomon the Levite, and afterward became שר ונדול בין הניצרים a ruler and a great man among the Nazarites, or Chriſtians, אגמון בורגינשיש Egemon, that is, Epiſcopus Burgenſis. See Elias Levita in Thisbi, and Buxtorf. Lex. Talmud. in the word אגמון.

ἄνδρες Ἡγούμενοι

c. Βεβαιοῦσθαι

V. 9. Eſtabliſhed] The Hebrews expreſſe food by the ſtaffe of bread, becauſe feeding is the ſuſtaining and upholding of the body, which would otherwiſe, as a cripple deprived of his crutch, as the ſick or weak man of his ſtaffe, ſoon fall to the ground. Accordingly the Hebrew סער ſtabilivit, fulcivit, to eſtabliſh and ſuſtain, ſignifies alſo refecit, refreſhing, and doth ſo eſpecially when 'tis joyned with לב heart (anſwerable to καρδία here) as Pſalm 104. bread to ſtrengthen mans heart, and Gen. 27. with corn and wine I have ſuſtained him. And in Chaldee and Syriack the ſame word ſignifies eating, taking meat. So 1 Kin. 13. 7. Come home with me, ושערה and feed, or eat, the Septuagint, καὶ ἀρίστησον and dine; and Luc. 22. 11. the Syriack hath למסער to eat, and among the Rabbines ordinarily סעודה convivium, a feaſt. And ſo here βεβαιοῦσθαι to be eſtabliſhed (one ſenſe of that Hebrew סער) is ſet to ſignifie that other of feeding or eating, and with the addition of χάριτι, with grace, imports the Goſpel, the ſpiritual food of ſouls, to tend more to our ſpiritual advantages then ever the ſacrifices of the Jewes did or could, which are here called βρώματα meats, becauſe of them part being ſacrificed to God, part going to the Prieſt, the reſt went for the furniſhing a feaſt for the ſacrificers and others whom they invited to them, and therewith they refreſhed and cheered themſelves before the Lord, Deut. 12. 18. Καρδία Βρώματα

d. Χάριτι

1b. Grace] That χάρις grace hath in many places of the New Teſtament, and particularly in this, a ſpecial peculiar notion to ſignifie the Goſpel, as that is oppoſed to the Law (upon this ground, becauſe the matter of the Goſpel is free undeſerved mercy; and beſides, the ſending Chriſt and the Holy Ghoſt and the Apoſtles to reveal this is an act of infinite charity in God alſo) will appear, not onely by the oppoſition here to Βρώματα meats, which as Βρῶσις alſo ſignifie the Moſaical feaſts and ſacrifices, 1 Cor. 8. 8. Heb. 9. 10. Rom. 14. 17. Col. 2, 16. but more evidently by viewing theſe many other places in the New Teſtament, wherein the word χάρις ſignifies the Goſpel; John 1. 17. ἡ χάρις καὶ ἀλήθεια grace and truth, the Goſpel, (and ſubſtance of all the Moſaical ſhadows,) is ſaid to have come by Jeſus Chriſt, in oppoſition to the Law by Moſes. So Act. 11. 23. ἰδὼν τὴν χάριν τ Θεοῦ, having ſeen the grace of God, that is, the Goſpel, ſo ſucceſſefully preach'd among them, (ſee Note on Act. 18. d.) and accordingly c. 13. 43. they exhort them ἐπιμένειν τῇ χάριτι τ Θεοῦ to continue in the grace, that is, the Goſpel, of God that had been preached, the doctrine thus mercifully revealed from God by them. So Act. 14. 3. the Lord is ſaid to bear witneſſe to the word of his grace, that is, by miracles to confirm the preaching of the Goſpel. So v. 26. and c. 15. 40. Paul and Barnabas were commended by the Apoſtles τῇ χάριτι τ Θεοῦ to the grace, that is, the Goſpel, of God, to the preaching of it, expreſs'd after by εἰς τὸ ἔργον ὃ ἐπλήρωσαν, the work which they performed. So c. 15. 11. διὰ τ χάριτος Ἰησοῦ, by the Goſpel, in oppoſition to the yoke of the Law laid by the Judaizers upon the Chriſtians. So πεπιστευκότες διὰ τ χάριτος, they that believed through the preaching of the Goſpel. So c. 20. 40. εὐαγγέλιον τ χάριτος the Goſpel of grace, and v. 32. λόγος τ χάριτος the word of his grace, that is, preaching of the Goſpel. So ἐλάβομεν χάριν we received grace, Rom. 1. 5. and then ἀποστολὴν Apoſtleſhip; firſt the mercy of receiving the Goſpel, then commiſſion to preach it. So Rom. 5. 2. εἰς τ χάριν ταύτην unto this grace, the Goſpel, in which we ſtand, &c. So c. 6. 14, and 15. we are not under the Law, but ὑπὸ χάριν under grace, that is, under the Goſpel. So 2 Cor. 1. 12. ἐν χάριτι Θεοῦ by the grace of God, the Goſpel, ſet in oppoſition to the Σοφία Σαρκικὴ the fleſhly heathen wiſdome (becauſe this was no way to be attained but by God's revealing it:) ſo c. 6. 1. they are exhorted not to receive χάριν Θεοῦ the Goſpel Χάριτι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ Ἰδὼν τὴν χάριν Ἐπιμένειν τῇ χάριτι Λόγος τ χάριτος Πεπιστευκότες διὰ τὴς χάριτος Goſpel again, εἰς κενὸν in vain. So Gal. 2. 21. οὐκ ἀθετῶ τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ, I do not evacuate the Goſpel, I doe not let that great favour of God of revealing the Goſpel to me to be caſt away upon me, and c. 5. 4. of them that depended on the Law, τῆς χάριτος ἐξεπέσατε, ye have fallen from grace, that is, from the Goſpel. So Eph. 1. 6. the glory of his grace, and 2. 7. the abundant riches of it, that is, of the Goſpel revealed to the heathen. So Col. 1. 6. ἀφ' ἧς ἡμέρας ἠκούσατε καὶ ἐπέγνωτε τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, from the day that ye heard and knew the grace of God in truth; where by the conjunction of ἀλήθεια truth with it (as before in John, grace and truth) & the hearing and knowing, 'tis clear there can be nothing meant by χάρις grace but the Goſpel. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 16. a good hope ἐν χάριτι in the Goſpel; and 2 Tim. 2. 1. ἐνδυναμοῦ be ſtrong ἐν τῇ χάριτι in the preaching of the Goſpel. So Tit. 2. 11. the grace of God hath appeared, teaching, &c. clearly the Goſpel and the doctrine thereof. So in this Epiſtle, c. 10. 29. the ſpirit of grace, the ſpirit of God that, in God's great kindneſſe to us, was ſent to conſecrate the Apoſtles to their office of preaching the Goſpel. So c. 12. 15. ὑστερῶν ἀπὸ τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Θεοῦ, falling ſhort of the grace of God, noting apoſtaſie or defection from the Goſpel; and perhaps contrary to that v. 28. χάριν ἔχωμεν, let us hold faſt grace. So 1 Pet. 1. 10. περὶ τῆς εἰς ὑμᾶς χάριτος, the grace to you, or the Goſpel preached unto you, and v. 13. ἐπὶ τὴν φερομένην ὑμῖν χάριν the Goſpel brought to you, and c. 5. 12. teſtifying ταύτην εἶναι ἀληθῆ χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ, that this is the very Goſpel of God. So Jude 4. transferring the grace of God to laſciviouſneſſe, that is, making that uſe of the Goſpel to Libertiniſme.

e. Καρπὸς χειλέων

V. 15. Fruit of our lips] Some difficulty there is in the phraſe καρπὸς χειλέων fruit of lips. 'Tis ordinarily conjectured that the Greek translation in Hoſea, ch. 14. 2. whence it is taken, read פְּרִי fruit, in ſtead of פָּרִים calves, which the Hebrew Copyes retain, and inſtances of the like have been given Note on Heb. 8. a. But Mr. Pocock renders another account of it, viz. that καρπὸς is here taken in the notion of κάρπωμα, the word uſed by the Septuagint for an holocauſt, which being ordinarily of young bullocks, the Hebrew פָּרִים vituli, calves, may fitly be rendred by it. The onely difficulty is to reſolve what the reaſon is that holocauſts ſhould be called κάρπωμα: and his conjecture is good, becauſe theſe being above what was preſcribed by the Law, they bare proportion to fruit or banquet after a meal, and accordingly they are called by the Rabbins קיץ למזבח ſummer fruit for the Altar, or a banquet over and above the preſcribed ſacrifice: for as it is the cuſtome after a feaſt to ſerve in fruit, ſo, ſaith Bartenorius, after they have offered the due oblations of every day, they bring the holocauſts for their free-will-offerings. See Maimon. ad Miſhnaioth. tr. Shekalim, c. 4. §. 4. But if this be not imbraced, why yet may it not be reſolved that the 72. retaining the ſenſe, thought fit (as often they do) lightly to change the word, and ſo to ſet fruit for calves? By this means 'tis become farre more fit for our Apoſtles turn, to ſignifie our Chriſtian ſacrifice or free-will-oblations, works of mercy, &c. which together with our praiſes of God we offer to him, proportionable to the offering to God thankſgiving, and paying vowes, Pſ. 50. 14. which being promiſed by the lips and ſpoken with the mouth, Pſal. 67. 14. the payment of them is really καρπὸς χειλέων here, the fruit, and calves, of our lips. This fruit of the lips is here viſibly ſet down as all one with the θυσία αἰνέσεως, ſacrifice of praiſe. Thus the τουτέστι, that is, enforceth. Now the ſacrifice of praiſe is literally זבח תודה θυσία αἰνέσεως, ſo called Pſal. 49. 15, 24. Pſal. 107. 22. Pſal. 116. 17. and that the σωτήριον. ſalvation, ver. 13. that is, the peace-offering, or treſpaſs-offering, Lev. 7. where for הָאָשָׁם, the treſpaſs-offering, the Septuagint have θυσία σωτηρίου the ſacrifice of ſalvation, v. 1. θυσίαν αἰνέσεως, the ſacrifice of praiſe, v. 2. θυσίαν αἰνέσεως σωτηρίου, the ſacrifice of ſalvifick praiſe, v. 3. And this the Chriſtian offers in the Euchariſt, wherein, according to the Primitive practice, every man brings his liberal oblation, the bread and wine, and fruits of the ſeaſon, in * Juſtin Martyrs time, and afterward that which was proportionable thereto, never coming to God empty, or without remembring the Corban, ſaith S. Cyprian. For this being offered to God by the Biſhop or Prieſt with thanksgiving (from whence it was called the Euchariſt) thereby to acknowledge God the author of all the good things we enjoy (primitias earum quæ ſunt ejus creaturarum offerentes, ſaith * Irenæus) is properly our ſacrifice of praiſe, a reall ſacrifice, viz. the δῶρα gifts or oblations which there we bring, and that a ſacrifice of praiſe or thankſgiving, being farther ἀνάμνησις θυσίας, a commemoration of Chriſts ſacrifice, ſaith Chryſoſtome; and ſo literally καρπὸς χειλέων ὁμολογούντων here, the fruit, or free-will oblation, of praiſing lips, or of lips giving thanks, or confeſſing in the name of the Lord, that Lord of our ſalvation whom we there commemorate. And then to all this followes very naturally, in the next verſe, to do good and to communicate forget not: for with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed: that is, over and above this ſolemn Euchariſtical oblation, we muſt alſo be mindfull of daily continual works of charity upon all occaſions, and wants of our poor brethren; this of charity and mercy being our acceptable Chriſtian ſacrifice, required by God in exchange for thoſe daily ſacrifices of the Jewes, that were conſumed with fire, went all into ſmoake, were not laid out to ſo much ſolid profit, (the relief of our poor brethren, Gods known proxyes upon earth) as theſe our Chriſtian ſacrifices are.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JAMES.

a. Καθολικὴ

b. * the Apostle, so most of the copies read, Ἀποστόλου

BY the word καθολικὴ, Catholick, is here noted, that this Epistle was not written to any particular Church of one denomination, as S. Pauls Epistles were, but to all the Jewish converts whersoever they were. That those were dispersed into several parts, and thence called the διασπορὰ, dispersion, see Note on Joh. 7. d. The places where they especially lived are mentioned 1 Pet. 1. 1. and Pontus being there first mention'd, S. Cyprian mentions that Epistle of his, as that which was called Epistola Petri ad Ponticos, The Epistle of Peter to those of Pontus, Cyprian l. 3. de Testimon. 39. But that not to exclude the other parts of their dispersion after mention'd. Such Epistles as these are those which are antiently called ἐγκύκλιοι, which being delivered to the Church of some one city, were appointed by them to be transcribed, and sent about to all the other Churches within such a κύκλος, compasse or circuit.

b. Ἰάκωβος

Who the writer of this Epistle was, is thus far agreed on amongst most, that it was the Bishop of Jerusalem, though the Syriack conceive it to be the son of Zebedee: But he was cut off by Herod, Act. 12. 1. before this dispersion of the Jewish Christians was so considerable as it was at the writing of this Epistle. The main question is, what James it was that was Bishop there, whether James the son of Alphæus, one of the Twelve, or some other. That it was the son of Alphæus is thought to be favoured by the title of the Epistle, which in most Copies hath Ἰακώβου τοῦ Ἀποστόλου, of James the Apostle. But this sure is a mistake; for the Bishop of Jerusalem was James the Just, known by the title of the brother of the Lord, that is, the son of Cleophas (Christs uncle) and so his cousin-germane, which is ordinarily expressed by brother in the sacred Dialect. So Clemens Hypotyp. l. 6. in Euseb. l. 2. c. α'. Peter and James and John (the sons of Zebedee) μὴ ὀπτασίας ἔσχε δόξης, ἀλλὰ Ἰάκωβον τὸν Δίκαιον ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων ἑλέσθαι, did not contend for the dignity, but chose James the Just Bishop of Jerusalem. And this, it seems, as next of kin to Christ; For of Simeon the second Bishop saith Hegesippus in Eusebius, l. 4. c. κβ'. Μετὰ τὸ μαρτυρῆσαι τὸν Ἰάκωβον τὸν Δίκαιον, πάλιν Συμεὼν ὁ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ καθίσταται ἐπίσκοπος, ὃν προέθεντο πάντες ὄντα ἀνεψιὸν τοῦ Κυρίου δεύτερον, After the martyrdome of James the Just, Simeon again was constituted Bishop of Jerusalem, whom all preferred to that dignity, as being (after James the next, or) second cousin of Christ. Now that this James the Lords brother was not one of the Twelve, is clear by Eusebius, l. 1. c. ια'. Εἷς ὢν καὶ οὗτος τῶν φερομένων τοῦ Σωτῆρος μαθητῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀδελφὸς λεγόμενος, This James was one of the reputed disciples, yea and brethren of Christ. Where disciples are clearly opposed by Eusebius to the Twelve. So in the Author of the Recognitions, this James is affirmed to be none of the Twelve. So in the Menologie of the Greek Church they celebrate three Jameses, James the son of Alphæus, Octob. 9. James the brother of the Lord, Octob. 23. and James the son of Zebedee, Apr. 30. So saith Eusebius again, l. 2. c. κγ'. that he was called James the Just, ἐπεὶ πολλοὶ Ἰάκωβοι ἐκαλοῦντο, because there were many of that name. See more of this Note on 1 Cor. 15. a. As for the title of Ἀπόστολος Apostle which here is bestowed upon him, that is no objection against what hath hitherto been said. For S. Hierome in his Comment. on Isaiah calls him the thirteenth Apostle; and upon the mention of him Eusebius adds, l. 1. c. ια'. ἔξω ὡς παρὰ τούτους καὶ μύριοι ἄλλοι ὅσοι παρεξάγοντο Ἀποστόλων, beside the twelve there were many other Apostles in that age, after the similitude, or by way of imitation, of the twelve. And Theodoret pronounces indifferently, τοὺς νῦν καλουμένους ἐπισκόπους, Ἀποστόλους ἀνόμαζον, those that are now called Bishops, they then called Apostles. So Thaddæus (not Lebbæus or Judas, one of the Twelve, but, saith Eusebius) one of the Seventy, who ten years after Christ was sent by Thomas to the King of Edessa, is out of the Syriack records of that city called Ἀπόστολος Θαδδαῖος, the Apostle Thaddæus. So Luke, or possibly Silas, S. Pauls fellow-traveller, is named among the Apostles of the Church, 2 Cor. 8. 23. and so by Epiphanius and Theophanes Luke is styled Ἀπόστολος Apostle. So Mark S. Peters follower, that first planted the Church in Alexandria and Pentapolis, is by the Anonymous writer of his life in Photius, by Eusebius, l. 2. c. κδ'. by Epiphanius, Hær. 51. called Ἀπόστολος Apostle. So Timothy, converted by S. Paul, and after that made Bishop of Ephesus, is by the

* Bibl. num. 254. Anonymus in Photius* ὁ Ἀπόστολος Τιμόθεος, the Apostle Timothy, and in Theodoret on 1 Tim. 3. 1. Ἀσιανῶν Ἀπόστολος ὁ Τιμόθεος, Timothy the Apostle of the Asiaticks. And so Theophanes, τῷ Ἰουλίῳ μηνὶ γενέσιον ἐγκαίνια τῶν ἁγίων λειψάνων, Ἀνδρέου, Λουκᾶ, καὶ Τιμοθέου, τῶν ἁγίων Ἀποστόλων, In the moneth July were the dedication of the memorials of Andrew, Luke and Timothy, the holy Apostles. So Titus is by Theodoret styled Κρητῶν Ἀπόστολος Τίτος, Titus the Apostle of the Cretans. And so Epaphroditus, Phil. 2. 25. is Ἀπόστολος ὑμῶν your Apostle; for which Theodoret gives the reason, because τῷ ἐπισκοπικῷ οἰκονομίαν ἐπιστεύθη, ἔχων ἐπισκόπου περιοδείαν, he was intrusted with the Episcopal government of them. So Clemens Romanus the Bishop of Rome is by Clemens Alexandrinus l. 4. called ὁ Ἀπόστολος Κλήμης the Apostle Clemens, by S. Hierome in Isa. 52. vir Apostolicus, an Apostolick person, by Ruffinus, De Adulterat. lib. Orig. penè Apostolus, almost an Apostle. So Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch is by Chrysostome in his encomium of him called Ἀπόστολος Apostle.

For the time when this Epistle was written, there is no certainty of defining, save that, as it must be after the Apostles preaching and converting the Jewes in the other regions beside Judæa, so it must be before the year 63. for then this James was put to death by Annas the younger, the High-priest. See Josephus Antiq. l. 20. c. 8. The designe of the Epistle is visible, to fortifie the faithful against all temptations wherewith the *Gnostick-heretick*s could solicit them, and to secure their patience, and purity, and faith, and charity, and all other Christian practices in them, and to foretell them the no stead that their worldly wealth most solicitously preserved will stand them in at the approaching calamity, which will involve incredulous Jewes and Gnosticks together, cap. 5. 1. hereby comforting the faithful, and encouraging them to persevere till this coming of Christ for their rescue from their persecutors, v. 8.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

1. JAMES a ſervant of God, and of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to the twelve tribes which are * ſcattered abroad, greeting.]

* in the diſperſion ἐν τῇ διασπορᾷ

1. James the Biſhop of Jeruſalem, employed by God & Chriſt in the ſervice of that Church, ſends greeting to the Jewiſh Chriſtians that are diſperſed among the nations out of Judæa in divers cities.

† among περιπέσητε, ſee Lu. 10. 30.

2. My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall † into divers temptations,]

2. Look upon it as the bleſſedeſt condition that can befall you, the joyfulleſt thing imaginable, that you meet with afflictions here in your Chriſtian courſe, and thoſe of many ſorts and kinds, a ſucceſſion of many of them.

3. Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience.]

3. And this you will doe, if you duly conſider the gainfull effects of theſe afflictions: For as by them your faith is tried whether it be ſincere or no, ſo that trial exerciſes and gives you the habit of that excellent Chriſtian vertue, of patience and courage and conſtancy; and that being a ſuperiority of mind, and a victory over a mans ſelf, over his moſt hurtfull and unruly paſſions, his fears, his ſorrow, his rage, his revenge, and over all the world beſides, over injuries, rapines, contumelies, death it ſelf, it muſt needs be a delightfull joyous vertue.

* And δὲ

4. * But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and intire, wanting nothing.]

4. And then let this patience, by conſideration of the advantages of our ſuffering for Chriſt and pieties ſake, and by the delightfulneſſe of theſe exerciſes of it, advance to this pitch of rejoicing in tribulations, of bleſſing and glorifying God for them, together with conſtancy and perſeverance therein, and the more and heavier the afflictions are, of rejoicing ſtill the more, v. 2. which is the giving patience the full ſcope, improving that vertue to the higheſt degree of perfection: and this will be infinitely for your advantage, the greateſt riches that ye can be capable of in this world.

† But if, Εἰ δὲ

5. † If any of you lack wiſdome, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it ſhall be given him.]

5. To this indeed there is not only fortitude required, but wiſdome, and that of the higheſt nature. And if in ſuch times of preſſure as theſe, any man want this true heavenly ſpiritual wiſdome, this skill of managing himſelf at this time, of ſecuring his intereſt with Chriſt rather then with the world, of depending on Chriſts care of him, without uſing other artifices of ſecuring himſelf, of bearing not only patiently but joyfully the utmoſt evils, let his recourſe be continually to God, whom he need not make ſcruple or be aſhamed to conſult upon every occaſion; for his liberality is not confined, like ours, nor is he wont to reproach thoſe whom he gives any thing to, and he will certainly ſhew him this truth, and furniſh him with this ſtrength of enduring cheerfully, and give him, when time comes, the experimental knowledge of what I here ſay, how joyfull a thing it is to be thus exerciſed, and to retain this ſuperiority of mind in all the afflictions that can befall us.

6. But let him ask [a] in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the ſea driven with the wind and toſſed.]

6. But let him come to God with firm adherence on him, a mind reſolved, whatſoever comes, to ſtick faſt to God, to uſe no means of delivering himſelf, but ſuch as are acceptable to him, never entertaining any doubt, whether Gods waies or his own are to be adhered to for the obtaining of his ends, making no queſtion of Gods power or will to anſwer his requeſts, and therefore praying and depending on him quietly for an iſſue out of all: Whereas the contrary doubting or wavering keeps men in a perpetual tempeſt and agitation of mind, alwaies toſſed from one hold, one dependence to another, ſee note on 1 Joh. 5. b. [a]

7. For let not that man think that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord.]

7. And beſides it is the blaſting of our prayers, God being not wont to hear them that doe not ſincerely and faithfully depend on him.

8. A double-minded man is unſtable in all his waies.]

8. A wavering, inconſtant Chriſtian, that together with the faith of Chriſt applies himſelf to unlawfull courſes for his own ſafeguard, hath the infelicity of never knowing which way to turn himſelf, being alwaies betwixt two, and diſquieted upon all occaſions: ſee Eccluſ 2. 13, 14, 15, 16.

* But let δὲ

9. * Let the [b] brother of low degree rejoice † in that he is exalted:

† in his own height ἐν τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ

10. But the rich in that he is made low, becauſe as the flower of the graſſe he ſhall paſſe away.]

9, 10. But let the rich man that falls into a low condition through the afflictions to which this world is ſubject, be as well pleaſed and thank God as heartily for his being reduced to this low eſtate, as a poor man is wont to be when he is preferred and exalted, (ſee note on Mat. 9. d.) Or thus, It is no unhappy ſtate for a man to have loſt all, to be brought low in the world, and ſo to have nothing left to loſe or ſecure. Nay this he may really look on as a dignity, or preferment, that he hath reaſon to be very glad of, and not to mourn for. And ſo likewiſe may the rich man look with joy upon the plundrings and violences that befall him; becauſe his riches is as fading and tranſitory a thing as the greenneſſe of the graſſe, not worth the valuing; and the care of keeping and perpetuating it unto him, will bring him a great deal of temptation and vexation, and little of joy or advantage. [b]

* aroſe with burning heat, and dried away the graſſe, and the flower thereof fell away, and the beauty of the look of it periſhed: Ἀνέτειλε γὰρ —— † be withered in his own waies, μαρανθήσεται ἐν ταῖς —— αὐτοῦ

11. For the ſun * is no ſooner riſen with a burning heat, but it withereth the graſſe, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the faſhion of it periſheth: ſo alſo ſhall the rich man † fade away in his [c] waies.]

11. For as it is with the green graſſe on the ground, as ſoon as ever the ſun riſeth and ſcorcheth it, it makes it wither, and all the florid part and beauty vaniſheth preſently, and there is no poſſible preſerving it at ſuch a time; ſo the rich man, when afflictions and devourers come upon him, doth in a ſmall time wither and fall away, his riches leave him, or he them, if God ſee fit to ſend or permit afflictions, he will not by all his dexterities, by any means, (but prayer and fidelity and conſtancy, ver. 5, 6, 7.) be able to avert them. [c]

* being approved δόκιμος γενόμενος

12. Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation; for * when he is tried he ſhall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that love him.]

12. Whereas on the other ſide, for the true conſtant pious Chriſtian, it is a bleſſed thing for him that he meets with afflictions, which are but means to trie and exerciſe his Chriſtian vertues; which being done, he ſhall receive approbation from God, and with it a reward, ſuch as in the Goſpel is promiſed to all that adhere and cleave faſt to God, if not deliverance here, eternity hereafter.

† to

13. Let no man ſay when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted † with evil, neither tempteth he any man.]

13. Let no man that by afflictions is brought to any ſins, ſay that God is the author of this; for as God cannot himſelf be brought to ſin by any means, ſo doth not he by ſending affliction ſeduce or inſnare any, cauſe him to fall by that means, (as appears by the ſincere Chriſtian, whoſe fidelity is not betrayed, but approved by afflictions.)

14. But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own luſt and inticed.]

14. But every mans falling into any ſin comes from himſelf, his own treacherous ſenſual appetite, which being impatient of ſufferings, ſuggeſts and tenders him ſome ſenſitive carnal baits, and ſo by them draws him out of his courſe and intices him.

15. And when his conſent is joyned to that propoſal or invitation of his ſenſual part, and temptation ver. 13. begetteth ſin, every ſuch conſent is the engaging the ſoul in ſin; and ſuch ſin, when by repetition of acts or indulgence it comes to ſome perfection, it engageth the ſoul in eternal death, ſee note on 1 Theſſ. 5. f.

15. Then when luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth ſin: and ſin when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth death.]

16, 17. Doe not permit your ſelves to be deceived by the Gnoſticks that creep in among you, and flatter you with hopes that they by their compliances will be able to preſerve you from ſuffering here. No certainly, it is God muſt ſecure you, or ye are not likely to be ſecured; the preſent avoiding of perſecutions by not confeſſing of Chriſt will ſtand you in ſmall ſtead, involve you only in the deſtruction that attends the perſecutors: and this will be a ſad deceit, when it befalls you. How much better and ſafer will it be to adhere to God, when every good thing that is given to men, whether of the lower or higher ſort, the ordinary prizes in their ſpiritual exerciſes, and the moſt illuſtrious crowns, (ſee note on Phil. 3. d.) come from heaven, deſcend to us from God, who is the great ſpring and fountain of all good things, who like the ſun ſends out light to all that want, but then is not like that in its changeableneſſe (as in the ſeveral appearances of the ſun, when it riſeth, when 'tis high noon, and when it ſets, whereas God is conſtant in the ſame, powring out his raies on us, hath no riſing nor ſetting) nor again in his yearly removing or going from us, which cauſes different ſhadows on the earth? God ſends forth his light without mixture of ſhade, his gifts without all niggardlineſſe or reſtraint.

16. * Do not erre, my beloved brethren,

17. Every good † gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the father of lights, with whom is * no variableneſſe, neither ſhadow of turning.]

* Be not deceived. Μὴ πλανᾶσθε

He hath now begotten us in a more excellent way and manner then when we were called his children, being Iſraelites, begotten us by the Goſpel to be Chriſtians and heirs of ſalvation, and therein he hath allowed us the favour of being the firſt that have been called to this dignity, Epheſ. 1. 12. and that out of no conſideration of any thing in us, but only of his own free will and pleaſure, which being an evidence of his free goodneſſe toward us, we have little reaſon to miſdoubt him.

18. Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we ſhould be a kind of firſt-fruits of his creatures.]

19. Seeing therefore God hath been ſo gracious to us, let theſe advantages be made uſe of to reform every thing that is amiſſe, let it engage us to thoſe moral duties oft recommended to us, as to be very ready to hear and learn, and yet very deliberate and warie in our words, ſo to be very hardly brought to anger or impatience, whatever the wickedneſſe of men, whatſoever our provocations be.

19. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be ſwift to hear, ſlow to ſpeak, ſlow to wrath.]

20. For it is not at all agreeable to the Chriſtian temper, required Mat. 5. to be impatient, and fall out into ſuddain wrath or anger; and he that is ſuch, will never be able to doe that which is preſcribed by God, and acceptable to him under the Goſpel.

20. For the wrath of man worketh not the righteouſneſſe of God.]

21. And as the ſinnes of wrath and malice, ſo obſervable in the Gnoſticks among you, (which are therefore called dogs, and the conciſion, by S. Paul) ye likewiſe of luſt alſo, all thoſe that circumciſion noted the caſting from us, and are anſwerable to the ſuckers that grow from the root of the tree, let them be plucked off and removed, that you may be the more docile and capable of receiving the whole Goſpel-doctrine, which is as it were a graffe of a ſweet, kindly fruit, grafted into the ſtock of our ſowre and corrupt nature, and being received and proſpering in our hearts, will fructifie unto holineſſe, and finally will bring men to heaven.

21. Wherefore lay apart all filthineſſe and ſuperfluity of naughtineſſe, and receive with meekneſſe the engraffed word, which is able to ſave your ſouls.]

22. But then 'twill not be ſufficient to receive that doctrine into your ears or brain, but it muſt be uniformly practiſed, or elſe it is but the deceiving of your ſelves.

22. But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own ſelves.]

23, 24. For he that hears the directions that are given in the Goſpel for good life, and the motives and obligations to it, and when he hath done ſo, ſets not with any care to live accordingly a pious Chriſtian life, may be reſembled to a man looking in a mirrour, to obſerve what ſpots or ſullages are there in his face, and when he hath done, goes away, and forgets what he ſaw there, never thinks to reform what was amiſſe.

e. 23. For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his e natural face in a glaſſe;

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. πίστις

V. 6. In Faith] The word πίστις faith, which is generally thought in this place to belong to believing that the prayers ſhall be heard, may very well be taken in the ordinary notion, for a firm adherence to the doctrine of Chriſt, a conſtancy in the Chriſtian profeſſion and practice. Thus is believing uſed Eccluſ 2. 13. Woe to him that is faint-hearted, for he believeth not; and this joyned with the ſinner that goes two wayes, v. 12. as here the double-minded man, oppoſed to praying in faith, is farther explained by doubting, and wavering, and inſtability. So in Herodotus, l. 1. χρὴ πίστιν ἐν φιλίῃ τίθεσθαι, κεφαλὴν καὶ δίπλακα παραιρέεσθαι, Men muſt preſerve faith in friendſhip, and not be polluted with a double heart; where, as here, faith and the double heart are oppoſed in this ſenſe. This notion will very well agree with the Context, where comforting the diſperſed perſecuted Chriſtian Jewes, ver. 2. and bidding them rejoyce in thoſe ſufferings, to which he again returns, v. 9. (which argues that all which is betwixt doth alſo belong to the ſame matter) he infor-

ces his exhortation, v. 3. by remembring them that the trial of their faith, meaning that by which their faith or constancy is tried, that is, afflictions (so δοκίμιον signifies, and differs from δοκιμὴ, Rom. 5. 4. as κριτήριον from κρίσις, that by which the judgment is made from the judgment it self,) worketh, or perfecteth patience, that is, that if they had no afflictions to trie their constancy of adhering to Christ, there were then no place for that great Christian vertue (at least no way of perfecting it) to which the promises were made, viz. patience, perseverance; which patience must have its perfect work, v. 4. that is, Christianity requires perfect patience, and perseverance in spight of all temptations; and he that fails in any, loses all, and he that is not tried (and gives testimony of his sincerity) in every thing, he is imperfect and wants somewhat that trial would make him capable of. But because in the many temptations of the world a man may fail, or for want of wisdome how to behave himself miscarry sometimes, (& that consideration may discourage men when heavy pressures come tumbling in upon them) therefore v. 5. he proceeds to answer that objection, by telling them that this defect is reparable by prayer, God can supply them in this (and Christ in the like condition bids the Disciples take no thought, never premeditate, what answer they shall give.) If they refer themselves in prayer to Gods guidance in this matter, he will give them this wisdome abundantly. But then, v. 6. that which is required to qualifie them to have this prayer of theirs granted by God is, that they keep close to God, have no waverings, or inconstant demurs, or doubtings, whether they shall keep close or no; in the same sense as calling upon God in truth, or in faith, Psal. 145. 18. (the Hebrew באמת indifferently signifies either) is constantly to adhere to God on whom they call. In which S. James looks particularly on the Gnostick compliances and warpings of some Christians, that to avoid persecutions were ready to forsake Christ, which is here expressed by the wave driven by the wind of persecution (as Eph. 4. 14. by false doctrine) and the double-minded, unstable person, ver. 8. (which, c. 4. 8. is also look'd on as impure) which had no reason to expect any wisdome or assistance from God, v. 7. And so though 'tis possible the asking in faith may signifie in a narrower sense, confidence that his prayers shall be heard, yet it accords very well with the scope, that it should be taken in the greater latitude; when he prays for wisdome to behave himself in persecutions as he ought, let him stick fast to his profession, and never waver in that, come to God with that firm unmoved purpose and resolution of mind, and he shall be sure to be assisted by God. So 1 John 3. 22. Whatever we ask we receive from him, because we keep his commandments, adhere and stick fast to him, and doe what is pleasing to him.

b. V. 9. Brother of low degree] What the meaning of this verse is, Καυχάσθω ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ταπεινὸς ἐν τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ, but let the brother that is low, triumph, or rejoice, in his height, is to me very doubtful, and therefore I have set down two notions of which it is capable. The former hath already been set down from an idiome of the sacred dialect, Mat. 9 d. and need not be again recited here. The latter hath these probabilities for it. First, from the Context, which from the beginning of the Chapter had been to exhort them to rejoice in tribulations, to count it all joy, ver. 2. and that is all one with καυχᾶσθε, rejoice or boast here; and then that which is matter of all joy, or of boasting, being alwaies some good accession, some dignity, some advancement, it is very reasonable that that which he is bid rejoice in should be look'd on as ὕψος αὐτοῦ his height, his preferment. Secondly from the word ὕψος which is here used, and signifies height, not ὕψωσις exaltation, or being made high, which is it that is opposite to ταπείνωσις, being brought low, v. 10. which notes this ὕψος or height to be that which the brother which is low hath whilest he remains such, and not that to which he is raised from his low estate, and ceaseth to be low when he is so raised. And upon this notion the second sense is founded, that the Christian in a low condition is not to be sad or dejected at that, as at an unhappy estate, but to look upon it with joy, as a thing that hath many huge advantages in it, especially in such times of persecution to Christians as those were, (it ridds him of envy, plundrings, and continual fears) a preferment, or dignity, to him. Thirdly, from the δὲ but, in the front, But let the brother, &c. which is a note of connexion with the former, and so an argument that this is the meaning, which is most agreeable with the fore-going discourse, which was wholly of the advantages of afflictions, and rejoycing in them, and not of exaltation. And thus also it will connect very fitly with the following verse: for if the person in a low estate be to look upon it as a preferment or advantage, then in reason the rich man is to rejoice at his ταπείνωσις being brought low, that is, at his being reduced to that condition which is said to have so much of height and advantage in it. All this thus put together renders this a very probable interpretation.

c. V. 11. Waies] The word πορείαις waies here may possibly be a change of the Transcriber for ἐμπορείαις, tradings or merchandises, as c. 4. 13. 'tis the rich mans speech, ἐμπορευσόμεθα καὶ κερδήσομεν, we will traffick and gain. But because πορείαις waies hath no inconvenient sense in it, therefore there is no use of any such alteration.

d. V. 17. Variablenesse] The word παραλλαγὴ signifieth Astronomically the several habitudes and positions wherein the Sun appears to us every day at the rising, in the Meridian, and when it sets. And so τροπὴ is also a like word belonging not to the daily, but yearly course of the Sun, which is farther from us or neerer to us, after the measure or in the proportion that it moves toward the Northern or Southern Tropick. And from thence it is that it casts several shadows to the several people of the world, and gives Geographers occasion to divide them into Ἄσκιοι, ἑτερόσκιοι and ἀμφίσκιοι, those that cast no shadows, those that cast shadows on one side, and those that cast shadows round about. And agreeable to this is the word ἀποσκίασμα casting of shadow here, and being joyned with τροπῆς turning signifies the variations of the shadows, according to the various motions of the Sun before mentioned.

e. V. 23. Natural face] Some difficulty there is in understanding this verse, which will be resolved, if, as ordinarily it is thought, πρόσωπον γενέσεως αὐτοῦ, be determined to signifie no more then a mans own face reflected to him in a glasse, and ἔσοπτρον be taken for that glasse or mirrour. For then the meaning of the verse will be, that the word of God is as such a glasse, reflecting to him the pourtraicture of himself, ὁποῖός ἐστι, what a kinde of person he is, whether there be any thing amisse in him or no; and he that hears the word of God, and doth it not, is, as if a man should look upon, and contemplate his face in a looking-glasse, and no more, (That will be the meaning of κατανοοῦντι, he that beholdeth, in the Present tense.) As for any use or effect of this looking, it follows, he beheld and went away, and presently forgot: when he hath seen what blemishes there are to be wiped off, to be reformed in him, he contents himself with having seen them, and having done so departs, and never thinks more of them, layes not to heart what he sees thus amisse in himself, forgets to reform or amend any thing. To this interpretation the chief objections are, first, from the word γενέσεως, which seems unnecessarily added, when πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ his own face would have served the turn; and again, γένεσις signifying birth or nativity, it is not obvious what ſhould be meant by the face of his own birth: ſecondly, From the γὰρ for, ver. 24. which ſeems to divide the period, and make that of going away and forgetting, the proof of his being like a man that beheld his face in a glaſſe, whereas by this interpretation the going and forgetting is connected with his ſeeing his face, and both of them together are the thing to which the forgetful hearer is reſembled. To the firſt of theſe this anſwer may be offered, firſt, that a man may be ſaid to have a double face, an inward and outward, a ſpiritual and corporal; the face of his mind, thoughts and actions, and that is to be beheld and conſidered in a ſpiritual mirror, the word of God, as the outward, the bodily face or countenance, is by the ordinary glaſſe or mirror repreſented to us. And the ſimilitude being here ſet between one of theſe and the other, it will not be improper, to the mention of the face to adde a word of diſtinction, πρόσωπον γενέσεως, that face which belongs to man by nature, by birth, and is not acquired by ſtudy, by actions, by any thing in his own will or choice, as the face of his mind, the ſoul may be ſaid to be. Or it is poſſible, becauſe πρόσωπον ſignifies ſometimes a falſe face, that of an actor, a ſtage-player, a perſonator, that here πρόσωπον γενέσεως, that face that he is born with, may be ſet oppoſite to that. As for the ſetting it in the Genitive caſe Adjectively, that is an ordinary Hebraiſme, as the Mammon of unrighteouſneſſe for the unrighteous Mammon: and we have an example of it in this very place, ver. 25. ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς, an hearer of forgetfulneſſe, for a forgetfull hearer, which is as ſtrange as here the face of his own birth, for his natural countenance, or that which he hath by his birth. To the ſecond it may alſo be anſwered, firſt, That the particle γὰρ is not alwaies Cauſal, or a note of probation in theſe writers, but ſometimes a form of connexion only; and yet ſecondly, That here (according to the interpretation premiſed) it may be allowed to have that force, his going and forgetting being the reaſon why he that hears, and doth not the Word, is likened to him that thus only looks or contemplates. Not that every one that ſees his face in a glaſſe, doth, when he goes away, forget; but that he that doth only look, and, without more care or effect of his looking, doth goe away and forget, is a fit embleme of the forgetfull hearer of the Word. From this notion of the words there will now be no reaſon to inquire (as ſome have done) whether a face ſeen in a reflection or mirror be ordinarily retained in the memory of the man whoſe face it is, that is, whether a man uſe to remember his own face; much leſſe for that nicer queſtion, whether women ordinarily doe it, though men doe not, as if that were the reaſon why the word ἀνδρὶ a man in the Maſculine were here uſed, and not ἀνθρώπῳ, which is common to man and woman. Theſe ſure were no part of Saint James's obſervation, but only that he or ſhe that have looked on themſelves in a glaſſe, may poſſibly go away and never think more of what they ſaw, never wipe off the ſpots which they diſcerned there; and then that man or woman is a fit embleme to expreſſe the matter in hand, the bare unfruitful hearer of the Word. Having thus cleared this interpretation of the words from thoſe objections, it is not unreaſonable to acquieſce in it; and therefore I ſhall not trouble the Reader with another interpretation, which I had conceived more appliable to this place, by rendring πρόσωπον γενέσεως the ſcheme of a mans nativity, in the Aſtronomers uſe of the word γένεσις (and ſo * S. Chryſoſtome, πολλοὶ γὰρ γένεσιν ἑαυτοῖς ἐπήνεγκαν, and frequently elſewhere for the Aſtrologers caſting mens nativity,) and the Evangeliſts notion of the word πρόσωπον, face, Mat. 16. 3. Luk. 12. 56. for the appearance of the ſkie (and in like manner of the Heavens) at any point of time, for which Origen in his Philocalia uſeth χυμαλισμὸς ὅτε τῆς γενέσεως, the habitude or figure at the nativity, and then interpreting ὁ ἐσόπτρῳ in an Artiſts glaſſe, wherein he repreſents to any man his fortune.

V. 27. Pure religion] That this verſe is a defenſative particularly againſt the Gnoſticks of that time, may appear by theſe two parts of worſhip here mentioned; the firſt charity to them that want, the ſecond ſpotleſneſſe from the pollutions eſpecially of the fleſh, but alſo from other ſins of the world. Theſe two branches are ſtyled by two names, the one pure, the other undefiled, worſhip, and both of them taught both by God the Father in the Old Teſtament, and now by Chriſt. Contrary to theſe were the Gnoſtick practices in the two particulars. For the ſecond, both of uncleanneſſe, even the higheſt baſeneſſe and villany, and of loving the world, and the pleaſures and advantages thereof, more then God, and complying with the perſecutors ſtill, rather then they would ſuffer any thing, there is very often mention made in the Epiſtles; and for the firſt, beſide the very frequent inculcations of the duties of charity, and the finding fault with (and complaining for) the want of them, there is in Ignatius's Ep. ad Smyrn. an eminent teſtimony. For fortifying them againſt the hereſie of the times, μηδεὶς πλανάσθω, let no man deceive you, &c. and having reſolved that faith and charity τὸ ὅλον ἔργον, ὧν οὐδὲν παρακέκριλαι, are betwixt them the whole, or all, of a Chriſtian, before which nothing is to be preferred (in oppoſition to the Gnoſticks, who ſuppoſed themſelves ſo perfect that they had no need of either) he ſpeaks plainly and punctually of them, under the name of ἑτεροδόξων εἰς χάριν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τὸν εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐλθοῦσαν of falſe opinions toward the grace of Chriſt which is come to us, and bids them obſerve how contrary they are to the doctrine of God in theſe particulars following; Περὶ ἀγάπης οὐ μέλει αὐτοῖς, οὐ περὶ χήρας, οὐ περὶ ὀρφανοῦ, οὐ περὶ θλιβομένου, οὐ περὶ δεδεμένου ἢ λελυμένου, οὐ περὶ πεινῶντος ἢ διψῶντος, They have no care of charity, no care for the widow, nor orphane, nor oppreſs'd, nor impriſoned, nor hungry, nor thirſty. In which reſpect it is manifeſt that this Apoſtle, c. 2. v. 14. proceeds to a punctual diſcourſe of the abſolute neceſſity of ſuperadding works of charity to faith, or elſe it will profit nothing, directly oppoſite to the doctrine of Simon and his Gnoſticks, of whom ſaith * Irenæus, Hos qui in eum & Helenam ejus ſpem habeant, & ut liberos agere quæ velint, ſecundùm enim ipſius gratiam ſalvari homines & non ſecundùm operas juſtas, They that place their hope on Simon and his Helen, as free men did what they would, deeming that men were ſaved by his grace, and not according to any good works or endeavours. So of the Valentinians, the progeny of thoſe Gnoſticks, ſemetipſos non per operationem, ſed eò quòd naturaliter ſpirituales, omnino ſalvari, That they are not ſaved by working, but becauſe they are naturally ſpiritual: Quapropter & intimoratè omnia quæ vetantur hi qui perfecti ſunt operantur, And therefore they that are perfect act without fear all things that are forbidden. This was S. Auguſtines ſenſe of the deſigne of this Epiſtle, De fide & oper. c. 14. Quoniam hæc opinio tunc fuerat exorta, aliæ Apoſtolicæ Epiſtolæ Petri, Johannis, Jacobi, Judæ contra eam maximè dirigunt intentionem, ut vehementer adſtruant fidem ſine operibus nihil prodeſſe, Becauſe this opinion was riſen up in that time, all the Catholick Epiſtles of James, &c. were chiefly intended againſt it, vehemently aſſerting that faith without works will profit nothing.

CHAP. II.

Paraphraſe.

*of the glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt

1. MY brethren, have not the [a] faith *of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Lord of glory, with reſpect of perſons.]

1. Chriſtianity being ſo great a promoter of juſtice and charity to all, and eſpecially to Chriſtians, and again to thoſe that moſt need our relief and aſſiſtance, cfr. 1. 27. 'tis a moſt unchriſtian thing to be partial to one before another Chriſtian on conſideration that one is richer or in better clothes then the other.

2. For if there come unto your [b] aſſembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in alſo a poor man in vile raiment,]

2. For if a cauſe in your judicatures or conſiſtories happen between a rich gallant and a poor beggerly perſon,

†And ye ſhall look upon him, καὶ ἐπιβλέψητε ἐπὶ *fully καλὸν †And are doubtful in, or debate not among your ſelves

3. † And ye have reſpect unto him that weareth the gay clothing, and ſay unto him, Sit thou here * in a good place; and ſay to the poor, Stand thou there, or ſit here under my foot-ſtool,]

3. And if you ſhall make a difference between them in reſpect of their wealth and clothes, and ſhall ſet one in a more honourable place then the other, (ſee note b.) conſider one and deſpiſe the other,

4. † Are ye not then [c] partial in your ſelves, and become judges of evil thoughts?]

4. And without any doubt or ſcruple in your hearts be thus unjuſtly partial, or if ye doe not ſo much as debate among your ſelves, or conſider the merit of the cauſe, but as wicked corrupt judges, hand over head, adjudge the cauſe to the rich, (and deſpiſe the poor, v. 6.) whatſoever the juſtice of the cauſe and merit of it be, or preferre the rich before the poor, and judge the cauſe by the perſon, not the perſon by the cauſe;

*or promiſe, for the Ks. MS. reads ἐπαγγελίας

5. Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God choſen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the *kingdome, which he hath promiſed to them that love him?]

5. This is a moſt unchriſtian dealing in you. And then do but conſider, Hath God had any ſuch partialities in beſtowing Chriſtianity and his graces on men? nay hath he not on the other ſide picked out men as poor as any, to be as eminent believers and ſaints as any?

6. But ye have deſpiſed the poor. Doe not rich men oppreſſe you, and draw you before the judgment-ſeats?

6, 7. But you, if a man be poor, deſpiſe him, conſider him not. And truly 'tis no very amiable thing to be rich, nor doth it produce any excellencies in them that are ſo, or favours toward you, that deſerve to be ſo conſidered by you; for riches make men apt to oppreſſe others, and to enter vexatious ſuits againſt them, and to deſpiſe Chriſtianity, and blaſpheme that good profeſſion of yours.

†which is called upon you? τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς;

7. Do not they blaſpheme that worthy name † by which ye are called?]

8. If ye fulfill the royal law according to the Scripture, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf, ye do well.]

8. If ye obſerve the law of Chriſt our king, which he hath in a particular manner preſcribed us, Joh. 13. 34. & 15. 12. and to which above all other men all we Chriſtians are to be ſubject, and that agreeable to what is mentioned in the Old Teſtament, Levit. 19. 18. the command of meaſuring our love to our neighbour by that which we bear to our ſelves, this is ſomewhat like a Chriſtian.

*reproved ἐλεγχόμενοι

9. But if ye have reſpect to perſons, ye commit ſin, and are * convinced of the Law as trangreſſors.]

9. But if ye uſe this partiality, ver. 2. this is a ſin, and ſo condemned by the Law, Lev. 30. 15. Deut. 1. 17. & 16. 19. Exod. 23. 3. and ſo you offend even againſt the Law, and not only againſt the Goſpel.

†is become γέγονε

10. For whoſoever ſhall keep the whole Law, and yet offend in one point, † he is guilty of all.]

10. And 'tis but a ſmall excuſe for you to think that this is but one tranſgreſſion, and therefore not conſiderable: For the obedience to Gods will is required univerſally to all that he commands, and he that offends in one, though he keep all the reſt, is guilty of the breach of that obedience, and puniſhable as well as if he had broken all.

11. For he that ſaid, Do not commit adultery, ſaid alſo, Do not kill: now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a tranſgreſſor of the Law.]

11. For it is the ſame Law-giver that impoſed the one and the other law, that interdicted adultery and murther, and his authority is equally deſpiſed by the committing of either.

12. So ſpeak ye, and ſo doe, as they that ſhall be judged by the law of liberty.]

12. Let your words and actions be like thoſe that are to be judged, not by the Moſaical Law, which requires thoſe external obſervances ſo ſeverely, circumciſion under pain of death, &c. but by the law of Chriſt, which hath ſet us at liberty in this kind, and requires of us another ſort of performances.

*triumpheth over κατακαυχᾶται

13. For he ſhall have judgment without mercy that hath ſhewed no mercy: and mercy * rejoyceth againſt judgment.]

13. And firſt for the latter of theſe, that of actions, 'tis certain that among the precepts of Chriſt there is none more eminent then that of works of mercy, unto which the promiſes of God's mercy are ſo linked and proportioned, that he that condemns others ſhall himſelf be condemned, and he that doth forgive others needs not fear God's condemnation, Mat. 6.

14. What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man ſay he have faith, and have not works? can faith ſave him?]

14. And 'tis not for a Chriſtian to ſay that his faith ſhall render ſuch works unneceſſary, for indeed without ſuch works his faith will nothing profit him, and 'tis ridiculous to think it will.

15. If a brother or ſiſter be naked, or deſtitute of daily food,]

15. For in caſe a Chriſtian be in great want and diſtreſſe for ſupply of the neceſſaries of life, food and raiment,

16. And one of you ſay unto him, Depart in peace, be you warmed, and filled; notwithſtanding ye give them not thoſe things which be needfull to the body: what doth it profit?]

16. And you give him good words, bid him have plenty, or wiſh he had, but doe no more to help him to the things which he hath need of for his body: what is he the better for your words?

†by it ſelf καθ' ἑαυτήν

17. Even ſo faith, if it hath not works, is dead † being alone.]

17. So if faith be by it ſelf, without actions conſequent and agreeable to it, 'tis as fruitleſſe and liveleſſe as thoſe words were.

*But one will ſay Ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις †So the Syriack, Arabick & Latine copies read, and ſo the King's MS ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις others read it by

18. *Yea, a man may ſay, Thou haſt faith, and I have works: ſhew me thy faith † without thy works, and I will ſhew thee my faith by my works.]

18. And any man that looks on this uncharitable believer, will be able to reprove him thus, Talke as much of thy faith as thou wilt, no man will believe thee, thy works muſt be ſuperadded to the confeſſion of thy faith, to approve the ſincerity of it.

19. Thou believeſt that there is one God, thou doſt well; the devils alſo believe and tremble.]

19. One act of thy faith is, the believing one true God, and this is moſt abſolutely neceſſary to thee: But if thy life be not anſwerable to this part of thy faith, and that evidenced by piety and charity, thou art then to remember that the believing there is one God is ſuch a good quality as is common to thee and the devils alſo, and if it have no more joined to it, will beſtead thee no more then them.

20. But

20. 'Tis a meer vanity to conceive that faith without Chriſtian obedience can be effectual to juſtification, and you may diſcern it by this.

20. But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?]

21. Abraham was the father of the faithfull, the great example of faith and juſtification: but 'twas not upon his bare believing God's promiſe that he was juſtified, but upon that high act of obedience to God, in being ready to offer up his only ſon, in whom the promiſes were made to him.

21. Was not Abraham our father juſtified by works, when he had offered his ſon Iſaac upon the altar?]

22. And ſo you ſee his obedience to God's commands, as well as belief of his promiſes, concurred to the rendring him capable of the continuance of God's favour and approbation. And through the performance of that ready obedience it was, that his faith came to attain the end deſigned it.

22. *Seeſt thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?] *You ſee B. Pyrus

23. And by this triall of his obedience it was that Abraham was moſt eminently ſaid to be approved by God, 1 Mac. 2. 52. and look'd on as a friend by him, Gen. 22.15. and in which that place of Scripture (before delivered Gen. 15. 6.) concerning God's imputing his faith for righteouſneſſe, was moſt eminently completed.

23. And the Scripture was fulfilled, which ſaith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe: and he was called the friend of God.]

24. And ſo this is one great teſtimony that to a mans approbation with God obedience is required, and not faith deemed ſufficient, that hath not that joyned with it.

24. Ye ſee then, how that by works a man is juſtified, and not by faith onely.]

25. Another evidence of this truth is to be ſetch'd from that we read of God's approving and rewarding of Rahab, a proſelyte and ſtranger, no native Jew, whoſe faith is ſet forth Heb. 11. 30. and ſhe in a ſpecial manner rewarded by God, Joſ. 6. 25. and what was it that was thus rewarded in her? why, her care and charity to thoſe that were ſent to view the land, Joſ. 2. 4.

25. Likewiſe alſo was not Rahab the harlot juſtified by works, when ſhe had received the meſſengers, and had ſent them out another way?]

26. And ſo the concluſion is clear and infallible, that as the body of man, without the ſoul inlivening it, exerciſes no actions of life, ſo doth not faith profit to our juſtification without works of obedience to the commands of Chriſt, juſtice and charity, &c. v. 1, 8, 14.

26. For as the body without the ſpirit is dead, ſo faith without works is dead alſo.]

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Δόξα Χριστῦ

V. 1. Faith of our Lord——] Δόξα Χριστῦ the glory of Chriſt, we have explained often to belong to the Shechinah, that again to his ὀπτασία or appearance in the fleſh, his Incarnation, and all that was conſequent to that. This being here improved with the addition of the words Lord Jeſus Chriſt, doth more ſet out the neceſſity of obeying and obſerving all thoſe things which this Lord and Saviour, the Meſſias of the world, hath commended to his Diſciples, that is to all Chriſtians, believers, faithful perſons, of which nature eſpecially is charity in the following verſes, and impartial ſtrict juſtice (ſuppoſed and conteined in that) in the preſent verſe. Then for πίστις τῆς δόξης the faith of the glory (for ſo the Syriak conſtrues the words) it ſignifies this Chriſtian faith, this faith, or profeſſion of, or believing this Incarnation & Reſurrection of Chriſt: and πίστιν ἔχειν ἐν προσωποληψίαις, to have this faith in, or with reſpect of perſons, is to look on thoſe that profeſſe this faith, not as they are Chriſtians, but as they are rich or poor, preferring partially one before the other, accordingly as he comes into your courts in greater ſpendour. And ſo the meaning of the whole verſe is, that they that are profeſſors of Chriſtianity (and are here ſuppoſed to be ſo, and are put in mind of it by the title of ἀδελφοί μου, my brethren,) ought not to have any ſuch unchriſtian temper in them as in their Judicatures (for ſo συναγωγὴ ſignifies an aſſemblie for Judicature, and that for Eccleſiaſtical as well as Civil affairs, and ſo it ſeems to ſignifie here, ver. 2.) to prefer or favour one Chriſtian before another onely in reſpect of his wealth or fine cloathes when Chriſt hath equally received them both, or (if any) hath preferr'd the poor, v. 5.

Πίστις τῆς δόξης.

Πίστιν ἔχειν ἐν προσωποληψίαις.

b. Συναγωγὴ

V. 2. Aſſembly] That συναγωγὴ ſignifies all kind of aſſemblies, meetings in the market-place, Mac. 6. 2. Conſiſtories for Judicature, Mat. 10. 17. and 23. 34. (and not onely places for the publick ſervice of God) hath been formerly ſaid, Note on Mat. 6. d. That it may doe ſo alſo among Chriſtians, and that it doth ſo here, appears, firſt, by the προσωποληψία acceptation of perſons, partiality, ver. 1. which eſpecially reſpects Judicatures; ſecondly, by the footſtool, v. 3. which was proper to great perſons, Princes on their Throne, or Judges on their Tribunal; thirdly, by the word κριταὶ ἐγένεσθε, ye become Judges, v. 4. they were Judges, it ſeems; fourthly, by the mention of κριτήρια Judicatures, ver. 6. which clearly ſignifie ſuch Conſiſtories, 1 Cor. 6. 4. and laſtly, by v. 9. where their partiality, particularly that of preferring the rich to a better place then the poor, is ſaid to be a breach of the Law: For ſo by a Canon of the Jewes it is provided, that when a rich man and a poor have a ſuit together before their Conſiſtories, either both muſt ſit or both ſtand in the ſame rank, to avoid all marks of partiality. Agreeable to which is the now preſent practice of the Jews; ſo that if in matter of difference about meum and tuum a Chriſtian, having to do with a Jew, think fit to refer it to a Chacham or Judge among them and at his coming into the room where he is, chance, or chuſe (as taking himſelf to be a perſon of better quality) to ſit down, he preſently ſaith to the Jew, be he never ſo mean, Sit thou down alſo.

c. Διεκρίθητε ὁ Διακρίνεται

V. 4. Partial] What is the meaning of διεκρίθητε here, will not eaſily be reſolved: I ſuppoſe it may beſt be done by theſe degrees. Firſt, by obſerving that διακρίνεσθαι in the Middle voice generally ſignifies in theſe Books either doubting, (wavering, Mat. 21. 21. Mar. 11. 23. Act. 10. 20. and 11. 11. Rom. 4. 20.) or diſputing, there being a connexion betwixt theſe two, he that doubts always diſputing with himſelf. From whence alſo it ſignifies to implead, (with πρὸς, or πρός τινα added to it) or to lay any thing to ones charge, either in or out of Judicature; as Act. 11. 2. they of the Circumciſion διεκρίνοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν, charged Peter, or diſputed with him, ſaying, Thou wenteſt in to the uncircumciſed, and didſt eat with them. For the notion of wavering Heſychius is punctual, Διεκρίθη, ἐμερίσθη, ἐδίσταζεν, ἐυλαβήθη, it ſignifies to be divided, to doubt, to fear; ſo twice in this Epiſtle, c. 1. 6. μηδὲν διακρινόμενος, nothing wavering, ὁ γὰρ διακρινόμενος, for the waverer. And as by this notion of the word I conceive a difficult place will be explained, Jude 22. (ſee Note m. on that Epiſtle) ſo we may conclude that in this Epiſtle c. 3. 17. ἀδιάκριτος will be beſt rendred without wavering or conſtant, (ſee Note f. on that Chapter.) Secondly, by obſerving the force

of

ἐν ἑαυτοῖς of ἐν ἑαυτοῖς in your ſelves added to it: for as that refers oftentimes to the inward thoughts of the heart, (and then not to doubt in themſelves is to do what they do without any inward reluctance, check, or ſcruple, or dubitancy, which in a ſinful and irrational fact (as this here ſpoken of is) cannot but be a great aggravation of it) ſo, being applied to diſceptations or diſputes, it oft ſignifies among themſelves, or one with another. And if it be ſo here, it will then belong to the Judges in this Eccleſiaſtical Council, or aſſembly of Biſhops, debating or conſidering among themſelves what juſtice there is in the cauſe. Thirdly, by obſerving that punctation which we find of it in Oecumenius (and ſo alſo in ſome printed copies) without any note of Interrogation. And that that is the right reading is ſufficiently evident, both by the Mood, and the Copulative καὶ and, which connect it with what went before, and demonſtrate it to be govern'd of the Ἐὰν if, v. 2. as εἰσέλθῃ, and ἐμβλέψητε, and εἴπητε are. And then this muſt needs be the right rendring of it, If a man enter having a gold ring, and if a poor man in ſordid apparel enter alſo (that is, if they implead one the other) and if you look on (or have a partial reſpect to) the rich, and ſay unto him, &c. καὶ ὃ διεκρίθητε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, and if ye either doubt not, diſpute not, within your ſelves, in your own hearts, or elſe among your ſelves make no diſceptation about it, never conſider the merit or juſtice of the cauſe, but meerly looking upon the perſons, which of them is in fine, which in ſordid clothes, and become Judges of evill thoughts, unrighteous Judges. Where the ſenſe being all this while ſuſpended, one difficulty there is ſtill remaining to reſolve what ſhall be the latter part of the period, anſwerable to the If- by way of ἀπόδοσις. And that may poſſibly be the Ἀκούσατε ἀδελφοί, Hear, my beloved brethren, v. 5. as if he ſhould ſay, If in your Judicatures you deal thus partially, I muſt then tell you, or hear you, and remember, my beloved brethren, Hath not God choſen the poor? that is, done quite contrary to what you now do? Or elſe there muſt be acknowledged (which is very ordinary) an Ellipſis, thus to be ſupplied, If you do thus and thus, then ſure you are partial to your fellow-Chriſtians, v. 1. And either of theſe are very commodious, and ſufficiently clear the words from all farther difficulty; whereas there be many difficulties that preſſe the other reading by way of Interrogation: as firſt, that the καὶ before the ὃ is not at all rendred or taken notice of in that reading; and ſecondly, it is ſcarce to be obſerved in any Author that the negative words, ὃ, ὃς, ὃχ, ὃχὶ, or μὴ, are at any time interrogative when they ſtand not firſt in the ſentence, as here the ὃ doth not, the καὶ being before it; and thirdly, that other reading ſuppoſes and proceeds upon a notion of διακρίσις which may belong to the Active διακρίνειν, but never to the Mean voice (as διακρίσις is) in the New Teſtament, or any other Author, or Gloſſary.

CHAP. III.

Paraphraſe.

* teachers † a greater judgmens μεῖζον κρίμα

1. MY brethren [a], be not many * Maſters, knowing that we ſhall receive † the greater condemnation.]

1. And as for actions, (ſee c. 2. 12, 13.) ſo for words ye are not to judg your brethren, or to take upon you that office of Maſter or Teacher, which belongs onely to Chriſt, but to conſider that there is a greater, an higher judicature, the judgment of God to which we are all reſerved. a.

2. For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the ſame is a perfect man, and able alſo to bridle the whole body.]

2. The beſt of us have much to blame and accuſe in our ſelves, and therefore ſhould not be forward to accuſe or judge others. And of all vices, thoſe of the tongue (whereof this of judging is an eminent one) are moſt ordinary, and they that can rule and manage that (as the Judaizers are farre from doing, c. 4. 11.) and keep innocent from all faults of that kind, do thereby demonſtrate themſelves to be true ſincere Chriſtians, able to reſiſt all other temptations, and guide all their actions according to the Chriſtian rule.

* bridles χαλινούς

3. Behold, we put * bits in the horſes mouthes that they may obey us, and we turn about their whole body.]

3. As in managing of horſes, when by a bridle put into his mouth we have gotten power over that part, we are thereby enabled to diſpoſe of the whole beaſt, though a very ſtrong one, as we pleaſe.

4. Behold alſo the ſhips, which, though they be ſo great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very ſmall helme whitherſoever the governour liſteth.]

4. And ſo though a ſhip on the ſea be a vaſt unwieldy veſſel, and in the power of winds and waves (as we are of temptations) to carry it violently before them, yet the Pilot by means of the helm or ſtern, a ſmall part, of an unconſiderable bigneſſe, is able to rule it and turn it as he pleaſe.

† ſo * makes great boaſts μεγαλαυχεῖ

5. [b] † Even ſo the tongue is a little member, and * boaſteth great things: behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth.]

5. Again the tongue is one of the ſmalleſt parts of a man's body, and yet makes a great noiſe, doth a great deal of hurt, ſtirres up faction and contention in the Church, as a little fire, ye know, will ſet a whole houſe or any the greateſt pile on fire. b.

† or is ſet in the members a fire of iniquity to the world * wheel of affairs.

6. [c] And the tongue is † a fire, a world of iniquity: ſo is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and ſetteth on fire the [d] * courſe of nature, and it is ſet on fire of hell.]

6. And the tongue cannot more fitly be reſembled then to fire, for though it be but one, and that a very ſmall member of the body, yet ſo it may be uſed as to ſet the whole ſociety of men, a church, a kingdome, a whole world, on fire with ſtrife and contention and all wickedneſſe, infecting and poyſoning the whole ſociety, ſetting all in combuſtion, being it ſelf ſet on work by the devil, kindled by that fire that comes from hell. c. d.

† all the nature * by the nature of man

7. For † [e] every kind of beaſts, and of birds, and of ſerpents, and things in the ſea is tamed, and hath been tamed * of mankind:]

7. 'Tis in the power and skill of man, (as through all times we ſee) to repreſſe the violence and poyſon of all other creatures, to ſubdue and diſarm them of their weapons and means of hurting mortally: e.

8. But the tongue can no man tame, it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poyſon.]

8. But the tongue is more hard to be ſubdued then any of theſe, an irremediable author of many evils, ſtrikes, and wounds, and kills like the moſt venemous beaſt, and no antidote is ſufficient againſt it.

† and καὶ

9. Therewith bleſſe we God, † even the Father, and therewith curſe we men, which are made after the ſimilitude of God.]

9. And what a foul ſin is it in a Chriſtian or profeſſor of piety, to uſe this member to ſo diſtant offices, to confeſſe with the tongue and acknowledge him who is both our God and our our father, and to judge and raile at our Chriſtian brethren, who for that image of God they bear upon them, are to be looked on and uſed with all kindneſſe?

10. Out of the ſame mouth proceedeth bleſſing and curſing. My brethren, theſe things ought not ſo to be.]

10. This contrariety of our practices is a moſt unchriſtian thing, and ought to be reformed in you, your profeſſion of piety to God ought to have all charity to your fellow-Chriſtians accompanying it.

11. Doth a fountain ſend forth at the ſame place ſweet water and bitter?]

11. No fountain can ſend forth two ſorts of waters of ſo diſtant a nature, ſo contrary one to the other, ſweet water, to which the effluxions of our charity may fitly be compared, and bitter water, by which curſing was expreſs'd, Num. 5. 21.

12. * Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bear olive-berries? either a vine, figs? ſo can no fountain yield both ſalt water and freſh.]

12. Any more then one tree can bear the fruit that belongs to another tree.

13. Who is a wiſe man, and † indued with knowledge amongſt you? let him ſhew out of a good converſation his works with meekneſs of wiſdome.]

13. And therefore for them that deſpiſe and condemn others, and take upon them to be the onely perfect men, ver. 1, 2. the Gnoſtick Judaizers, let them know wherein the true Chriſtian knowledge conſiſts, even in doing all works of charity as well as piety, with all meekneſſe (as that is oppoſed to pride of their own wiſdome) accompanying them.

14. But if you have bitter envying and ſtrife in your hearts, * glory not, and lie not againſt the truth.]

14. But bitter emulation & contention is farre from being a piece of ſpiritual wiſdome, and therefore if this be among you, what is this but an hypocritical boaſting? or ye have little reaſon to boaſt, or pretend that you are the wiſe or ſpiritual, as the bitter contentious Gnoſticks doe, ſee v. 15.

15. † This wiſdome deſcendeth not from above, but is earthly, * ſenſual, deviliſh.]

15. This is quite contrary to the true celeſtial wiſdome that Chriſt came to teach and infuſe into us; 'tis that which, firſt, the love of the world, ſecondly, mens own carnal unregenerate hearts, or thirdly, Satan himſelf that profeſſeth to be an enemy of all good men, infuſeth into them.

16. For where envying and ſtrife is, there is † confuſion and every evil work.]

16. For there is nothing ſo ill, that is, ſinfull, be it ſedition, or diſturbance of the whole State or Church, and nothing ſo ill, that is, miſerable, no ſuch curſe to any community, or unquietneſſe to any particular perſon, but it is certainly to be expected where emulation and contention have once entred.

17. But the wiſdome that is from above is firſt pure, then peaceable, * gentle, and eaſie to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, † [f] without partiality, and without hypocriſie.]

17. But the true Chriſtian celeſtiall wiſdome indeed may be known by theſe properties, that it is, firſt, pure from all luſts and filthineſſe, ſo frequently practiſed by the Gnoſticks; ſecondly, peaceable, and ſo quite contrary to the contentious factious humor of the Gnoſticks; thirdly, not rigid, but gentle, mild, equitable, receding from his own ſtrict right in order to peace (ſee note on 2 Cor. 10. a.) fourthly, very ready to believe any thing that is good of another, or that may mitigate or alleviate his fault, (ſee note on 1 Cor. 13. c.) fifthly, abounding in all charitable works; ſixthly, without all wavering or inconſtancy, or danger of falling off to the ſeducers or perſecutors, Gnoſticks or Jewes, or without making any difference, a liberal diſtribution to all that want; ſeventhly, without diſſimulation, or appearing to be what they are not, ſuch as the falſe brethren 2 Cor. 11. 26. which brought ſuch miſchief on the Apoſtle.

18. * And the [g] fruit of righteouſneſſe is ſown in peace † of them that make peace.]

18. But they that love and follow peace ſhall accordingly be repai'd the reward of the righteous, the peace and all the mercies of God ſhall be their reward.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε

V. 1. Be not many maſters] What the full importance of this admonition is, μὴ πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε, be not many maſters, may perhaps be thus collected: One great fault of the Judaizing Chriſtians and Gnoſticks, frequently taken notice of, is that of judging others, the orthodox Chriſtians, and ſeparating from them. Thus Rom. 2. 1. the ὁ κρίνων, he that judgeth, in the beginning and end of the verſe, hath been ſhewed to ſignifie (ſee Note a. on that chapter) him that teacheth the neceſſity of obſerving the Moſaical Law, and accuſeth, and ſeparateth, and ſpeaks evil of the Orthodox Chriſtians, as breakers of the Law, as παραβάτ) a ſort of Apoſtates, becauſe they are not circumciſed. Theſe are there farther deſcribed, v. 18, 19, 20. as thoſe that take upon them to know the will of God moſt perfectly (and are thence called Gnoſticks) to be guides of the blind, lights of them that are in darkneſſe, inſtructers of fools, διδάσκαλοι νηπίων, teachers or maſters of babes, &c. where their aſſuming thoſe titles of guides, lights, inſtructers, maſters, is joyned with the judging of others as blind, ignorant, fools and babes. And as there διδάσκαλος teacher or maſter (the ſame as here) is one of the titles they aſſumed, ſo v. 21. is, ὁ ἕτερον διδάσκων σεαυτὸν thou that teacheſt another, in this ſenſe again, thou that aſſumeſt to know more then all others, to be able to inſtruct and teach others, as if no man knew his duty but they. Theſe are again deſcribed Rom. 14. 4. by the ὁ κρίνων ἀλλότριον οἰκέτην, he that judgeth another man's ſervant, that when Chriſt hath given Chriſtians liberty in the matter of Circumciſion and other Judaical performances, require all thoſe performances of their fellow-Chriſtians, as if they, not Chriſt, were the lords and maſters of their faith. So again Col. 2. 16. Μὴς ὑμᾶς κρινέτω, Let no man judge you in meat or drinks, &c. where the judging is that of the Judaizers, and is called dogmatizing, ver. 20. by ordinance retrenching that liberty that Chriſt hath given us, and thereupon judging all that are not their diſciples; and ſo that is all one with this notion of διδάσκαλοι maſters here. A ſpice of this humour it was that Chriſt noted in the Phariſees, Mat. 23. when he tells them they loved to be called Rabbi, Rabbi, v. 7. that is, my maſter, my maſter, my guide, my inſtructer; which Chriſt forbidding his diſciples to imitate, gives this reaſon, εἷς γάρ ἐστιν ὁ καθηγητὴς, for one is your guide, or maſter, Chriſt; and again ver. 10. μὴ κληθῆτε καθηγηταὶ, Be not ye called guides or maſters, for one is your maſter, Chriſt. And that this is the notion of διδάσκαλος maſters here, may appear firſt, by the circumſtances of the Context; and ſecondly, by comparing them with theſe other places now mentioned. For the firſt, in the 12th verſe of ch. 2. S. James ſpeaks diſtinctly to theſe Judaizers, and admoniſheth them of their words as well as actions, that they are to be guided by the Chriſtian, not Moſaical law, and accordingly to be judged; that the Chriſtian law teacheth liberty from the Moſaical, and they that ſpeak or doe contrary to that liberty are much much to be blamed. Which being thus generally propoſed on thoſe two heads, he begins (by way of ἐπάνοδος) firſt with the laſt actions, thoſe eſpecially of mercy, moſt contrary to the practice of theſe Judaizers, who fiercely perſecuted the Orthodox Chriſtians, and on that head he proceeds to the end of the Chapter, ſhewing how little available faith or Chriſtian profeſſion will be without charity. And then at the beginning of this Chapter he returns to the firſt, that of the tongue or ſpeech, a ſpecial part of which is that of judging others, and ſo goes on to this matter of the unrulineſs of the tongue, v. 3, &c. and ſhews how contrary that is alſo to Chriſtian profeſſion, v. 9. it being the curſing of men when they pretend to pay reverence and bleſſing to God. And this, it ſeems, they were guilty of, not only by what had before been ſaid, c. 1. 26. that he that ſeems to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain, but here alſo, v. 10. My brethren, theſe things ought not to be ſo. And that they are the Gnoſticks that are thus noted by him, appears v. 13. Who is wiſe, and ἐπιστήμων, knowing among you? let him by a good converſation ſhew his own works with meekneſſe of wiſdome: intimating, that this proud, faſtidious, ſupercilious wiſdome, judging and cenſuring others, is that which is here deſigned to be beaten down by him, and ſo the πικρὸς ζῆλος, bitter zeal, v. 14. And that is the reaſon alſo that c. 4. 11. having exhorted them not to ſpeak againſt one another, he adds, He that ſpeaks againſt his brother, and judgeth his brother, ſpeaks againſt the law, and judgeth the law, that is, by his practice condemns the law of God, which he ſo zealouſly profeſſeth to ſtand for. That this is the importance of the place may appear, ſecondly, by comparing this verſe here with Rom. 14. 10. There for the ſuppreſſing this fault of theirs, judging or ſetting at nought the brother, this reaſon is given, πάντες γὰρ παρασταθησόμεθα τῷ βήματι τοῦ Χριστοῦ, for we ſhall all appear before the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt (as in another matter, 1 Cor. 4. He that judgeth me is the Lord, therefore judge nothing before the time, untill the Lord come, &c. that is, judging others is an unchriſtian thing, derogating from Chriſt's judicature, to which all muſt be referred:) And ſo here, Be not many maſters, knowing we ſhall receive a greater judgment, that is, anſwer for what we doe at an higher judicature. And ſo again, c. 4. 12. There is one law-giver who is able to ſave and to deſtroy (that is, to whom all judging is to be referred) who art thou which judgeſt another? This is farther confirmed by comparing it with 1 Tim. 1. 7. where of the Gnoſtick Judaizers (evidently deſcribed v. 6. by the τινὲς ἀστοχήσαντες, and ἐξεβάπησαν εἰς ματαιολογίαν, ſwerving from the faith and good conſcience, and being turned to vain ſpeaking) he ſaith that they are deſirous to be teachers of the Law, that is, Rabbies, that is, all one with the διδάσκαλοι Maſters or teachers here, and this, it ſeems, in reſpect of their aſſerting the neceſſity of the Chriſtian's obſerving the Moſaical Law (as appears ver. 8.) and that is in effect the judging of them that obſerve it not. And ſo 1 Tim. 6. ſpeaking of theſe under the title of ἑτεροδιδασκαλοῦντες Heterodox teachers, puffed up, as Gnoſticks, but μηδὲν ἐπιστάμενοι knowing nothing, he adds mention, as of their envy and ſtrife, ſo of their evil ſpeaking, and evil ſurmiſing, the judging which we now ſpeak of. As for the putting in the word πολλοὶ many, be ye not many maſters, I ſuppoſe that is in oppoſition to the εἷς διδάσκαλος or καθηγητὴς the one maſter or guide, Mat. 23. or the εἷς νομοθέτης, the one law-giver or judge here, Jam. 4. 12. For it being Chriſt's office onely to give lawes to the Church, theſe Judaizers doe clearly intrench upon his office, and ſo are πολλοὶ διδάσκαλοι, many, inſtead of the one Maſter. This one difficulty being thus explained, and the interpretation confirmed, the reſt of the Chapter will be very perſpicuous and coherent to it, which in any other interpretation of the verſe will be obſcure, and the connexion very hard to be diſcerned.

V. 5. Even ſo] That the word ὕτω, ſo, here, is a note of the latter part, or ἀντιπόδοσις, of the ſimilitude, may at firſt ſight be believed, but upon farther conſideration will be found a miſtake. For that which is here added is not fitly illuſtrated by the foregoing ſimilitude of the horſe or ſhip, but by another ſimilitude annexed after it, with the particle Ἰδοὺ, behold; for that is the way of bringing in ſimilitudes (and is uſed before v. 3, and 4.) and not onely the forms ὥσπερ, ὕτω, as, and ſo. Nay when the plain ſenſe or matter to be illuſtrated is firſt ſet down, as here it is, v. 2. If any man offend not in word, he is able to bridle the whole body alſo, there the ἰδοὺ, behold, is by much the fitteſt form to introduce the ſimilitude, as there it doth of the horſe and ſhip. And if that be converted into the other form, it muſt be by placing the latter part firſt after this manner, As a man turns or rules an horſe by a bridle, or a ſhip by a ſtern; ſo he that hath command of his tongue, is able to bridle or rule the whole body. And again v. 5. As a little fire ſets a great deal of matter on fire; ſo the tongue, being a little member, μεγαλαυχεῖ, makes a great noiſe, keeps a great ſtir, puts whole multitudes into a combuſtion. And therefore another notion of ὕτω ſo is here to be taken notice of, as a form of bringing in a ſecond or third part of a diſtribution, without any ὡς or ὥσπερ as antecedent. And ſo it ſeems to be in this place, a form of tranſition from one part of the Diſcourſe of the tongue, conſidered when it is bridled, v. 2, 3, 4. to another, v. 5. &c. when it is not bridled, and will be beſt rendred, In like manner, or ſo likewiſe. As for the ὕτω, v. 6. which ſeems otherwiſe uſed, it is not to be found in the King's MS. nor the Syriack. See Note c.

V. 6. And the tongue——] The words of this v. 6. in the ordinary copies, Καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα πῦρ, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας· οὕτως ἡ γλῶσσα καθίσταται, &c. And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: ſo is the tongue ſeated in the members, ſeems not to be rightly ſet. The King's MS. leaves out the ὕτως. But that change will not render the words any complete ſenſe. The Syriack ſeem to have read it ſhorter without the latter, ὕτως ἡ γλῶσσα, ſo the tongue, and to have read, τῷ κόσμῳ to the world, inſtead of ὁ κόσμος the world, and then the plain meaning is, And the tongue is placed in the members, a fire of iniquity to the world: that is, As a fire in the midſt of a great deal of combuſtible matter ſets all preſently in a flame, ſo doth the tongue in our members, it is a cauſe of contention, ſedition, &c. (and ſo of the greateſt iniquity, that ſin of uncharitableneſſe, ſo contrary to the Chriſtian law) to the world, the whole ſociety of men about us. That this is the true rendring of the place, by making the world anſwerable to the ὕλη matter which is ſet on fire (and not that the tongue compared to fire is here ſtyled a world of iniquity,) appears by the end of the verſe, where in like manner it is ſaid φλογίζειν to put into a flame τὸν τροχὸν γενέσεως the wheel of affairs. See Note d.

Ib. Courſe of nature] That γένεσις ſignifies affairs or actions, all that comes to paſſe, ſee Note on Mat. 1. 2. Τροχὸς ſignifies a wheel, and the Hebrews are wont Rhetorically to expreſs buſineſſe or affairs of the world by the turning of wheels: אין תסבינה גלגלי אופני פרטיכם, how are the rolling, or whirling, of the wheels of your affairs turned? Buxtorf. Inſtit. Epiſtol. Epiſt. 1. And ſo ὁ τροχὸς γενέσεως will ſignifie the compaſſe or ſphere or ſucceſſion of affairs, meaning of men or mankind; and ſo putting that into a flame, will be in another phraſe all one with πῦρ τῷ κόσμῳ fire to the world, at the beginning of the verſe, putting the world, that is, all the affairs of the world, into a combuſtion.

Another notion I have had of this phraſe, which I ſhall but mention, by taking γένεσις in the Aſtronomers notion (touch'd on Note on c. 1. e.) for Nativity or Geniture, as that notes all the events of life, by Aſtrologers conjecturally foretold from the poſition of the heavens at the time of any ones birth. This the Artiſts might fitly repreſent in a wheel, bringing up one part of the life and the events thereof) after another, to which the antients wheel of Fortune may ſeem to refer; and when this wheel was repreſented fiery, that would fitly note contentions and wars, &c. And accordingly φλογίζειν τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως might be rendred to ſet the wheel of Nativity on a light flame, that is, to turn the whole life into contentions and feudes, which is but an elegant way of expreſſing that ſenſe which is acknowledged to belong to theſe words.

e. Φύσις θηρίων

V. 7. Every kind of beaſts] For the underſtanding this verſe, it muſt firſt be premiſed that the notion of φύσις nature for γένος kind, or οὐσία eſſence, being, in Heſychius, is commodious to it here, both in the beginning and end of the verſe; ſo that πᾶσα φύσις θηρίων, &c. may ſignifie all kind of beaſts, that is, beaſts indefinitely? ſo ἀνθρωπίνη φύσις may be mankind, that is, men indefinitely of all ages or times, proportionably to δαμάζεται and δεδάμασται is tamed and hath been tamed, that is, in all times perpetually have been tamed. The greater difficulty will be, what is meant by δαμάζειν to tame: that may (as ordinarily it doth) ſignifie cicurare, to take off from wildneſſe, and ſo to make tame and familiar, to bring to hand; and that may be very appliable both to θηρία and πετεινὰ, beaſts and birds, which are by men thus tamed, and made ſerviceable to us. But becauſe this is not ſo commonly practiſed in Serpents and Fiſhes, and yet theſe are here named indifferently with the former, it is more reaſonable that another notion of the word ſhould here be pitched on, which may indifferently be appliable to all the kinds here mentioned, and that is the notion of ſubduing, maſtering, getting power over them: ſo ſaith Heſychius, Δαμάζει, ὑποπάσει, it ſignifies to be ſubdued, kept under, the very Latine, domari, reſtrained, that it ſhall not be able to offend or hurt; and ſo here ἀκατάσχετον, that which is not, cannot be reſtrained, is oppoſed to it. And then this will be of a larger extent, belong to all hurtful creatures, which by horns, or teeth, or heels, or by their poiſonous nature are able to hurt us, and to all the ſeveral ways and inventions that men have to avoid and reſtrain theſe, by taking them, depriving them of their weapons of offence, their ſtings, their teeth, or when they have bitten or poiſoned any man by curing that wound, overcoming that poiſon. And this laſt of poiſon, if it be not primarily here meant, is certainly to be taken in, as may be gueſſed by the ἀνταπόδοσις, or ſecond part of the ſimilitude, v. 8. where the tongue that no man can ſubdue or reſtrain, is ſaid to be full ἰοῦ θανατηφόρου, of deadly, mortiferous poiſon, whereas the poiſon of other things is conquerable, curable; and ſo when v. 6. 'tis ſaid σπιλοῦν to defile, that is, to infect, or poiſon, the whole body: and accordingly the θηρία in the front, which we render beaſts, are vipers among the Phyſicians, Nicander, &c. whoſe θηριακὰ comes from thence; and ſo θηρίον is uſed for a venemous beaſt, Act. 28. 4. (all one with ἔχιδνα viper, v. 3.) and ſo are Ἑρπετὰ ſerpents alſo, and to that may poſſibly belong the other part of that enumeration, the creatures of the other elements, the air and water, πετεινὰ and ἐνάλια. And then perhaps it may not be amiſſe to reſume the common ordinary notion of φύσις nature for the natural quality and faculty of all theſe here named, whether ſtrength, violence, ravenouſneſſe or poiſonouſneſſe, which is by nature implanted in ſeveral creatures, enabling them to hurt and kill us, which yet ἀνθρωπίνῃ φύσει, by man's nature his wit, underſtanding, faculty of inventing of means to ſecure himſelf, or weaken or diſarm them, have from time to time been ſubdued, weakned, deprived of their power of hurting mortally, whereas the tongue cannot be reſtrained; the poiſon of that is mortal, and neither to be cured nor prevented.

V. 17. Without partiality] That διακρινόμενος ſignifies to diſpute, or doubt, or waver, in the Middle voice, and not to judge, or be partial, hath been already ſhewed (ſee Note on c. 2. c. and on Jude m.) To which it is moſt conſequent that ἀδιάκριτος here ſhould ſignifie, without wavering; and ſo it will be a very fit Epithet of the ſupernal wiſdome, the true Chriſtian pietie, that he which hath it adheres firmly and conſtantly to Chriſt, whatſoever temptations attempt to drive or invite him from it. And this is moſt fitly added here where the character of the true Chriſtian is ſet oppoſite to that of the Gnoſticks, whoſe compliances (ſo often noted in him) with the Jews or heathens, when the Chriſtian was perſecuted by either, were the higheſt degree of wavering and inconſtancy, and eſpecially his doctrine of the ἀδιαφορία, that it was an indifferent thing to forſwear Chriſt in time of perſecution. And ſo this part of the character is fitly prefix'd before ἀνυπόκριτος, without hypocriſie, which oppoſeth the Chriſtian to the falſe deceitful Profeſſor of Chriſtianity, ſuch as betrayed the ſincere Orthodox believers to the Jews and perſecuters. If there be any queſtion of this, it muſt be becauſe of the connexion here with καλῶν καρπῶν, good fruits. For thus indeed the word is ſometimes applied, and then it ſignifies an univerſal liberality. Thus in Palladius Lauſiac. Hiſt. κεφ. ρμδ'. Olympias, which is there called κοινωνὸς καὶ διάκονος πάντων δεομένων, one that communicated and miniſtred to all that wanted, and ſo diſperſed or diſſipated an immenſe wealth, πᾶσιν ἁπλῶς καὶ ἀδιακρίτως ἐπήρκεσεν, ſhe aided all liberally and ἀδιακρίτως· where it may poſſibly ſignifie without any difference; ſo Gentianus Hervetus reads it indiſcriminatim, to all that wanted, whatſoever they were: but it may alſo ſignifie without doubting, or wavering, and ſo cohere with the ἄπιστον ἐκεῖνον καὶ ἀμέτρητον πλοῦτον διασκεδάσασα (immediately precedent) diſperſing that infinite and unmeaſurable wealth which ſhe had, without any doubt, or wavering, or demur, ariſing from worldly fear of her own want, which this liberality might cauſe, as when Chriſt commanded, Luc. 6. 35. to do good and lend, μηδὲν ἀπελπίζων, deſpairing or doubting nothing. See Note on that place. And ſo though poſſibly it may ſignifie here, without making any difference in acts of mercy, which is a kind of partiality, yet it may as fitly alſo be rendred without doubting, as that is applicable to mercy and good fruit, that is, to liberality alſo.

V. 18. Fruit of righteouſneſſe] Some difficulty there is in this verſe, ariſing from the different notions that καρπὸς fruit and εἰρήνη peace are capable of. Καρπὸς fruit noting that which is any way (whether naturally or morally) produced, ſignifies either an effect or reward. As an effect it is uſed v. 17. immediately precedent, where of the ſupernal wiſdome it is ſaid, that it is πλήρης ἀγαθῶν καρπῶν full of good fruits, thoſe fruits being the effects or productions of that wiſdome. But elſwhere it ſeems to be taken in that other notion. So Heb. 12. 11. where chaſtening though at preſent not joyous, is yet ſaid afterward to yield (by this moral way of production, not as an effect, but a reward) the peaceable fruit of righteouſneſſe: and ſo here the ſame phraſe καρπὸς δικαιοσύνης fruit of righteouſneſs, that is, of that ſupernal wiſdome, or Chriſtian piety and charity (ſee Heb. 12. e.) ſignifies the reward of it; and this is here ſaid to be ſown, as there to be yielded or returned (ſo ἀποδίδωσι ſignifies retribution,) here ἐν εἰρήνῃ in peace, as there to be εἰρηνικὸς peaceable. Then for εἰρήνη peace, that ſignifies, firſt, firſt, that vertue of charity, peace with men; and ſo 'tis certainly uſed in the end of the verſe, in oppoſition to all the uncharitableneſſe and emulations in the former part of this and the beginning of the next Chapter, and conſequently ποιῶν εἰρήνην to doe or make peace, (proportionable to the phraſes ποιῶν δικαιοσύνην, to doe righteouſneſſe, and ποιῶν ἁμαρτίαν, to doe or commit ſin) ſignifies to uſe all diligence of endeavour and induſtry to attain it, διώκειν εἰρήνην, to purſue peace, φιλοπονῶς, πονχάζειν, to be emulous, ambitious of quiet, ſtudiouſly to contend for it; and ſo is εἰρηνοποιοὶ peace-makers uſed, (ſee Mat. 5. Note d.) But then it doth alſo ſignifie, according to the notion of the Hebrew שָׁלוֹם, all happineſſe and proſperity, as when Peace be to you is the form of ſalutation, and contains all the bleſſings in the world, ſpiritual and temporal, under it; and ſo by the ordinary figure of ſacred Rhetorick, ἀνταναάκλασις (ſee Note on Mat. 8. k.) it ſeems to ſignifie here in the former place, in peace, that is, in a moſt happy, gracious manner, or with a confluence of all felicity attending it.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphraſe.

1. FRom whence come wars and * fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your † luſts that war in your members?]

1. All the open wars among the Jewes at this time, (ſee note on c. 5. c.) and all the lower ſtrifes and diſſentions and emulations wherein the Chriſtian Judaizers are now engaged againſt others, (ſee Zonar. in Can. Ap. 65.) are far from any pious or divine ſupernal principle, c. 3. 17. they proceed viſibly from your own carnal hearts, your deſires and purſuits of thoſe things that are matter of ſatisfaction to your luſts within you, thoſe ſenſual luſts which firſt war againſt your reaſon and upper ſoul, and then againſt the directions of Gods Spirit; firſt move a ſtrife within your own breaſts, rebelling againſt the law of the mind, Rom. 7. and then diſquiet all others neat you.

2. Ye * luſt, and have not: ye kill, and † deſire to have, and cannot obtain: * ye fight and war, yet ye have not, becauſe ye ask not.]

2. All your coveting, and envying, and contending, and fighting brings you in no kind of profit, becauſe praying to God, which is the only means of attaining, is neglected.

3. Ye ask and receive not, becauſe ye ask amiſſe, that ye may conſume it upon your own luſts.]

3. And for them that doe pray to God, 'tis yet among many of you only, or principally, for ſuch things which may be inſtrumental to your luſts, and therefore God, who hath promiſed to grant all things that we pray for, if it be for our advantage that he ſhould, doth not grant you ſuch prayers as theſe.

4. Ye adulterers and adultereſſes, know ye not that the friendſhip of the world is enmity with God? Whoſoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God.]

4. And ye that thus behave your ſelves to God as adulterers or adultereſſes to their mates, that receive other loves into competition with him, that think to love God and the world too, muſt know that this cannot be done, the loving of the world, the purſuing of worldly ends or advantages, is not the loving but the hating of God; whoſoever therefore is a lover of the world, is by that to be preſumed to be a profeſs'd enemy of God's.

5. Do ye think that [a] the Scripture ſaith in vain, The ſpirit * that dwelleth in us luſteth to envy? [a]

5. This odiouſneſſe of carnal minds in the ſight of God was long ſince expreſſed in the Old Teſtament concerning the old world, Gen. 6. where, as the cauſe of the threatned deluge, is mentioned, that the ſpirit that was in the men of that age, v. 3. that is, their ſouls or minds, were inſatiably ſet upon their own luſts, imagined evil continually.

6. But he giveth more grace; wherefore he ſaith, God reſiſteth [b] the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.] [b]

6. To thoſe God then gave time of repentance, an hundred and twenty years, and pardon if they would make uſe of it, and ſo God doth ſtill; but that ſtill available to men only upon condition of repentance and reformation, according to what is ſaid in another Scripture, Prov. 3. 34. God ſetteth himſelf againſt the ſtubborn vitious perſon, but is gracious and merciful to the obedient and penitent.

7. Submit your ſelves therefore to God; reſiſt the devil, and he will flie from you.]

7. By this it appears how neceſſary it is for all that expect any mercy from God to be wholly conformed to his will; and whatever ſuggeſtions to envy, ſtrife, emulation, the devil, and that wiſdome which is not from above, c. 3. 15. ſhall offer to you, do you repell them; and it is not in his power without your conſent to hurt you, but he will certainly, being repelled, depart from you.

8. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you: cleanſe your hands, ye ſinners, and purifie your hearts, ye double-minded.]

8. Make your humble addreſſes in prayer to God, and faithful obedience to him, and he will be ready to aſſiſt you againſt all temptations mentioned ver. 8. As for all you Gnoſticks, that are for God and the world too, ver. 4. (ſee note a. on ch. 1.) which will profeſſe Chriſt no longer then 'tis ſafe to doe ſo, inconſtant, cowardly, wavering hypocrites, your hearts muſt be purified from that profane mixture, and wholly conſecrated to Gods ſervice.

9. Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heavineſſe.]

9. Your reformation of ſuch ſins as theſe muſt be joyned with great humiliation, and mourning and lamenting them: And that but ſeaſonably at this time, for there be ſad daies approaching on this nation, utter exciſion to the unreformed, to the unbelieving obdurate Jewes, and to all the Gnoſtick hereticks among them, ſee c. 5. 1. and Jude note a.

10. * Humble your ſelves in the ſight of the Lord, and he ſhall lift you up.]

10. The only way to get into the number of thoſe that then ſhall be delivered, is timely to repent and return unto Chriſt.

11. † Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that ſpeaketh * evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, ſpeaketh † evil of the law and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.]

11. Speak not againſt them which do not obſerve thoſe legal ceremonies which ſome of you Jewiſh Chriſtians do ſtill retain, nor condemn any man for not obſerving them, for he that doth ſo, ſpeaketh in effect againſt the law by which that Chriſtian rules his actions (that is, the law of Chriſt, the Goſpel) cenſures that for imperfect, in that it commands not thoſe things; and if thou doſt ſo, then in ſtead of obeying the law of Chriſt, thou undertakeſt to overrule and judge it, and canſt not truly be called a Chriſtian.

12. There is one law-giver *, who is able to ſave and to deſtroy: who art thou that judgeſt another?]

12. Chriſt, and none elſe, hath authority to give laws unto us, and puniſh the refractary, and it is not for you to impoſe obſervances where he hath given liberty.

13. Goe to now, ye that ſay, [c] To day or to morrow we will goe into ſuch a city, and continue there a year, and † buy and ſell, and get gain:] [c]

13. And (as now the times are, a ſuddain deſtruction approaching the Jewes) one admonition will be very ſeaſonable for thoſe that uſe theſe or the like arrogant forms of ſpeech, To day, &c. aſſuming to themſelves power over the future;

14. Whereas (beſide the Atheiſticalneſs of it, in taking themſelves off from depending on God) it is certain they do not know what they ſhall be able to doe to morrow: For even your life it ſelf, on which all your deſignes muſt neceſſarily depend, is but a moſt frail, mortal, tranſitory thing, ſhort and preſently vaniſheth.

14. Whereas ye know not what ſhall be on the morrow: for what is your life? it is even a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and then vaniſheth away.]

15. And therefore your forms of language ought to be of another making, never mentioning any purpoſe of yours, but with ſubordination to the good pleaſure of God.

15. For that ye ought to ſay, * If the Lord will, we ſhall live, and doe this or that.]

* If the Lord pleaſe, and if we ſhall live, we will even or alſo do this. Ἐαν ὁ Κύριος θελήσῃ, καὶ ζησωμεν, καὶ ποιήσωμεν.

d. 16. And for you to take pleaſure in ſuch inſolent ſpeeches as theſe, is a wicked Atheiſtical thing.

16. But now ye rejoice in your [d] boaſtings: all ſuch rejoycing is † evil.]

† wicked πονηραις

17. And for Chriſtians to be guilty of this, who have received ſo much light and knowledge to the contrary, this will render you the more inexcuſably guilty and puniſhable.

17. Therfore to him that knoweth to doe good, and doth it not, to him it is ſinne.]

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. 5. The Scripture ſaith] There is no place of Scripture of the Old Teſtament which can own ſo much of this citation as that Gen. 6. where in the Septuagints reading there is πνῦμα ſpirit, and πατῳκισεν abideth; and the ἐνκατοικεῖν abiding there, is all one with the κατοικῆσαι ſojourning here. Now whereas 'tis here added of that Spirit, that it doth ἐπιποθεῖν εἰς φθόνον, deſire to envy, firſt 'tis clear that the πνεῦμα μου, my ſpirit, there, is the ſpirit or ſoul of man, given him by God, and ſo called God's in reſpect of the original, (ſee Note on 1 Pet. 3. f.) but ſignifies the mind of man as it is in him, and is corrupted by an habite of worldly and wicked deſires, which cannot be affirmed of Gods holy Spirit, (and for any evil Angel, it will be hard to ſay, either that ſuch dwell in, or that it is they that luſt in us. It is our own corrupt hearts, even when the devils move us, to which the luſt and all the ſin is to be imputed:) and 2[ly], this is parallel to what Gen. 6. 3. is ſaid of that old world, that man is fleſh, and the thoughts of his heart alwaies evil, that is, his carnal or worldly deſires are inſatiable, bent to all manner of wickedneſſe; the deſires here being diſtinctly noted by ἐπιποθῶν, deſiring, and either the wickedneſſe or inſatiateneſſe of them by φθόνος envie, which ſometimes in Authors is the contrary to liberality, and ſignifies all manner of covetouſneſſe, pining to ſee any man have what we have not, and elſewhere ſignifies malice, violence, and the like. As for the addition here ver. 6. But he giveth more grace, that ſeems to be the Apoſtles own obſervation of that place in Geneſis, that when the world ſo provoked God, yet he gave them time of repentance (as it there follows, Nevertheleſſe his daies ſhall be an hundred and twenty years, they ſhall have that ſpace allowed them to reform and eſcape puniſhment) and ſo God in Chriſt doth now; and upon repentance there is yet mercy and pardon to be had, upon which is ſuperſtructed naturally that which follows, Wherefore he ſaith, &c.

b. V. 6. The proud] The word ὑπερήφανος here notes not particularly the vice of pride and haughtineſſe, but a general diſobedience and reſiſtence againſt the Law of God, which is called ὕβρις, contumeliouſneſſe, and ſuperbia, pride, in oppoſition to obedience, as in Virgil, τῷ ταπεινῷ

——— Regum eſt
Parcere ſubjectis, & debellare ſuperbos,

It is the part of Kings to ſpare thoſe that ſubmit, and ſubdue the proud: a place directly parallel to this here out of the Proverbs, and which S. Auguſtine conceives to be had from thence. The place in the Proverbs reads, God ſcorneth the ſcorners (becauſe ſcorners uſe to repell with ſcoffs all good counſels and admonitions.) And ſo ſaith Æſchylus Περσ.

God is the juſt and heavy puniſher of the proud.

c. V. 13. To day, or to——] It was an old ſaying of the Hebrews, mentioned by Ben Syra, Let no man ſay he will doe any thing unleſſe he firſt ſay, If the Lord will. On which occaſion there follows in him a ſtory of a man, who, when he ſaid, To morrow I will ſit with my ſpouſe in the marriage-chamber, was admoniſh'd that he ought to ſay, אם גזר השם If God will, and he anſwered, Whether God will or not, I will ſit there. Of whom, ſaith he, it followed, that he ſat with her all the day, but at night when they were going to bed, before he knew her, they were both dead. Wherefore they ſaid, The ſpouſe went up to her marriage-bed, and knew not what would befall her; therefore whoſoever deſires to doe any thing, let him firſt ſay, If God will.

d. V. 16. Boaſtings] Ἀλαζονεία ſignifies boaſting, or aſſuming to one's ſelf more then belongs to him, and differs from αὐθάδεια ſelf-pleaſing or inſolence, Tit. 1. 7. in this, that that is a great love, or high opinion, of ones ſelf, φιλαυτία ſelf-love, 2 Tim. 3. 2. being puffed up, 1 Cor. 13. 4. being wiſe in ones own conceit, Rom. 11. 25. and 12. 16. but this is a faſtuous ſpeaking: and as this is ordinarily expreſſed in magnifying ones own abilities or power above other men, ſo hath it here a notion little different from it; ſpeaking in ſuch a form as if he depended not upon God himſelf, and ſo it belongs to the fault reprehended v. 13. when a man promiſes or affirms that ſimply which is not in his power, but as God is pleaſed to enable or concur with him. Paraphraſe.

CHAP. V.

1. There will now ſhortly come ſuch daies, that all the rich among you, or that place any part of their intereſt on this world, are likely to have a very mournfull time of it, in reſpect of their great diſappointments, and the ſad deſtructions and calamities that are about to fall on the Jewes.

1. GO to now, ye rich men, weep and howle for your miſeries * that ſhall come upon you.]

* that come ἐπερχομεναις

2. Your

† putrified riches * are become moth-eaten

2. Your riches are † corrupted, and your garments * moth-eaten.]

2. You have not employed your wealth, like faithfull ſtewards, as God hath appointed you, to the relief of them that want; but let them rot in your hands for want of uſe: your food, like Manna, is putrified by being kept, Exod. 16. 20. and ſo the garments which would have covered the needy, being laid up in your wardrobes, are devoured by moths.

† are ruſtied * you have treaſured it up

3. Your gold and ſilver † is cankered, and the ruſt of them ſhall be a witneſſe againſt you, and ſhall eat your fleſh as it were fire: * ye have heaped treaſure together for the laſt daies.]

3. And that ruſt which is wont to breed in iron by lying unuſed, breeds in your coin, your gold & ſilver (which are not ordinarily capable of ruſt) and this covetous withholding more then is meet, will not onely tend to your want, but is moreover a foul and crying ſinne, that ſhall riſe in judgment againſt you, and ſhall gnaw on and devour your fleſh; your treaſuring up wealth is as the treaſuring up fire, which ſhall onely help to bring more miſeries upon you, and ſo more fearfully to conſume you, when the deſtruction of the Jews, now approaching, comes, and falls moſt ſharply upon the wealthieſt men, (as ſoon after it fell out.)

† being by you taken away, * hoſts

4. Behold, the hire of the labourers which have reaped down your fields, † which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entred into the ears of the Lord of * ſabaoth.]

4. Theſe riches of yours have not kept you from being unjuſt, but rather tempted you to oppreſſion of the poor labourer. And this griping and cruelty of yours is a crying ſin, and will bring down ſevere vengeance upon you from the Lord of hoſts.

† revelled and been luxurious * fed your hearts as for the day of ſlaughter

5. Ye have † lived in pleaſure on the earth, and been wanton: ye have * nouriſhed your hearts as in a day of ſlaughter.]

5. You have ſet your hearts upon the pitifull poor delights and joyes of this earth, lived delicately and luxuriouſly (as Dives.) And what hath all this been, but the pampering your ſelves as it were for the ſhambles?

6. Ye have condemned and killed the juſt; and he doth not reſiſt you.]

6. Your nation hath condemned Chriſt to death and crucified him, he making no reſiſtence; and now ye Gnoſtick Judaizers have dealt in like manner with the pure orthodox Chriſtians.

† former

7. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the [b] coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the pretious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, untill he receive the † early and latter rain.]

7. As for you that are Chriſtians indeed, and are now perſecuted by them, ye may be confident that Chriſt will ſhortly come and avenge his and your cauſe upon them, ſee ver. 8. and therefore ye may well wait patiently ſo ſhort a ſpace, till that time come, and then you ſhall be reſcued from the preſent diſtreſſes (ſee Note on Mat. 24. b.) For thus doth the husbandman give you an example of patience, waiting for the fruit of the earth, and in order to that, for the ſhowers that come in the ſeed-time to fit the ground, and before harveſt or reaping, to plump the corn, and accordingly he defers to do one or other, to ſow or reap, with patience, and attendance to the other duties of his calling, till thoſe ſeaſons come.

* Doe ye endure patiently, and your ſelves confirm- † Do not ſigh * gates

8. * Be ye alſo patient, ſtabliſh your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.]

8. And their example ye may very fitly tranſcribe at this time, and thereby confirm and encourage your ſelves in your adherence to Chriſt, whatever your ſufferings are, as being aſſured that coming of Chriſt (deſcribed Mat. 24.) in vengeance on his enemies, is now very near approaching (ſee Mat. 24. b. and Heb. 10. 37.)

9. [c] †Grudge not one againſt another, brethren, leſt ye be condemned: behold, the Judge ſtandeth before the * door.]

9. Envy not one another, break not out into thoſe acts of zeal or emulation or murmuring againſt one another, leſt you bring that vengeance upon you; for behold the coming of Chriſt to the deſtruction of the Jewes and malicious perſecuting Gnoſticks, is now very nigh at hand, ſee Mat. 24. b.

† longanimity

10. Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have ſpoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of ſuffering affliction, and of † patience.]

10. And whatſoever the temptations or perſecutions are which might tempt you to comply and joyn with the perſecuters, conſider what ye read and know of the prophets of God in the old Teſtament, who when they came to proclaim God's judgments againſt the ſinful Jewes, were generally very contumeliouſly uſed by them, but yet never fainted or were diſcouraged thereby: and ſuch examples will fortifie you againſt the like temptations, that they may not have any impreſſion on you, to weary you out of your conſtancy, and bring you to join with the Judaizers.

* we bleſſe

11. Behold, * we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is pitifull and of tender mercy.]

11. There is nothing that, according to the principles of Chriſtianity, is more honourable and bliſſeful, then ſuffering patiently and conſtantly. You remember what ſufferings Job met with, and upon his patient bearing of them, what in the end the Lord gave him, double to all that he had loſt, Job 42. 10. By which it appears, how far God is from deſpiſing us in our afflictions, or leaving us in the hands of the perſecuters, how much he loves, and how careful he is of you.

† hypocriſie

12. But above all things, my brethren, ſwear not, neither by heaven, nor by the earth, nor by any other oath: but let your yea be yea, and your nay nay; leſt you fall into [d] † condemnation.]

12. One ſpecial caveat I ſhall farther give you, that ye permit not your ſelves that cuſtome of ſwearing, by heaven or earth, or any other form of oath. In ſtead of ſuch unneceſſary cuſtomes it will be much more for your turn that ye take care that your performances be agreeable to your words (ſee note on 2 Cor. 1. b) that you fall not into lying or falſe ſpeaking.

13. Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him ſing Pſalmes.]

13. Again let your care be, that whenever any affliction befalls you, your praying to God be the conſtant effect of it, as on the other ſide, ſinging thankſgivings of your proſperity.

14. Is any ſick among you? let him call for the [e] elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, [f] anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord:]

14. When any man falls into any diſeaſe, he is to look on it as that which comes from God for ſome ſpecial end of his, very ordinarily for ſome ſin of ours committed either againſt God or man, not yet repented of, as it ought: and becauſe the man ſo viſited may not be ſo well able to judge of himſelf, but that he may ſtand in need of ſpiritual directions and counſel, to diſcern his own guilts, and becauſe whatſoever his condition be, he may receive much benefit thereby, let him call to his aſſiſtance ſome ſpiritual perſon, the Biſhop in every city (ſee note on Act. 11. b.) or whoſoever is by or under him ordained for ſuch offices; and when he hath afforded the ſick man his beſt directions and aſſiſtance, let him alſo pray to God with and for him, that God will pardon his ſins, aſſwage his pains, remove the diſeaſe, and reſtore him to his former health, withall uſing that ceremony of unction, ſo ordinarily uſed by Chriſt in curing diſeaſes, and doing it in the name of Chriſt.

15. And the prayer of the Bishop, &c. and of the sick, if it come from faith in Christ in the one, praying to God in Christ for his recovery, and in the sick person from a true Christian, penitent heart, shall be of force (save where God is pleased otherwise to dispose of it, for the good of the patient and his own glory) to heal and recover the sick, (see note on Mat. 10. g. and Luc. 13. b.) and God shall restore him to his former health: To which purpose also it is useful that, if upon examination he be found to have committed any wasting sin or sins, which probably have brought this disease on him, the sick person first fit himself for, and then receive absolution from the Bishop.

g. 15. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he have committed sins, g * they shall be forgiven him.] * absolution shall be given him

16. Upon these considerations therefore, it will be very proper for all that are in this estate, to make acknowledgment of their sins to such as are thus called to visit them, and that, besides other respects, in order to their cure from such diseases as are then upon them, by virtue of their intercession to God for those who shall thus approve to them the sincerity of their repentance, see Gen. 20. 7. For this is certainly known, that the prayer of a man of God, to which he is incited by the Spirit (as the prophets were when they prayed, and as they were under the Gospel who had the gift of miracles, see note on Gal. 5. b.) will be very effectual, even work miraculous cures.

h. 16. h Confesse † your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed: The * effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.] † or therefore, for the Kings MS. addes δν. * inspired ἐνεργουμένη

17. Elias was a prophet, and a righteous man, but a man for all that, and subject to the same afflictions and frailties that we are; and yet by earnest prayer he brought drought and famine upon the land, for the punishment of the sins of the people, that ran idolatrously after Baal, and so upon the land of the ten tribes it rained not for three years and an half, Luk. 4. 25. and Rev. 11. 6.

17. Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the † earth by the space of three years and six moneths.] † land γῆς

18. And upon some reformation he again prayed, 1 Kin. 18. 45. and he was heard in abundance of rain and fruits.

18. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.]

19. To conclude this discourse, begun v. 14. let this be remembred and considered by all, If any Christian transgresse the Evangelical rule of life, fall into sin, and any man take him off from that vicious course, i 19. Brethren, If any of you doe erre from the truth, and one convert him,]

20. It is a most excellent glorious work of mercy, which he hath wrought, the effect of which is, that God will free him on whom this change is wrought from death eternal, and perhaps from temporal present death through sickness fallen on him for that sin, ver. 15. and besides he will accept and reward that charity of him that hath wrought that good work on him with the free discharge of whatsoever sins he hath formerly been guilty, but hath now repented of.

i 20. Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall i hide a multitude of sins.]

Annotations on Chap. V.

a. ὡς πῦρ ἐθησαυρίσατε

V. 3. As it were fire] That the words, ὡς πῦρ, as fire, are to be joyned with ἐθησαυρίσατε, ye have treasured up, and not with the former, the sense doth much inforce, and the antient manner of writing without points doth well permit; and it hath a special significancy in this place, agreeable to the times wherein this Epistle was written. For the last dayes, being the time of the Jewes destruction, (see Note on Act. 2. b.) and to treasure up wealth as fire, being no more then to lay up their wealth so as it should mischief, and devour, and consume, in stead of advantaging them, this is here most truly said of the uncharitable and unchristian Judaizers at that time, in respect of the destruction of that people approaching, where the rich misers were the most miserably harrass'd of any. See Note on Rev. 9. c.

Ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ

b. Παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου

V. 7. Coming of the Lord] The coming of the Lord is here expresly defined by Oecumenius to be Ῥωμαϊκὴ ἔφοδος the expedition of the Romanes, to which he there applies the words of Christ concerning John, If I will that he tarry till I come, Καὶ ὁ μεταδὺ ἐν τούτῳ ὁ τῆς ζωῆς τούτης χρόνος ἕως τῆς ἁλώσεως Ἱερουσαλὴμ, καὶ μικρὸν ἐπέκεινα, For the time of this life was to him extended untill the taking of Jerusalem, and a little beyond it.

c. μὴ στενάζετε

V. 9. Grudge not] The practices of the Zelots among the Jewes, a little before the great miserable destruction of that people, are often mentioned in Josephus, and referred to in this Epistle especially, and in those of S. Peter, written about the same time and to the same persons that this of S. James was, viz. to the dispersed of the Jewes. And although those to whom the Epistles were directed immediately were the Jewish Christians, yet of these there were so many that did stand for the continuance of the Mosaical Law, and so were Judaizing Christians, and these lived so intermixtly with the unconverted Jewes themselves, and so maliciously acted with them to the persecuting of the Orthodox Christians, that as some passages of this Epistle seem to belong onely to the Jewes unconverted, as the former part of this Chapter till ver. 7. so many more pertain to those that went on with them in their sins, those that reconciled Christianity and the world, and all the most enormous sensual sins, c. 4. 4. and particularly the outrageous practices of the Zelots. For so it appears by Act. 21. 20. that many myriads of converted, or believing, Christian Jewes were all ζηλωταὶ τῶν νόμων, of the number of the Zelots, that were very vehement persecutors of all that stood not for the Law of Moses. To these refers the unruly tongue c. 3. compared to a fire that kindled so much matter, made such combustions among them, φλογίζουσα setting into a flame the whole wheel, or course, of affairs, v. 5, 6. untameable, v. 8. full of cursing and bitterness, v. 10, 11. and in plain words ζῆλος πικρὸς bitter zeal, v. 14. and again ζῆλος zeal or envy, v. 16. and from thence ἀκαταστασία καὶ πᾶν φαῦλον πρᾶγμα, sedition, or tumultuousnesse, and every evil deed, the very character of the Zelots in Josephus: so again, c. 4. the πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν, the wars and quarrels among them, ver. 1. which, as it is observed, were first intestine among themselves, begun by those of the Zelots, and so prepared them to their wretched desolation when the Roman Eagles came: and more punctually v. 2. φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε ye kill and envy. And to this purpose the στενάζετε here most properly belongs, which though it signifie sighing, or groaning, or murmuring, yet because that is an effect of envy and emulation, which sighs at other men's prosperity, and because envy proceeds wholly from uncontentednesse, (as in the story of Cain it appears, first his countenance was sad, and then he malignes and slayes his brother;) therefore by a figure it is set to signifie the same thing that φθόνος and ζῆλος, envy and bitter zeal had before so often done.

πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι

φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε

V. 12. Con-

d. V. 12. Condemnation] The antient Copies generally (and, beſide thoſe produced by others, the forementioned in Magdalene College Library in Oxford) read εἰς ὑπόκρισιν into hypocriſie. The word ὑπόκρισις in the Septuagint ſignifies ψευδολογία falſe ſpeaking; for the Hebrew חָנֵף, which vulgarly ſignifies to be an hypocrite, to diſſemble, ſignifies alſo to lye, to deceive, to deal fraudulently (as near in ſignification as in ſound to our knave, as it is now uſed among us:) and ſo one of theſe is taken for the other, the word ὑπόκρισις ſet to ſignifie ψευδολογία, falſe ſpeaking. And then the exhortation of this place will be parallel to that of Philo, Κάλλιστον τὸ ἀνώμοτον, ἔτω δ' ἀληθεύειν ἐφ' ἑκάστου ὡς πᾶν λόγους ὅρκους εἶναι νομίζειν, It is beſt not to ſwear at all, but to take ſuch care of ſpeaking truth with every man that our words may be thought to be oaths. And that of the Arabians, Let thy ſpeech be I and No, that thou mayſt be a true ſpeaker among all men; and Joſeph. de Bell. Jud. l. 2. c. 12. of a ſort of Jewes, Πᾶν μὲν τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἰσχυρότερον ὅρκου· τὸ δὲ ὀμνύειν αὐτοῖς φεύγεται, χεῖρον αὐτὸ τῆς ἐπιορκίας ὑπολαμβάνοντες, ἤδη γὰρ ἤδη κατεγνῶσθαί φασι τὸν ἀπιστούμενον δίχα Θεοῦ, All that is ſaid by them is ſtronger then an oath. Swearing is forbidden by them, counting it worſe then perjury, and affirming that that man is already condemned as unfit to be truſted, which is not believed without calling God to witneſſe.

e. Πρεσβύτεροι τῆς ἐκκλησίας

V. 14. Elders of the Church] What is here meant by Πρεσβύτεροι τῆς ἐκκλησίας, Elders of the Church, is not eaſie to be determined. If there were at the time of the writing this Epiſtle, beſide the ſeveral Biſhops in each Church, a ſecond order, of Presbyters under the Biſhops, and above the Deacons, and of them more then one in each Church, it would then be moſt reaſonable to interpret this place of thoſe. But becauſe there is no evidence whereby theſe may appear to have been ſo early brought into the Church, (ſee Act. 11. b.) and becauſe Πρεσβύτεροι in the Plural doth no way conclude that there were more of theſe Elders then one in each particular Church (any more then that the ſick man was bound to call for more then one) and becauſe Πρεσβύτεροι, Elders of the Church, was both in the Scripture-ſtyle (ſee Note on Act. 11. b.) and in the firſt writers, the title of Biſhops, and becauſe when there were ſecondary Presbyters more then one in every city, the ſick man cannot be thought obliged by this Text to call for the whole college, or one ſick man for more then one; and laſtly, becauſe the viſiting of the ſick is antiently mentioned as one branch of the office of Biſhops; therefore it may very reaſonably be reſolved, that the Biſhops of the Church, (not the Elders of the Jewiſh Synagogue, but the Biſhops of the Chriſtian Church, Seniores Chriſtianæ congregationis, as Eraſmus paraphraſeth it, the Elders, or Governors, of the Chriſtian congregation) one in each particular Church, but many in the univerſal Church, and ſo alſo many in the Church of the diſperſion, to which this Epiſtle is addreſſed, are here meant by S. James. Thus in Polycarp's Epiſtle to the Philippians, where the Πρεσβύτεροι Elders being the higheſt order mentioned, and thoſe to whom κρίσις judicature belongs, may (as in Papias, and Ireneus, and Clemens Alexandrinus, and Tertullian they doe) moſt reaſonably be conceived to denote Biſhops. One part of their office is ſet down, that they are ὀπτευτὴν πάντας ἀσθενεῖς, thoſe that viſit all the ſick. And accordingly ſo it moſt probably muſt in this place.

f. Ἀλείψαντες ἔλαιῳ

Ib. Anointing him with oile] That anointing with oile was a ceremony ſometimes uſed by Chriſt and his Apoſtles in working their miraculous cures, healing diſeaſes, and caſting out devils, appears Mar. 6. 13. where at the Apoſtles going out, it is ſaid, that they caſt out devils, καὶ ἤλειφον ἐλαίῳ πολλοὺς ἀρρώστους, καὶ ἐθεράπευον, and anointed many ſick perſons with oil, and cured them. Another ceremony there was uſed to the ſame purpoſe, impoſition of hands, Mar. 16. 18. and Act. 9. 17. and 28. 8. And to theſe prayer was added as the more effectual and ſubſtantial performance, of which Unction and Impoſition of hands were onely the ceremonies; and this prayer commenced in the name of Chriſt, or elſe the name of Chriſt, in prayer, called over the ſick. And by theſe means, together with the ſick man's examining, and confeſſing, and ſincerely forſaking whatſoever ſin he ſtood guilty of, either toward God or man, it was ordinary, while thoſe extraordinary gifts remained in the Church, for diſeaſes to be cured, and health reſtored to the ſick, without the uſe of any other means, of phyſick, &c. where as the prayer of faith, or calling the name of Chriſt over the ſick, was the means of curing the diſeaſe, v. 15. and ſo Act. 3. 16. Chriſt's name hath made this man ſtrong, and the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect ſoundneſſe; ſo the ceremony, whether of Oil or Impoſition of hands, was indifferently either uſed or not uſed by them. In the Goſpels many ſuch cures are wrought without either; and ſo in the Acts by taking by the hand, by embracing, c. 3. 7. c. 20. 10. and by his bare word, ch. 9. 34. and ſo again ver. 40. and c. 14. 10. and c. 16. 18. and 19. 12. From whence it appears, Firſt, to what end this Unction was uſed, preciſely to that of miraculous healing, or recovering the ſick to health; and that not through any efficacy or virtue in the oil, but directly the contrary, as touching the eyes, laying on the hands, and ſaying the word, were uſed, none of which have any natural force in them, nor were uſed on other deſigne then to demonſtrate the miraculouſneſſe of the work, which was wrought without any contribution of means. Secondly, that this uſage, as a bare ceremony, was not inſtituted by Chriſt, or any way commanded to be continued by the Apoſtles or their ſucceſſors in the Church, even while the gifts of healing did continue among them, but was by the Apoſtles themſelves very frequently omitted in their working of cures. Thirdly, for that uſe of unction or enoiling, as a viand to thoſe that depart out of the world, there being nothing ſaid of it here (but on the contrary the whole uſe of it in order to the recovering of the ſick,) there is no colour of ground for aſſerting it, nor obligation to the uſe of it, to be met with in the New Teſtament; and therefore allowing it to be a bare ceremony, or a ſigne of our ſpiritual cure, it is ſtrange how it ſhould come to be eſteemed a Sacrament, and that diſtinguiſhed from Abſolution on the ſick bed, and as ſuch, be deemed neceſſary to all that depart out of this world, and uſed to them only when it is thought certain that they will dy, and all this meerly on the authority of this one place, where it is deſigned on purpoſe to the recovering of the ſick perſon. Fourthly, that even in order to the recovering of the ſick, it is not now a ceremony of any propriety or fitneſſe for uſe, the gift of miraculous healing being not now pretended to in the Church, and therefore this ceremony which was then ſometimes attendant on that gift, and was adjoined to the exerciſe of it, on purpoſe to ſhew that it was clearly a gift, operating without natural means (to which end the unefficaciouſneſſe of unction was very proper) muſt long ſince ceaſe to have any propriety. Mean while the other parts of S. James's direction here to the ſick are very worthy obſerving in order to our preſent practice; that they ſhould call for the Elders of the Church; that thoſe Elders ſhould pray over, or for them, and that in the name of our Lord Jeſus; that if the ſick have upon examination been found guilty of any ſinne or ſinnes, which may probably have brought that admonition from heaven (that ſickneſſe) upon him, he confeſs them to God, and if they be treſpaſſes againſt a brother, confeſſe them to the injured perſon, and deſire his reconciliation alſo, and in either caſe approve the ſincerity of his reſolution, contrition and change of mind to the Elder or ſpiritual perſon, who may be deemed in many reſpects more likely to paſſe a right judgment on it then he can on himſelf, and by his office is rendred moſt fit to be thus intruſted and employed; and then laſtly, that upon a due performance of all this, and upon a due preparation of the patient, and expreſſion of his ſincere deſire of it, the Abſolution of the Church ſhould be afforded him. And as this may be a very proper method to be uſed for the obtaining the peace of God, and of real comfort to the true penitent ſoul; ſo may it now by the bleſſing of God, in caſe the diſeaſe was ſent for ſuch correction, be a moſt probable means, together with the skilful directions and applications of the Phyſician, and a patient ſubmiſſion to them, σώζειν κάμνοντα, to recover the diſeaſed: and to qualifie him to receive benefit by the Phyſician, and to partake of the promiſe here, ἐγερεῖ αὐτὸν ὁ Κύριος, The Lord ſhall raiſe him up, when he in wiſdome and mercy ſhall ſee that fitteſt for him; and the like may be ſaid of all other afflictions. For as certainly as God hath the diſpoſing of the world, every particular diſeaſe that befalls any is ſent by him, and from him comes with ſome commiſſion, whether to remove out of this world, or to exerciſe patience, or to mortifie ſin, or to call to reformation; and if the latter be it (as I think I may truly ſay moſt commonly it is, and it is moſt ſafe to ſuſpect and examine alwaies whether it be not ſo) then nothing can more contribute to the remove of this evil then to take away the cauſe of it, and to perform that work for which it was ſent, according to what we find in the cures wrought by Chriſt, that the forgiving of the patient's ſinnes, Son, thy ſinnes are forgiven thee, is the ordinary preface to his recovery. And ſo Ecclus 2. 11. before God's releaſing, or delivering, in time of tribulation, there is firſt his ἀφίσιν ἁμαρτίας remitting of ſins, as 2 Mac. 3. when Heliodorus had been ſcourged for his ſacrilegious enterprize, and the high prieſt offered ſacrifice for his recovery, v. 32. the Prieſt is ſaid to have made an atonement, and God thereupon to have granted him life, v. 33. And ſo in Hezekiah's ſickneſſe, when the Prophet is ſent unto him, this is the method of his recovery. And accordingly the ſon of Syrach counſels, Eccl. 38. 9. My ſon, in thy ſickneſſe be not negligent: but pray unto the Lord, and he will make thee whole. Leave off from ſin, and order thy hands aright, and cleanſe thy heart from all wickedneſſe. Give a ſweet ſavour, and a memorial of fine flower; and make a fat offering, as one that is to dy. Then give place to the Phyſician, for the Lord hath created him. ——There is a time when in their hands there is good ſucceſſe. And why may not this be that time which I now mention? The errors of the Romiſh practice in this point are very ſufficiently provided againſt by our Biſhops in the dayes of Henry the Eighth, in their book ſet out by the King, and intituled, A neceſſary Doctrine and Erudition for any Chriſtian man, upon the head of Extreme Unction. It is agreeably the grave and ſober concluſion of Cutbert Tonſtall Biſhop of Durham at that time in his book Contra impios blaſphematores Dei prædeſtinationis, p. 53. ſpeaking of theſe very words of S. James, Hanc ſalutarem admonitionem ſequens Eccleſia Catholica ſuadet ante ulla compori adhibenda humana medicamenta animam Deo eſſe reconciliandam, nè fruſtrà laboret medicus illi ſubvenire quem Deus ob peccatum flagellat, ſine cujus priùs obtenta gratia non convaleſcet æger, The Catholick Church following this wholeſome admonition adviſes, before men uſe any humane medicines to the body, that their ſouls be reconciled to God, leſt the Phyſician labour in vain to cure them whom God chaſtiſeth for ſin, without whoſe pardon firſt obtained, the ſick will not recover. This indeed is a proper uſe of, and concluſion from this Text: and it will hardly without wreſting yield any other.

V. 15. They ſhall be forgiven him] That ἀφεθήσεται here muſt be taken Impersonally, and ſo rendred, abſolution, or remiſſion, ſhall be given him, may appear by the antecedent ἁμαρτίας ſins, which being the Plural number cannot be joined with this which is in the Singular, nor is there any other Noun that can belong to it: For if ὁ Κύριος the Lord were the antecedent to it, it muſt have been in the Active voice, ἀφήσει he ſhall remit them. And thus in all probability it would have been, if it had been a promiſe of God's pardon or remiſſion; for then, as it was ſaid, the Lord ſhall raiſe him up, ſo would it commodiouſly have been added, and if he have committed ſins, he, that is, the Lord, will remit them. By this Impersonal form therefore ſomewhat elſe ſeems to be meant beſides the Lord's remiſſion, and then that, frō the precedent mention of the Elders of the Church, will be concluded to be the abſolution of the Church in the hands of the Rulers thereof, the Biſhops, of which ſee Note on John 20. 23. This is of two ſorts; firſt a releaſe of the offender from the publick Cenſures of the Church, Excommunication, &c. (inflicted on ſcandalous offenders upon publick cognizance of their faults) upon repentance reſtoring ſuch to their communion again: ſecondly, more private, in caſe of any waſting ſin more privately committed, and in confeſſion revealed to the ſpiritual perſon; in which caſe, upon faithful promiſe of reformation and obedience to ſpiritual advice and direction (upon recovery to health) the Elder may and ought to give the ſick perſon the peace of the Church, and the benefit of Abſolution. And that being by him done Miniſterially, and pro officio, and clave non errante, as it brings the bleſſing and prayers of the Church along with it, ſo it may reaſonably tend to the quieting of the Conſcience, and avoiding all ſcruple and doubtfulneſſe (as our Church affirms in the exhortation before the Communion) and be a means of obtaining a releaſe from the diſeaſe, if God ſee fit, or a pawn and pledge of remiſſion in heaven.

V. 16. Confeſſe your faults.] What is the meaning of παραπτώματα ſins here, is matter of ſome doubt: For as, according to the notation of the word, it may ſignifie ſome lapſes or lighter ſins, and ſo be oppoſed to ἁμαρτίας πεποιηκώς, having committed ſins, in the former verſe; ſo by the ἀλλήλοις one to another, adjoining, it may ſeem to be reſtrained to treſpaſſes, offences againſt the brethren, that is, other men, or Chriſtians, and ſo to be oppoſed to ἁμαρτίαι ſins againſt God. In either of theſe notions the ἐξομολογεῖσθε ἀλλήλοις confeſſing one to another will not neceſſarily import any more then confeſſing thoſe lighter ſins to any inferior fellow-Chriſtian, or to the wronged brother, the addition of whoſe prayers may be very uſeful to the obtaining any mercy from God, particularly that of the ἴασις healing, that here follows; and the ſeeking his reconciliation in caſe of treſpaſſe will be a duty, if not of this, of another Text, Mat. 5. 24. and muſt be performed before there be any reaſon to hope that God will accept his private offerings or prayers, for the removing that puniſhment which his injuring his brother hath cried to heaven for and fetch'd down upon him. But it is to be obſerved, that the King's MS. reads this place with ſome variation, ἐξομολογῶδε ἓν ἀλλήλοις τὰς ἁμαρτίας, Confeſſe therefore your ſins to one another, and ſo the Latine alſo. And then as that diſtinction of the two ſorts of ſins, heavier and lighter, againſt God and againſt the brother, is ſuperſeded here; ſo the ἓν therefore, connecting it to what went before, the prayer and abſolution of the Elders, and indeed the Elders being the only perſons who are ſuppoſed to be preſent there, and whoſe prayers ex officio will be moſt fit to be compared with Elias's

h. Παραπτώματα

Ἁμαρτίας πεποιηκώς

Ἐξομολογεῖσθε ἀλλήλοις

Ἀλλήλοις praying, v. 17. it muſt follow, that the ἀλλήλοις one to another muſt be reſtrained only to the Elders forementioned (as πάντες ἀλλήλοις ὑποτασσόμενοι in the ordinary Copies, 1 Pet. 5.5. Be ye all ſubject to one another, muſt ſignifie, as it is defined by the matter, ſubjection which is not mutual, nor of ſuperiors to inferiors, nor of equals to equals, but only of inferiors to ſuperiors) and the confeſſing of ſins to them be here preſcribed as the preparative and condition of their Abſolution. To which purpoſe it is certain, that as Repentance, if it be ſincere, comprehends confeſſion to God, and if the penitent deſire to approve the ſincerity of it to the ſpiritual perſon, and obtain Abſolution from him, it is neceſſary that he make at leaſt a general confeſſion, and ſuch as ſhall not hide any ſort of his guilts from him, (as we read at John Baptiſts's Baptiſm, Mat. 3.6. and in the ſtory Mat. 19.18. where the Greek Fathers and Scholiaſts agree, Δεῖ πάντα πιστὸν λέγειν τὰς ἑαυτῦ ἁμαρτίας, &c. Every faithful man ought to tell his offences, and to renounce and diſclaim them,) and very uſeful and expedient that he deſcend to particulars alſo, that his prayers may be more particularly adapted to his wants, and probably prove more efficacious by this means; ſo this particular confeſſion will be very advantageous to the penitent for the obtaining direction to the moſt proper remedies for the reſiſting and preventing the returns of thoſe ſins, in order to his fortifying himſelf againſt them.

1. Καλύψει πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν

20. Hide a multitude of ſins] What is the meaning of this phraſe, Καλύψει πλῆθος ἁμαρτιῶν, ſhall cover a multitude of ſins, is a matter of ſome difficulty to determine. It ſeems to be a proverbial ſpeech, and very near that of Prov. 10. 12. Love covereth all ſins: and if by analogie to that it be interpreted, it muſt ſignifie to cover other mens ſins from our own eyes, to cauſe us to look favourably on others faults, to ſee few faults in them, in order to peaceable and friendly living with them: for thus in that place of the Proverbs the oppoſition inforceth, Hatred ſtirreth up ſtrifes, but love covereth all ſins; where hatred being oppoſed to love or charity covering all ſins, muſt alſo be oppoſite to ſtirring up ſtrife, and ſo muſt be the compoſing of our minds, breeding kindneſſe and charity to others, which is done by ſeeing as few faults in them as may be. And thus the ſaying of Pythagoras (who is thought to have had ſome knowledge of the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament) ſeems to be interpretable, Ἡ μὲ εὐσὼς ἁρμονία, ἡ δ' ἔυνοια τ' ἁμαρτίαν ἀποκέλλει, A garment hides the ill proportions of the body, but good will, or charity, hides ſin. But it will be very unreaſonable to affix this ſenſe to this place, which ſpeaks of him that converts another from the evil of his wayes, and ſo ſhall ſave that other's ſoul from death, but cannot fitly be ſaid in the future to breed in himſelf charity to that other, or to look upon his ſins with favour and indulgence. It muſt therefore firſt be remembred, what hath oft elſewhere been noted, that the writers of the New Teſtament do make uſe of phraſes or places in the Old, in other ſenſes then what in the fountain belonged to them, not by way of teſtimony, but by way of accommodation, affixing to the words ſome ſenſe which they will fitly bear, though not that which had originally belonged to them. And then ſecondly, Καλύπτειν ἁμαρτίαν, to hide ſin, is a known phraſe for pardoning or forgiving of ſins. So Pſal. 32. 1. Bleſſed is the man whoſe iniquity is forgiven, and ὧν ἀπεκαλύφθησαν αἱ ἁμαρτίαι, whoſe ſins are thus covered; and ſo it may moſt reaſonably ſignifie here. And then the only queſtion will be, whoſe ſins they are which he that converts another to righteouſneſs ſhall cover, his own or that other man's. That they are not his own, is thought reaſonable; becauſe then a man ſhall be ſaid (or his charity ſhall be ſaid) to cover, that is, to forgive his ſins, which is the work of God only. But that objection is of no force, or if it were of any, it would equally hold againſt a man's covering another's ſins: for neither he nor his charity can forgive another's ſins, in propriety of ſpeaking. And therefore there being a neceſſity to acknowledge ſome figure in the expreſſion, it will be as eaſie by that figure to interpret it of a man's own ſins, That, as in Daniel c. 12. 3. They that turn many to righteouſneſs ſhall ſhine as the ſtars for ever and ever, and as Dan. 4. 27. Nebuchadnezzar is exhorted to break off his iniquities by ſhewing mercy to the poor, and as they that had fallen under the Cenſures of the Church by ſin were, in the antient Church, according to the Apoſtolick rules, to fit themſelves for Abſolution, not only by repenting and reforming their ſins, but by addition of ἀγαθοεργίαι, works of charity and mercy; ſo this great charity of converting any from the errour of his way, which is a means of ſaving the ſoul of the converted alive, ſhould be very acceptable in the ſight of God, and being added to his ſincere repentance for his ſins, how many ſoever he hath committed, ſhould be effectual to the obtaining his pardon, through the mercies of Chriſt under the Goſpel. And as this ſenſe ſeems moſt agreeable to this place, where there is a double encouragement offered to excite that charity; firſt, the intuition of the advantage to the receiver, ſaving his ſoul alive (which includes, and cannot well be improved with the addition of covering, or forgiving, his ſins) and ſecondly of the advantage that devolves to himſelf; ſo it will be found perfectly concordant with the doctrines and interpretations of the antient Church, and no way unreconcileable with the merits and ſatisfaction of Chriſt (by which only it is that God becomes propitious to our beſt performances) or the doctrine of Juſtification by faith, which doth not exclude, but ſuppoſe, the rewarding of our charity. If this be the meaning of this place, there will then be little reaſon to doubt but it is the importance alſo of the ſame words, 1 Pet. 4.8. for charity ſhall cover a multitude of ſins, which are uſed as an argument to the believing Jews to impreſſe on them the practice of Chriſtian charity then, at that time of the approach of God's judgments on the obſtinate perſecuting Jews and Gnoſticks, whoſe impurities, and hating and purſuing of the Orthodox Chriſtians, were ſure to bring vengeance ſuddenly upon them, and ſobriety, and vigilance in prayer, and fervent charity, were the likelieſt means to avert it from any; the latter of which, ſaith the Apoſtle, hath that force in it, as to propitiate God to thoſe that have been formerly guilty of many ſins, ſuppoſing now they have repented and forſaken them.

THE

2. [2]FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL

[†]PETER.

† the Apostle Peter, for the Copies ordinarily read τῦ Ἀποστόλου Π.

2. Πέτρου πρώτη

THE time of writing this first Epistle of S. Peter is ordinarily affirmed to be the 44th. year of Christ, at which time he is supposed to have planted a Church at Rome, and from thence to have wrote this Epistle to the Jewish Christians, which either before their Christianity dwelt out of their own country (see *Act.*2.10.) or, because they were Christians, were driven out of it, Act.11.19. That it was written from Rome, seems evident by the salutation in the close, ch.5.13. where the Συνεκλεκτὴ Βαβυλῶνι fellow-chosen, questionless signifies their fellow-Church of Jewish Christians; and that ἐν Βαβυλῶνι, in Babylon, denotes Rome, see Note on *Revel.*18.2. That S. Peter and other the Apostles were persecuted by Herod Agrippa appears Acts 12.1. and accordingly the Apostles going out of Judæa is placed by Baronius in An. Chr. 43. that is, in the second of Claudius's Empire. That Peter came to Rome in that second of Claudius, is affirmed by Eusebius in Chronico, and in like manner by S. Hierome De script. Eccles. Secundo Claudii anno Simon Petrus Romam pergit, In the second year of Claudius Simon Peter goes to Rome: and so saith Orosius, l.7. c. 6. that at the beginning of Claudius, Peter came to Rome, and converted many there to the faith of Christ, according to that of Epiphanius, that the Church of Rome was founded by Peter and Paul. And so saith * Gaius and Dionysius Bishop of Corinth; the former calling the monuments of those two Apostles τροπαῖα τῶν ταύτῃ ἱδρυσαμένων τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, the trophees of those that built that Church, and the latter calling that Church τὴν ἀπὸ Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου φυτείαν γενομένην, the plantation made by Peter and Paul. All which as they are evidences of Peters having been at Rome, so is that the prime thing doubted of by those later writers which question this date of this Epistle. Agreeably hereunto the principal design of this Epistle is to comfort and confirm those Jewish converts who were thereupon driven from their homes, Acts 8. and from Judæa and Samaria, where at first they were scattered, v.1. driven farther off at length by the malice and persecutions of the obdurate Jews, to Phœnice and Cyprus and Antioch, Act. 11.19. and here to Pontus, Galatia and Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia. Which persecutions for the name and profession of Christ he makes matter of the greatest joy to them, c.1.6. and so again, c.4.13. mixing withall many precepts agreeable to their present condition, especially that of abstaining from carnal lusts, c.2.1. and discharging the offices that belonged to them in their several relations of subjects, c.2.13. of wives, c.3.1. of husbands, v.7. of Bishops in the Church, c.5.1.

Annotations on Chap. I.

V. 2. Sprinkling of the blood] What is meant here by ῥαντισμὸς αἵματος Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus Chriſt, will be diſcernible by obſerving that it is in the ſame caſe, and ſo in conjunction with ὑπακοὴν obedience preceding. By this it appears that it muſt be taken in a Paſſive ſenſe, ſo as they are ſuſceptible of it who are here ſaid to obey, that is, ſo as the believers here, through the ſanctification of the Spirit, ſhall be ſprinkled with that blood. The only queſtion is, what notion of our being ſprinkled with Chriſt's blood is here referred to. For more poſſible notions there are of which the matter is capable. The principal, that in reference to the practice Exod. 24. 8. where the people are ſprinkled with blood, by way of obſignation of the Covenant between God and them: for upon reading of the Covenant in the audience of the people, and upon their profeſſing, All that the Lord hath ſaid we will do, and be obedient, v. 7. it follows, v. 8. Moſes took the blood and ſprinkled it upon the people, and ſaid, Behold the blood of the Covenant which the Lord hath made with you, concerning all theſe words. Were it not for that laſt clauſe, concerning all theſe words, it might ſtill be uncertain what part of the Covenant it was, (whether only that on God's, or that alſo on the peoples part) which was thus ſigned, and conſequently ſignified by the ῥαντισμὸς ſprinkling of blood: but by the uſe of the phraſe, all the words, v. 3. viz. all the words which the Lord hath ſaid, 'tis evident that the peoples part, which is obedience, and not only God's part in making good his promiſes to them, was it that was ſealed, and ſo ſignified by their being ſprinkled with blood by Moſes, and to it is immediately annexed, All that the Lord hath ſaid will we do, and be obedient, v. 7. And Moſes took the blood and ſprinkled it, &c. ver. 8. And to this it is very agreeable that here it is (in the ſame caſe) joined with ὑπακοὴν, obedience and the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus, noting this of Evangelical obedience to be the condition required on our part in this new Covenant, which Chriſt ſealed with his blood, in like manner as that Moſaical Covenant was there ſealed with ſprinkling of blood, and to which he hath both enabled and obliged us by his death, having given himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purifie to himſelf (which is the effect of ſprinkling) a peculiar people, &c. Tit. 2. 14. and ſo we read of this blood of ſprinkling (by which Chriſt's death is typified) that it was the blood of the Covenant which the Lord commanded to you, Heb. 9. 20. a rite to engage our obedience to God. And this ſeems to be the moſt proper notation of the words, and is fully parallel to that of Epheſ. 1. 4. where God is ſaid to have choſen us in Chriſt that we ſhould be holy, &c. Some other notions the phraſe might be capable of, either to ſignifie God's pardon and acceptance, Heb. 9. 22. Rom. 3. 25. (but that will not ſo well agree with the Paſſive acception of the word, looking rather on God, who is the Agent in it, and the blood of Chriſt the meritorious cauſe of it, whereas this being joined with obedience, ſeems to be ſomewhat in us, to which we are enabled and engaged by the blood of Chriſt) or elſe to denote our imitating Chriſt's conſtancy and perſeverance, ſhedding our blood in his cauſe, as he hath given us an example. And thus indeed to be ſprinkled by Chriſt's blood may be a phraſe, figuratively to ſignifie our tranſcribing this bloody copy of his, but yet ſeems not to be any part of the intimation of the ceremony of ſprinkling with blood in Exodus, from which this rather ſeems to be tranſcribed.

Paraphraſe. CHAP. II.

1. Wherefore arming your ſelves againſt the erroneous doctrines and practices of the Gnoſtick hereticks that inſinuate themſelves among you, to infuſe villanie, and all kinde of deceitfulneſſe and hypocriſie, as alſo of malice, and calumniating of others the pureſt Chriſtians,

1 WHerefore laying aſide all * malice and all guile and hypocriſies and envies and all evil ſpeakings,]

* naughtineſſe, κακίαν † So ἀπόθεσθαι is to be rendred, but it may be perhaps ἀποθέσθαι, and then it muſt be read, drink or ſuck in, * the rational pure

2. Behave your ſelves with that ſimplicity which becometh new-born children, ſuck in that pure nouriſhment which by your rulers is afforded you (ſee Rom. 12. a) viz. inſtruction, or Chriſtian doctrine, and that pure from all Jewiſh or heretical mixtures, which may increaſe your Chriſtian ſtature, advance you to an higher pitch of Chriſtianity, and at laſt bring you to ſalvation.

2. As new-born babes † deſire * the a ſincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby: †]

a. λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα † Here the Kings MS. addes εἰς σωτηρίαν unto ſalvation, and ſo the Syriack and Latine.

3. If

3. If so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious:]
3. Which sure you will doe, if you have but once (as David saith of Gods Law, Psal. 34. 9.) tasted how sweet, how much for our advantage it is, which is designed us in the Gospel of Christ;

* rejected ἀποδεδοκιμασμένον † with God elect precious, παρὰ Θεῷ ἐκλεκτὸν ἔντιμον

4. To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but †chosen of God, and precious,]
4. To whom associating or conjoining your selves (by obedience and worship) as to a living, not dead foundation, or corner-stone, rejected indeed by the Jewish Sanhedrim, but in Gods account most choise and esteemed, and meant for the foundation of a visible Church,

* Be ye also built καὶ αὐτοὶ οἰκοδομεῖσθε, or built on him for an holy priesthood, for the King's MS. reads ἐποικοδομεῖσθε and εἰς ἱεράτευμα † put to shame καταισχύνῃ

5. * Ye also as lively stones are built up, a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.]
5. Doe you accordingly as not as dead but living members, join together, not only in inward piety, but in continual assemblies or Church-meetings, of which every Christian is to be a part, and so all together make up a spiritual temple, that is, congregation, to pray unto, and praise God, to perform to him those acts of the Christian sacrifice to which you are as it were consecrated and set apart by God, and which being now offered to God in the name of Christ, or through what he hath suffered and done for us, will be sure to be acceptable to God, without the bodily sacrifices of the Jewes, or observation of their Law.

6. Wherefore [b] it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner-stone, [c] elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be †confounded.]
6. According to that which the Scripture tells us, that in the erecting the new Church under the Gospel, Jesus Christ and his doctrine, in opposition to all other, is appointed by God to be the foundation of the foundation, so that all that is in the Church must be founded and built on him: and whosoever doth sincerely believe, and is truly built on him, shall never fail of his expectation, he shall never miscarry that lays his weight on that foundation: see note on Rom. 9. m.
[b] c.

* is the preciousnesse τὴ τιμὴ

7. Unto you therefore which believe * he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,]
7. To you therefore that are believers this is matter of infinite advantage, but for those that stand out in unbelief, to them belongs the reproach of that prophecy, that he that is refused by the Jewes is honoured by God, and made the sole total foundation of his Church, on which nothing must be built which he hath not taught, no Judaical old or heretical new doctrine must be mingled with it.

8. And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient, whereunto also they were [d] appointed.]
8. But this foundation-stone such an one as should be apt to hurt and mischief many, who shall apostatize and fall off from the faith of Christ through fear of persecution, and by that means be destroyed among the persecuters. And this is no strange thing, but the very same that is prophesied of, and so appears to be part of Gods decree, that they that obey not the Gospel of Christ should be destroied by him, or that the seed sown in stony ground should at the scorching of the Sun wither away, that all carnal professors should be thus tried and discovered by persecution, and so that this corner-stone should be the bruising and ruining of many, who stumble and fall from Christ because Christianity brings sufferings along with it.

† an elect kindred, γένος ἐκλεκτὸν * a people for a possession, † vertues ἀρετὰς

9. But ye are a †chosen generation, a roial priesthood, an holy nation [e], a * peculiar people, that ye should shew forth the † praises of him who hath called you out of darknesse into his marveilous light:]
9. But you are, and so must approve your selves to be, a special sort of men, a kingdome or multitude of priests, set apart and consecrated for the continual serving and daily waiting upon God, a people that being delivered from the dominion of other your former masters, sin, and Satan, and persecuters, and set free to be lords of your selves, with liberty to what Christ commands you, and so kings, must now behave your selves also like so many priests, (those who spent all their time in sacrificing, &c. and so should you) in the performing constant service unto God in the publick assemblies, which God requires of you, as he did the sacrifices of the Levitical priests (see note on Rev. 1. d.) and so a sacred holy nation, (as the whole people of the Jewes were an holy people in one respect, Lev. 25. 23. and as the Levites were in another) a peculiar treasure of Christs for him to preserve first, Mal. 3. 17. then to possesse as his own, that so by this means, by this constant publick serving of him, you may set forth and illustrate Christs powerfull and gracious workings (see note on 2 Pet. 1. a.) who hath wrought so glorious and blessed a change in you:
e.

* the people λαὸς

10. Which in time past were not * a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.]
10. Who at first continued in unbelief among your brethren the Jewes, and so were become a kinde of heathen people, were not at all within the obedience of Christ, the pale of his Church, but now are received into it; you that a long time, while Christ lived here on the earth, had not the happinesse to believe in him, but have found place of repentance since, and are now received into the Church and the favour of God.

11. Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul;]
11. To you therefore that are at this time dispers'd among the nations, c. 1. 1. (see c. 1. 17.) as to so many scattered, travelling persons, who ought of all others to be most wary to avoid dangers, and to behave your selves tenderly as in the sight of strangers, my present exhortation becomes seasonable, to avoid the doctrines and practices of the Gnosticks, and to that end to remember that you are not at home, but in a journey, and so that it is most unseasonable for you at such a time to indulge your selves to the excesses and jollities which men in their own houses or countries do sometimes indulge to, but do not use them in a strange place, or before those they know not; remembring farther the dangerous malignant nature of such lusts, that they were most pernicious to the soul.

* revering you by your good works glorifie

12. Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may * by your good works which they shall [f] behold, glorifie God in the [g] day of visitation.]
12. But that you on the contrary live so as may be of good report among the Gentiles, that they that look on Jewes, not only as persons of another Religion, but also as rebels and malefactors, may see the Christians to be quite otherwise, and by your actions reverence you, and so entertain a good opinion of Christian Religion, which hath such an influence upon you, in making the Christian Jewes so much more regular and meek then the other Jewes are, more quiet under the heathen government which is now over them, and so more capable of good usage under the Emperors, when they send their Proconsuls to suppresse the seditions, then the unbelieving Jewes have appeared to be.
f. g.

† Be subject therefore to every humane creature Τπ-τάγητε οὖν πάσῃ ἀνθρωπίνῃ κτίσει

13. †Submit your selves to every ordinance of man for the Lords sake: whether it be to the King, as supreme;]
13. Be obedient therefore to every heathen governor (see note on Rom. 8. c.) upon obligation of conscience, because he is instituted by God: and this whether to Cesar the Emperor in the first place, as the Supreme;

14. Or unto Governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that doe well.]
14. Or in the next place, and in subordination to him, to Proconsuls and Procurators, by Commission appointed by him, for the keeping of Courts, punishing of malefactors, and rewarding and encouraging the obedient.

15. For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:]
15. For to this doth Christian Religion oblige all, that by subjection to our heathen superiours, and by all other Christian performances (see note on c. 4. f.) we should leave the heathens unable to object any thing against us:

16. As men that are freed by Chriſt from many yokes, but not from that of ſubjection to God or to ſuperiours, and therefore not pretending to any ſuch liberty, nor covering ſedition, &c. under colour of Chriſtianity, as the Gnoſticks did, 1 Tim. 6.

16. As free, and not * uſing your liberty for a cloke of maliciouſneſſe, but as the ſervants of God.]

* having liberty for a covering of wickedneſs, ἔχοντες τὴν ἐπικάλυμμα κακίας τὴν ἐλευθερίαν

17. Give every man the honour and obedience due to him. Love all your fellow-Chriſtians. Fear God; and, in ſubordination to him, pay all obedience to the Emperor.

17. Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the King.]

18. Let all ſervants approve their obedience to their maſters to be ſincere, by performing it not only when they uſe them kindly and favourably, but even when by unjuſt uſage they provoke them to ſome impatience and reſiſtance, for this is the ſeaſon for them to ſhew forth the influence of Chriſtianity upon their hearts.

18. Servants be ſubject to your maſters with all fear, not only to the good and gentle, but alſo to the froward.]

19. And this will be accepted graciouſly and rewarded by God (ſee Luk. 6. 32. and Luk. 1. note k.) if upon ſight of our duty to God we bear with all patience thoſe preſſures which moſt unjuſtly light upon us.

19. For this † is thank-worthy, if a man for conſcience toward God endure grief, ſuffering wrongfully.]

† is or ſhall be a reward χάρις

20. For what great matter is it, worth conſidering or rewarding, what heroical action is it to which honour is thought to be due, if men indure ſubmiſſely thoſe puniſhments which fall juſtly on them for their demerits? But on the other ſide, if when ye have done no ill, and are then by your ſuperiors abuſed and uſed contumeliouſly, if this be born patiently and humbly by you, and do not provoke you to any reſiſtance or return of violence, this is that Chriſtian vertue of meekneſſe, which God will certainly reward in you.

20. For what glory is it, * if when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye ſhall take it patiently? but if when ye do well and ſuffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is † acceptable with God.]

23. And when he was reviled by them, Mat. 26. 67. he was farre from reviling them again; when he was crucified, he gave them not ſo much as an ill word, but prayed his father to forgive them, as many as had any excuſe of ignorance to plead for them, and for all others he remitted them, and all the injuries done him by them, to God's tribunal.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Λογικὸν γάλα

V. 2. Sincere milk.] What λογικὸν γάλα rational milk ſignifies hath been noted on Rom. 12. Note a. that milk, or food, which men, that is, rational creatures, feed on, and which men, rational creatures again, the Apoſtles of Chriſt, afford them for their ſpiritual nouriſhment or inſtruction. Such figurative ſpeeches as theſe are very ordinary, and have no more ſtrangeneſſe in them then νοητὴ or πνευματικὴ τροφὴ, intellectual or ſpiritual food, that is, food to the underſtanding or to the ſpirit; Νοῦς, and λόγος, and πνεῦμα, the underſtanding, and reaſon, and ſpirit being in effect all one, and milk being every where uſed for that inſtruction that is fit for thoſe of younger years, Heb. 5. 12. Agreeable to this figurative expreſſion of rational milk is that of Plato, when he calls Rulers νομῶν καὶ τροφοὶ ἀγέλης ἀνθρωπίνης, feeders and paſtors of the humane herd, this flock of reaſonable creatures which are fed with this rational milk. And ſo in Euſtathius on Homer Ἰλιαδ. ε'. Ἀνδρωπίνῳ ποιμαντικῷ ἀσκήμασι, they that exerciſe this trade of feeding men, (as ſhepheards feed their flocks,) which have therefore ſo ordinarily that title of ποιμένες Paſtors.

b. Περιέχει

V. 6. It is conteined] The word περιέχει is taken notice of by Grammarians as a word fit for the citing any paſſage out of an Author. So in Erotian's Medicinal Lexicon, in the word Κάμωρος, λέξις περιέχουσα is a word which is to be met with in the author and place which he there cites. Here it is uſed Impersonally, as ἀπέχει (ſee Mar. 14. Note d.) and ſo 1 Mac. 15. 2. & 2 Mac. 9. 18. Accordingly περιοχὴ is uſed for any place cited out of the Scripture, Act. 8. 32.

Ἀπέχει Περιοχὴ

c. Ἐκλεκτὸς

Ib. Elect] By occaſion of this word ἐκλεκτὸς elect, in this place, it will not be amiſſe to give an account, once for all, of the uſe of that and the like words generally in the Scripture. To begin with the Old Teſtament firſt; the Hebrew word which muſt eſpecially be taken notice of is בחר probavit, examinavit, elegit, to approve, examine, chuſe. From whence is the Noun בחור, directly anſwerable to ἐκλεκτὸς elect here, taken Adjectively: And therefore Prov. 7. 3. where the Hebrew hath בחר, and our Engliſh render rightly from thence, The Lord trieth the hearts, the Septuagint read ἐκλεκταὶ καρδίαι παρὰ Κυρίῳ, hearts elect before the Lord. This word בחור is from hence taken by them to ſignifie, 1. any choiſe perſon fit for employment, eſpecially for warre, and from thence is uſed 1 Mac. 4. 1. for a choiſe party, ἐκλεκτὴ ἵππου, a thouſand of the choiſe, that is, beſt horſe-men, and Exod. 14. 7. choſen chariots; and ſo the left-handed men, that were ſuch excellent archers, Jud. 20. 16. are ἐκλεκτοὶ choſen men; and Pſal. 78. 31. the choſen men, that is, the ſouldiers, or military men; and accordingly the word doth ſignifie a young man, who is fitteſt for military and ſuch other employments. Thus 1 Sam. 8. 16. בחוריכם we render your goodlieſt young men, (which the Septuagint miſtaking, and reading ק in ſtead of ח, render τὰ βουκόλια ὑμῶν your herds) and Deut. 32. 25. it is clearly taken for young men in oppoſition to maidens, עלמהן ſaith the Targum. But the notation which is moſt primitive and literal to it, is that of choiſe, or choſen, as that notes notes the best, and those that are upon trial found fit to be preferred before others, as every בחור chosen man in Israel, 2 *Sam.*6.1. And David gathered together all the chosen men in Israel, all that were fit for the militia: and indeed by a Metalepsis it was that it came to signifie a young man, because the age was determined, after which (and not before) a man was thought fit for that imployment; and so the choice men, or those of the militia, were consequently those of such an age; and therefore *Num.*11.28. when Joshua is called a servant of Moses מבחוריו (which the Targum reads מעל מיהו of his young men) the Septuagint reads ἐκλεκτὸς αὐτῷ, a choice person about him. Thus again from men is the word brought to be applied to things, as Gen.23.6. במבחר קברינו in the choice of our sepulchres: בשפר, say the Targum, in the fairnesse, that is in the faireſt and best of them. So *Deut.*12.11. your choice vows, or the choice of your vows, and Esay 22.7. the choiceſt valleys, and so Ecclus 24.15. Σμύρνα ἐκλεκτὴ, the choiceſt, or best myrrhe; and (to adde no more) *Isa.*28.16. from whence the words in S. Peter are cited, the λίθος ἐκλεκτὸς, choice stone, here, is there justly rendred a tried stone, the Hebrew בחר signifying this trying and fitting it for the place where it was to be set, viz. for the corner, to which, being the principal place of the whole building, that stone that was truly fit upon trial, is truly said to be a precious corner-stone, in the words following both there and here. Besides בחר, there is also another word very near it, which is oft used in this sense: the Hebrew ברר, which signifying to make pure and clean, signifies also elegit to chuse, and then the Noun ברור from thence is rendred καθαρὸς, ἁγνὸς, and ἐκλεκτὸς pure, clean, elect promiscuously, and elect as that signifies the best of the kind. So ὄρνις ἐκλεκτὴ, a cramm'd fowl, saith Buxtorf, and 2 *Sam.*22.27, with the pure thou shalt be pure, which the Greek reads μετὰ ἐκλεκτοῦ ἔσῃ ἐκλεκτὸς, with the elect thou shalt be elect. As the Arabick עפא which signifies to clarifie and purge, signifies also to chuse, to set apart, to design to an office, as of David, *Psal.*78.70. and of the Disciples, *Act.*1.2. In the New Testament we have the Verb ἐκλέγεσθαι, the Substantive ἐκλογὴ, and the Adjective ἐκλεκτὸς. The Verb signifies to preferre one before another, either in the bestowing of undeserved favours, or designing to an office. In the first sense, *Mar.*13.20. οὓς ἐξελέξατο, they whom God had chosen, that is favoured before others, to wit, the believing Jews, who should be delivered out of that destruction which lay so heavie upon πᾶσα σὰρξ all flesh, that is, the whole Jewish nation: And that the Christians of them were designed to this favour, see *Mat.*24. Note g. out of Josephus, by whom it appears that the siege of Jerusalem by Gallus was unexpectedly raised, by which means all the Christians in the city got out of it to some other place, so that when Titus came some months after to the fatal siege, there was not one Christian remaining in it. So *Joh.*15.16. You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, that is, 'Tis not you that have begun to me, that were first in your expressions of kindnesse and favour to me, but I to you. And so v. 19. I have chosen you out of the world, that is, allowed you this favour of taking you out, discriminating you from the rest of the world, by taking you nearer to my self then I have done other men. So Act. 13.17. speaking of God's favour to the Israelites beyond all other people, he saith, ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, he chose our fathers, and exalted the people, &c. according as they are called ἐκλεκτοὶ his chosen, Ecclus 46. 1. and Jerusalem ἐκλεκτὴ πόλις a chosen city, c.49.7. So 1 Cor.1. 27,28. and in the parallel place, James 2. 5. God hath chosen the foolish, weak, despised things, that is, persons of the world, and τοὺς πτωχοὺς the poor of this world, that is, revealed the mysteries of the Gospel unto them, allowed them that favour above learned, proud Grecians; and so Ephes. 1.4. ἐξελέξατο ἡμᾶς ἐν αὐτῷ, hath chosen us in him, is God's bestowing upon us that favour of being Christians, of revealing his Gospel to us, making known the mysterie in Jesus Christ, v. 9; a favour much beyond any vouchsafed to the former ages. For the second sense of designing, or chusing, to some office, so it is *Lu.*6. 13. ἐκλεξάμενος ἀπ' αὐτῶν δώδεκα, out of the number of Disciples sequestring twelve for Apostles. So *Joh.*6.70. and 13.18. *Act.*1.2, and 24. And so the Apostles designing Stephen to the office of Deacon, ἐξελέξαντο they chose him, Act.6.6. So c.15.7. and so of those that were designed to be sent to Jerusalem, *Act.*15.22, and 25. These are all the places in the New Testament wherein the Verb is used (unlesse those two to another matter, Mary's chusing the better part, and the guests chusing the uppermost places) and in all these the Context shews the meaning and use of it, when it is spoken of God, that it belongs either to some special undeserved favour of God, peculiarly that of revealing the Gospel, or to his designation to some peculiar office, especially that of Apostleship. Proportionable to these two notions of the Verb, is that of the Substantive ἐκλογὴ, in respect of the undeserved favours, freely afforded one before another, so as we are said to chuse when no obligation lies upon us, and to be obliged, when we cannot chuse. So we have κατ' ἐκλογὴν according to election, Rom. 9. 11. where it signifies the free unobliged preferring of the younger before the elder, and κατ' ἐκλογὴν θεοῦ προθέσεως God's purpose in that respect, his free determination to preferre the Jews, that should come from Jacob, before all other people, particularly before Esau's progenie, the Edumæans. So *Rom.*11.5. λεῖμμα κατ' ἐκλογὴν χάριτος, the remnant according to the election of grace, that is, the remnant that should have the favour to be left or reserved, according to the rule observed in the Gospel, the humble, pious Jews, that believed the Gospel, when the rest stood out and were destroyed; which, though a reward of their repentance and faith, was yet an act of free mercy in God, thus to accept of their repentance. And so v. 7. the election hath obtained, that is the believing Jews, the remnant which had that free undeserved favour from God above the rest. And v.28. of the Jews again, that they were κατὰ τὴν ἐκλογὴν ἀγαπητοὶ, beloved according to the election, that is, beloved in respect of the undeserved promises of peculiar favor made to that people for Abraham's sake. So 1 Thess.1.4. ὑπὸ θεοῦ τὴν ἐκλογὴν ὑμῶν, your election from God, that is the great favour of God, so unexpected to the Gentiles, to have Christ and the Gospel made known unto them, and 2 Pet.1.10. where they are advised to all diligence βεβαίαν ποιεῖσθαι to confirm or ascertain to themselves τὴν κλῆσιν καὶ ἐκλογὴν their calling and election, that is, that special favour vouchsafed unto them, to retain to Christ, to be Christians first, and then to be that peculiar remnant to whom those special promises were made, and in whom they should be fulfilled, when all the rest of that people should be destroyed. One only place more there is wherein this word is used, *Act.*9.15. where God saith of Saul, σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς μοί ἐστιν οὗτος, he is to me a vessel of election, which seems to referre to the second notion of chusing, viz. to that office of the Apostleship. Lastly for the Adjective ἐκλεκτὸς, that is proportionable to the use of the word in the Old Testament, for the choicer sort of men approved of by God, preferred before others in that respect; as Mat. 20. 16. and 22.14. Many are called, but few are chosen, ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί, there are many that retain unto Christ, many Christian professors, but few special labourers in the former place; few fit to be received at his table, few penitent sincere believers, in the latter, see Note on Mat. 20. c. And so Luk. 23. 35. where Christ is said by the Jewes to be ὁ Ἐκλεκτὸς θεοῦ, the chosen of God, ὁ ἐκλεκτὸς one that had exactly approved himſelf to God and that in an eminent manner, and ſo ſhould in any reaſon be delivered by him. Thus in this place, where Chriſt is compared to a corner-ſtone, he is called (however he be rejected by men) παρὰ Θεῷ ἐκλεκτὸς, elect with God, v. 4, and 6. a choice approved ſpecial ſtone in the eſtimation of God, and therefore ἔντιμος pretious alſo in both places. And ſo perhaps when the Chriſtians, to whom he writes, are called by him γένος ἐκλεκτὸν a choice ſort of people, v. 9. And ſo all the other phraſes joyned with it doe import. Thus it is frequently uſed, as in the Old Teſtament for a ſouldier, ſo in the New in an Evangelical ſenſe for one of Chriſt's militia, a believer, a Chriſtian, a faithful ſervant of his, as they that are ſuch differ from all others, unbelievers and crucifiers of Chriſt. Thus διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς, Mat. 24. 22, 24, 31. and Mar. 13. 20, 22, 27. Luc. 18. 7. all in the ſame notion, to ſignifie believers or Chriſtian Jewes that had that promiſe, that they ſhould eſcape out of thoſe calamities that fell on that whole nation, the οἱ σωζόμενοι the ſaved, Luc. 13. 23. And an obſervable place there is to this purpoſe in Theophylact on Mat. 22. 14. (though Oecolampadius leave it out in his Tranſlation, yet extant in the Roman Edition) πολλοὺς καλεῖ ὁ Θεὸς, μᾶλλον δὲ πάντας, ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί· ὀλίγοι γὰρ σωζόμενοι διὰ ἀξίους ἐκλεγῆναι παρὰ Θεῷ. ὥστε τοῦ μὲν Θεοῦ τὸ καλεῖν, τὸ δὲ ἐκλέξασθαι γνησίους, ἢ μᾶλλον ἡμέτερόν ἐστι, God calls many, or rather all, but there are few elect: for there are few that eſcape, or are fit to be choſen or approv'd by God: ſo that it is God's part to call, but ours to be elect or not: which ſuppoſes the σωζόμενοι and ἐκλεκτοὶ the ſaved and the elect to be all one, and both thoſe the Chriſtians that Mat. 24. 22. are ſaid σώζεσθαι to eſcape and to be ἐκλεκτοὶ elect, viz. thoſe that in that great tribulation that overwhelmed the Jewes did yet eſcape and ſurvive. Thus again in that general notion for believers and Chriſtians, Rom. 8. 33. Τίς ἐγκαλέσει κατ' ἐκλεκτῶν Θεοῦ; Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods elect? bring any charge againſt the faithful ſervants of Chriſt, the lovers of God, v. 28. So Ruſus ἐκλεκτὸς ἐν Κυρίῳ, elect in the Lord, Rom. 16. 13. a ſpecial believer, certainly without any relation to any particular decree of God's concerning him, which could not appear concerning his perſon, (Of the ἐκλεκτῇ κυρίᾳ the elect Lady, 2 Joh. 1. and her ἐκλεκτῇ ἀδελφῇ elect ſiſter, v. 14. ſee Note on 2 Joh. a.) and therefore muſt be ſo interpreted as to denote that which was diſcernible in him, viz. his faith and Chriſtian behaviour. So ὡς ἐκλεκτοὶ τῷ Θεῷ, as the elect of God, Col. 3. 12. that is, as faithful, approved diſciples and ſervants of his; and 2 Tim. 2. 10. I ſuffer all for the elect, that is, the Chriſtian believers, for the advancement of the Goſpel; and Tit. 1. 1. διὰ πίστιν ἐκλεκτῶν Θεοῦ, for the faith of the elect of God, that is, of the ſincere, converted Chriſtians, or believers, in oppoſition to all the reſt of the unbelieving world, as 1 Tim. 5. 21. ἐκλεκτοὶ ἄγγελοι, the elect Angels, are thoſe that did not apoſtatize, but continued faithfull and obedient to God; and 1 Pet. 1. 1. ἐκλεκτοὶ παρεπίδημοι the elect ſtrangers, that is, the believing Jewes that ſojourned in that countrey. And this ſeems the more clear by Apocal. 17. 14. where κλητοὶ καὶ ἐκλεκτοὶ καὶ πιστοί, the called and elect and faithful, are joyned together as words of the ſame importance; and if there be any difference, then is πιστοὶ faithful to be looked on as an higher degree then ἐκλεκτοὶ elect, as that then κλητοὶ called. For that they ſhould be ſo called to denote the order of time, ἐκλεκτοὶ before πιστοὶ faithful, as Election from the beginning before Faith in time, will not be agreeable to the place, becauſe then κλητοὶ, being called, muſt be in order before Election, which cannot be affirmed. The ſhort is, that the word notes generally ſomewhat of eminence above other men, of difference from them, as the believer or Chriſtian excells and differs from all that are not ſuch, and ſo the ſincere from the formal profeſſor or hypocrite; and that is all the notation of it. Agreeable to which is that of Phavorinus, Ἐκλεκτός ἐστιν, ὁ ἀπὸ πολλῶν, διὰ τὸ ἔχειν αὐτὸν ἔργα τινὰ ἔναντι τοῦ Θεοῦ κρείττω ἄλλων ἐκλεγόμενα, the word ſignifies one that differs from other men, or is preferred before them, becauſe he hath ſome choice works above thoſe others. And in Heſychius, Ἐκλεκτὸς (for which the ordinary Copies read corruptly Ἔκλητος) ἔνδοξος, τίμιος, it notes famous, honourable, a perſon of approved excellence, value and eſteem.

V. 8. Appointed] The word τιθέναι, to put or ſet, is ordinarily uſed for appointing or ordaining, and being applied to God, or ſpoken indefinitely, doth oft ſignifie his Decree or deſtination. Thus Joh. 15. 16. ἔθηκα ὑμᾶς, I have appointed you, as harveſters to goe abroad in all the world, and bring in converts to heaven. So of Chriſt, Act. 13. 47. Τέθεικά σε εἰς φῶς ἐθνῶν, I have ſet, that is appointed or decreed, thee a light for the Gentiles. So 1 Theſſ. 5. 9. Οὐκ ἔθετο ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς εἰς ὀργὴν, ἀλλ' εἰς περιποίησιν σωτηρίας, God hath not ſet us, that is, decreed, determined us, to wrath or deſtruction, (as he doth thoſe whom for their obſtinate courſe in ſin he forſakes, and no farther calls them to repentance) but for the obtaining of ſalvation; that is, hath decreed to call us to the knowledge of the truth by the preaching of the Goſpel, and ſo to repentance and reformation here, the means to attain eternal ſalvation hereafter, if we doe not reſiſt and evacuate his gracious calls and admonitions. And ſo without queſtion it is to be underſtood here, that of the ἀπειθοῦντες τῷ λόγῳ, of them that diſobey the word, or Goſpel, of Chriſt, and ſo προσκόπτουσι fall or bruiſe themſelves, or (if the comma, as it is in the ordinary Copies, be placed after τῷ λόγῳ the word, not before it) προσκόπτουσι λόγῳ, fall and bruiſe themſelves at the word, ἀπειθοῦντες diſobeying and rejecting it when it is preached to them, it may truly be ſaid, εἰς ὃ καὶ ἐτέθησαν, that they were ordained thereunto. And of that there are two poſſible interpretations, both agreeable to analogie of faith; firſt, that the ἀπειθοῦντες, they that diſobey the Goſpel, that ſtand out obſtinately againſt it, ἐτέθησαν, were decreed and appointed by God to ſtumble and fall at that ſtone, that is, to be bruiſed and ruined by this means, to be deſtroyed among the crucifiers, and condemned with them hereafter, it being moſt juſt with God, that they that will not reform and amend at the preaching of the Goſpel, and ſo receive benefit by it, ſhould be for their obſtinacy condemn'd; and ſo much the worſe for it, as the Goſpel is ſaid to be the ſavour of death to them that periſh, or goe on ſtill in their deſtructive courſes, and as Chriſt is ſaid by Simeon Luc. 2. 34. κεῖσθαι εἰς πτῶσιν to be ſet, that is, decreed by God (the ſame that τίθεσθαι to be ſet or ordained here) for the falling of many in Iſrael, that is, of thoſe that believe not on him. This is the moſt obvious ſenſe of the words by referring εἰς ὃ, to which, to προσκόπτουσι τῷ λόγῳ, ſtumble, or fall, at the word, & interpreting the fall of the miſchief, not the ſin, (which is noted by ἀπειθοῦντες diſobeying) that they incurr by this means. But if (as others conceive) the ἀπείθεια diſobedience be that to which they are ſaid to be ordained, yet may that be taken in a commodious ſenſe alſo, That the Goſpel was deſigned by God to be of ſuch a temper, and the profeſſion of it mix'd with ſo many perſecutions, that none of the proud, worldly-minded men (repreſented by the ſtonie and thornie ground in the Parable) none but the humble and honeſt heart could lay hold on it. But the former ſenſe is moſt agreeable to the Context, v. 7. where Chriſt is ſaid to be a ſtone of offence ἀπειθοῦσι to the diſobedient; which muſt needs ſignifie the fall and miſchief of the diſobedient, not their diſobedience ſimply, to be the thing here ſpoken of, and to which they are ſaid to be appointed, ver. 8. However it is clear that here can be no proof or teſtimony of any absolute, irrespective decree of God either for sin, or without sin for punishment: for if sin, disobedience, should be decreed or ordained by God, then disobeying would be a compliance with his ordination or will, and thereby cease to be sin (which is a resisting of his will:) and for punishment, that cannot here be supposed to be without sin, the sin of disobedience, or infidelity, being here named, upon which they are ordained to that punishment, and not without respect unto it.

e. Λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν

V. 9. A peculiar people] What λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν signifies here, must be discerned from Exod. 19. 6. whence it is taken (though the words are removed out of their place, and these, which are there before the royal priesthood, here placed after it.) The Hebrew reads there והייתם לי סגלה, which is literally, you shall be to me a treasure, or κειμήλιον, any thing that is laid up and preserved most carefully. The Greek render it there more according to the sense, ὑμεῖς μοι λαὸς περιούσιος, ye shall be unto me a special, or peculiar, people, as that phrase is used and rendred Tit. 2. 14. And though the Apostle here doth not use that whole phrase, yet he takes λαὸς people from thence, and for the word סגלה, he renders it from Mal. 3. 17. εἰς περιποίησιν for an acquisition, or possession; for so there that speech of God's, אשר אני עשה סגלה, which I make a treasure, or κειμήλιον (that is lay up tenderly and carefully, and, as it follows, spare as one spareth his son that serveth him) is rendred in the Greek, ᾧ ἐγὼ ποιῶ εἰς περιποίησιν, which I make for an acquisition, or treasure. What the word περιποίησις signifies hath been shewed on Heb. 10. d. viz. the same with σωτηρία saving or preserving; and so it perfectly agrees with the Hebrew סגלה, which is a jewel to be preserved, or kept, most safely: and so λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν are those whom God means to keep most charily, as his dearest children or most valued treasure: and so that is the meaning of the whole place here, that whereas other temporarie believers, according to the purport of the seed on the stonie ground in the parable, doe fall off from Christ in time of persecution, and so, by complying with the persecuters, bring certain destruction on themselves, even in this world, take part in that ruine of the Jewes; the faithful persevering Christians are most carefully preserved by God, and rescued out of the common destruction of Jewes and Gnosticks, and eternally crowned afterward. And the consequent of this their preservation is the exaltation of the glory of God by this means, who hath thus powerfully rescued them out of that unbelief, (wherein the generality of the Jewes lie immersed) and then magnified his providence in securing them; as it follows here, that ye may set forth, &c. See Note on Ephes. 2. c.

Περιούσιος λαὸς

f. Ἐποπτεύσαντες

V. 12. Behold] The word ἐποπτεύσαντες in this place may probably signifie more then looking on; because first, that will not so well agree with ἐκ καλῶν ἔργων by your good works, and the supplying it by which they shall behold, supposeth ἐκ καλῶν ἔργων by your good works to belong to δοξάζωσι glorifie following, whereas it is evidently joyned with ἐποπτεύσαντες. Secondly, ἐποπτεύειν to behold is c. 3. 2. put with an Accusative case after it, ἐποπτεύσαντες ἀναστροφὴν, beholding your conversation. Hesychius hath a word near unto this, ἐπόπτης, which he renders ἐυλαβὴς revere; and ὑποπτεύειν, proportionable to the Latine suspicere (looking on the ground, to note modesty and reverence) is ordinarily taken in that sense: And that which seems most probable is, that either ἐποπτεύειν may have that sense also, or else be by the scribe mistaken for one of those, and so be best rendred revering you or looking with reverence upon you.

g. Ἡμέρᾳ ἐπισκοπῆς

Ib. Day of visitation] What the day of visitation signifies here, may be a matter of some question, but that in part resolved by the use of the same phrase, Isa. 10. 3. What will ye doe in the day of visitation, and the desolation which shall come from farre? where it is evident that the day of visitation, and the coming of desolation, or destruction, are all one. So to visit signifies to punish, to avenge, very frequently in the Prophets, Shall I not visit for this? shall I not be avenged, &c. and, I will visit their offences with a rod. And so the Bishops title, Ἐπίσκοπος Visiter, may fitly be given him in respect of the rod or censures, the Ecclesiastical punishments intrusted to him, which are εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, for destruction of the flesh, and εἰς καθαίρεσιν for excision. This then being premised the only difficulty will be, what day of vengeance this was that here is meant. And the Context seems sufficient to answer that. For having admonished the Christian Jewes to behave themselves honestly among the Gentiles, that they may not speak against them as evil doers, and presently specifying wherein this honest conversation consisted, in submitting to, and obeying their heathen Governours, ver. 13. this evidently referres to the frequent seditions that were stirred up among the Jewes against the Roman yoke, which made them look'd on by their Procurators and the Emperors as unquiet, turbulent people, and brought the Roman armies and destructions upon them. And so against this it is that he warns the Jewes Christians, that they meddle not with them that are given to changes joyn not with the seditious, and that upon this motive, that by so doing, by being found quiet, obedient subjects, when this vengeance comes upon the seditious, the heathens may observe the difference betwixt believing and unbelieving Jewes, the first very good, the second very ill subjects, and so have a good opinion of that religion that hath wrought so much good upon them, (and perhaps be attracted to Christianity, when they come to destroy the Jewes.) And thus indeed it happened, that presently after Titus's destroying of the Jewes, the Christians had favour from the Emperors, liberty for their assemblies, halcyonian daies bestowed on them. The Syriack here read in the day of temptation, that is, of affliction coming on the Nation, the falling of which upon the obdurate unbelieving Jewes, and the escaping of the Christians (as most remarkably they did by Gallus's raising the siege, and the Christians going out, and flying to Pella,) could not but be taken notice of by the heathens, and so be means of their acknowledging of God's good providence and mercy toward the Christians, and glorifying God for this work of his. And so this is the full importance of this place.

Ἐπίσκοπος

h. Ἀναφέρειν

V. 24. Bare our sins] Ἀναφέρειν is to carry up, to bear to an higher place: and because the θυσιαστήριον or altar was such, it therefore signifies to offer up a victime there Heb. 7. 27. Jam. 2. 21. but here being joyned (not, as there, with θυσίας sacrifices, but) with ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν our sins, and ἐπὶ ξύλον to, or upon, the crosse, (which was an high place also, and therefore his crucifixion is expressed by ὑψωθῆναι being lifted up or exalted) it must therefore here signifie to bear, or carry up, our sins thither, which is a phrase for suffering the punishments of sin, making expiation for them; as Num. 14. 33. where the Hebrew read ונשאו את, וזנותיכם and they shall bear, or carry, your fornications, the Chaldee render it ויקבלון & suscipient, and they shall undergoe, that is, literally ἀναφέρειν, which the most learned P. Fagius renders, luent pœnas peccatorum vestrorum, they shall bear the punishments of your sins. Thus βαστάζειν κρίμα Gal. 5. 10. to bear the judgment, is to be punished for sin, and Ezek. 18. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, that is, be punished for it.

CHAP. III.

1. And as there is one obedience and subjection due from subjects and servants to their Kings and Masters, c. 2. 13, 18. so there is another due from wives to their husbands, which ought to be with so winning an humility and kindness, that the husbands that are not converted to Christianity by the Gospel preached to them, may by the enamouring behaviour of their wives, which they are taught by Christianity, be, without any more preaching, wrought on, and converted to the faith,

1. Likewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands, that if any obey not the word, they also without the word may be *wone by the conversation of the wives,]

* gained κερδηθήσονται

2. When they observe your modesty and chastity, joined also with all due respect and reverence to your husbands, v. 5, 6. or, Beholding that modesty in you, which the fear of God, Christian religion doth infuse into you.

2. While they behold your chast conversation † coupled with fear.]

† which is in or with fear τὴν ἐν φόβῳ

3. And for your attire, that which is likely to become you best, is not that external bravery of jewels and gay clothes;

3. Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of * gold, or of putting on of apparel:]

* gold chains χρυσίων

4. But the inward secret invisible beauty of the heart, made up of incorruptible materials, meekness, &c. whereas all those external are fading and corruptible; or consisting in the truth and sincerity and constancy of the meek and quiet spirit; meek, in a lowly opinion of your selves, and quiet, in a contented enjoying of what God sends, without disquieting or disturbing the peace of the family (as in greater societies, emulation, ambition, covetousness, are the disturbing and shaking of whole Kingdoms:) and this, as it is the greatest ornament in the eyes of men, so is it most highly valued and rewarded in the sight of God.

a, b. 4. But let it be the [a] hidden man of the heart, † in that which is [b] not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.]

† in the sincerity of a meek

5. For after this manner of external simplicity of attire and inward meekness, the Saintly women of antient times, that were taken notice of for their piety, did beautifie and set out themselves, viz. living in obedience to their husbands.

5. For after this manner in the old time the holy women also who trusted in God adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own husbands.]

6. Thus did Sarah live in obedience to her husband, calling him by a title of honour, not equality: to whom you shall be like; as children to a mother, if you discharge a good conscience in all the duties of life, and be not by any fear (to which your sex is subject) driven out of your duty.

6. Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, and called him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid * with any amazement.]

* of any terror πτόησιν

c, d, e. 7. Let the husbands in like manner live conjugally with their wives, and behave themselves toward them as Christianity requires of them, or as the mystical understanding of the story of their creation directs, providing for them that they want nothing, because they are not so able to provide for themselves, and considering that they are by God designed to be co-partners with them of all the good things of this life, which God bestowes in common on them, that so they may also joyn efficaciously in prayers to God; first, as having this perfect union and community of every thing, the want of which would be some hinderance to the joint performance of that duty of prayer; and secondly, that being provided for by the husband, the wife may have no distractions and solicitudes for the world, which are most apt to disturb her prayers also.

7. Likewise ye husbands, dwell with them [c] according to knowledge, giving [d] honour unto the wife as to the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the [e] grace of life, that your prayers be not hindred.]

8. In brief, or to summe up all, Let this union of minds be not onely between husbands and wives, but among all Christians whatsoever, and let that expresse it self in a fellow-feeling of one anothers afflictions, in love to all the brethren, c. 2. 17. in tenderness of kindness, to do good to all that stand in any need of it, in humble, courteous, friendly behaviour toward all:

8. Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; † love as brethren, be pitiful, be * courteous:]

† lovers of the brethren φιλάδελφοι

* or humble, for the King's MS. reads ταπεινόφρονες, and some Latine Copies humiles

9. Never permitting your selves in the least degree to act or meditate revenge on any that hath been most injurious to you, remembring and considering the example given you by Christ, and the obligation that lies on you as Christians, Mat. 5. 44. that so by doing good and blessing others, you may receive a blessing from God in this and in another life.

9. Not rendring evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise blessing, knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye † should inherit a blessing.]

† may inherit blessing ἵνα εὐλογίαν

10. According to that of the Psalmist, Psalm 34. 12. That the onely way to obtain the blessings of this life, and so now under the Gospel, of another, is observing strict rules of charity and justice,

12. For God looks propitiously upon all his obedient servants, but for all wicked men he sets himself as an enemy against them.

13. And who is he that will harm you, if ye be * followers of that which is good?]

* or, Zelots, for the King's MS. reads ζηλωταὶ

14. But if (as sometimes it will fall out) you do suffer for this very thing, for doing good, count this no other then a blessing; and therefore whatsoever danger you are theatned with by the power of your persecuters, be not afraid, or disturbed with it.

14. But and if ye suffer for righteousness sake, happy are ye; and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled.]

15. But be thankfull to God for all, or set up God in your hearts as your God and Lord, and whensoever there is occasion, confesse him before men, and when you are asked, give an account of the hope and faith you professe, with all meekness to their authority, if they be your superiours, the Kings and Magistrates which are set over you, and with all care to approve your selves to God, see Phil. 2. c.

15. But sanctifie the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready alwaies to give * an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear:]

17. For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing then for evil doing.]

17. For if it please God that a man suffer innocently, there is no matter of sorrow in that: there is much more danger, that a man by desiring to avoid that, should fall into some evil, and then suffer justly for that, and then that will be a sad thing indeed, without any allay or matter of comfort in it.

18. For Christ is an example of the former in his dying for sins, not his own but ours, he being righteous died for us who are unrighteous (that when we were aliens and enemies to God, he might reconcile us to him, and give us authority to approach him;) wherein yet for our example and comfort it must be observed, that though as a man clothed in our flesh, he was put to death, and that innocently, to purchase redemption for us, yet by the power of God in him he was most gloriously raised from the dead (see c. 1. 11.) and shall consequently, by raising and rescuing us out of the present sufferings, and destroying all obdurate sinners, shew forth wonderful evidences of power and life.

19. By which also he went and preached unto the f spirits in prison,]

19. The very same in effect that of old he did at the time in which, beyond all others, he shewed himself in power and majesty against his enemies, but withall in great mercy and deliverance to his obedient servants that adhered to him: I mean in the dayes of the old world, when by Noah, that preacher of righteousnesse, he gave those treatable warnings to them that made no use of the light of nature in their hearts, to the spirits or souls of those that were then alive before the Floud, which God had given them with impressions of good and evill; but through their customes of sin were as a sword put up in a sheath; laid up (as God complains Gen. 6. 3.) in their bodies unprofitably: f.

* of old ποτὲ † or, when the long-suffering, for the King's MS. reads ὅτε ἀπεξεδέχετο * souls ψυχαὶ † delivered in the midst of, or through the water: see note on Luk. 13. b. and on 2 Pet. 3. d.

20. Which * sometime were g disobedient, † when once the long-suffering of God waited in the dayes of Noah, while the Ark was a preparing; wherein few, that is, eight * persons, were † saved by water.]

20. Those men, I say, at that time, which living in all uncleanness, believed not the preaching of Noah, nor heeded his building the Ark; (by which yet 'twas clear there should be a deluge, and very few escape or be saved in it) when God gave them that fair and merciful warning and call to repentance. g.

* The antitype of which, baptism, now † not of the flesh, the putting away of filth ἀπόθεσις ῥύπου * inquiring to God) ἐπερώτημα εἰς θεὸν

21. * h The like figure whereunto, even Baptism, doth also save us, († not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the *answer of a good conscience towards God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ,]

21. To all which we have now the direct parallel, as in the violence, such as Gen. 6. 11. (the wicked devouring and persecuting the righteous) and in the Gnostick pollutions, answerable to the corrupting themselves before God, v. 12. (an effect of what was done v. 2.) so in God's warning and denouncing of judgments, and shewing a way to the righteous that stick close to him to escape, to wit, the renouncing of those heathen sins noted by Baptism, that antitype to the Ark in the water, keeping men safe from being drowned (I mean not that outward part of baptism alone, which is but the cleansing of the body, but (that which is signified by it, as it is the Sacrament of initiation) the seeking to God as to the oracle for the direction of the whole future life (see note on Rom. 10. f.) and the undertaking faithfully to perform those directions) delivering first out of the deluge of sin, and then of destruction attending it; and this, I say, as an eminent effect of the resurrection of Christ, who rose on purpose to turn all that will be wrought on, from their iniquities, Act. 3. 26. and so bring destruction and vengeance on all others: h.

† Who is at the right hand of God being gone to heaven, Ὃς ἐστιν ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ Θεοῦ πορευθεὶς εἰς οὐρανὸν

22. † Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God, Angels and Authorities and Powers being made subject unto him.]

22. Who since that resurrection is now ascended to heaven, to undertake the ruling of all things (all power both of Angels and men being given unto him) and to subdue and bring down the disobedient of both sorts, the very devils and the heathen persecuters (as the villany and violence of the old world was brought down by God in the deluge) so far at least, that whatever befalls us from them, shall be rather to our advantage then otherwise, (which was the thing the Apostle had to prove by the example of Christ, v. 17. and is now resumed and proceeded in, c. 4. 1.)

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Κρυπτὸς καρδίας ἄνθρωπος

V. 4. Hidden man of the heart] Κρυπτὸς καρδίας ἄνθρωπος is a phrase made up of two Hebraisms. 1. τὸ κρυπτὸν καρδίας, the hidden, or secret, of the heart, is an Hebrew form of speech; as when Psal. 51. 8. the Original hath בסתם in clauso, secretly thou hast made wisdome known to me, the Targum read בטמיר לבא in the hidden of the heart, that is, in the heart which is hidden. Then for κρυπτὸς ἄνθρωπος the hidden man, that is by the same analogy that παλαιὸς ἄνθρωπος the old man, and καινὸς ἄνθρωπος the new man, and καινὴ κτίσις the new creature, as they signifie continuing in sin and renovation of life, and ὁ ἔσω ἄνθρωπος, the inner man, that is, the mind of man, opposite to the carnal or sensitive appetite; & so κρυπτὸς καρδίας ἄνθρωπος the hidden man of the heart shall be no more then its opposition to ὁ ἔξω ἄνθρωπος the outward, &c. v. 3. will inforce, viz. the inward invisible accomplishments or beauty of the heart, according to that of the Poet, Παλαιὸς ἄνθρωπος. Καινὸς ἄνθρωπος Καινὴ κτίσις ὁ Ἔσω ἄνθρωπος.

Γυναικὶ κόσμος ὁ τρόπος, κ' ὁ χρυσία, behaviour, not golden ornaments, are the setting out of a woman.

b. τὸ ἀφθαρτον ἀφθαρσία

1b. Not corruptible] Τὸ ἄφθαρτον incorruptible here may signifie as ἀφθαρσία incorruptibleness, Eph. 6. 24. the durableness and constancy of the vertue spoken of, that will not be corrupted or debauched by any temptations to the contrary, and this proceeding from the sincerity and simplicity of the affection at the present, which is likely to make it durable; as in nature the more simple and uncompounded things are, the lesse they are corruptible, whereas the double principle renders every thing the more liable to corruption: and therefore the Scholiast on Homer gives the reason why the plague coming in the army

Ἡμιόνους δὲ πρῶτον ——

seized first upon the mules, which are a mix'd species, made up of the horse and the asse; διὰ διφθορὸν γὰρ πᾶν τοῦτο, for such creatures, saith he, are most subject to corruption and infection of all others. But another notion there is of which the phrase is capable, in opposition to the χρυσία, &c. gold chains and ornaments v. 3. for those, though pretious, are corruptible, and therefore ch. 1. 8. silver and gold are the instances χρυσία of the φθαρτὰ corruptible things. And in opposition to those, ἐν ἀφθάρτῳ in the incorruptible, &c. will here signifie that incorruptible ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, so much more valuable then gold.

c. κ᾽ γνῶσιν

V. 7. According to knowledge] That κ᾽ γνῶσιν, according to knowledge, doth here more probably denote that knowledge of duty by which a Christian's life and actions must be directed, is the opinion of Hugo Grotius, who applies to this sense those other places, Rom. 15. 14. filled with all knowledge, able to instruct others, and 1 Cor. 1. 5. inriched in all knowledge, and 2 Cor. 6. b. in purity and in knowledge. To this it may perhaps be fit to add (what hath been noted 1 Cor. 1. Note c. and will again be enlarged on 2 Pet. 1. c.) that the word γνῶσις knowledge hath a critical notion in these Books, for a special χάρισμα or gift of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 8. viz. that sort of Christian knowledge which consists in explaining of parables or mysterious expressions in Scripture. And that may be thus appliable to this place; The duty of the husband toward the wife is best to be learned from the mystical explication of the words, and storie of the creation of the man and woman, Gen. 1. 27. God created them male and female, and blessed them, and said unto them, Be fruitfull and multiply, and repleniſh the earth, and subdue it, and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the aire, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth. And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed, to you it shall be for meat. And c. 2. 22. God took out one of Adam's ribs, and made it a woman; And Adam said, This is now bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh,—— Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh. That by this rule of the Creation the Christian doctrine of the duties of husbands and wives is regulated, appears Mat. 19. 4. where to that question about Divorces Christ answers, Have ye not read that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, &c. What therefore God hath joined together, let no man put asunder. And so Mar. 10. 6. So 1 Cor. 6. 16. What, know you not (making this a special piece of knowledge) that he which is joined to an harlot is one body with the harlot? for they two, saith he, shall be one flesh. And Ephes. 5. 31. having said, For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined to his wife, and they two shall be one flesh, he adds, v. 32. This is a great mysterie— collecting mysteriously (or κ᾽ γνῶσιν, according to knowledge, that is, by the skill of interpreting mysteries of Scriptures) all the conjugal love and union, as between husband and wife, so between Christ and his Church, from that one passage in the Creation. So 1 Cor. 11. 8. to prove that the wife is to be covered, as a token of her subjection to her husband, he saith, For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man; neither was the man created for the woman, but the woman for the man. All which are but conclusions drawn by this γνῶσις or mystical explication, from those passages in the creation of man and woman. And so it may be very fitly affirmed here of the several parts of the husbands duty to the wife, they are all evidently conclusible (κ᾽ γνῶσιν according to knowledge, or by explication of the hidden sense) from the words in the Creation. First, συνοικοῦντες cohabiting (contrary to the infusions of the Hereticks falsly called Gnosticks) is the interpretation of the first part of Gods blessing, Gen. 1. 28. in these words, Be fruitfull and multiply, and again of their two being one flesh. And this Plato himself appears to have learned from the storie of the Creation, writing in Convivio and his Dialogue περὶ ἔρωτος, that antiently male and female were put together in one body, and were after by Jupiter cut asunder; concluding, ἕκας ὃν ἡμῶν ὅτιν ἀνθρώπου σύμβολον, every one of us is the share of a man, ἅτε τετμημένον, ὥσπερ αἱ ψῆτται ἐξ ἑνὸς δύο, cut asunder, like the soleſishes, made two of one: and this is the reason, saith he, that every one seeks out and desires a wife, τὴ ἑαυτῆ ἕκας σύμβολον, every one the other part of him, ὅπ᾽ ἐγχειρῶν ποιῆσαι ἓν ἐκ δυοῖν, καὶ ἰάσασθαι τὴν φύσιν, endeavouring to reunite the divided parts, to make one of two, and so to cure the dismembred nature. To which fable S. Chrysostome referres, * when he saith of man and woman, ὥσπερ ἡμίτομα δύο εἰσὶ, they are as two halves cut asunder. Secondly, The womans being taken out of the mans side, doth, not only with the Jewes in theirs, but with Christ and his Apostles in their Christian Cabala, signifie that the woman is dependent of the man, unable to subsist without him; from whence it follows here, that he must provide for her honour or maintenance, as being the weaker vessel (see Note d) Thirdly, The womans being joined with the man in the dominion over the creatures, Gods having given the fruit of the earth for food to them both in common or equally, Gen. 1. 28, 29. is a direct foundation of what is here added, that they are συγκληρονόμοι coheirs of the gift of life, as ζωὴ life signifies the necessaries of life, of which therefore the wife is in all reason to partake with him: or if ζωὴ be taken for life it self, then it belongs to the Creation, male and female created he them; which is again a mystical proof or argument of conviction, that they that partake of life equally, should also partake of the necessaries of life. To which we shall not need to adde a third acception of ζωὴ life for eternal or everlasting life, which seems not to be looked on here. See Note e.

* Tom. 4 p. 157. li. 23.

Ζωὴ

Ib. Honour] The word τιμὴ ordinarily signifies maintenance: so 1 Tim. 5. 3. τὰς χήρας τίμα honour, that is, maintain, relieve, the widows; and so when the ruling elder is said to be worthy of double honour, 1 Tim. 5. 17. that denotes such a proportion of maintenance above others as was wont to belong to the elder brother in the family. So Act. 28. 10. of the Barbarians πολλαῖς τιμαῖς ἐτίμησ᾽ ἡμᾶς, they honoured us with many honours, that is, made us many entertainments when we were there, καὶ ἀναγομένοις ἐπέθεντο τὰ πρὸς τὴν χρείαν, and when we went away, they brought us in all things for our use. So in Cicero, Medico honos debetur, honour is due to a Physitian, that is, a reward or fee. And so Aristotle, Rhet. l. 1. c. 5. among the parts of τιμὴ honour, reckons δῶρα τὰ παρ᾽ ἑκάστοις τίμια, gifts, honorarie donatives, καὶ τὸ δῶρον ὅτι κλήσις καὶ δόσις, καὶ τιμῆς σημεῖον, for a gift is the giving a possession, and a signe of honour. So Num. 22. 37. Am not I able to honour thee? that is, to give thee mercedem a reward, saith S. Hieronme: for so the Hebrew כבד signifies both honour and reward, and also the necessaries or provisions in an army (opes, pecudes, supellectilem omnem, wealth, cattel, all kind of provision, saith Schindler) Jud. 18. 21. And so as the Hebrew בזה signifies both to despise, and to take no care of; so to take care of, to provide for any, is expressed by honouring. So Mat. 15. 6. and shall not honour his father, &c. that is, shall afford him no maintenance or relief, see 1 Tim. 5. d. And so here ὑπηρέτην τιμὴν to afford supplies or maintenance to the wife, as being the weaker vessel, taken out of, and depending on him for the necessities of life.

d. Τιμὴ

Ib. Grace of life] The several notions of the word χάρις grace in the Sacred dialect have been often taken notice of. See Note on Luk. 1 k. Act. 2. f. Heb. 13. d. Act. 18. e. All of them springing from that primarie notion of it for charity and liberality. Thus is the word used 1 Cor. 16. 3. τὴν χάριν ὑμῶν, your charity or liberality to the poor Christians. So Ecclus 17. 22.

e. Χάρις ζωῆς

ἡ χάεις, &c. the charity of a man, and c. 20. 13. χάεις ἄλλες μωρῶν the charities of fools; for ſo it follows v. 14. The gift of a fool, &c. and chap. 40. 17. it is rendred bountifulneſſe. Thus in Ariſtotle χάεις is defined ὅταν τις ἀπεργῇ τὸ βοηθῆ τῷ δεομένῳ, μὴ ἀντί τινος μηδ' ἵνα τι ἀπῇ τῷ ἀπεργάσηται, ἀλλὰ ἵνα τῷ ἐκείνῳ τι, Rhet. l. 2. c. 7. When any man relieves him that wants, not that he himſelf may gain any thing by it, but only that the other may. Where the Anonymous Scholiaſt expounds it χάειν, ἤτοι δωρεάν, Grace, that is, gift; and ſo Heſychius, χάρις, δωρεά. So in Callimachus, ὡς Δῆλον,

Σώζεο, μὴ σύ γ' ἐμῆο πάθῃς κακὸν οὕνεκα, τῆσδε
Αἶ' ἐλεημοσύνης, χάεσσι δέ σοι ἔτι δμοιβή.

I wiſh you may ſuffer no ill for this mercy to me, but that you may be rewarded for your Charity: where χάεις is clearly interpreted by almes or mercy. So 2 Cor. 8. 1, & 4. 'tis clearly uſed for a gift or liberal beneficence to the poor. Thus in this Epiſtle, c. 4. 18. ποικίλη χάεις Θεῦ the manifold grace of God, is God's liberality of divers kinds, particularly the wealth that he hath given to men, as to ſtewards, to diſtribute to them that ſtand in need of it; and at the beginning of the verſe it is called χάεισμα, Ἕκας καθὼς ἔλαβε χάεισμα, Every man as he hath received wealth, or any other ſuch gift of God. So the grace of God, ſo often mentioned, is the mercy and gift of God; as in the Benedictions, The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, all one with ἀγάπη God's love, and κοινωνία communication after it. So Joh. 1. 16 we have received χάειν grace, mercy, liberal effuſion of goodneſſe, ἀντὶ χάεις, in reſpect of (and in proportion to) his great goodneſſe, and mercy, and abundant charity to us, mentioned before, v. 14. and after, v. 17. where the grace of Chriſt is ſet oppoſite to the ſtrictneſſe of the Law, which hath nothing of mercy in it. Agreeable to this notion of χάεις, as it ſignifies an act of this mercy in God, that is, a gift, is the uſe of it in this place, where the husbands are commanded todiſtribute to their wives all things that they ſtand in need of, ὡς συγκληρονόμοι χάεις ζωῆς as copartners of the gift of life: that is, the wife and the husband are joined together in receiving from God that largeſſe of his, whether it be ζωῆς, as that ſignifies life it ſelf, as we know it was in the Creation, God equally diſtributed this gift of life to them; or as it notes the comforts and neceſſaries of life, the wife as well as the husband hath right of inheritance from God to all the good things of this life, as having equally dominion given to them both over the fiſh, and fowle, and beaſts, and hearbs, and trees, Gen. 1. 28. all which are given them for meat, v. 29.

χάειν ἀντὶ χάεις

f. πνεύμασι ἐν φυλακῇ

V. 19. Spirits in priſon] For the explicating of this very obſcure place, the beſt riſe will be that which S. Hierome on Iſaiah hath ſuggeſted to us, by looking on the words of God to Noah concerning the ſins of the old world, and his judgments deſigned againſt them, Gen. 6. 3. where conſidering Noah as a prophet (and preacher of repentance to the old world) it will not be ſtrange if the expreſſion be prophetical and figurative. The Hebrew hath it thus, לא ידון רוחי באדם, which the ordinary Engliſh render, My ſpirit ſhall not alwaies ſtrive with man, the Greek οὐ καταμενεῖ πνεῦμά μου ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τούτοις, my Spirit ſhall not abide in theſe men, perhaps reading לא ילין from לון to lodge, or abide. The Engliſh render the Hebrew ידון, as if it came from דון, diſceptavit, judicio contendit, to contend, or goe to law; but the word comes from נדן, which ſignifies a ſheath, 1 Chron. 21. 27. and is uſed for a body, Dan. 7. 15. my ſpirit in the midſt of my body, as being the ſheath or receptacle of the ſoul: and ſo the writers of the Talmud ordinarily uſe it, and Tertullian De reſurrect. Caro vagina afflatûs Dei, Fleſh is the ſheath of the breath of God, no doubt referring to this place; and accordingly לא ידון is literally to be rendred, ſhall not abide as a ſword, &c. in a ſheath. For the removing all improbableneſſe of thus reading ידון (not ילין pernoctabit) and taking it in the notion of abiding, or continuing, in fleſh, and not of ſtriving, as the Interlinear and our Engliſh render it, and as ידין indeed would require to be rendred, I ſhall onely adde two things; firſt, That the antient Interpreters with one accord agree in the ſenſe of abiding or inhabiting. The Chaldee read, לא יתקים דרא בישא הדין קדמי לעלם, This evil generation ſhall not alwaies remain before me: the Syriack and Arabick, My ſpirit ſhall not dwell in man for ever: the LXXII. as we ſaid, οὐ μὴ καταμείνῃ, ſhall not abide; and ſo the Latine, non permanebit, ſhall not abide. This is a ſtrong argument, that they who, when they meet with ידין, uniformly render it κρινῶ, &c. by words of judging, yet rendring this in ſo diſtant a manner, did not read that word, or in that ſenſe, but ידון as all Copies have it, in a notion of abiding, or being in another. And although the Scripture of the Old Teſtament give us no farther inſight into this word then that once we finde נדן for a ſheath of a ſword, once for a body of a man; yet by theſe ſo diſtant notions of it, we have reaſon to ſuppoſe that there was ſome original comprehenſive notion of it belonging to more, or elſe it could not have been applied, in the Chronicles and in Daniel, to theſe two ſo diſtant particulars. A ſheath and a body differ much the one from the other, yet agree in this, that as one is the repoſitory or abiding-place of the ſword, into which it is put, ſo the other is of the ſoul; and from this agreement no doubt it is, that they are expreſs'd by the ſame word. And then it would be very ſtrange, if that word, thus common to them, ſhould not natively ſignifie that wherein they thus agree, viz. abiding, or being put in, or kept in, or confined to ſuch a place, or ſome ſuch thing. 'Tis evident that many Hebrew words are of a farre greater latitude of ſignification and comprehenſiveneſſe then we can by the uſe of them in the Bible (which is but a volume of a narrow compaſſe) diſcerne or conjecture, as appears eſpecially by the uſe of them in Arabick books, which language is certainly but a dialect derived from the Hebrew. And therefore it is not unreaſonable on the grounds premiſed, and thoſe more then obſcure indications in the Bible which we have of it, that this ſhould be the native meaning of the Verb, though in other places of the Bible we doe not exactly meet with it. The ſecond thing is, that though ילין were not the reading, nor by the LXXII. and the other interpreters believed to be ſo, yet 'tis ſo ordinary for words of affinity in ſound or writing to have a nearneſſe of ſignification, that theſe Interpreters, which did not alwaies render literally, but oft by way of Paraphraſe, might probably enough have an eye to the notion of ילין for abiding, and ſo render it καταμένειν to remain, or abide, for which in this matter Saint James uſeth κατοικεῖν to ſojourne, or abide, as in an Inne, for a night, Jam. 4. 5. for after this manner of liberty it is, that the Jeruſalem Targum on this verſe evidently takes in both the interpretations of ידון and ידין. In the latter ſenſe from דון to judge, their Paraphraſe thus begins, Non adjudicabuntur generationes quæ futuræ ſunt poſt generationem in diluvio perditioni, vaſtationi aut deletioni univerſali, The generations which ſhall be after the generation of the flood ſhall not be adjudged to an univerſal perdition, vaſtation, or blotting out. A truth indeed ſecured by Gods promiſes at large, chap. 8. 21. and 9. 11. but no way pertinent to this place, where the Deluge it ſelf is threatned. Onely on occaſion of the affinity in ſound and writing of לא ידין not judging, here, to לא ידון, this part of the Paraphraſe, though aliene to the place, ſeems to be begotten. But then for the former, as the words are undoubtedly read

לא

לא ידון רוחי, so the Paraphrase proceeds in relation to them, Annon spiritum meum filiis hominum indidi? Have I not put my spirit into the sonnes of men? an evident proof of their understanding ידון in a notion of putting one thing into another, which consequently may be resolved to be the general acception of the active Verb, and then that which is so put doth abide in it, as in a repositorie of some sort or other; such is a sheath to a sword, a prison to him that is put into it, a cabinet to that which is laid up in it, the body to the soul, as long as the man lives. As for רוחי my spirit or breath, that sure is that breath breathed by God into man, Gen. 2. 7. by which he became a living soul (see Jam. 4. a.) Spiritum meum filiis hominum indidi, I have given my breath, or spirit, (afflatus Dei in Tertullian) to the sons of men, saith the Hierusalem Targum there, according to that of Seneca, Ep. 66 Ratio nihil aliud est quàm in corpus humanum pars Divini spiritûs mersa, Reason is nothing else but a particle of the Divine spirit immersed in a man's body; and so in the Poet is a man's soul called a particle of the divine breath, or spirit. From hence the meaning of those words is clear, My spirit shall no longer be sh athed in man, that is, the souls which I have breathed or given to men, the sons of Adam, and which are sheathed in them, imprisoned, detained unprofitably, shall no longer continue or abide in them: so saith S. Chrysostome, ὲ μὴ καταμείνῃ τὸ πνεῦμά μου ἐν ἀνθρώποις τούτοις, ἀντὶ τοῦ, ὐκ ἐάσω αὐτοὺς λοιπὸν ζῆν, My spirit shall not alwaies abide among these men, is in stead of, I will not suffer them to live any longer: and this, as a figurative obscure expression, is twice afterward set down more clearly, the Lord said, I will destroy man, whom I have created, from the face of the earth, v. 7. and the end of all flesh is come before me, and I will destroy them from the earth, v. 13. It must here be farther observed, that in the latter part of that third verse is added, first, the reason of that sentence of God; secondly, the space in his long-sufferance designed, before which was past, it should not be executed. The former in these words, For that he also is flesh, that is, extremely given to the satisfying of the flesh, that Age being a most carnal and abominable Age, used ordinarily by the Jewes (under the phrase of דור המבול the age of the deluge) for an example of all impiety; and that I suppose here meant also by, the earth was corrupt before God, ver. 11, and 12. the corruption there, as φθορὰ in the Apostles, signifying all manner of unnatural lust and villanie. And for the latter, it is evident that they were allowed sixscore years to repent in, and avert the judgment, and that Noah was sent to preach repentance to them by denouncing the judgment and building the Ark. Ecce dedi ut respiscentiam agerent, Behold I have given them that space, that they might repent, saith the Hierusalem Targum. And accordingly this Age is ordinarily, and by way of Proverb, used by the Jewes as an evidence and example of God's μακροθυμία, his patience and long-suffering to sinners, before he comes to punish them. And when the judgment came upon that world of ungodly men, yet a remnant was delivered, Noah and his family in the Ark, from perishing in the waters. By this explication of that verse in Genesis, as it already appears how perfect a parallel that was of God's dealing with the Jewes, giving them time to repent, delivering all that did repent, and destroying the whole nation besides; so it is evident that from thence this verse of S. Peter's may be interpreted. For the τὰ ἐν φυλακῇ πνεύματα the spirits in the prison, or custodie, or sheath, here (φυλακὴ signifying any kind of receptacle, Rev. 18. 2.) are those souls of men that lay so sheathed, so useless and unprofitable in their bodies, immersed so deep in carnality as not to perform any service to God, who inspired and placed them there (and 'tis elsewhere a figurative speech to express wicked men, who are called prisoners, in prison, that is, ἐν φυλακῇ, Isa. 42. 7. and ch. 49. 9. and bound in prison, Isa. 61. 1.) they, the thoughts of whose hearts were evil continually, v. 5. To these Christ, that is, God eternal, πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν ἐν πνεύματι, went and preached in, or by, that Spirit by which he was now raised from the dead: where first, the word Χριστὸς Christ is used, not Θεὸς God, according to the generall opinion of the antient Fathers of the Church, that he which of old appeared to the Patriarchs was (not the first but) the second person in the Trinity, Christ the Sonne, not God the Father, and that those appearances of his were præludia incarnationis, preludsory and preparative to his taking our flesh upon him. And accordingly those verses of the Sibylline Oracle, which introduce God speaking to Noah about the Ark, and setting down the speakers names by Numbers, (Ἐννέα γεάμματ' ἔχω, τετρασύλλαβός εἰμι, νόει μέ.

——divinæ particula auræ,

Καὶ βῆς τρὶς δεκάδες * σὺν δισσά——) are best interpreted by Θεὸς σωτὴρ, God Saviour, that is, Christ: for to those two words belongs all that is said in those verses; they consist of nine letters, four syllables, the three first of two letters apiece, and the fourth of the remaining three, of five consonants, and four vowels; and so likewise the numeral importance of each letter amounteth to the just number of 1692. as it is there described. See Canter. Novar. Lect. l. 1. c. 3. Secondly, the phrase πορευθεὶς ἐκήρυξεν went and preached, or going preached, is but an idiome of the Sacred style, wherein πορευθεὶς going, and such like words, are frequently used as παρέλκοντα expletives; so, to omit many more, Ephes. 2. 17. speaking of Christ after his departure from the world (in the same manner as here before his coming into it) and of his preaching by his Apostles, not personally himself, to the heathen world, S. Paul expresses it after the same manner as here, καὶ ἐλθὼν εὐηγγελίσατο εἰρήνην, and he went and preached peace. Thirdly, by his Spirit is evidently here meant that Divine power by which he was raised from the dead, after his crucifixion, and by which he means now to act revenge on his crucifiers after a while, if they repent not, but in the mean time to preach repentance to them. And that makes the parallel exact betwixt the matter here in hand and the storie of the old world. Here men are divided into two sorts, v. 17. those that suffer for well doing, the pious, constant, yet persecuted Christians, and those that shall suffer for evil doing, the contumacious obdurate persecuting Jewes and Gnosticks; as there the violent and corrupt on one side, which were, after the hundred and twenty years, swept away with the Deluge, and Noah (and his family) on the other side, who by being set forth as an example of the godly, delivered out of temptations, 2 Pet. 2. 5, 9. appear to have been opposed and wronged by them. And therefore to prove (what was undertaken, v. 17.) that even in respect of this world, it is farre better to be of the number of the persecuted, who shall be delivered, then of the most prosperous persecuters, which shall after a time be destroyed, as the example of Christ was very pertinent, v. 18. who having suffered a while, was raised in power to destroy the crucifiers; so the example of the old world is fitly made use of also, who are evidently pointed at not onely by the πνεύματα ἐν φυλακῇ, spirits in the sheath, or custodie, or prison, (which so fitly agrees with the ידון sheathed in the old prophecie) but by that which here follows, ἀπειθήσασί ποτε, which were disobedient of old, see Note g. (which clearly takes it off from belonging to the Gentiles of Christ's time, to which some interpreters are willing Note b.) are very commodiously applied to S. Peter's present purpose also, Christ's deferring this vengeance on the Jewes fourty years after his crucifixion, being on purpose designed, first, to bring the crucifiers to repentance, secondly, to make triall of the patience and perseverance of the sincere Christians, and to deliver them peculiarly out of this deluge of destruction, Rev. 2. 7, &c. when all others, Jewes and temporizing Gnosticks, were destroyed.

g. Ἀπειθήσαντες

V. 20. Disobedient] The word ἀπειθοῦντες disobedient is used for a course of great notorious sin, spoken of the παραπικραίνοντες exasperators, provokers, Heb. 3.16, 18. against whom God's oath was gone out, that they should not enter into his rest, ver. 19. They are here certainly the wicked men of the old world, on whom the flood came, called ἀσεβῶν κόσμος, the world of the ungodly, 2 Pet. 2. 5. which are there joyned with the wicked of Sodom. From whence and from some other evidences it is probably to be concluded what their sin was which brought the flood upon them, viz. the sin of unnatural uncleanesse, or Sodomie, contrary to that breath of God breathed on them, the light of law, and reason, and nature, and the very soul within them. For so Gen. 6. 2. upon the sons of God taking them wives of the daughters of men, presently follows the decree of God to send the Deluge upon them. The sons of God, and of men, were certainly the worshippers of the one true, and the many false gods, and the marrying of those Idolaters was the means of insnaring the godly in the heathen Idolworships, and all the villanies in their practices, or sacrifices (as after it was Num. 25. 2.) This is there in general expressed, v. 5. by, The wickednesse of man was great upon the earth, meaning by πονηρία wickedness, villanie (as ἀκρασία incontinence, Mat. 23. 25. is πονηρία wickedness, Luc. 11. 39.) and v. 11. by, The earth was corrupt before God, and filled with all violence, by corruption signifying these unnatural lusts, so ordinarily called φθορὰ, and φθείρεσθαι, corruption and being corrupted (see Note on 2 Pet. 1. b. and 2. b.) and by violence either the same again in the most enormous kind, such as was by the Sodomites offered to the Angels (see Note on 1 Cor. 5. h.) or else persecuting all others that would not goe on with them in all their riotous courses, and both together expressed v. 12. by one of them, corrupt, And all flesh corrupted his way, and both again by violence, v. 13. The end of all flesh is come before me: for the earth is filled with violence. So that either of these single, or, which in probability is all one, both together, is the notation of the sin for which the flood came, and the interpretation of the ἀπειθήσασί ποτε, those that of old were disobedient in this place.

V. 21. The like figure] The King's MS. reads Ὃ καὶ ἀντίτυπον, &c. where Ο in Capital letters (as that whole book is written) signifies oftentimes Σ, as in an Inscription of an antient cup in Athenæus ΔΙΟΝΤΣΟ is written for Διονύσου. And so in an old Copie in Magdalen College in Oxford it is clearly, Σ ἀντίτυπον the antitype of which. As for the word ἀντίτυπον, it may perhaps be here fit to note that, as it is certainly best rendred Antitype, to reserve the signification of the Greek, whatsoever shall here appear most fitly to belong to it, so the Greek is capable of very distant senses. For first, it signifies (not a like, but) a contrary. So in * Xenophon, Τὰ μὲν οὖν χρήματα διὰ τὸ ἄρχοντος * in Hiero. ἐγίνετο, τὰ δὲ ἀντίτυπα δι' ἄλλων, Matters of favour are done by the Prince himself, but the contrary by other men. So saith Hesychius of it, Ἀντίτυπα, Ἀντιτυπῆσαι, ἐναντωθῆναι, ἀντεπεῖν, and Ἀντιτυπίαι, ἀντιλογίαι, ἐναντιώσεις. It signifies contrariety or contradiction; and so we know the preposition ἀντὶ most ordinarily imports. And this the place would not unfitly bear, that Baptisme is quite contrary to the Ark of Noah, but yet saves as that saved. There the destruction was by water, and only they were saved which got into the Ark; but here water is the means of saving from destruction, and they perish which have not this immersion or baptisme here spoken of. Beside this there is a second notation of this word, as ἀντὶ signifies pro as well as contra, and so it may here be fitly rendred. For when it is compounded in the notion of pro, it notes in stead of another, as Ἀνθύπατος, Proconsul, is he that supplies the Consuls place, is in his stead. And so it may be here, Σ ἀντίτυπον βάπτισμα, baptisme in stead, or supplying the office of the Ark, saves us now. In this sense Antitype is ordinarily taken among us for that which (is not it self a type, or figure, but) supplies the place of some former type; so purity of the heart is the Antitype of Circumcision, that is, that which is now by Christ required in stead of that ceremonie among the Jewes. But beside both these, there is a third notation of the word, for ἀντίγραφον, a copie, differing from τύπος, so as the impression in the wax differs from the ingraving in the Seal. So the Old Glossary renders both those words, ἀντίγραφον & ἀντίτυπον, by exemplum & exemplar. And thus is the word used, Heb. 9. 24. and generally in the Ecclesiastick writers, and is best expres'd by parallel, or answerable, and may so here fitly be rendred, parallel whereunto Baptisme——

CHAP. IV.

Paraphrase.

1. FOrasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm your selves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath [a] suffered * in the flesh, hath ceased from sin,]

1. Ye must therefore, seeing Christ hath suffered for you, resolve to follow and imitate him in suffering also, or dying with him, viz. dying to sin (see v. 6.) or ceasing from it, as he that is dead, or hath crucified the flesh with affections and lusts, alwaies doth,

8. But above all things be ſure to maintain a moſt earneſt love and charity toward your fellow-Chriſtians, (the contrary to which, the contentions and factions of the Gnoſticks, ſhall concurr with their other villanies to involve them in the vengeance that befalls the perſecuting Jews.) For this added to repentance from all thoſe other dead works, is the likelieſt means to propitiate God and avert his judgments from you: ſee Jam. 5. 8.

Amen. (See Rom. 9. c.)

11. If any man ſpeak, let him ſpeak as the oracles of God; if any man * miniſter, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jeſus Chriſt; to whom be praiſe and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.]

e. 12. Brethren, be not amazed, or much troubled at the terrible fire of perſecution and affliction which is among you at this time; it is that which God ſends for your tryal, and 'tis no ſtrange or new thing to have ſuch things befall Chriſtians:

12. Beloved, † thinke it not ſtrange concerning the e fiery trial which is to try you, as though ſome ſtrange thing happened unto you:]

† wonder not, or, be not ſurpaſed at this burning, or caſting into the fire that is among you, and is befallen you for your trials, μὴ ξενίζεσθε τῇ ἐν ὑμῖν πυρώσει πρὸς πειρασμὸν ὑμῖν

13. But count it matter of joy to you, that thereby you are made like unto Chriſt in ſuffering: and then as there was a reſurrection of Chriſt after his ſuffering, and that reſurrection the more glorious, becauſe of that forerunner; ſo after theſe ſufferings of yours, there will be a glorious revelation and coming of Chriſt, that ſpoken of Mat. 24. (ſee note on 2 Theſſ. 1. a.) to the deſtruction of thoſe crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtianity, after which you ſhall have a great calm and tranquillity, and that will be matter of exceeding joy to you.

13. But rejoice, in as much as ye are partakers of Chriſt's ſufferings; that when his glory ſhall be revealed, ye may be glad alſo with exceeding joy.]

14. In the mean, whatſoever contumely or perſecution ye ſuffer for your Chriſtian profeſſion's ſake, it is the happieſt thing that could befall you: For by your being reviled for being Chriſtians, it ſeems the very ſame condition which was in Chriſt incarnate, and wherein his power was moſt evident, and the very ſpirit and temper of God is in you; which temper of Chriſt is looked upon with reproach by them of the world, not conceiving how ſuffering can become a God, but by you, who have imitated it by your own ſufferings, it is commended and glorified.

15. But I deſire not that any of you ſhould be ſo in love with ſufferings from the heathen powers, as to doe ought that may juſtly deſerve it from them, as by any act of murther, ſtealth, aſſuming or pretending authority to make others, that belong not to your charges, to perform what you term their duties.

16. But if keeping himſelf innocent from theſe and the like, he yet fall under perſecution for the faith of Chriſt and diſcharge of his Chriſtian duty, let this be matter of rejoicing to him, and of thankſgiving to God,

16. Yet if any man ſuffer as a Chriſtian, let him not be aſhamed; but let him glorifie God on this behalf.]

h. 17. That there being a firſt and ſecond draught of bitterneſſe, that is, of puniſhments for men, one by way of chaſtiſement or exerciſe, the other for utter exciſion, or one in this world, the far lighter of the two, the latter to come in another world, much more formidable, and the former now ſometimes befalling the deareſt ſervants of Chriſt, this is the time or ſeaſon for that to fall on you. And if it be ſo, what is this but a very ominous ſign, that it will be very heavy and inſupportable to the wicked, the obdurate crucifiers of Chriſt, and perſecuters of Chriſtianity, whoſe portion is that other far bitterer part of the Cup, which is reſerved for them even in this world, a fatal exciſion now ſuddainly approaching? after the righteous have been ſufficiently tried, then their rod is to be caſt into the fire, and ſo an utter deſtruction of the obdurate Jewes (ſee Luk. 23. 31.) and that in an heavier manner in another world after this life.

17. h† For the time is come that judgment muſt begin at the houſe of God: and if * it firſt begin at us, what ſhall the end be of them that obey not the Goſpel of God?]

† That it is the ſeaſon that judgment ſhould begin * the firſt be from us, πρῶτον ἀφ' ἡμῶν

18. But

† hardly escape μόλις σωζεται

18. And if the righteous † scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?]

18. And if the righteous have a compensation, or portion of misery in this life, Prov. 11. 31. and, though he escape, yet do it through many afflictions, then how fearfull is the expectation of ungodly sinfull men?

* commit their souls or lives παραδιδοσθω τας ψυχας

19. Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God, * commit the keeping of their souls to him in well-doing as unto a faithfull Creator.]

19. By all this it appears to be most reasonable, that they that suffer in Christs cause bear it patiently and quietly, never doing or attempting any unlawfull thing to cast the crosse off from their own shoulders, but committing their lives and every thing to God, who having created all, and so being able to preserve them as easily, if he please, and being most certain to perform all his promises to every faithfull servant of his, will certainly preserve them, if it be best for them, and if he do not, will make their sufferings a passage to and enhaunsment of their glory.

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. ὑπαθὼν in carne

V. 1. Suffered in the flesh] What is here meant by suffering in the flesh, (or, as the King's MS. reads, σαρκὶ, to the flesh) which we are to doe by way of correspondence to Christ's crucifixion, doth not only appear by many other phrases elsewhere, as being dead to sin, crucified with Christ, noting thereby mortification and forsaking of worldly sinfull courses; but also by the distinct words here added. πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας, he hath ceased from sin, which referre the phrase here to reformation of wicked lives, not to suffering of afflictions, as the words might be thought to signifie. And this irrefragably appears by v. 2. That we should no longer live the rest of our time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. Which verse if it be compared with that harder phrase, κριθῶσι κατ' ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ, judged to the flesh according to men, v. 6. it may possibly give some light to the explication of it. For ἐπιθυμίαις ἀνθρώπων the lusts of men, ver. 2. may well be answerable to κατ' ἀνθρώπους ζαρκὶ, the flesh according to men, v. 6. noting thereby the customary sinfull lusts of the Gentiles, as on the other side, the will of God, v. 2. is all one with the spirit according to God, the godly spiritual inclinations & dispositions: and then why may not μηκέτι βιῶσαι, living no longer, that is, dying, be all one with κριθῶσι, be judged or condemned, or sentenced to death? For when all the phrases that belong to Christ's sufferings, Crucifixion, Death, Burial, are applied by accommodation from Christ to the Christian, in respect of his dying to the flesh, to the world, to sin, and when the opposite to being judged is living, (and when that opposition is strictly observed in all other parts of the phrase, πνεύματι spirit opposed to ζαρκὶ flesh, and κατὰ θεὸν according to God, to κατ' ἀνθρώπους according to men) why should not κρίνεσθαι to be judged or condemned, which is the thing immediately preparatory to execution, be taken here (though not often elsewhere) for execution, or suffering that sentence; and so κριθῶσι ζαρκὶ, judged to the flesh, be all one with dead to the world or flesh, that is, mortifying all sinfull lusts, opposed to living according to God, to the spirit, an holy and godly life? Another notion these words, v. 6. may be thought capable of, ἵνα κριθῶσι μὲν κατ' ἀνθρώπους τῇ ζαρκὶ (speaking of penitent sinners involved in a common ruine) that though as far as men can see, κατ' ἀνθρώπους according to men, they be judged in the flesh, swept away in the calamity, in respect of their bodily outward condition, yet they are at rest, and so in their soul or spirit live with God. If suffering in, or to, the flesh, v. 1. did belong to afflictions, this then might probably be the meaning of v. 6. But the former being otherwise determined by the Context, this latter will best be interpreted by analogy therewith.

κατὰ σαρκὶ

πέπαυται ἁμαρτίας

κριθῶσι κατ' ἀνθρώπους σαρκὶ

b. Οινόφλυξ

V. 3. Excesse of wine] Οινόφλυξ, μέθυσος, ὁ μὴ τὸν οἶνον ὁρμῶν· φλύειν γὰρ τὸ ὁρμᾶν ἔχειν πρός τι, saith Phavorinus; the word signifies a drunkard, one impetuously given to wine. And again, Οινοφλυγία, ἐπιθυμία οἴνου ἄμετρος, an immoderate desire of wine.

c. ξενίζεσθε

V. 4. Think it strange] Ξενίζεσθε is to wonder as at a new or strange accident. So in Polybius, ξενίζεσθαι καὶ διαπορεῖν διὰ τὸ παράδοξον, to think strange and doubt as at a paradox; all one with ξενοπαθεῖν, to be surprized with some unexpected event. So Ξενίζω, ἐκπλήττω, in Phavorinus, and proportionably in the Passive, Ξενίζεσθαι, ἐκπλήττεσθαι, to be stricken on a sudden, or amazed: so here again, v. 12. μὴ ξενίζεσθε τῇ πυρώσει, be not surprized, amazed, astonish'd, or vehemently affected with wonder, at that πύρωσις which is among you.

d. Ἀναχύσεις

Ib. Excesse of riot] Ἀναχύσεις, φυρμοὶ, σύγχυσεις, saith Phavorinus: where σύγχυσις signifying confusion is a general word, and would not much tend to the illustrating of the other, did not the φυρμοὶ tell us what kind of confusion it was, viz. a confusion of sexes in committing those base sins; for so saith he of φυρμοὶ, μολυσμοὶ, ῥύπος, μίασμα, it notes those filthy abominable pollutions: and accordingly Hesychius having rendred it φυρμοὶ, βλακεῖαι, interprets the latter of these μαλακία mollities, the word so commonly used for effeminacy, and particularly for these base sins. Another notion of this word there is (the primitive, I suppose, whence this is by Metaphor derived) for ponds or cavities which are filled with the sea at the time of flote, and will carry boats at such times to the main land, and to cities built there. So saith Strabo l. 3. Λίγυλαι ἀναχύσεις αἱ πληρούμεναι τῇ θαλάττῃ κοιλάδες ἐν ᾗ πλημμυρεῖσι, καὶ πορεύσιμόν ἐστιν ἀνάπλεως ὅση τὴν μεσόγαιαν ἔχουσαι καὶ τὰς ἐπ' αὐτῆς πόλεις. These Ptolemy calls ἀναχύσεις, as our Humber in England is by him exprest'd by Ἄβα (in all probability for Ἄβρα) ἔκχυσις. And this overflowing of the sea is very fit to expresse this of extravagant enormous lust (See Note on Jude b.) Agreeable to this is the notion of Ἀσωτία here also joined with it: Ἄσωτος, ἀκόλαστος, ἀσελγὴς, and Ἀσώτως, αἰσχρῶς, saith Pavorinus; it notes incontinence, and lascivionesse, or filthinesse, which what it signifies in that writer, will appear by the account which he gives of ἀσελγαίνειν, viz. that principally and properly it signifies τὸ παρὰ φύσιν τῇ γυναικὶ μίγνυσθαι, the sin mentioned Rom. 1. 26. from whence, saith he, there was a city called Ἀσέλγη, ὅτι κακῶς ἔζων οἱ ἄνθρωποι, καὶ ἀλλήλοις ἐκοινώνουν, where such unnatural villanies were ordinarily committed: and κοινῶς, ἀσέλγεια, ἀκαθαρσία uncleanesse, but that especially of the basest and foulest sort, as may appear by his rendring Ἀρρηποποιΐα by ἀσέλγεια, αἰσχρεργία· by which it appears that these two words signifying each of them so unsavourly, are joined together to denote those ἀθέμιτοι καὶ δαιμονολατρεῖαι abominable practices of the Gentiles in their idolatries, v. 3.

Ἀναχύσεις

e. πύρωσις

V. 12. Fiery triall] What πύρωσις here signifies will easily be defined from the notion of the Hebrew דלק, which signifies two things, to persecute, and to set on fire. So Psal. 10. 2. where the Hebrew is rendred by us, the wicked doth persecute the poor, the LXXII. read, ἐμπυρίζεται ὁ πλοῦτος, the poor is set on fire. And so again, צרף, which signifies to try, (either as gold is by the fire or as men by afflictions) is by the LXXII. Psal. 17. 3. rendred ἐκπύρωσας casting into the fire. And accordingly πύρωσις regularly will signifie in general, any kind of adversity or sharp persecution, ſecution, which (as fire blown up into flames, to gold or other metals is the means of exploring and purifying them) is in like manner here ſaid to be γινομένη ὑμῖν εἰς πειρασμὸν, befallen them for their trial. Thus Prov. 27. 21. δοκίμιον ἀργύρῳ καὶ χρυσῷ πύρωσις, caſting into the fire is the tryal for ſilver and gold, and Pſal. 66. 10. ἐπύρωσας ἡμᾶς, ὡς πυροῦται ἀργύριον, thou haſt caſt us into the fire, as ſilver is caſt into the fire, unleſſe perhaps that ſhould be read ἐπείρασας ὡς πειράζεται, thou haſt tried us as ſilver is tried, and ſo in other places of the Old Teſtament. The word we have again, Rev. 18. 9. where καπνὸς πυρώσεως we rightly render the ſmoak of her burning, or being ſet on fire. If this be now applied to the Jewes in general at that time, it may then be fitly interpreted of the great combuſtions and ſeditions cauſed by the Ζηλωταὶ and σικαριοὶ, Zelots and ſeditious, oft mentioned by Joſephus, which raiſed ſuch ſtirs among them, and brought ſuch heavy, bloody ſlaughters upon them before their deſtruction by the Romanes, and not only in, but out of Judæa. And in oppoſition to theſe perhaps it is, that they are adviſed to be Ζηλωταὶ τῆ ἀγαθῆ Zelots of that which is good, for ſo the King's MS. reads in ſtead of μιμηταὶ imitators or followers, c. 3. 13. and accordingly now, when the τὸ τέλος ἤγγικε the deſtruction or fatal exciſion was but approaching, the πύρωσις is ſpoken of as already γινομένη ἐν ὑμῖν befallen among them, and ſo may fitly be the forerunner of their deſtruction, as Joſephus obſerves it was. But if it be more ſtrictly applied to the Chriſtians to whom S. Peter writes, it muſt then ſignifie the perſecutions which, from the Jewes and Gnoſticks, fell on the pure and Orthodox Chriſtians, whereever Chriſtianity was planted in the Provinces, and was particularly εἰς πειρασμὸν, for the exploring and trying them, the malice of the perſecuters being ſuch (and no other means of appeaſing them, ſave the denying of the Faith, or, by compliances, ſeeming to doe ſo) that whoſoever was not ſincere, was ſure to be tempted out of his profeſſion.

f. V. 14. Glorie] That δόξη glory is anſwerable to the Hebrew Schechinah the appearing of God by Angels, or any other glorious way, hath been often ſaid, Note on Mar. 1. 2. (ſee 2 Pet. 1. 3, 17. and Jude 24.) and that that alſo ſignifies that eminent way of Gods appearance (which is therefore called his ἐπιφάνεια) the Incarnation and being of Chriſt here on the earth, hath been formerly noted alſo, on Joh. 1. c. So 2 Cor. 4. 2. the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, is the glorious exhibition of God, ſo viſible in Chriſt here on the earth. And ſo moſt probably here it ſignifies; and then τὸ τῆς δόξης will be the ſtate or condition of Chriſt when he was here upon the earth, with which is here fitly joined τὸ πνεῦμα τῦ Θεῦ, the ſpirit of God (ſo Chriſt incarnate was, God bleſſed for ever) that is, the ſame way of diſpenſation and œconomy which was uſed on Chriſt when he was here on earth (ſee Note on Luk. 9. c.) And that this is the meaning of it here, will be judged by the Context, which pronounces them happy that are reproached for Chriſt's name; becauſe by that means they are made like Chriſt, that prime perſon that ſuffered for well doing.
